The question on the motion of Mr. TALBERT was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. TALBERT) there were—ayes 3, noes 12. So the committee refused to recommend that the bill lie on the table.

Mr. TALBERT. Mr. Chairman, I submit that this is too thin a House to pass a bill of this kind.

Mr. CURTIS of Kansas. If the Committee of the Whole will consent, I will withdraw the bill. I do not want it to lose its place on the Calendar, because we may have another Friday night session.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection the bill will be passed over.

There was no objection.

Subsequently Mr. CURTIS of Kansas said: I ask that we go back to House bill 4131. I think the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. TALBERT] will not persist in objection.

There being no objection, the Committee of the Whole resumed the consideration of the bill.

Mr. TALBERT. Are the usual amendments added?

Mr. CURTIS of Kansas. They are.

The question being taken, the amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported favorably.

MARY F. COBB.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 6328) for the relief of Mary F. Cobb, widow of Lewis Bryant, Second Regiment Kentucky Volunteers, war of 1812, and daughter of Daniel Gano, captain-lieutenant in Capt. Andrew Moody's company, Second Regiment of Continental Artillery, Revolutionary war.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Mary F. Cobb on the pension roll and pay her a pension of $50 per month.

The amendments reported by the committee were read, as follows:

Change the title so as to read: "A bill granting a pension to Mary F. Cobb."

Strike out all after the enacting clause and substitute therefor the following:

"That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place upon the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the general pension laws, the name of Mary F. Cobb, widow of Lewis Bryant (otherwise known as Louis H. Bryan), late of the Second Kentucky Volunteers, war of 1812, and daughter of Daniel Gano, late an officer of artillery, Revolutionary war, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month."

The amendments were agreed to; and the bill as amended was laid aside to be reported favorably.

ANTON ERNST.

The next business was the bill (S. 1495) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Anton Ernst.

The bill was read.

Mr. TALBERT. I ask that this bill be passed over.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, that will be done.

There was no objection.

ANN COLLINS.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 10328) granting a pension to Ann Collins.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby authorized and directed to place upon the pension roll the name of Ann Collins, dependent mother of John Collins, late of Company D, Third Maryland Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The amendment reported by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 4, after "roll," insert "subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws."

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Chairman, this old woman lives here in the city of Washington. She is 75 years of age and very poor. Her son is dead and gone. She could not get a pension at the Bureau because she did not satisfy the officers there that her son's death was the result of army service. We think it was. She is old and poor. She gave her boy to his country, and now we propose to give her a pension.

The amendment was agreed to; and the bill as amended was laid aside to be reported favorably.

SOPHIA GRUBER.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 1724) granting a pension to Mrs. Sophia Gruber, of Louisville, Ky.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place upon the pension rolls of the United States the name of Mrs. Sophia Gruber, of the city of Louisville, Ky., widow of Charles A. Gruber, late captain and adjutant of the Thirty-fourth Regiment Kentucky Infantry Volunteers, and to pay her a pension during the remainder of her life at the rate of $20 per month, to take effect from the passage of this act.

The amendments reported by the committee were read, as follows:

Line 4, strike out "upon" and insert "on."
 Lines 4 and 5, strike out "of the United States."
 Lines 5 and 6, strike out "of the city of Louisville, Ky."
 Line 8, strike out "to."
 Lines 8 and 9, strike out "during the remainder of her life."
 Strike out all of line 10 and insert "in lieu of that she now receives."
 Amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Sophia Gruber."

Mr. RAY of New York. This widow of an old soldier is in destitute circumstances. Her husband died of softening of the brain. He was a captain. We think he incurred his disease in the service; there is not much doubt about it; but the Bureau did not admit it. They gave her $12 a month, which we increased to $20, because we believe that on account of her poverty she is entitled to it, so as to keep her out of the poorhouse.

Mr. TALBERT. Does not the gentleman think that we had better abolish the Pension Board altogether?

Mr. RAY of New York. We do not overrule the board. We simply increase this old woman's pension from $12 to $20 in order to keep her out of the poorhouse.

The question being taken, the amendments were agreed to.
 The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported favorably.

WILLIAM SHARROCK.

The next business was the bill (S. 1918) granting an increase of pension to William Sharrock.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of William Sharrock, late of Company F, First Massachusetts Heavy Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $25 per month, in lieu of that he is now receiving.

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Chairman, this soldier is now 54 years of age and very poor. He is drawing a pension of $12 a month. Soon after the close of the war, in which he rendered long and faithful service, he met with an accident by which he lost both his arms. He can not do anything but walk around. In order to keep him out of the poorhouse, we increase his pension to $25 a month.

Mr. TALBERT. Has he no means of subsistence whatever?

Mr. RAY of New York. He has no property whatever.

Mr. TALBERT. Nobody to take care of him?

Mr. RAY of New York. No family to take care of him.

Mr. TALBERT. It was not in the service that he lost his arms?

Mr. RAY of New York. No; if he had lost his arms in the service he would get $100 a month. He lost them soon after the war by the premature discharge of a cannon.

The bill was laid aside to be reported favorably to the House.

HENRY HATCH.

The next business was the bill (S. 2235) granting an increase of pension to Henry Hatch.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Henry Hatch, late of Battery D, First New York Light Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month in lieu of the pension now received by him.

The amendment reported by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 6, strike out "Light" and insert "Heavy."

Mr. RAY of New York. We give this man the small difference between $12 a month and $17 on account of his good service and on account of diseases and bodily troubles which are not strictly of service origin. He is a poor man, and $17 a month, with what little he can do in the way of work, will enable him to live. We give him just enough increase to keep him out of the poorhouse, just enough to enable him to keep soul and body together.

The amendment reported by the committee was agreed to; and the bill as amended was laid aside to be reported favorably.

CHARLES E. BANFIELD.

The next business was the bill (S. 5267) granting an increase of pension to Charles E. Banfield.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Charles E. Banfield, late of Company G, Thirty-fifth Regiment Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Chairman, this man is totally blind. He can not show this disability to be of service origin.

Mr. BERRY. I should like to ask the gentleman from New York if he regards the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. TALBERT] as Chairman? I notice he always turns to him and addresses him.

Mr. RAY of New York. I always address the Chair, and then I turn to the gentleman from South Carolina, because he has repeatedly signified that he would like to have the report read or a statement made, and when he accepts a statement here I notice that the bill goes all right. I do it to expedite the business of the House.

Mr. SULZER. The gentleman's judgment is most commendable.

Mr. TALBERT. I ask that the gentleman will hereafter address the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. BERRY]. [Laughter.] I am becoming too prominent.

Mr. RAY of New York. I shall be pleased always to address both gentlemen.

Mr. COX. I desire to ask—

Mr. TALBERT. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Cox] now desires to be addressed. [Laughter.]

Mr. COX. There is somebody else to address besides the gentleman from South Carolina and the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. RAY of New York. We will join hands with you. Be good, now, and let us get the bills through.

Mr. COX. Oh, I want to hurry along. Here is a man who is blind, and you are basing your action on that ground. I want to ask, Why did you not treat the blind old Mexican war soldier in the same way a little while ago?

Mr. GIBSON. It came from a different committee.

Mr. RAY of New York. I would like to say to the gentleman that that bill, reported by the Committee on Pensions, does more for that man than this bill does for this man. This man is now drawing $12 a month. We give him the difference between $12 and $30 simply and purely on account of his blindness.

Mr. COX. My man was blind.

Mr. RAY of New York. Yes, but that was purely a service pension. He had no disabilities of service origin.

Mr. COX. All right; knock out the old Mexican soldier and go on with the other boys.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

WILLIAM O. TORRY.

The next business was the bill (S. 3136) granting an increase of pension to William O. Torrey.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of William O. Torrey, late assistant surgeon, Eighteenth Regiment Missouri Infantry Volunteers, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The following amendments, recommended by the Committee on Invalid Pensions, were read:

Line 6, strike out "Torrey" and insert "Torrey."

Line 8, strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty."

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Chairman, this soldier now gets $12 a month. We increase his pension to $30 because he has rheumatism, neuralgia, and partial paralysis of the lower limbs. We give him that extra amount because of his increased disability.

Mr. TALBERT. He is nearly dead.

Mr. GIBSON. I should like to know if that is satisfactory to the gentleman from Kentucky?

Mr. BERRY. If it is satisfactory to the gentleman from Tennessee, it is satisfactory to me.

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to. The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

ANNIE E. RUFF.

The next business was the bill (S. 1976) granting an increase of pension to Annie E. Ruff.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place upon the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Annie E. Ruff, widow of Charles F. Ruff, late lieutenant-colonel Third United States Cavalry, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, and pay to her a pension of $30 per month, in lieu of the pension which she now receives.

The following amendments recommended by the Committee on Invalid Pensions were read:

In lines 7 and 8 strike out "subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws."

In line 9, after "pensions," insert "at the rate."

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Chairman, this old soldier was a hero of two wars, the Mexican war and the civil war. We increase the pension of his widow from $8 to $20. She is in very necessitous circumstances, and was the wife of the soldier during the war.

The amendments of the committee were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

EMMA J. MCINTIRE.

The next business was the bill (S. 4535) granting a pension to Emma J. McIntire.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Emma J. McIntire, widow of Samuel McIntire, late of Company A, Twelfth Regiment New Hampshire Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month and the usual additional pension for her two minor children.

Mr. RAY of New York. This is the widow of an old soldier. Her husband deserted her, and after an absence of more than eight years she believed him to be dead and had good reason to believe him dead, so she married again. He afterwards turned up, and for that reason she can not get a pension at the Bureau. He is now dead—died some years ago—so that she is now the widow of the soldier, and is in poor and necessitous circumstances.

Mr. TALBERT. Is the other husband dead?

Mr. RAY of New York. Yes; they are both dead—the supposed husband as well as the other.

The bill was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

MARIA S. URBAN.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 12104) granting a pension to Maria S. Urban, widow of Maj. Casper Urban, late of Fifth New York Artillery, in the war of the rebellion.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Maria S. Urban, widow of Casper Urban, late major, Fifth Regiment New York Heavy Artillery, in the war of the rebellion, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 a month.

The following amendments, recommended by the Committee on Invalid Pensions, were read:

In lines 7 and 8, strike out "in the war of the rebellion."

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Maria S. Urban."

Mr. BERRY. Mr. Chairman, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. Was there not a resolution adopted that the members present should each have the privilege of calling up a bill to-night, and that the bills of those who were not present should not be called up?

Mr. RAY of New York. No; that was not agreed to as to pension bills.

The CHAIRMAN. That applied to desertion bills only.

Mr. BERRY. Then I make a motion that each gentleman present have the right to call up a bill.

Mr. RAY of New York. I will say to the gentleman from Kentucky that we will get through all of these bills if we travel right along.

Mr. BERRY. We shall be sure to reach them in the way I propose, and we may not in the other way. I make the motion that every gentleman present have the privilege of calling up one bill. I am ready to call up one that has been favorably reported.

Mr. RAY of New York. We have nearly reached the bill in which the gentleman from Kentucky is interested.

Mr. BERRY. Go ahead. I withdraw my request.

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to. The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

SMITH JEWELL.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 11824) granting a pension to Smith Jewell.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby authorized and directed to place on the pension roll the name of Smith Jewell, late private in Company H, Fifteenth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension of $72 per month in lieu of any pension he now receives.

The following amendments, recommended by the Committee on Invalid Pensions, were read:

Line 4, after "roll," insert "subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws."

Line 6, after "pension," insert "at the rate."

Line 7, strike out "seventy-two" and insert "forty."

Line 7, strike out "any pension" and insert "that."

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Smith Jewell."

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Chairman, I desire to say that we have a photograph of this man before the committee. He was a good soldier, with a long service. He is now poor and has such a hernia that the contents of the abdomen hang down nearly to his knee. We increase his pension to $40 a month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to. The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

SOPHIA W. BUXTON.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 1206) granting an increase of pension to Sophia W. Buxton, of Durango, Colo.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby authorized and directed to place upon the pension roll, at the rate of $50 per month, the name of Sophia W. Buxton, widow of Charles Buxton, late major Eleventh Vermont Volunteers, the same to be in lieu of the pension of $25 per month she is now receiving.

The following amendments, recommended by the Committee on Invalid Pensions, were read:

In lines 4 and 5 strike out "at the rate of $50 per month" and insert "subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws."

In line 7 strike out "the same to be" and insert "and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

In lines 7 and 8 strike out "of $25 per month."

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Sophia W. Buxton."

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Chairman, this is the widow of a major. She is now drawing $25 a month. We add $5 a month because she has no property, no income, no means of support, and no one upon whom she can rely. We just give her $5 a month more to help take care of her.

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

WARREN C. BEACH.

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Chairman, I ask to recur to a bill which has been passed, No. 537 on the Calendar. I have a copy of the bill here.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent to recur to a bill, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 3389) to reappoint Warren C. Beach a captain in the Army, and to place him on the retired list in addition to the number now authorized.

Mr. LACEY. I make the point of order that that can not be considered to-night.

Mr. SULZER. I hope the gentleman will not make that point. I would like to get this bill through.

Mr. LACEY. It would not be fair to the House to consider bills that are directly against the rule.

Mr. SULZER. I withdraw the bill out of deference to the distinguished gentleman's parliamentary logic.

ELIZABETH J. COOK.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 2497) granting a pension to Elizabeth J. Cook.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Elizabeth J. Cook, widow of Roger E. Cook, late colonel of the Thirteenth Regiment of Maryland Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Chairman, I desire to say to gentlemen of the House that this is the widow of an officer. She is poor and needy, and we give her a pension she is entitled to under the law. She lives in the State of Maryland. The marriage was a common-law marriage, which was not recognized in the State of Maryland. In nearly all the other States it is recognized as legal, and right across in the State of Pennsylvania it is recognized. If she had lived over in Pennsylvania, her marriage would be legal, and in many other States, and she would get the pension.

Mr. TALBERT. Were the soldier's disabilities incurred in the service?

Mr. RAY of New York. He died of disabilities of service origin.

The bill was ordered to be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

ELIZA M. MILLER.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 4332) granting an increase of pension to Eliza M. Miller.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Eliza M. Miller, widow of James H. Miller, late first lieutenant Company H, Fifty-fifth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and pay her a pension at the rate of $17 per month in lieu of that which she is now receiving.

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Chairman, this is simply an increase from $8 to $17 a month, simply the rank of the husband.

We give it to her because we believe that the death of her husband was of service origin, although it can not be fully and satisfactorily proved. She is old and poor, and she has no one upon whom she can rely for support.

Mr. TALBERT. You say you believe, and yet you give her the full limit—

Mr. RAY of New York. No.

Mr. TALBERT. Upon your belief—$30.

Mr. RAY of New York. We base it upon the fact that she is now very poor and has no one upon whom she can depend.

Mr. TALBERT. Is not that as much as she would get if there was no doubt about it?

Mr. RAY of New York. We only increase it to $17.

Mr. TALBERT. Oh, well.

The bill was ordered to be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

ABIGAIL WILSON.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 8207) granting a pension to Abigail Wilson.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Abigail Wilson on the pension roll of the United States, and that a pension at the rate of $12 per month be issued to Abigail Wilson, subject to the laws governing the issue and payment of pensions.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

Strike out all after "place," line 4, and insert the following: "on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Abigail Wilson, the dependent mother of Alden M. Wilson, late of Company B, Fifty-second Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month."

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Chairman, this bill gives $12 a month to this old, poor, dependent mother of a soldier who died of disease or wounds received in the service, as we believe.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, I want it distinctly understood, and it shall be understood, that the chairman took a bill of an old Mexican soldier who was blind and disabled and made a distinction between that soldier and another soldier; and I am not going to submit to it.

I have never antagonized any of these bills; but, Mr. Chairman, I think I know a little about an old Mexican soldier; and you put a bill through a moment ago on account of blindness of a soldier of the civil war and yet knocked out an old Mexican soldier that was blind. [Applause.] You need not think that you can deceive me about this thing. I understand exactly, and I beg you to put the old Mexican soldier on the pension list according to your decrees that you have issued. They are a sort of decrees that I do not like very much, either.

Now, all I want, Mr. Chairman, is this, and I am going to have it if I can: You shall treat the old Mexican soldier like you treat other soldiers of our country that fought for the defense of our flag, and you have not done it. Now, go and fix it and make it right. If you do not, the country will see how you are doing.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent, in view of the fact that we can not get through with the consideration of all these bills on the Calendar as they are now, that only Senate bills and such House bills as are represented by members on the floor be considered on the first call on the Calendar, and then recur to those other bills on the Calendar.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will withhold his request until we dispose of the question now under consideration. The question is on the amendments recommended by the committee.

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to. The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. I now renew my request.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will again state his request.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. My request is that we only consider upon the first call of the Calendar Senate bills and House bills represented by some member on the floor.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Indiana asks unanimous consent that the committee consider only Senate bills and those represented by members on the floor in the first call of the Calendar. Is there objection?

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. I would make another suggestion, that if any gentleman has already had one bill to-night, those who have not had a bill shall first have theirs considered.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. I hope the gentleman will not do that. He will understand why.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair hears no objection, and it is so ordered.

ELIZABETH M. MEAD.

The next business considered was the bill (S. 4866) granting a pension to Elizabeth M. Mead.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Elizabeth M. Mead, dependent stepmother of Francis L. Mead, late private in Company H, Twenty-fourth Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The bill was ordered to be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

DANIEL G. EMERT.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 11767) to pension Daniel G. Emert.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Daniel G. Emert, of Company K, Second Regiment of Tennessee Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 a month.

With the following committee amendments:

In line 8 strike out "twenty" and insert "twelve."

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting a pension to Daniel G. Emert."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

JOHN H. CRANDALL.

The next business was the bill (S. 4483) granting an increase of pension to John H. Crandall.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John H. Crandall, late a private in Company I, Twenty-seventh Regiment New York Volunteers, and in Company A, One hundred and thirty-sixth New York Volunteers, and to pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of the pension he now receives.

With the following committee amendments:

Line 9, strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty-four."

At the end of line 10 add "same to be paid to the committee of his person and estate."

Mr. TALBERT. I would like to have the report read.

Mr. RAY of New York. This soldier is insane and in the asylum. He has a wife and child without any property, and this gives a pension to take care of a wife and child, increasing it from $12 to $24 a month.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

WILLIAM F. GOWDY.

The next business was the bill (S. 1378) granting a pension to William F. Gowdy.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of William F. Gowdy, late captain Company H, Forty-seventh Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, at the rate of $12 per month from the passage of this act.

With the following committee amendments:

Line 7, after "Infantry," insert "and pay him a pension."

Line 8, strike out "from the passage of this act."

Mr. RAY of New York. I want to say that this man is old and poor and this bill only gives him a pension of $12 a month.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

HENRY A. THOBURN.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 1698) granting a pension to Henry A. Thoburn, of Newport, Ky.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the limitations of the pension laws, the name of Henry A. Thoburn, late mate of the ship Fairy, in the United States Navy, and pay him a pension of $24 per month in lieu of that which he is now receiving.

With the following committee amendments:

Line 5, after "the" and before "limitations," insert "provisions and."

Line 7, after "pension," insert "at the rate."

Line 8 strike out "which he is now receiving" and insert "he now receives."

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Henry A. Thoburn."

Mr. TALBERT. I would like to have a statement about this.

Mr. BERRY. This man is afflicted with locomotor ataxia, and incapable of movement. He is confined to his room and likely to die very soon.

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

JOHN W. LAY.

The next business was the bill (S. 3227) granting a pension to John W. Lay.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John W. Lay, late a private in Company I, Third Regiment Arkansas Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

Mr. RAY of New York. This restores the soldier to the pension roll who was dropped on the ground that he served voluntarily in the Confederate army. That is not the fact. He did not voluntarily serve there, and we restore him to the pension roll.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

SUSAN MELLISOP.

The next business was the bill (S. 571) granting a pension to Susan Mellisop.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Susan Mellisop, dependent mother of James Mellisop, late of Company D, Fifty-first Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

Mr. RAY of New York. This is an old lady 75 years of age, very poor, and in necessitous circumstances.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

GEORGE W. DETWILER.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 4745) to increase the pension of George W. Detwiler.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and hereby is, authorized and directed to place upon the pension roll, subject to the limitations and provisions of the pension laws, the name of George W. Detwiler, late of Company H, Twelfth Regiment of Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry, and that he receive a pension of $50 per month in lieu of that which he now receives.

With the following committee amendments:

Line 7, strike out "that he receive."

Line 8, strike out "of fifty" and insert "at the rate of twenty."

Mr. RAY of New York. By an accident soon after the war this man lost both hands. He is poor, and we double his pension on that account.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

MARY J. HILL.

The next business was the bill (S. 894) granting a pension to Mary J. Hill.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Mary J. Hill, formerly widow of James I. Cleveland, first lieutenant and regimental quartermaster of the First Missouri Cavalry Volunteers, and pay her a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

With the following committee amendment:

Strike out "Missouri" and insert "Wisconsin."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

MICHAEL LANNON.

The next business was the bill (S. 1619) granting a pension to Michael Lannon.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Michael Lannon, late a private in Company F, Second United States Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

With the following committee amendments:

In line 6 strike out the word "Lannon" and insert the word "Lannan."

Amend the title so as to read: "An act granting a pension to Michael Lannan."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

GEORGE W. EMERY.

The next business was the bill (S. 1245) granting an increase of pension to George W. Emery.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of George W. Emery, late of Company H, Sixth Regiment New Hampshire Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that which he is now receiving.

With the following committee amendment:

Strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty-five."

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, I want to get one point on the chairman of the committee distinctly understood. When you struck that old Mexican soldier that was blind, what did your committee recommend?

Mr. RAY of New York. Does not the gentleman recognize the fact that the gentleman from New York [Mr. RAY] is not the chairman of the Committee on Pensions? I am the chairman of the Committee on Invalid Pensions. I have had nothing whatever to do with reporting the bill he has referred to; never heard of it until it came into this House, so I hope he will not trim me down for the action on that bill.

Mr. COX. Oh, no; I am not going to trim you down, for the gentleman does not need it; but there was a member of the other committee that put his foot down upon the old Mexican soldier for an increase of pension.

Mr. CASTLE. He has gone out.

Mr. COX. I am very sorry he has gone. I do not care to consume one moment of the time of the House, but I do say that when you take an old soldier that is blind and penniless, a soldier of the Mexican war, he is as much entitled to the respect of this Government as the man that served in the civil war. I have not fought any pension bills, but I tried my best to make you all pensioners. [Laughter.] I have no apologies to make for it. But when members come into the House and undertake to discriminate against the old Mexican volunteer, penniless and blind, I say it is a shame.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

J. K. HAGER.

The next business was the bill (S. 3532) granting a pension to J. K. Hager.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of J. K. Hager, dependent father of James G. B. Hager, late a member of Company H, Thirty-ninth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

WILLIAM R. WARDEN.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 7093) granting an increase of pension to William R. Warden.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of William R. Warden, late a private in Company F, Third Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, at the rate of $12 per month, and pay him said rate under certificate No. 10925, issued to him under the law of June 27, 1890, without deducting therefrom any sum theretofore erroneously paid to him under any former law.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

Mr. FARIS. I desire to call attention, Mr. Chairman, to the fact that in the report by the committee this soldier in the bill just passed was said to have belonged to the Third Kentucky Cavalry, whereas he belonged to the Third Kentucky Infantry.

The CHAIRMAN. The correction will be made in the report.

CHARLES EDSON.

The next business was the bill (S. 2335) granting an increase of pension to Charles Edson.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, at the rate of $50 per month, the name of Charles Edson, late a private in Company C, Fifth Regiment New Hampshire Volunteer Infantry, said pension to be in lieu of that which he now receives.

With the following committee amendments:

Strike out the words "at the rate of $50 per month."

Insert after the word "Infantry" the words "and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

L. P. COOPER.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 2366) granting a pension to L. P. Cooper, Company D, Fiftieth New York Volunteer Engineers.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of L. P. Cooper, of Company B, Fiftieth New York Volunteer Engineers, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month.

The amendments reported by the committee were read, as follows:

Line 6, strike out "L." and insert "Lester."

Line 7, strike out "fifty" and insert "twenty-four."

Amend the title so it will read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Lester P. Cooper."

The amendments were agreed to, and the bill as amended was laid aside to be reported favorably.

MARTHA ADAMS.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 8406) granting an increase of pension to Martha Adams.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, at the rate of $12 a month, the name of Martha Adams, widow of Nathan Adams, of Company E, One hundred and thirty-fourth Regiment Ohio Infantry, said pension to be in lieu of that now received by her.

The amendments reported by the committee were read, as follows:

In lines 4 and 5 strike out "at the rate of $12 a month" and insert "subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws."

In line 7 strike out "said pension to be" and insert "and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month."

The amendments were agreed to; and the bill as amended was laid aside to be reported favorably.

ANDREW MORSE, JR.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 3476) for the relief of Andrew Morse, jr.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Andrew Morse, jr., late of Company C, First Louisiana Cavalry, serving in the war of the rebellion, at the rate of $72 per month, which rate of $72 shall be in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The amendments reported by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 7 strike out "serving in the war of the rebellion" and insert "and pay him a pension."

In line 8 strike out "seventy-two" and insert "forty."

In lines 8 and 9 strike out "which rate of $72 shall be." Amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Andrew Morse, jr."

The amendments were agreed to; and the bill as amended was laid aside to be reported favorably.

AARON B. PAGE.

The next business was the bill (S. 2217) to increase the pension of Aaron B. Page.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Aaron B. Page, late of Company E, Seventy-second Regiment Illinois Volunteers, at the rate of $30 per month, in lieu of the pension now received.

The amendment reported by the committee was read, as follows:

Line 7, after "Volunteers," insert "and pay him a pension."

The amendment was agreed to; and the bill as amended was laid aside to be reported favorably to the House.

IRA BACON.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 2830) granting a pension to Ira Bacon.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to issue an increase pension certificate of $72 per month to Ira Bacon, of Company A, Fifty-second Indiana Infantry Volunteers, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws.

The amendments reported by the committee were read, as follows:

In lines 4 and 5 strike out "issue an increased pension certificate of $72 per month to" and insert in lieu thereof the words: "place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of."

In line 5, after the word "Bacon," insert the word "late."

Strike out all after the word "Volunteers," in line 6, and insert in lieu thereof: "and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he now receives."

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Ira Bacon."

The amendments were agreed to; and the bill as amended was laid aside to be reported favorably.

BARTLETT CORNIFF.

The next business was the bill (S. 5264) granting an increase of pension to Bartlett Corniff.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Bartlett Corniff, late of Company B, Nineteenth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $33 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was laid aside to be reported favorably to the House.

MARIA S. WHITNEY.

The next business was the bill (S. 3325) granting a pension to Maria S. Whitney.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Maria S. Whitney, stepmother of John M. Whitney, late acting assistant surgeon, United States Navy, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The amendment reported by the committee was read, as follows: After "Whitney," in line 6, insert "the dependent;" so as to read: "Maria S. Whitney, the dependent stepmother of John M. Whitney."

Mr. TALBERT. I should like to hear the report, or some explanation of this case. It appears the proposition is to pension the stepmother of the soldier.

Mr. RAY of New York. Yes. The stepmother is not within the law. But this woman married the father of the soldier when the claimant was but a little boy. She was, in fact, a mother to him until he went into the Army, where he lost his life. The only difficulty is that she is not his mother by blood.

Mr. TALBERT. This is another precedent—a precedent for another class of pensioners.

The amendment reported by the committee was agreed to; and the bill as amended was laid aside to be reported favorably.

JOHN LINDQUIST.

The next business was the bill (S. 4495) granting a pension to John Lindquist.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John Lindquist, late of Company F, First Minnesota Infantry, and pay to his lawful guardian for him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The bill was laid aside to be reported favorably.

ABIGAIL R. ELLET.

The next business was the bill (S. 1071) granting a pension to Abigail R. Ellet, of Eldorado, Kans.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Abigail R. Ellet, widow of the late Gen. Alfred W. Ellet, and grant her a pension at the rate of $75 per month.

The amendment reported by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 7 strike out "seventy-five" and insert "fifty."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported favorably.

WINBURN HICKS.

The next business was the bill (S. 4490) granting a pension to Winburn Hicks.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Winburn Hicks, a private in Captain Bragg's company (B), Webster County (Mo.) Home Guards, in the service of the United States, and a corporal and second lieutenant in Company G, Seventy-fourth Regiment Enrolled Missouri Militia, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The bill was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

ELIZA S. REDFIELD.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 12148) granting a pension to Eliza S. Redfield.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Eliza S. Redfield, formerly widow of Freeman R. Gardner, late private, First Regiment New Hampshire Cavalry Volunteers, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The bill was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

ORIN LONG.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 11148) to grant a pension to Orin Long.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Orin Long, late of Company G, One hundred and forty-fourth Regiment of Ohio Volunteer Infantry, upon the pension roll, and pay to him a pension at the rate of $40 per month, said pension to be in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The following amendments, recommended by the Committee on Invalid Pensions, were read:

In line 4, after "place," insert "on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws."

In line 6 strike out "upon the pension roll."

In same line strike out "to" after "pay."

In line 7 strike out "forty" and insert "twenty."

In lines 7 and 8 strike out "said pension to be." Amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Orin Long."

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to. The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

PATRICK O'NEAL.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 11673) to increase the pension of Patrick O'Neal.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to increase the pension of Patrick O'Neal, late private in Company J, Second Regiment California Volunteers, from $12 per month to $30 per month, subject to the conditions and limitations of the pension laws.

The following amendments, recommended by the Committee on Invalid Pensions, were read:

Line 4, strike out the words "increase the pension" and insert in lieu thereof "place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name."
Line 5, strike out "J" and insert "G."
Line 6, strike out "from twelve dollars per month to" and insert "and pay him a pension of."
Strike out all after "month," in line 7, and insert in lieu thereof "in lieu of that he now receives."

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to. The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

HOLLIS O. DUDLEY.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 10962) granting an increase of pension to Hollis O. Dudley.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll the name of Hollis O. Dudley, late captain of Company C, Eleventh Regiment New Hampshire Volunteers, and pay him a pension of $50 per month in lieu of that he now receives.

The following amendments, recommended by the Committee on Invalid Pensions, were read:

In line 4, after "roll," insert "subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws."
In line 7, after "pension," insert "at the rate."
In line 7 strike out "fifty" and insert "thirty-six."

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to. The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

ROBERT PERSLEY.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 1773) granting a pension to Robert Persley, late a Government employee in the United States military railroad service.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Robert Persley, late a Government employee in the United States military railroad service, on the pension roll and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month.

The following amendments, recommended by the Committee on Invalid Pensions, were read:

In line 7, strike out "fifty" and insert "eighteen."
Amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting a pension to Robert Persley."

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to. The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

CHARLES F. HOLMES.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 877) granting a pension to Charles F. Holmes.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the act of Congress approved June 27, 1890, the name of Charles F. Holmes, of Jersey City, N. J., the permanently helpless child of Joseph H. Holmes, a soldier of the late war, being a private in Company E, Ninth Regiment New York State Militia.

The following amendments, recommended by the Committee on Invalid Pensions, were read:

In lines 5 and 6 strike out "act of Congress approved June 27, 1890," and insert "pension laws."
In line 7 strike out "of Jersey City, N. J."
In line 8 after "helpless," insert "and dependent."
In lines 8 and 9 strike out "a soldier of the late war, being."
At the end of line 10 add: "and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month."
Amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting a pension to Charles F. Holmes."

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Chairman, while we have reported that bill at $13 a month, at the time we reported it I did not know the facts as I now know them. It is one of the most deserving cases that were ever presented in this House. It is that of the son of an old soldier, now in the poorhouse. I believe I can get the Senate to pass that bill at $15 a month. I ask unanimous consent that it be amended by making the sum $15 instead of $12.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York moves to amend by striking out the word "twelve" and inserting the word "fifteen."

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to. The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

WILLIAM B. PAUL.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 11568) granting an increase of pension to William B. Paul.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to William B. Paul, late of Company H, Tenth Vermont Infantry Volunteers, a pension of $30 per month in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The following amendments, recommended by the Committee on Invalid Pensions, were read:

In line 4 strike out "pay to" and insert "place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of."
In line 7, after the word "Volunteers," insert "and pay him."
In line 7, after the word "pension," insert "at the rate."
In line 8 strike out "thirty," and insert "twenty."

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to. The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

STEPHEN P. CHOATE.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 4905) to correct the military record of Stephen P. Choate.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and regulations of the general pension laws, the name of Stephen P. Choate, late of Company K, Twenty-seventh Regiment Michigan Volunteer Infantry, at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of the pension now received by him.

The following amendments, recommended by the Committee on Military Affairs, were read:

Line 5, strike out "regulations" and insert "limitations."
Line 5, strike out "general."
Line 7, after "Infantry," insert "and pay him a pension."
Amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Stephen P. Choate."

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to. The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

SAMUEL M. SMITH.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 10578) for the relief of Samuel M. Smith.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Samuel M. Smith, late of Company H of the One hundred and eighth New York Volunteer Infantry, on the pension roll and to pay him a pension at the rate of $72 a month, he being a helpless paralytic.

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Chairman, that soldier has died since we reported the bill, and I move that the bill be laid aside with the recommendation that it lie on the table.

The motion of Mr. RAY of New York was agreed to.

JOHN KEACH.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 10134) to increase the pension of John Keach.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to increase the pension of John Keach, of Northampton, Mass., and to pay him a pension at the rate of $30 a month.

The following amendments, recommended by the Committee on Invalid Pensions, were read:

In line 4 strike out "increase the pension."
Strike out all of lines 5 and 6 and insert "place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John Keach, late private, Company K, Eighteenth Connecticut Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he now receives."
Amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to John Keach."

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to. The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

JAMES S. ANDERSON.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. Chairman, I had a bill passed to-night (H. R. 8804) to increase the pension of James S. Anderson, Calendar No. 1293. They reduced the amount from $30 to $16. I ask unanimous consent to go back to that bill and to make the amendment $20 instead of $16.

There have been a dozen bills passed to-night similar to this, giving the applicant $20. This was an old soldier who served during the Mexican war and the civil war, and who had a good record.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman asks unanimous consent to return to the bill H. R. 8804, Calendar No. 1293.

Mr. RAY of New York. To that I object.

Mr. SIMPSON. It is a pension case.

Mr. RAY of New York. The committee ought to rise and pass these bills, but I will not object.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Kansas, to strike out "sixteen" and insert "twenty."

The amendment was agreed to.
The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

RUTH WALKER.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 9619) granting a pension to Mrs. Ruth Walker.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, at the rate of $12 per month, the name of Mrs. Ruth Walker, of Hillsboro, Mo., widow of Lyman D. Hammond, late of Company B, Second Regiment Iowa Volunteers.

The following amendments, recommended by the Committee on Invalid Pensions, were read:

Lines 4 and 5, strike out "at the rate of $12 per month" and insert "subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws."

Line 5, strike out "Mrs."

Line 6, strike out "of Hillsboro, Mo."

At the end of line 7 add the following: "and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month."

Amend the title so it will read: "A bill granting a pension to Ruth Walker."

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to.
The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

ERASMUS L. WENTZ.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 10697) granting a pension to Erasmus L. Wentz.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause to be placed on the pension roll of the United States, subject to the provisions and limitations thereof, the name of Erasmus L. Wentz, late chief engineer, United States Military Railway Corps, at the rate of $25 per month from and after the passage of this act.

The following amendments, recommended by the Committee on Invalid Pensions, were read:

In line 4 strike out the words "to cause to be placed" and insert in lieu thereof the words "to place."

In line 5 strike out the words "of the United States."

In line 6 strike out the word "thereof" and insert the words "of the pension laws."

In line 8, after the word "corps," insert the words "and pay him a pension."

In line 9, after the word "months," strike out the words "from and after the passage of this act."

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting a pension to Erasmus L. Wentz."

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to.
The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee rise and report these bills favorably to the House.

Mr. JETT. Before you do that I wish you would return to Calendar No. 12902. It is a bill that my colleague [Mr. BAKER] introduced, and he is not here.

Mr. RAY of New York. It is not a pension bill.

Mr. JETT. It is a bill to remove the charge of desertion.

Mr. RAY of New York. We would not get it through.

The motion that the committee rise was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and Mr. EVANS having resumed the chair as Speaker pro tempore, Mr. RUSSELL, chairman of the Committee of the Whole House, reported that that committee had had under consideration sundry bills on the Private Calendar and had directed him to report the same back to the House with various recommendations. It had also directed him to report the bill (H. R. 10578) for the relief of Samuel M. Smith, with the recommendation that it lie on the table.

HOUSE BILLS WITH AMENDMENTS PASSED.

The following bills of the House were severally considered, were read twice, the amendments recommended by the Committee of the Whole House were agreed to; the bills as amended were ordered to be engrossed, were read the third time, and passed:

A bill (H. R. 1388) to remove the charge of desertion from the record of Michael Baker;

A bill (H. R. 4670) to remove the charge of dishonorable dismissal from the military service of the United States of W. H. Castle;

A bill (H. R. 4498) granting an increase of pension to Jackson Neace, late a member of Company H, Twenty-seventh Regiment Illinois Volunteers, in the war of the rebellion (title amended);

A bill (H. R. 10900) to increase the pension of James Cooper;

A bill (H. R. 9302) granting a pension to Eliza Sickler;

A bill (H. R. 4661) granting a pension to Dortha E. Kennoch;

A bill (H. R. 10696) granting an increase of pension to James W. Ingram;

A bill (H. R. 2635) to grant Mary Chamberlin, of Chelsea, Vt., a pension (title amended);

A bill (H. R. 12013) to increase the pension of Delos M. Kenyon;

A bill (H. R. 4677) to increase pension of Mrs. Rebecca McMullen (title amended);

A bill (H. R. 6433) granting a pension to Jeremiah B. Moore (title amended);

A bill (H. R. 11876) granting an increase of pension to Clarence L. Chapman;

A bill (H. R. 8804) to increase the pension of James S. Anderson; A bill (H. R. 4501) to increase the pension of Stephen A. Knowlan, a recruit of Deman's detachment of United States Mounted Riflemen, in the war with Mexico (title amended);

A bill (H. R. 10892) to increase the pension of Andrew J. Taylor (title amended);

A bill (H. R. 6328) for the relief of Mary F. Cobb, widow of Lewis Bryant, Second Regiment Kentucky Volunteers, war of 1812, and daughter of Daniel Gano, captain-lieutenant in Capt. Andrew Moody's company, Second Regiment of Continental Artillery, Revolutionary war (title amended);

A bill (H. R. 4135) for the relief of Peter, alias Louis, Heck;

A bill (H. R. 10328) granting a pension to Ann Collins;

A bill (H. R. 1734) granting a pension to Mrs. Sophia Gruber, of Louisville, Ky. (title amended);

A bill (H. R. 12104) granting a pension to Maria S. Urban, widow of Maj. Casper Urban, late of Fifth New York Heavy Artillery, in the war of the rebellion (title amended);

A bill (H. R. 11824) granting a pension to Smith Jewell;

A bill (H. R. 1206) granting an increase of pension to Sophia W. Buxton, of Durango, Colo. (title amended);

A bill (H. R. 8207) granting a pension to Abigail Wilson;

A bill (H. R. 11767) to pension Daniel G. Emert (title amended);

A bill (H. R. 1698) granting a pension to Henry A. Thoburn, of Newport, Ky. (title amended);

A bill (H. R. 4745) to increase the pension of George W. Detwiler;

A bill (H. R. 2366) granting a pension to L. P. Cooper, Company B, Fiftieth New York Volunteer Engineers (title amended);

A bill (H. R. 8406) granting an increase of pension to Martha Adams;

A bill (H. R. 3476) for the relief of Andrew Morse, jr. (title amended);

A bill (H. R. 2830) granting a pension to Ira Bacon;

A bill (H. R. 11148) to grant a pension to Orin Long (title amended);

A bill (H. R. 11673) to increase the pension of Patrick O'Neal;

A bill (H. R. 10862) granting an increase of pension to Hollis O. Dudley;

A bill (H. R. 1773) granting a pension to Robert Persley, late a Government employee in the United States military railroad service (title amended);

A bill (H. R. 877) granting a pension to Charles F. Holmes, of Jersey City, N. J. (title amended);

A bill (H. R. 11569) granting an increase of pension to William B. Paul;

A bill (H. R. 4905) to correct the military record of Stephen P. Choate (title amended);

A bill (H. R. 10134) to increase the pension of John Keach (title amended);

A bill (H. R. 9619) granting a pension to Mrs. Ruth Walker; and

A bill (H. R. 10697) granting a pension to Erasmus L. Wentz (title amended).

HOUSE BILLS PASSED.

The following bills of the House were severally considered, were read twice, ordered to be engrossed, were read the third time, and passed:

A bill (H. R. 8668) for the relief of Henry Mulvin;

A bill (H. R. 7093) granting an increase of pension to William R. Warden; and

A bill (H. R. 12148) granting a pension to Eliza S. Redfield.

SENATE BILLS WITH AMENDMENTS PASSED.

The following bills of the Senate were severally considered, the amendments recommended by the Committee of the Whole House were severally agreed to, and the bills as amended were read three times, and passed:

A bill (S. 4681) granting an increase of pension to Joseph F. Mollere;

A bill (S. 1209) granting an increase of pension to Maj. John H. Gearkee (title amended);

A bill (S. 3136) granting an increase of pension to William O. Torry (title amended);

A bill (S. 2235) granting an increase of pension to Henry Hatch;

A bill (S. 1976) granting an increase of pension to Annie E. Ruff;

A bill (S. 4483) granting an increase of pension to John H. Crandall;

A bill (S. 1378) granting a pension to William F. Gowdy;

A bill (S. 1619) granting a pension to Michael Lannon;

A bill (S. 896) granting a pension to Mary J. Hill;

A bill (S. 1245) granting an increase of pension to George W. Emery;

A bill (S. 2335) granting an increase of pension to Charles Edson;
A bill (S. 2317) to increase the pension of Aaron B. Page;
A bill (S. 3335) granting a pension to Maria S. Whitney; and
A bill (S. 1071) granting a pension to Abigail R. Ellet.

SENATE BILLS PASSED.

The following bills of the Senate were severally considered, were read three times, and passed:

A bill (S. 3911) granting a pension to Henry C. Bedell;
A bill (S. 4416) granting a pension to Mary F. Hilliard;
A bill (S. 5386) restoring to the pension roll the name of Samuel S. McDonald;
A bill (S. 4845) granting an increase of pension to George H. Lamport;
A bill (S. 1759) granting a pension to James H. Preston;
A bill (S. 3768) granting an increase of pension to Nancy M. Lindsey;
A bill (S. 4635) granting an increase of pension to John B. Boggs;
A bill (S. 5267) granting an increase of pension to Charles E. Banfield;
A bill (S. 1918) granting an increase of pension to William Sharrock;
A bill (S. 5435) granting a pension to Emma J. McIntire;
A bill (S. 2497) granting a pension to Elizabeth J. Cook;
A bill (S. 4382) granting an increase of pension to Eliza M. Miller;
A bill (S. 4386) granting a pension to Elizabeth M. Mead;
A bill (S. 3227) granting a pension to John W. Lay;
A bill (S. 571) granting a pension to Susan Mellsop;
A bill (S. 3532) granting a pension to J. K. Hager;
A bill (S. 5264) granting an increase of pension to Bartlett Corniff;

A bill (S. 4485) granting a pension to John Lindquist; and
A bill (S. 4480) granting a pension to Winburn Hicks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The bill (H. R. 10578) for the relief of Samuel M. Smith is reported from the Committee of the Whole with the recommendation that it lie on the table. Without objection, that order will be made.

There was no objection.

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I move to reconsider the various votes by which the several bills have been passed, and also move to lay that motion on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

JEHIEL J. STEVENS.

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I hold in my hand a Senate bill introduced by the Senator from Illinois [Mr. MASON]. I had the report drawn, but was not able to get it in. I will state what the bill is. We have passed two bills like it. I ask unanimous consent that the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

This man Jehiel J. Stevens is now drawing $36 a month, but by reason of amputation of the leg and the pain consequent thereon he is unable to wear an artificial limb. I have a report and the Senate report attached, and I ask that the bill be considered now in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 4918) granting an increase of pension to Jehiel J. Stevens.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Jehiel J. Stevens, late a private in Company K, Eighteenth Regiment New York Volunteers, and pay him a pension at the rate of $45 per month in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the report be printed in the RECORD.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The report (by Mr. RAY of New York) is as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the Senate act (S. 4918) granting an increase of pension to Jehiel J. Stevens, has examined the same and all the evidence and respectfully reports:

The Senate report (S. 1437) states the general purpose of the bill and the facts and so far as applicable is adopted. The act as it passed the Senate increases the pension to $45 per month, not to $30, as originally in the bill. The Senate report is as follows:

"The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 4918) granting an increase of pension to Jehiel J. Stevens, have examined the same and report:

"This bill proposes to increase from $36 to $60 per month the pension of Jehiel J. Stevens, of Washington, D. C., late private of Company K, Eighteenth New York Volunteer Infantry.

"Soldier was enlisted in Company K, Eighteenth New York Volunteer Infantry, on May 17, 1861, and discharged May 28, 1863. He reenlisted in Capt. William H. Woodward's independent battery light artillery on July 2, 1863, from which he was discharged November 4, 1863.

"He was pensioned at $8 per month from May 29, 1863, on account of gunshot wound of left leg. His rate was increased to $12, commencing on September 25, 1860; to $18 from January 23, 1861, for gunshot wound of left leg, resulting in amputation; to $24 from March 3, 1863; to $30 from August 4, 1866, and to $36 from June 14, 1890, for gunshot wound of left leg, resulting in amputation and reamputation above knee joint.

"On April 9, 1897, claimant filed a claim for increase, alleging that since the date of his last amputation abscesses had formed; that several pieces of bone had issued from his leg, resulting in atrophy of the muscles, especially of the posterior muscles of the stump, thereby making it impossible for him to wear an artificial limb, and that the constant use of the crutch caused partial paralysis of the left side.

"This claim was rejected on the ground that paralysis was not shown to exist and that the alleged resulting necrosis of bone, abscesses, and atrophy of muscles were included in the approval and rate ($36).

"In the certificate of soldier's last examination, had on October 30, 1897, the examining surgeons state that the left thigh was amputated 6 inches above the knee, and that it is very difficult to determine whether he can wear an artificial limb. They give him a rating of $36."

The Senate act is reported back with the recommendation that it pass.

On motion of Mr. RAY of New York, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

SOLDIERS OF LATE WAR.

Mr. MERCER. Will the gentleman from New York yield to an inquiry? Can the gentleman from New York inform the House what policy has been decided upon by the committees, whether it applies to his committee or the Committee on Pensions, in reference to soldiers that were wounded in the late Spanish war or those soldiers who were killed in the late war?

Mr. RAY of New York. Nothing has been decided upon except this: That the claimants should all go to the Pension Office and file their claims and establish there what they are entitled to. Then, when the evidence is on file there and an increase is sought by special act, we can call for those papers and examine the evidence before the Bureau, and also any additional evidence that may be produced before the committee, and act intelligently.

Mr. MERCER. Then you will only act on those cases after they have been examined at the Pension Bureau?

Mr. RAY of New York. We will not act on those cases unless they have gone there with their proofs. They have to go there first and exhaust their remedies there before the committees will act.

Mr. MERCER. Before the committee will act?

Mr. RAY of New York. Yes.

Mr. Speaker, there is just a moment more, and I desire to say that I have tables prepared by the Commissioner of Pensions showing the special pension legislation from the Fiftieth to the Fifty-fourth Congress, inclusive. I ask unanimous consent to print them in the RECORD. There is no comment.

There was no objection.

The tables are as follows:

House convened December 6, 1897.

Committee called together December 8, 1897.

Next, December 13, 1897 (subcommittees appointed).

Next, December 16, 1897 (House took recess from December 18, 1897, to January 5, 1898).

January meetings of committee: January 6, 1898; January 10, 1898; January 13, 1898; January 17, 1898; January 20, 1898; January 24, 1898; January 27, 1898; January 31, 1898.

Special acts granting pensions passed by Fiftieth to Fifty-fifth Congress, inclusive.

Congress.	Number.	Annual increase.
Fiftieth.....	1,014	$306,277
Fifty-first.....	1,398	345,987
Fifty-second.....	217	35,438
Fifty-third.....	119	21,066
Fifty-fourth.....	378	89,559
Fifty-fifth.....	621	108,432

Of these passed by the House in the Fifty-fifth Congress 200 are Senate bills, and 412 House bills, of which 119 have not been acted on by Senate.

Bills introduced:

House bills..... 3,904

Senate bills..... 355

Total private pension bills, Fifty-fifth Congress..... 4,259

Total general pension bills..... 151

In Fifty-fourth Congress, average carried by each bill, by way of increase of charge on the Treasury, was $19.74. In Fifty-fifth Congress, average carried by each bill, by way of increased charge on the Treasury, is $14.55, or $5.19 less than in Fifty-fourth Congress.

Of the 621 reported in the Fifty-fifth Congress, 12 beneficiaries are dead. The 12 bills carried $2,676 annually, leaving annual amount carried by bills passed $105,756. This is assuming that all become laws. At a later date will give exact figures.

Special acts passed by House, Fifty-fifth Congress.

NOTE.—Bills marked (*) not yet signed by President. Bills marked (†) look at end of list for explanation.

Name.	H. R.	Amount drawing.	Amount in bill.	Increase.
William S. Adams.....	7449	.....	$17.00	$17.00
M. Louise Anderson.....	5994	$3.00	24.00	16.00
Jacob N. Atherton.....	5069	.....	18.00	18.00
Emer H. Aldrich.....	9901	12.00	30.00	18.00
Junius Alexander.....	7303	.....	12.00	12.00

Special acts passed by House, Fifty-fifth Congress—Continued.

Name.	H. R.	Amount drawing.	Amount in bill.	Increase.
Rachel T. Abbott	7257		$12.00	$12.00
Elam Allen*	3808	$12.00	20.00	8.00
Timothy A. Allen*	9569	12.00	24.00	12.00
Martha Allen*	4324		12.00	12.00
George Alexander*	6876	14.00	24.00	10.00
Richard Atkinson*	9455	8.00	20.00	12.00
Martha Adams*	8406	8.00	12.00	4.00
John N. Bruce	2272	12.00	50.00	38.00
Laura A. Barry	5905		8.00	8.00
Sarah L. Busick	1039		12.00	12.00
James H. Blakeman	3184	6.00	30.00	24.00
Victor Beauboucher	1387	30.00	50.00	20.00
Francis M. Brunner	3802	24.00	50.00	26.00
William H. Byrum	1034		10.00	10.00
Henderson H. Boggs	2023		30.00	30.00
Benjamin Beach	2159	12.00	24.00	12.00
F. L. Botkin	4902		12.00	12.00
A. V. Bloodgood	2154	12.00	30.00	18.00
Charles Beckwith	4449	12.00	30.00	18.00
Carrie P. Bissell	1181	17.00	13.00	13.00
George H. Baldwin	9210	15.00	40.00	25.00
Susan B. Boynton	7793	8.00	25.00	17.00
Marcia C. Barnes	4611	8.00	25.00	17.00
George Barnes	3963		18.00	18.00
John A. Bingham	8181		25.00	25.00
Mary J. Brown*	4973	No rate.
John T. Brewster	2318	30.00	50.00	20.00
Susan I. Barrows	377		12.00	12.00
Annie J. Bassett	7989	8.00	15.00	7.00
Jos. C. Berry	6379	30.00	50.00	20.00
Olivia Betton	2995	8.00	17.00	9.00
Addie L. Ballou	8724		12.00	12.00
Samuel H. Beckwith	7306	12.00	30.00	18.00
James Burnett	10055		12.00	12.00
Monson W. Biles	5620	12.00	14.00	12.00
John H. Boyd	9466	12.00	40.00	18.00
Mary C. Bates*	2459		17.00	17.00
Elizabeth H. Bowen*	5461		20.00	20.00
Henry O. Briggs	2967	8.00	24.00	16.00
Wilhelmina Barth*	2171		12.00	12.00
William F. Bolan	123		12.00	12.00
George Blackley*	1234	12.00	24.00	12.00
John J. Bowen*	10688	12.00	35.00	23.00
Henry Bullen*	9415	12.00	24.00	12.00
Charles H. Barber*	9359	45.00	50.00	5.00
John W. Brisbois*	8997	12.00	24.00	12.00
Tennessee N. Buckles*	10534		12.00	12.00
Ira Bacon*	2830	17.00	30.00	13.00
Sophia W. Buxton*	1206	25.00	30.00	5.00
William P. Cooper	1957	17.00	50.00	33.00
George D. Cook	345	12.00	30.00	18.00
Elizabeth Connolly	7355	8.00	12.00	4.00
Catharine Clifford	1801	12.00	25.00	13.00
Michael H. J. Crouch	333	12.00	20.00	8.00
John W. Channing	1442	20.00	30.00	10.00
Katherine L. Cushing	4469	30.00	50.00	20.00
Mary C. Case	2762		17.00	17.00
Newton W. Cooper	4189	12.00	50.00	38.00
Peter Castle	4488	8.00	20.00	12.00
John Connolly	8243		8.00	8.00
James S. Chapman	4274	12.00	30.00	18.00
Rachel J. Comer*	5054		8.00	8.00
Diana Clark	2673	8.00	12.00	4.00
Mary Hannah Clark	4977		12.00	12.00
Foster C. Carl	9195		18.00	18.00
Cordelia Cheney*	5153		12.00	12.00
Mary A. Caulfield	1045		8.00	8.00
Isabella Cross	8180		12.00	12.00
Corydon G. Crafts	8501		12.00	12.00
Mary L. Cook*	7971		12.00	12.00
Ella Charlton*	4446	8.00	12.00	4.00
Ann E. Cooley*	5204		12.00	12.00
William R. Christy*	2122	12.00	24.00	12.00
Arba Capron*	7046	12.00	24.00	12.00
Charlotte B. Cozzens*	6913	17.00	25.00	8.00
Annie Cusack*	10605	12.00	20.00	8.00
James Cooper*	10900	30.00	40.00	10.00
Clarence L. Chapman*	11876	12.00	50.00	38.00
Thomas Crinigan*	12026	17.00	24.00	7.00
Nellie V. Crosby*	10180		12.00	12.00
Mary Chamberlin*	2625		12.00	12.00
Stephen P. Choate*	4905	8.00	30.00	22.00
Ann Collins*	10328		12.00	12.00
Lester P. Cooper*	2366	12.00	24.00	12.00
Isabella G. Daniels	6211	12.00	30.00	8.00
Ellen Day	3299		12.00	12.00
Laura E. Davenport	2078		12.00	12.00
Sarah A. Denny	722		12.00	12.00
Bernard Dunn	771	10.00	24.00	14.00
Sarah E. Deub	1547		12.00	12.00
William E. De Mott	3025		50.00	33.00
Samuel E. Davis	7007	36.00	50.00	14.00
Alphonzo O. Drake	8296	12.00	20.00	8.00
John Doebler*	247	20.00	25.00	5.00
Clarissa A. Dunham	6427		12.00	12.00
Francis E. Utley Davis	10080		12.00	12.00
Frank S. Devol*	3123	12.00	24.00	12.00
Harriet T. Davis*	4982	8.00	20.00	12.00
Martha M. De Vou*	7639		20.00	20.00
Hollis O. Dudley*	10862	24.00	30.00	12.00
George W. Detweiler*	4745	12.00	20.00	8.00
Charles B. Eades	639	12.00	24.00	12.00
Henry H. K. Elliott	587		12.00	12.00
James E. Eaton	2497	12.00	24.00	12.00
Armenias H. Evans	8551	12.00	30.00	18.00
America Easton*	9843		8.00	8.00
Andrew S. Evans*	3307	12.00	50.00	38.00
Jesus Everly*	11017		12.00	12.00

Special acts passed by House, Fifty-fifth Congress—Continued.

Name.	H. R.	Amount drawing.	Amount in bill.	Increase.
Catherine Eakin*	9059		$12.00	$12.00
Daniel G. Emert*	11767		12.00	12.00
Abel B. Fowler (dead)*	6078	$16.00	30.00	14.00
Jacob G. Frick	4206	27.50	50.00	22.50
William D. Foote	4962	12.00	30.00	18.00
Charles A. Foster	4979		12.00	12.00
Isaiah F. Force	93	12.00	35.00	23.00
Virginia C. Fleenor	4916		30.00	30.00
Michael J. Fogerty	3081	36.00	50.00	14.00
Rebecca S. Foster*	3271	30.00	40.00	10.00
Robert Fletcher*	4001	12.00	20.00	8.00
Martha Jenny Freer	10117		12.00	12.00
James J. Gibbs	1971	No rate.
Nicholas Gardner	4183	17.00	50.00	33.00
Martha E. Graves*	2506		12+2	14.00
George W. Garrison	4160	12.00	30.00	18.00
Grace Gudge	6515		12.00	12.00
John X. Griffith	8081	8.00	50.00	42.00
Joel W. Gibbons	5762	45.00	50.00	5.00
Ann Gibbons	8296	12.00	30.00	8.00
Mary C. Gardhefner	9322	8.00	12.00	4.00
Joseph Griffith	9866		8.00	8.00
John F. Gates	6944		12.00	12.00
Susan A. Gummer*	2700	15.00	24.00	9.00
Catherine C. Goodrich*	10355	12.00	17.00	5.00
Jessie Goldie*	9659		12.00	12.00
Sophia Gruber*	1724	8.00	30.00	12.00
Hannah Howard (dead)*	91		12.00	12.00
Mary J. Hart	2295		12.00	12.00
Mary E. Herd	4624	8.00	30.00	22.00
Nancy Hollenbank	4320		12.00	12.00
Price W. Hawley	3141	12.00	24.00	12.00
Orlando J. Hopkins	3737	12.00	30.00	18.00
Eliza Houghton*	4193		12.00	12.00
Thomas S. Hancox	3326		12.00	12.00
Joseph B. Harmon	2198	12.00	30.00	18.00
Franklin Hull	5067	12.00	30.00	18.00
Nathaniel Houghton	983	15.00	30.00	15.00
Lowell H. Hopkinson	378	12.00	50.00	38.00
Maria E. Hess	864		12.00	12.00
Susan A. Huber	1897	8.00	20.00	12.00
Elizabeth Holt	4143		12.00	12.00
William P. Haskell	2123	12.00	20.00	8.00
Emory T. Hipple	6688		12.00	12.00
Myrtle L. Hamilton	2966	8.00	12.00	4.00
Mary B. Hulings	8197	No rate.
John B. Hays	8834		30.00	30.00
Charles Hoffman	4691	12.00	24.00	12.00
Emily A. Hausner	7802		12.00	12.00
Sidney J. Hare	5776	12.00	24.00	12.00
Justin O. Hottenstein	9295	24.00	30.00	6.00
Juliette Harrow*	8723	8.00	30.00	22.00
Lucy D. Heady*	909	8.00	18.00	10.00
Joel H. Hallowell*	1712	12.00	25.00	13.00
James C. Hervey	6841	20.00	30.00	10.00
Jeremiah Hackett	2967	12.00	30.00	18.00
Louis Hirsch	5402	12.00	24.00	12.00
Mary Elizabeth Heiskell	2545	8.00	20.00	12.00
Charles Howard	351		12.00	12.00
David R. B. Harlan	9224	12.00	20.00	8.00
Thomas B. Hammond	6076	8.00	30.00	22.00
Sarah A. Halter	2026		12.00	12.00
Joseph N. Harmon*	8445		12.00	12.00
Richard M. Hussey (dead)*	8855	6.00	20.00	14.00
Robert Hunt (dead)	11661	12.00	24.00	12.00
William J. Hicloway*	3195	6.00	30.00	12.00
Charles F. Holmes*	877		12.00	12.00
Milton Iserman	3798		24.00	24.00
Alex. E. Ingraham	4299	16.00	30.00	14.00
Sarah E. Ingham	1018		12.00	12.00
Ira Ingraham	99		12.00	12.00
William Iott	7554		12.00	12.00
James W. Ingram	10006	12.00	30.00	18.00
Alfred D. Johnson	4672	12.00	24.00	12.00
James E. Jones	7260		25.00	25.00
James W. Jackson	2981	12.00	20.00	8.00
Samuel F. Johnson*	4542	12.00	40.00	28.00
Howard L. James*	695	8.00	18.00	10.00
James C. Jennings*	8985	6.00	12.00	6.00
Smith Jewell*	11824	30.00	40.00	10.00
Rosa Karger	224	8.00	12.00	4.00
Gus. A. Kindblade	3524	17.00	30.00	13.00
James C. Kinkle	9242		12.00	12.00
Miriam V. Kenny	4484		30.00	30.00
John C. Knapp	8952	12.00	20.00	8.00
Abram O. Kindig*	10345	12.00	24.00	12.00
Samuel B. Koontz*	4249		15.00	15.00
Sarah A. Kizer*	10835		12.00	12.00
Delos M. Kenyon*	42013	12.00	24.00	12.00
Dorthea E. Kennock*	4691		12.00	12.00
Mary A. Kennedy*	12633		12.00	12.00
John Keach*	10134		30.00	18.00
Elizabeth Lane	2015	20.00	40.00	20.00
Weltha P. Leggett	2349		50.00	50.00
Sarah A. Landram	4247		30.00	30.00
Eliza B. Lowry	7482		12.00	12.00
Calvin P. Linn	3653	8.00	20.00	12.00
A. C. Litchfield*	5385		30.00	30.00
Robert Litzinger (dead)*	10135	8.00	30.00	22.00
Margaret A. Lowther*	11382		12.00	12.00
Elizabeth V. Litzenburg*	4398	15.00	25.00	10.00
Sarah A. Luke*	5712		20.00	20.00
Kittie Ann Loggins*	3155		8.00	8.00
John Lynch*	11363	12.00	24.00	12.00
Orin Long*	11148	8.00	20.00	12.00
Robert S. Moorhead*	3144	12.00	24.00	12.00
P. P. Miner	3132	12.00	24.00	12.00
Barbara Miller	3213	8.00	12.00	4.00

Special acts passed by House, Fifty-fifth Congress—Continued.

Increase.	Name.	H. R.	Amount drawing.	Amount in bill.	Increase.
$12.00	Benjamin F. Moulton	803		$12.00	$12.00
12.00	Eliza Miller	2815	$8.00	13.00	4.00
14.00	Emily J. Miller	907		15.00	1.00
22.50	Charles McAllister	298	12.00	24.00	12.00
18.00	Gratia H. Martin	4435		12.00	12.00
12.00	Frederick G. Moore	1235	12.00	20.00	8.00
23.00	James F. McKinley	6793	12.00	24.00	12.00
30.00	Joseph Monteith	2253	12.00	40.00	28.00
14.00	Gezima Millsap	8819		24.00	24.00
10.00	Joseph R. Mathers	6388	6.00	24.00	18.00
8.00	Michael Mahoney (dead)*	9642	8.00	30.00	22.00
12.00	Mary McLaughlin	3001		12.00	12.00
33.00	William Manley	1858	24.00	50.00	26.00
14.00	William B. Murray	4283	12.00	30.00	18.00
28.00	Taylor McFarland*	6831	12.00	24.00	12.00
12.00	Michael Meehan*	9503	10.00	30.00	20.00
42.00	Eliza J. Mead	2869		10.00	10.00
5.00	Catharine McCarty	8259		12.00	12.00
8.00	John W. Majors*	3487	12.00	24.00	12.00
4.00	Maggie Morris	4698		12.00	12.00
8.00	William B. Matchett*	885		12.00	12.00
12.00	Allen Meeks*	11115		12.00	12.00
9.00	Joseph H. McGee	10013	25.00	40.00	15.00
12.00	Rebecca Paulding Mead*	3298	30.00	40.00	10.00
5.00	James J. Marcher*	8749		20.00	20.00
12.00	Andrew Morse, jr.*	3476	24.00	40.00	16.00
12.00	W. H. H. Nevitt*	1529	12.00	30.00	18.00
12.00	Ellen E. Nash	6063		12.00	12.00
22.00	Lucy Nichols	4741		12.00	12.00
12.00	James H. Nichols*	10417		12.00	12.00
12.00	Jackson Neace*	4408	30.00	36.00	6.00
12.00	William H. Oliver	1540	6.00	30.00	24.00
18.00	Ellen O'Rourke	1722		8.00	8.00
12.00	Henry K. Opp	6411	6.00	12.00	6.00
12.00	Lauritz Olsen	7321	12.00	40.00	28.00
18.00	George W. Osborn	4961	12.00	24.00	12.00
18.00	Rebecca Otis	4173	12.00	20.00	8.00
38.00	John W. Ohngemach*	5802	17.00	30.00	13.00
12.00	Patrick O'Shea*	5328		12.00	12.00
12.00	Patrick O'Neal*	11673	12.00	30.00	18.00
12.00	Louisa Pasquet†	1257		No rate.
8.00	Hannah C. Pile	3172		30.00	30.00
12.00	Lovezella L. Patterson	3112		25.00	25.00
12.00	David Parker	1825	17.00	30.00	13.00
4.00	Belle Peter	8080		12.00	12.00
30.00	Pryor Perkins	8670		40.00	40.00
12.00	Thomas D. Porter (dead)*	3612	12.00	30.00	18.00
12.00	George D. Phinney	4315	30.00	36.00	6.00
12.00	Henry H. Preston*	9310	24.00	35.00	11.00
6.00	Elizabeth D. Pittman	5746		12.00	12.00
12.00	Charles R. Pradt (dead)*	10159	14.00	30.00	16.00
10.00	Samuel S. Patterson	5798	12.00	30.00	8.00
10.00	Mary Paul	7230		8.00	8.00
13.00	David W. Pennywitt*	726	12.00	24.00	12.00
10.00	George G. Pride*	5805		25.00	25.00
18.00	James Porter*	10893	14.00	20.00	6.00
12.00	Lavinia M. Payne*	2574	12.00	24.00	12.00
12.00	William W. Patterson*	11067	12.00	24.00	12.00
12.00	Robert Persley*	1773		18.00	18.00
22.00	William B. Paul*	11508	12.00	30.00	8.00
12.00	Caroy H. Russell	4467	12.00	30.00	18.00
14.00	James B. Rawlins	6601		30.00	30.00
12.00	Henry F. Rice	2199	12.00	12.00	12.00
12.00	William C. Ryan	7869		12.00	12.00
12.00	Frank Rockwith	619	12.00	24.00	12.00
24.00	Julia L. Roberts	6785		17.00	17.00
12.00	Missouri B. Ross*	9187	8.00	12.00	4.00
12.00	Pauline Robbins	3624		12.00	12.00
14.00	Mary E. Robinson*	9203		12.00	12.00
12.00	William Rolly*	6502	17.00	24.00	7.00
12.00	George W. Reisinger*	8578	12.00	30.00	18.00
18.00	Anna M. Rowe*	11296		12.00	12.00
12.00	Eliza S. Redfield*	12148		12.00	12.00
25.00	Elwin A. Scott	2346	8.00	16.00	8.00
8.00	Annie Saffell	137		12.00	12.00
28.00	Edward Starr	5006	12.00	30.00	18.00
10.00	Jerome A. Stanton	5394		18.00	18.00
6.00	William D. Seamans	4981	30.00	50.00	20.00
10.00	Charles L. Stephens	3061		40.00	40.00
4.00	Charles C. Short	4116	12.00	30.00	18.00
12.00	William S. Smith	6309		No rate.
30.00	Jane H. Sanborn	2074		12.00	12.00
8.00	Sarah Spangler	2850		12.00	12.00
12.00	Minerva Sample	3160		17.00	17.00
12.00	William H. Savage	8515	6.00	30.00	14.00
15.00	Eva Seely	6928	8.00	16.00	8.00
12.00	Mary Spear	7523	8.00	20.00	12.00
12.00	Ann M. Smith	963	8.00	30.00	22.00
12.00	William Henry Smith	785	12.00	30.00	18.00
12.00	Almon Stuart	2276	12.00	30.00	18.00
12.00	Edson Sullivan	5102	12.00	24.00	12.00
18.00	Mary Ann Sullivan	6325		12.00	12.00
20.00	George B. Stone	6325		20.00	20.00
50.00	Eugene A. Shaw	8679	12.00	18.00	6.00
30.00	Clara A. Short	1271		20.00	20.00
12.00	Olive H. South	727		12.00	12.00
12.00	Ellen Stack	4200	8.00	15.00	7.00
30.00	Della E. Spaulding	7293		12.00	12.00
22.00	Georgia Smiley	10516		12.00	12.00
12.00	Mary E. Sessions*	2617		12.00	12.00
10.00	Albert S. Shepard (dead)*	9079	6.00	24.00	18.00
30.00	Mazie V. Sullivan*	10285	8.00	12.00	4.00
8.00	Mary Luella Steele*	6810		12.00	12.00
12.00	Isaac Stephens*	9314	12.00	24.00	12.00
12.00	Alice Smith*	1675		8.00	8.00
12.00	Peter E. Shipper*	5796	12.00	20.00	8.00
12.00	Francis Scott*	8214	36.00	45.00	9.00
4.00	Beeri Service*	10738	30.00	45.00	15.00
	Andrew J. Snowden*	2203	12.00	24.00	12.00

Special acts passed by House, Fifty-fifth Congress—Continued.

Name.	H. R.	Amount drawing.	Amount in bill.	Increase.
Susan Stedman*	8568	$8.00	$815.00	$7.00
Jere Smith*	6861	8.00	18.00	10.00
Belle Shumard*	5309		25.00	25.00
James E. Searle*	7657	12.00	24.00	12.00
Nancy Shaley*	10241		8.00	8.00
Mlanda A. Sanford*	10660		12.00	12.00
Jonathan Scott*	4880		50.00	50.00
Charles N. Smiley*	12077	12.00	30.00	18.00
Eliza Sickler*	9502		12.00	12.00
Samuel M. Smith (dead)*	10678	12.00	24.00	12.00
John P. Thomas	164	12.00	40.00	28.00
Eunice Taylor	90		12.00	12.00
Moritz Tschoepe	4314	8.00	24.00	16.00
David N. Thompson	777	12.00	35.00	23.00
Anna M. Tate	711		12.00	12.00
Thomas S. Tefft	8209	12.00	25.00	13.00
Charles E. Taylor	5800		30.00	30.00
Henry H. Tucker	2969	14.00	25.00	11.00
Margaret H. Townsend	5105		12.00	12.00
William Taylor	772	17.00	24.00	7.00
William Tompkins	8680	12.00	50.00	38.00
Zolman Tyrrell	906		15.00	12.00
Frances P. Trumbull*	1373	8.00	8.00	8.00
Margaret Thomas*	4251		8.00	8.00
Augusta Troland	9632		12.00	12.00
Mary A. Taylor*	10158		12.00	12.00
Justus Townsend*	9018		12.00	12.00
Minnie B. Titus*	8610		12.00	12.00
Mary E. Taylor*	2258		12.00	12.00
Henry A. Thoburn*	1608	17.00	24.00	7.00
Maria S. Urban*	12104	8.00	30.00	12.00
Isaac B. Vall	2275	16.00	30.00	14.00
George Van Vleet	4675	17.00	24.00	7.00
Wheelock G. Vezzey (dead)*	5683		50.00	50.00
George G. Vogel	2203		12.00	12.00
Mary I. Valentine	584		12.00	12.00
Augusta Whitmer	92	8.00	12.00	4.00
Annie Wittenmeyer	1546		25.00	25.00
Mary E. Wallick	1802	8.00	30.00	12.00
John Q. Washburn	4167	17.00	50.00	33.00
William Warner	1306	12.00	50.00	38.00
Jane A. Wilkinson	7536		20.00	20.00
William H. Webster	290	30.00	50.00	20.00
Della E. Woodward	3015		25.00	25.00
Charlotte Walker	368		25.00	25.00
B. F. Wonder*	5335	6.00	40.00	34.00
Walter D. Weaver	5064		15.00	15.00
Florence N. Waldron	5245		30.00	30.00
David C. Waring	1855	12.00	24.00	12.00
Sallie Work	2119		12.00	12.00
Catherine Wiltse	7628		12.00	12.00
Lewis K. Whitmore	5775		25.00	25.00
Janet Wemple	6680		8.00	8.00
J. S. Waggoner	8006		12.00	12.00
Matilda Waelde	9735		8.00	8.00
Lizzie Waltz	8037	12.00	24.00	12.00
George E. Welles	900	12.00	30.00	18.00
Mary A. Waits	6064		12.00	12.00
Margaret Wilber*	258		8.00	8.00
John N. Wiley	6705	17.00	50.00	33.00
Mary M. Walrath*	6714	8.00	24.00	16.00
John A. Whitman*	7583	12.00	24.00	12.00
Ellen Wright	312		12.00	12.00
Mary E. Walker	6732	8.50	20.00	11.50
George Witter (dead)	10270	17.00	30.00	13.00
Sarah E. Ward	7505		12.00	12.00
Mary Woodmansey*	9203		12.00	12.00
Reuben H. Waters*	1780	8.00	24.00	16.00
Julia Walke*	1573		30.00	30.00
James Webb*	10056	12.00	40.00	28.00
Amanda Willmarth*	10858	8.00	18.00	10.00
Anna M. Weho*	1677		12.00	12.00
Charles Williams*	8059	12.00	24.00	12.00
Mary B. Wotring*	8805		8.00	8.00
William R. Warden*	7063		12.00	12.00
Ruth Walker*	9619		12.00	12.00
Erasmus L. Wentz*	10007		25.00	25.00
Abigail Wilson*	8307		12.00	12.00
Susan D. Yates†	1623	30.00	40.00	10.00
John Yahne*	4503	17.00	30.00	13.00
Jane E. Zink	6018		20.00	20.00
James R. Zearing*	855	12.00	30.00	18.00

HOUSE BILLS REPORTED ADVERSELY.

No. of bill.	Name.	No. of bill.	Name.
8250	Sarah A. Asplund	5229	William Fisher
88	Joseph Buckle	4944	Wm. H. Freeman
797	Cornelia L. Brownell	9120	Mary J. Freeman
3610	Charles Bitts	6500	Joshua C. Goodale
602	John J. Brewer	3718	M. E. Hamill
1028	William J. Bristow	11199	John Humphries
11082	James Bintliff	6254	Charles E. Jones
248	Warren Cochran	491	S. Plummer Morton
1951	Samuel P. Dill	9221	William H. Miller
7439	Milo Dixon	2420	Hester A. Robinson
1765	Caroline P. Dale	310	Alice De K. Shattuck
3590	Thomas J. Daniel	3396	Ogden Street
5690	Isabel F. Easum	1332	Joseph K. Weit
316	Maria N. Flint	2074	James F. Lee
5225	Frank W. Flanner

Mary D. Griffiths, H. R. 291, recommended relief through other channels.
Hiram R. Rhea, H. R. 8770, to repeal special act passed for relief.
Susan D. Yates, H. R. 1623, reported by this committee.
Susan D. Yates, S. 4491, was referred to Committee on Pensions and substituted for this bill in House.
Louise Pasquet, H. R. 1257, pension has been allowed through regular channels at Bureau since bill passed House.

Special acts passed by Senate, Fifty-fifth Congress.

NOTE.—Bills marked (*) not yet signed by President. Bills marked (†) look at end for explanation.

Name.	Senate number.	Amount drawing.	Amount in bill.	Increase.
Emily E. Atherton.....	1321		$30.00	$20.00
John Amrein.....	1614	$17.00	30.00	13.00
Enoch G. Adams.....	1462	24.00	50.00	26.00
Ransom S. Angell.....	1466	8.00	17.00	9.00
Nancy G. Allabach.....	1702	8.00	30.00	22.00
Mary W. C. Burgess.....	1581		17.00	17.00
Florence W. Buskirk.....	130	8.00	20.00	12.00
Joseph V. Bowie.....	1111	8.00	30.00	22.00
John J. Boatford.....	294	14.00	30.00	16.00
Annie E. Botsford.....	1181	8.00	12.00	4.00
Sarah Brumby.....	1345	8.00	20.00	12.00
Jennie E. Burch.....	368		12.00	12.00
Lewis D. Baker.....	1480	12.00	20.00	8.00
Mary A. Benjamin.....	662		12.00	12.00
William A. Beckford.....	489	30.00	50.00	20.00
Bettie Hord Brown.....	1472	17.00	30.00	13.00
John C. Brown.....	3474	17.00	30.00	13.00
Patrick Breen.....	3140		12.00	12.00
John B. Bevan.....	3160	8.00	17.00	9.00
Blanche E. Barlow.....	3350		12.00	12.00
Ephraim C. Baldwin.....	3968	15.00	35.00	20.00
Joel Blackman.....	4400	12.00	30.00	18.00
Nancy Barger.....	4451		12.00	12.00
Eva W. Brannan.....	717	30.00	50.00	20.00
Lydia E. Bowers.....	2729		8.00	8.00
John S. Beatty.....	4622	12.00	20.00	8.00
Chauncey A. Bradley.....	4630	24.00	30.00	6.00
Millie A. Berry.....	4231	8.00	17.00	9.00
Georgia H. Berry.....	4414		30.00	30.00
John B. Boggs.....	4635	16.00	30.00	14.00
John Brown.....	1697		12.00	12.00
Henry C. Bodell.....	3911		12.00	12.00
Charles E. Benfield.....	6267		30.00	30.00
Ella D. Cross.....	492		No rate.
Sarah E. Cotton.....	1837		12.00	12.00
Sophia J. Chilcott.....	1320		12.00	12.00
Moses M. Crants.....	1751	24.00	20.00	4.00
Alonso B. Chatfield.....	4003		No rate.
Cassius M. Clay.....	1119		25.00	25.00
Mary E. Chamberlin.....	1118	20.00	30.00	10.00
Faul Carr.....	1539	12.00	30.00	18.00
Mary C. Cook.....	2306	12.00	20.00	8.00
Abraham T. Cassey.....	1807	12.00	20.00	8.00
Eli M. Couch.....	4547	6.00	16.00	10.00
Catherine Childers.....	3705		8.00	8.00
John D. Coule.....	1537		12.00	12.00
Bartlett Corniff.....	6264		25.00	25.00
John H. Crandall.....	4483	12.00	24.00	12.00
Elizabeth J. Cook.....	2197		30.00	30.00
Peter Daley.....	158	6.00	12.00	6.00
George L. Darbin.....	853	12.00	30.00	18.00
Jesse O. Davy.....	2112		12.00	12.00
Stephen M. Davis.....	1827	6.00	12.00	6.00
Helen A. DelRussy.....	1704	30.00	40.00	10.00
Ida Emmott.....	3026		12.00	12.00
Thomas Edsall.....	3960		12.00	12.00
Farnham J. Eastman.....	1353	24.00	30.00	6.00
Alvah A. Easton.....	1353	6.00	24.00	18.00
John C. Emery.....	2101		12.00	12.00
Abigail R. Elliott.....	1071		30.00	30.00
George W. Emery.....	1245	12.00	24.00	12.00
Charles Edson.....	2336	12.00	24.00	12.00
Annie Fowler.....	2333		30.00	30.00
W. L. Faxon.....	116		12.00	12.00
Sarah E. Frary.....	400	8.00	8.00	8.00
Margaret Ferriter.....	4269		8.00	8.00
William J. Ford.....	317		No rate.
William L. Grigsby.....	73	8.00	20.00	12.00
Della Gilman.....	487		12.00	12.00
Daniel G. George.....	506	12.00	30.00	18.00
George W. Gould.....	4422	12.00	24.00	12.00
Nellie M. Guild.....	4374		30.00	30.00
Emma V. Gile.....	2652	8.00	25.00	17.00
John H. Gearke.....	1209	20.00	50.00	30.00
Sarah Gresham.....	409	8.00	30.00	22.00
William F. Gowdy.....	1378		12.00	12.00
Marietta Hayes.....	670		No rate.
John F. Hathaway.....	728		17.00	17.00
Mary F. Hawley.....	179		20.00	20.00
Mary Hayne.....	1300		12.00	12.00
Johnson Hays.....	310	16.00	No rate.
Charissa E. Hobbs.....	603		12.00	12.00
Charles F. Holly.....	2220	30.00	30.00	10.00
Lucia A. Hynes.....	807		17.00	17.00
Merlin G. Harris.....	2357	14.50	30.00	15.50
Clark W. Harrington.....	769	17.00	30.00	13.00
Henry Hinckley.....	2393	6.00	12.00	6.00
Harriet F. Hovey.....	2516		30.00	30.00
Zenas T. Haines.....	3005		12.00	12.00
Lewis E. Humpton.....	2965	12.00	20.00	8.00
Mary L. Hendricks.....	4948		12.00	12.00
Mary F. Hillard.....	4410		12.00	12.00
Sarah Hamilton.....	3466	8.00	12.00	4.00
James M. Herrington.....	1929	15.00	30.00	15.00
Mary E. Hatch.....	4744		12.00	12.00
Mary J. Hill.....	896		17.00	17.00
J. K. Hager.....	8532		12.00	12.00
Winburn Hicks.....	4490		12.00	12.00
Hon y Hatch.....	2293	12.00	17.00	5.00
One Armed Jim.....	1541		12.00	12.00
Charles H. Johnson.....	2751	12.00	30.00	18.00
Sarah Jordan.....	4399		12.00	12.00
Thaddeus M. Joy.....	2896	12.00	30.00	18.00
Jane B. Johnston.....	943		12.00	12.00

Special acts passed by Senate, Fifty-fifth Congress—Continued.

Name.	Senate number.	Amount drawing.	Amount in bill.	Increase.
Annie E. Joseph.....	3534	$8.00	$20.00	$12.00
Amanda F. Jumper.....	4082	8.00	20.00	12.00
Rachel Kern.....	2577		12.00	12.00
James H. Kyle.....	1829	17.00	24.00	7.00
Adolphine Kres.....	1467		50.00	50.00
Harriet M. Knowlton.....	408		25.00	25.00
Russell B. King.....	1887	6.00	12.00	6.00
Fannie Kautz.....	2117	30.00	50.00	20.00
Rebecca E. Kutz.....	2114		12.00	12.00
Mary E. Kline.....	3506		12.00	12.00
Solomon Kline.....	4233	30.00	40.00	10.00
Lewis Kyle.....	4248	12.00	18.00	6.00
William D. Lamb.....	2728		17.00	17.00
Catherine Leary.....	1450		12.00	12.00
Adelaide H. Lambertson.....	3254		No rate.
Levi R. Long.....	949	30.00	40.00	10.00
John N. Landon.....	1361	10.00	16.00	6.00
Geo. H. Lampert.....	4845	6.00	20.00	14.00
Samuel L. Liscom.....	1110	6.00	24.00	18.00
John Lindquist.....	4485	12.00	50.00	38.00
John W. Lay.....	3257		12.00	12.00
Michael Lannan.....	1619		20.00	20.00
William H. Morgan.....	699	17.00	30.00	13.00
Ann M. Madden.....	431		8.00	8.00
Harriet B. Matlack.....	655		8.00	8.00
James W. McMillan.....	137	30.00	50.00	20.00
Andrew C. Mensch.....	3442	20.00	30.00	10.00
Mary M. McCauley.....	486		30.00	30.00
Thomas Madden.....	2219		8.00	8.00
Carlton W. Muzzy.....	494	8.00	20.00	12.00
Corrisanda L. McGuire.....	2588	8.00	30.00	22.00
John H. Mullen.....	156	12.00	20.00	8.00
Charles E. Mann.....	2247		8.00	8.00
Cornelia M. Mason.....	3111		30.00	30.00
William J. Murray.....	1334		12.00	12.00
Jacob Miller.....	4568		12.00	12.00
John McVickar.....	4575	12.00	30.00	18.00
Samuel S. McDonald.....	5390		50.00	50.00
Susan Mellisop.....	671		12.00	12.00
Emma J. McIntire.....	5435		12.00	12.00
Eliza M. Miller.....	4382	8.00	17.00	9.00
Elizabeth M. Mead.....	4366		12.00	12.00
Charles A. Nasro.....	1603	17.00	50.00	33.00
Benjamin L. Nolan.....	2807		12.00	12.00
George W. Nevins.....	1968	30.00	40.00	10.00
Betsy B. Olin.....	497		25.00	25.00
Biram H. Palmer.....	182	12.00	30.00	18.00
Joshua Parker.....	2258	24.00	40.00	16.00
Daniel Phillips.....	1465	12.00	30.00	18.00
Susan A. Paddock.....	178		25.00	25.00
Frances E. Pease.....	663		15.00	15.00
Oscar A. Palmer.....	1473		12.00	12.00
Joseph Porter.....	1477	12.00	30.00	18.00
Halbert E. Paine.....	1481	30.00	50.00	20.00
Elijah N. Parkhurst.....	1475	30.00	72.00	42.00
Mary L. Page.....	3515	8.00	12.00	4.00
Leah L. Price.....	3993	8.00	15.00	7.00
Byron R. Pierce.....	2002	7.50	30.00	22.50
John M. Palmer.....	5342		50.00	50.00
Noah Pillsbury.....	1031		12.00	12.00
George W. Peters.....	1736	8.50	17.00	8.50
Aaron B. Page.....	2317	12.00	30.00	18.00
Bethiah H. Rollins.....	3170		12.00	12.00
Louisa M. Rice.....	1476	30.00	50.00	20.00
Clara R. Rodgers.....	2541		25.00	25.00
Annie E. Rud.....	1978	8.00	20.00	12.00
Cornelia I. Skiles.....	2213	8.00	25.00	17.00
Hannah L. Stevenson.....	439	8.00	30.00	22.00
Caroline A. Slocum.....	2299		30.00	30.00
Oliver P. Silvey.....	637	12.00	20.00	8.00
Maria Somerlat.....	2378		12.00	12.00
Richard T. Sultzter.....	1424		8.00	8.00
Edward Stanley.....	1075	6.00	24.00	18.00
Simoon Stevens.....	4169	8.00	20.00	12.00
Samuel A. Smith.....	106	12.00	30.00	18.00
Susan M. Seesford.....	1000		12.00	12.00
Barney Smith.....	2813		12.00	12.00
John H. Sanborn.....	608	8.50	24.00	15.50
Mary Sprague.....	1454	12.00	20.00	8.00
Margaret Love Skerrett.....	4246	30.00	50.00	20.00
Charles H. Streeter.....	1974		12.00	12.00
Washington Sweett.....	4975	20.00	45.00	25.00
William Sharrock.....	1918	12.00	25.00	13.00
Benjamin F. Tuck.....	1480	12.00	30.00	18.00
Lafayette Tibbets.....	699	12.00	30.00	18.00
Adda F. Thompson.....	4384		12.00	12.00
Charles W. Tilton.....	4761	17.00	30.00	13.00
Mary A. Thomas.....	596		12.00	12.00
William O. Torrey.....	2136	12.00	30.00	18.00
Rhoda A. Van Niman.....	3517		8.00	8.00
William N. Wells.....	619	10.00	30.00	20.00
John A. Worawick.....	1542	12.00	20.00	8.00
Olivia S. Washburn.....	3178		12.00	12.00
Robert P. Wild.....	1825	10.00	30.00	20.00
Mary A. Wise.....	493		No rate.
Wm. H. H. Wright.....	732	14.00	30.00	16.00
William J. Williams.....	3722		8.00	8.00
Amos Webster.....	3553		20.00	20.00
Julia E. Warner.....	4004		12.00	12.00
Henry Wilson.....	1453	24.00	40.00	16.00
Olivia T. Worden.....	2919	30.00	50.00	20.00
Maria S. Whitney.....	3325		12.00	12.00
James C. Young.....	2938		20.00	20.00
Edward B. Young.....	4298	12.00	20.00	8.00
Lillian M. Yost.....	2015		12.00	12.00
Jehial J. Stephens.....	4918	30.00	45.00	15.00

SENATE BILLS REPORTED ADVERSELY.

	No. of bill.		No. of bill.
Philip T. Greeley.....	618	Isaiah Mitchell.....	969
William Hamley.....	127	Evelyn N. Murray.....	945
Celia A. Jeffers.....	180	S. W. Taylor.....	601

g. 2230, Charles F. Holly, laid on table in House after being reported favorably from this committee.

S. 2230, Charles F. Holly, laid on table in House after being reported favorably from this committee.

TABLE I.—Pensions granted to commissioned officers and the widows and dependent relatives of commissioned officers under special acts passed by the Fifty-fourth Congress, showing the amount represented by prior allowances, the amount pension list was increased by special acts, and the monthly and annual value of the pensions allowed.

Class.	Number of special acts.	Allowance prior to special act.		Allowance under special act.		Increase in pension list by reason of special acts.
		Monthly value.	Annual value.	Monthly value.	Annual value.	Monthly value.	Annual value.
Invalid.....	27	$857.75	$5,193	$1,418.00	$17,016	$560.25	$11,823
Widows, etc....	108	1,811.00	15,732	4,123.00	49,512	2,312.00	27,780
Total.....	135	1,743.75	20,925	5,541.00	66,528	3,800.25	45,603

TABLE II.—Pensions granted to noncommissioned officers and privates, and the widows and dependent relatives of noncommissioned officers and privates under special acts passed by the Fifty-fourth Congress, showing the amount represented by prior allowances, the amount pension list was increased by special acts, and the monthly and annual value of the pensions allowed.

Class.	Number of special acts.	Allowance prior to special act.		Allowance under special act.		Increase in pension list by reason of special acts.
		Monthly value.	Annual value.	Monthly value.	Annual value.	Monthly value.	Annual value.
Invalid.....	147	$1,407.00	$16,884	$4,014.00	$48,168	$2,607	$31,284
Widows, etc....	96	122.00	1,464	1,178.00	14,136	1,056	12,672
Total.....	243	1,529.00	18,348	5,192.00	62,304	3,663	43,956

TABLE III.—Total pensions granted to all classes of pensioners under special acts passed by the Fifty-fourth Congress, showing the amount represented by prior allowances, the amount pension list was increased by special acts, and the monthly and annual value under each head of the pensions allowed.

Class.	Number of special acts.	Allowance prior to special act.		Allowance under special act.		Increase in pension list by reason of special acts.
		Monthly value.	Annual value.	Monthly value.	Annual value.	Monthly value.	Annual value.
Invalid.....	174	$1,830.75	$22,077	$5,432.00	$65,184	$3,602.25	$43,107
Widows, etc....	204	1,435.00	17,196	5,304.00	63,648	3,871.00	46,464
Total.....	378	3,272.75	39,273	10,736.00	128,832	7,473.25	90,571

SPECIAL ACTS, FIFTY-THIRD CONGRESS.

TABLE I.—Pensions granted to commissioned officers and the widows and dependent relatives of commissioned officers under special acts passed by the Fifty-third Congress, showing the amount represented by prior allowances, the amount pension list was increased by special acts, and the monthly and annual value under each head of the pensions allowed.

Class.	Number of special acts.	Allowance prior to special act.		Allowance under special act.		Increase in pension list by reason of special acts.
		Monthly value.	Annual value.	Monthly value.	Annual value.	Monthly value.	Annual value.
Invalid.....	5	$50.00	$600	$223.50	$2,682	$173.50	$2,082
Widows, etc....	25	183.00	2,196	855.00	10,260	672.00	8,064
Total.....	31	233.00	2,796	1,078.50	12,942	845.50	10,146

TABLE II.—Pensions granted to noncommissioned officers and privates, and the widows and dependent relatives of noncommissioned officers and privates, under special acts passed by the Fifty-third Congress, showing the amount represented by prior allowances, the amount pension list was increased by special acts, and the monthly and annual value under each head of the pensions allowed.

Class.	Number of special acts.	Allowance prior to special act.		Allowance under special act.		Increase in pension list by reason of special acts.
		Monthly value.	Annual value.	Monthly value.	Annual value.	Monthly value.	Annual value.
Invalid.....	28	$251.00	$3,012	$501.00	$6,012	$250	$3,000
Widows, etc....	60	82.00	984	672.00	8,064	590	7,080
Total.....	88	333.00	3,996	1,173.00	14,076	840	10,080

* Includes one special act not adjudicated.

TABLE III.—Total pensions granted to all classes of pensioners under special acts passed by the Fifty-third Congress, showing the amount represented by prior allowances, the amount pension list was increased by special acts, and the monthly and annual value under each head of the pensions allowed.

Class.	Number of special acts.	Allowance prior to special act.		Allowance under special act.		Increase in pension list by reason of special acts.
		Monthly value.	Annual value.	Monthly value.	Annual value.	Monthly value.	Annual value.
Invalid.....	23	$301.00	$3,612	$744.50	$8,934	$443.50	$5,322
Widows, etc....	80	235.00	2,820	1,347.00	16,164	1,112.00	13,344
Total.....	110	536.00	6,432	2,091.50	25,098	1,555.50	18,666

* Includes one special act not adjudicated.

SPECIAL ACTS, FIFTY-SECOND CONGRESS.

TABLE I.—Pensions granted to commissioned officers and the widows and dependent relatives of commissioned officers under special acts passed by the Fifty-second Congress, showing the amount represented by prior allowances, the amount pension list was increased by special acts, and the monthly and annual value under each head of the pensions allowed.

Class.	Number of special acts.	Allowance prior to special act.		Allowance under special act.		Increase in pension list by reason of special acts.
		Monthly value.	Annual value.	Monthly value.	Annual value.	Monthly value.	Annual value.
Invalid.....	0	$146.00	$1,752	$324.00	$3,888	$178.00	$2,136
Widows, etc....	29	40.00	480	438.00	5,256	398.00	4,776
Total.....	29	186.00	2,232	762.00	9,144	576.00	6,912

TABLE II.—Pensions granted to noncommissioned officers and privates, and the widows and dependent relatives of noncommissioned officers and privates, under special acts passed by the Fifty-second Congress, showing the amount represented by prior allowances, the amount pension list was increased by special acts, and the monthly and annual value under each head of the pensions allowed.

Class.	Number of special acts.	Allowance prior to special act.		Allowance under special act.		Increase in pension list by reason of special acts.
		Monthly value.	Annual value.	Monthly value.	Annual value.	Monthly value.	Annual value.
Invalid.....	93	$439.00	$5,268	$1,604.00	$19,248	$1,165.00	$13,976
Widows, etc....	95	167.00	2,004	1,286.00	15,432	1,119.00	13,428
Total.....	188	606.00	7,272	2,890.00	34,680	2,284.00	27,404

* Includes two special acts, claims rejected, and one special act carrying no increase.

† Includes one special act, claim not adjudicated.

‡ Includes two special acts, claims rejected; one special act, claim not adjudicated, and one special act carrying no increase.

TABLE III.—Total pensions granted to all classes of pensioners under special acts passed by the Fifty-second Congress, showing the amount represented by prior allowances, the amount pension list was increased by special acts, and the monthly and annual value under each head of the pensions allowed.

Class.	Number of special acts.	Allowance prior to special act.		Allowance under special act.		Increase in pension list by reason of special acts.
		Monthly value.	Annual value.	Monthly value.	Annual value.	Monthly value.	Annual value.
Invalid.....	93	$439.00	$5,268	$1,604.00	$19,248	$1,165.00	$13,976
Widows, etc....	118	216.00	2,592	1,720.00	20,640	1,504.00	18,048
Total.....	217	655.00	7,860	3,324.00	39,888	2,669.00	32,024

* Includes two special acts, claims rejected, and one special act carrying no increase.

† Includes one special act, claim not adjudicated.

‡ Includes two special acts, claims rejected; one special act, claim not adjudicated, and one special act carrying no increase.

SPECIAL ACTS, FIFTY-FIRST CONGRESS.

TABLE I.—Pensions granted to commissioned officers and the widows and dependent relatives of commissioned officers under special acts passed by the Fifty-first Congress, showing the amount represented by prior allowances, the amount pension list was increased by special acts, and the monthly and annual value under each head of the pensions allowed.

Class.	Number of special acts.	Allowance prior to special act.		Allowance under special act.		Increase in pension list by reason of special acts.
		Monthly value.	Annual value.	Monthly value.	Annual value.	Monthly value.	Annual value.
Invalid.....	82	$1,292.25	$15,507	$3,343.00	$40,116	$2,050.75	$24,600
Widows, etc....	228	2,082.00	24,984	13,487.50	161,850	11,405.50	136,860
Total.....	310	3,374.25	40,491	16,830.50	201,966	13,456.25	161,460

* Includes one special act carrying no increase.

TABLE II.—Pensions granted to noncommissioned officers and privates, and the widows and dependent relatives of noncommissioned officers and privates under special acts passed by the Fifty-first Congress, showing the amount represented by prior allowances, the amount pension list was increased by special acts, and the monthly and annual value under each head of the pensions allowed.

Class.	Number of special acts.	Allowance prior to special act.		Allowance under special act.		Increase in pension list by reason of special acts.
		Monthly value.	Annual value.	Monthly value.	Annual value.	Monthly value.	Annual value.
Invalid.....	* 653	$3,756.00	$45,072	$13,540.00	$162,480	$10,000.00	$121,080
Widows, etc ..	† 425	334.00	4,008	5,595.00	67,140	5,261.00	63,132
Total.....	† 1,078	4,090.00	49,080	19,135.00	229,620	15,261.00	184,212

* Includes twenty-four special acts carrying no increase and eight special acts upon which there has been no issue.

† Includes three special acts upon which there has been no issue.

‡ Includes twenty-four special acts carrying no increase and eleven special acts upon which there has been no issue.

TABLE III.—Total pensions granted to all classes of pensioners under special acts passed by the Fifty-first Congress, showing the amount represented by prior allowances, amount pension list was increased by special acts, and the monthly and annual value under each head of the pensions allowed.

Class.	Number of special acts.	Allowance prior to special act.		Allowance under special act.		Increase in pension list by reason of special acts.
		Monthly value.	Annual value.	Monthly value.	Annual value.	Monthly value.	Annual value.
Invalid.....	* 735	$5,048.25	$60,579	$16,883.00	$202,596	$12,140.75	$145,689
Widows, etc ..	† 653	2,416.00	28,992	19,082.50	228,990	16,666.50	199,908
Total.....	† 1,388	7,464.25	89,571	35,965.50	431,586	28,807.25	345,597

* Includes twenty-four special acts carrying no increase and eight special acts upon which there has been no issue.

† Includes one special act carrying no increase and three special acts upon which there has been no issue.

‡ Includes twenty-five special acts carrying no increase and eleven special acts upon which there has been no issue.

SPECIAL ACTS, FIFTIETH CONGRESS.

TABLE I.—Pensions granted to commissioned officers and the widows and dependent relatives of commissioned officers under special acts passed by the Fiftyeth Congress, showing the amount represented by prior allowances, the amount pension list was increased by special acts, and the monthly and annual value under each head of the pensions allowed.

Class.	Number of special acts.	Allowance prior to special act.		Allowance under special act.		Increase in pension list by reason of special acts.
		Monthly value.	Annual value.	Monthly value.	Annual value.	Monthly value.	Annual value.
Invalid.....	59	$808.25	$9,699	$1,944.75	$23,337	$1,136.50	$13,638
Widows, etc ..	109	961.00	11,772	9,884.00	118,608	8,923.00	106,836
Total.....	168	1,769.25	21,471	11,828.75	141,945	10,060.50	120,474

TABLE II.—Pensions granted to noncommissioned officers and privates, and the widows and dependent relatives of noncommissioned officers and privates, under special acts passed by the Fiftyeth Congress, showing the amount represented by prior allowances, the amount pension list was increased by special acts, and the monthly and annual value under each head of the pensions allowed.

Class.	Number of special acts.	Allowance prior to special act.		Allowance under special act.		Increase in pension list by reason of special acts.
		Monthly value.	Annual value.	Monthly value.	Annual value.	Monthly value.	Annual value.
Invalid.....	* 485	$2,800.50	$34,326	$10,293.75	$123,525	$7,493.25	$89,199
Widows, etc ..	361	371.00	4,452	5,088.00	61,056	4,717.00	56,604
Total.....	* 846	3,231.50	38,778	15,381.75	184,581	12,210.25	145,803

* Includes two special acts carrying no increase.

TABLE III.—Total pensions granted to all classes of pensioners under special acts passed by the Fiftyeth Congress, showing the amount represented by prior allowances, the amount pension list was increased by special acts, and the monthly and annual value under each head of the pensions allowed.

Class.	Number of special acts.	Allowance prior to special act.		Allowance under special act.		Increase in pension list by reason of special acts.
		Monthly value.	Annual value.	Monthly value.	Annual value.	Monthly value.	Annual value.
Invalid.....	* 544	$3,668.75	$44,025	$12,238.50	$146,862	$8,569.75	$102,837
Widows, etc ..	470	1,352.00	16,224	14,972.00	179,664	13,630.00	163,440
Total.....	* 1,114	5,020.75	60,249	27,210.50	326,526	22,199.75	266,277

* Includes two special acts carrying no increase.

Mr. RAY of New York. I move that the House do now adjourn. The motion was agreed to; and accordingly the House adjourned until 11 o'clock a. m. to-morrow.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a communication from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue submitting a list of the employees in his office who worked overtime on account of war-revenue legislation—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a communication from the Secretary of the Navy relating to certain deficiency appropriations—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a detailed statement of the refunds of customs duties for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898—to the Committee on Ways and Means, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a copy of an agreement with the Creek Nation, with accompanying papers—to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Attorney-General, transmitting, with a letter from the Commission to Revise and Codify the Criminal and Penal Laws of the United States, a revision of the laws affecting the postal service—to the Committee on the Judiciary, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of State, transmitting, with a dispatch from the American embassy at Paris, a memorial of the American Chamber of Commerce at Paris relating to a larger appropriation for the American section of the Paris Exposition—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, Mr. LEWIS of Washington, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 2552) to set aside a portion of certain lands in the State of Washington, now known as the Pacific Forest Reserve, as a public park, to be known as the Washington National Park, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2300); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, private bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House, as follows:

Mr. FENTON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 664) for the relief of William J. Hines, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2294); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. McDONALD, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 1618) to authorize the President to place William T. Godwin on the retired list with the rank of first lieutenant, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2296); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 718) for the relief of Benjamin F. Venum, of Wheeling, Ohio County, W. Va., reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2297); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. STURTEVANT, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 273) for the relief of McHenry Robinson, executor of the estate of Elizabeth S. Cushing, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2299); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

ADVERSE REPORTS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, adverse reports were delivered to the Clerk, and laid on the table, as follows:

Mr. BREWSTER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 1766) granting a pension to Carrie Dale, widow of N. H. Dale, late a colonel of the Second Wisconsin Cavalry Volunteers, reported the same adversely, accompanied by a report (No. 2289); which said bill and report were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. GIBSON, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 1851) granting an increase of pension to Maj. Samuel P. Dill, reported the same adversely, accompanied by a report (No. 2290); which said bill and report were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. BREWSTER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 662) to place John J. Brewer on pension roll, soldier late war, reported the same adversely, accompanied by a report (No. 2291); which said bill and report were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. WARNER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 3610) granting a pension to Charles Blitz, reported the same adversely, accompanied by a report (No. 2292); which said bill and report were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. RAY of New York, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 3718) granting a pension to M. E. Hamill, reported the same adversely, accompanied by a report (No. 2293); which said bill and report were ordered to lie on the table.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 3425) for the benefit of Evelyn N. Murray, reported the same adversely, accompanied by a report (No. 2295); which said bill and report were ordered to lie on the table.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, the Committee on Pensions was discharged from the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5899) granting a pension to Henry Dority; and the same was referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS INTRODUCED.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. HULL: A bill (H. R. 12176) for increasing the efficiency of the Army of the United States, and for other purposes—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. MAXWELL: A bill (H. R. 12177) making an appropriation for the purchase of a site for a post-office building in every city or town of not less than 2,000 inhabitants which has no post-office building—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. OSBORNE: A joint resolution (H. Res. 372) tendering a vote of thanks to the Sisters of Charity for the untiring zeal and heroic devotion displayed by them during the late war with Spain—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HENRY of Indiana: A memorial from the legislature of the State of Indiana, asking Congress to change the internal-revenue laws so that the express and telegraph companies will have to pay their internal-revenue tax—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. MORRIS: A memorial from the legislature of the State of Minnesota, asking that the lands in Winnebago, Chippewa, and Leech Lake Indian reservations be withheld from sale until after January 1, 1902—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. TAWNEY: A memorial from the legislature of the State of Minnesota, requesting a postponement of the sale of certain lands included in certain Indian reservations in that State—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. GUNN: A memorial from the legislature of the State of Idaho, favoring the election of United States Senators by direct vote—to the Committee on Election of President, Vice-President, and Representatives in Congress.

Also, a memorial favoring the free coinage of silver and fixing the value thereof—to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

By Mr. FLETCHER: A memorial from the legislature of Minnesota, asking that the lands in Winnebago, Chippewa, and Leech Lake Indian reservations be withheld from sale until after January 1, 1902—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. EDDY: A memorial of the Minnesota legislature, in regard to the sale of timber on public lands—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. COWHERD: A bill (H. R. 12178) for the relief of Margaret Luttrell—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. GIBSON: A bill (H. R. 12179) granting a pension to William P. Douglas—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 12180) granting a pension to Samuel McKamey—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GROUT: A bill (H. R. 12181) removing the charge of desertion from the military record of Norris W. Silver, alias Charles W. Nichols—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. KIRKPATRICK: A bill (H. R. 12182) granting a pension to Mrs. Permelia M. Davenport—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. YOUNG: A bill (H. R. 12183) for the relief of William H. Wanamaker—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. FOOTE: A joint resolution (H. Res. 373) to authorize the appointment of Harry Lee second lieutenant in the Marine Corps—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By Mr. ACHESON: Petitions of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Uniontown; Post 570, Grand Army of the Republic, of Ohiopyle, and citizens of Burgettstown, Pa., in favor of the passage of the Ellis bill—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. ALEXANDER: Petition of Miss Ellen Goodenough, praying for the passage of House bill No. 11735, providing that no polygamist shall be a Senator or Representative—to the Committee on Elections No. 1.

By Mr. ARNOLD: Petition of Foxburg Post, No. 249, Grand Army of the Republic, of Foxburg, Pa., favoring the passage of the Ellis bill—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. BARTLETT: Protest of Mrs. H. C. Tindall, president of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and others, of Macon, Ga., against the seating of Brigham H. Roberts as a Representative from Utah—to the Committee on Elections No. 1.

By Mr. BOTKIN: Petition of the Pleasant View Methodist Episcopal Church, of Mitchell County, Kans., to prohibit the sale of liquor in Government buildings, etc.—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

Also, petition of the Pleasant View Methodist Episcopal Church, of Mitchell County, Kans., against the seating of a polygamist in Congress—to the Committee on Elections No. 1.

By Mr. BULL: Petition of the Rhode Island Woman Suffrage Association, asking for equal suffrage rights for women in Hawaii—to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. BURTON: Petition of James A. Roberts and other citizens of Cleveland, Ohio, against the seating of Representative-elect B. H. Roberts, of Utah—to the Committee on Elections No. 1.

By Mr. COOPER of Texas: Papers relating to the claim of Charles H. Stunkel, of Loudoun County, Va.—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. CURTIS of Kansas: Petition of fourth-class postmasters of Osage County, Kans., urging the passage of House bills Nos. 4930 and 4931, relating to the compensation of fourth-class postmasters—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, petition of the First Baptist Church of Wichita, Kans., against the appropriation of money for sectarian schools among the Indians—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Also, resolutions of the First Baptist Church of Wichita, the Ministerial Union of Topeka, and letter of Mrs. S. V. Beach, president of Manhattan, Kans., District Woman's Home Missionary Society, protesting against the seating of Representative-elect B. H. Roberts, of Utah—to the Committee on Elections No. 1.

Also, petition of the First Baptist Church of Wichita, Kans., in favor of the Ellis bill—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, resolution of the Commercial Club of South McAlester, Ind. T., in behalf of House bill No. 11713, to put in force in the Indian Territory certain provisions of the laws of Arkansas—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Also, statement of O. J. Lynn, to accompany House bill No. 5638, for a pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ERMENTROUT: Resolution of the General Assembly of the Knights of Labor, urging measures to promote the ocean carrying trade in vessels under the American flag—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. GRIFFITH: Protests of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and the Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Greensburg, Ind.; Ebenezer Baptist Church, of Aurora, Ind., and the First Baptist Church of Madison, Ind., against the seating of Representative-elect B. H. Roberts, of Utah—to the Committee on Elections No. 1.

By Mr. HENDERSON: Papers of Hyde Clark Post, No. 78, Grand Army of the Republic, of Dubuque, Iowa, and of S. H. Kortman, of Brooklyn, urging the passage of Senate bill No. 3256, for the appointment of Union soldiers to official positions—to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. HITT: Petition of citizens of Stillman Valley, Ill., against the seating of Representative-elect B. H. Roberts, of Utah—to the Committee on Elections No. 1.

By Mr. KIRKPATRICK: Petition of the Evangelical Alliance for the United States, against the reopening of the sectarian-school question and favoring the American common-school system among the Indians—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Also, petition of 83 fourth-class postmasters of Pennsylvania, in favor of the passage of House bills Nos. 4930 and 4931—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, resolutions of the Merchants' Association of New York, relating to the freedom of private property on the sea from capture during war—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. LACEY: Petition of H. L. Spencer and 200 citizens of Oskaloosa, Iowa, for a public building at Oskaloosa—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, petition of J. D. Simon and 30 citizens of Newton, Iowa, against the seating of Brigham H. Roberts as a Representative from Utah—to the Committee on Elections No. 1.

Also, petitions of the Political Equality Club, L. O. Rogers and 50 citizens, John Meyer and 150 citizens, all of Newton, Iowa, for woman suffrage in the Hawaiian Islands—to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. MOON: Resolution of the Chamber of Commerce of Chattanooga, Tenn., relating to the improvement of the Tennessee River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. SHOWALTER: Petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Sharon, Pa., to prohibit the sale of liquor in Government buildings, etc.—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. SPRAGUE: Resolutions of the Boston Retail Grocers' Association, urging the enactment of the Brosius bill to prevent the adulteration of food—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. SULZER: Petition of New York County Woman Suffrage League for woman suffrage in the Hawaiian Islands—to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. VAN VOORHIS: Petitions of the First Baptist Church, First Methodist Episcopal Church, First Congregational Church, First Presbyterian Church, United Brethren Church, all of Marietta, Ohio; Presbyterian Church of Beech Grove; Baptist Church of Adamsville; 119 citizens of Zanesville; Woman's Home Missionary Society and 37 citizens of Dexter City, Ohio, against the seating of Brigham H. Roberts as a Representative from Utah—to the Committee on Elections No. 1.

Also, petition of Eureka Grange, No. 1241, of Muskingum County, Ohio, urging the passage of House bill No. 11604, to amend the laws relating to oleomargarine—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

SENATE.

SATURDAY, February 25, 1899.

The Senate met at 11 o'clock a. m.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D.

On motion of Mr. ALLEN, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of yesterday's proceedings was dispensed with.

APPROPRIATIONS FOR ATTORNEY-GENERAL'S OFFICE.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a letter from the Attorney-General of the 23d instant, submitting estimates in appropriations for salaries and expenses of the Attorney-General's Office; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

OFFICERS IN TEMPORARY SERVICE IN THE NAVY.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Navy, transmitting, in response to a resolution of the 1st instant, certain information relative to the officers in temporary service in the United States Navy; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

PARIS EXPOSITION OF 1900.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of State, transmitting a memorial of the American Chamber of Commerce of Paris, relative to an increase in the appropriation for the American section of the Paris Exposition of 1900; which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the following bills:

A bill (H. R. 7346) to amend section 4896 of the Revised Statutes; and

A bill (H. R. 11455) granting to the city of Boulder, in the State of Colorado, certain lands for park purposes, and for the preservation of the native trees on said lands.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills and joint resolutions:

A bill (S. 571) granting a pension to Susan Mellsop;

A bill (S. 1040) to provide compensation for a bridge and for buildings and other improvements constructed by certain persons upon public lands afterwards set apart and reserved as the Yellowstone National Park;

A bill (S. 1759) granting a pension to James H. Preston;

A bill (S. 1918) granting an increase of pension to William Sharrock;

A bill (S. 2497) granting a pension to Elizabeth J. Cook;

A bill (S. 3227) granting a pension to John W. Lay;

A bill (S. 3532) granting a pension to J. R. Hager;

A bill (S. 3766) granting an increase of pension to Nancy M. Lindsey;

A bill (S. 3911) granting a pension to Henry C. Bedell;

A bill (S. 4366) granting a pension to Elizabeth M. Mead;

A bill (S. 4382) granting an increase of pension to Eliza M. Miller;

A bill (S. 4416) granting a pension to Mary F. Hilliard;

A bill (S. 4480) granting a pension to Winburn Hicks;

A bill (S. 4485) granting a pension to John Lindquist;

A bill (S. 4635) granting an increase of pension to John B. Boggs;

A bill (S. 4845) granting an increase of pension to George H. Lampert;

A bill (S. 4918) granting an increase of pension to Jehiel J. Stevens;

A bill (S. 5169) authorizing the legislative assembly of the Territory of New Mexico to create an additional indebtedness for the completion and furnishing of the Territorial capitol;

A bill (S. 5264) granting an increase of pension to Bartlett Corriff;

A bill (S. 5267) granting an increase of pension to Charles E. Banfield;

A bill (S. 5386) restoring to the pension roll the name of Samuel S. McDonald;

A bill (S. 5427) granting to the Clearwater Short Line Railway Company a right of way through the Nez Perces Indian lands in Idaho;

A bill (S. 5435) granting a pension to Emma J. McIntire;

A bill (S. 5514) to amend an act entitled "An act to grant the right of way through the Indian Territory to the Denison, Bonham and New Orleans Railway Company for the purpose of constructing a railway, and for other purposes," approved March 28, 1898, and to vest in the Denison, Bonham and Gulf Railway Company all the rights, privileges, and franchises therein granted to said first-named company;

A joint resolution (S. R. 202) providing for the printing of the Report on the Financial and Industrial Conditions of the Philippine Islands, by Edward W. Harden, special commissioner of the United States; and

A joint resolution (S. R. 239) authorizing the Director of the Geological Survey to prepare maps of Alaska showing all known topographic and geologic features, etc.

The message further announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 4745) to increase the pension of George W. Detwiler;

A bill (H. R. 4905) granting an increase of pension to Stephen P. Choate;

A bill (H. R. 9502) granting a pension to Eliza Sickler; and

A bill (H. R. 11673) to increase the pension of Patrick O'Neal.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the concurrent resolution to print 10,500 copies of the report entitled "The Colonial Systems of the World."

The message further announced that the House had passed a concurrent resolution to print, for the use of the Director of the Mint, 3,000 extra copies of the Report on the Production of Gold and Silver for the Calendar Year 1897; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bill and joint resolutions; and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President:

A bill (H. R. 11717) making appropriations for the support of the Military Academy for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900;

A joint resolution (H. Res. 353) to amend section 25 of the act passed June 13, 1898, entitled "An act to provide ways and means to meet war expenditures, and for other purposes;" and

A joint resolution (S. R. 252) to prevent the spread of contagious diseases in the District of Columbia.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. ALLEN presented a petition of the Brotherhood of Boiler Makers and Iron Shipbuilders of Kansas City, Kans., praying for the passage of the eight-hour bill; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. PLATT of New York presented the memorial of Ellen Good-enough and sundry other citizens of New York, remonstrating against the seating of polygamists in the Congress of the United States; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented the petition of Rev. J. N. Shaffer and sundry other citizens of New York, praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the transmission by mail or interstate commerce of pictures or descriptions of prize fights; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented the petition of Rev. J. N. Shaffer and sundry other citizens of New York, praying for the maintenance of the prohibition law in Alaska and the Indian Territory, and to extend it to our new, half-civilized dependencies; which was referred to the Committee on Territories.

He also presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Newburgh, N. Y., and a petition of the congregation of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Lake Placid, N. Y., praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the sale of liquor in canteens of the Army and Navy and of Soldiers' Homes, and in immigrant stations and Government buildings; which were referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented a petition of the New York Conference of the Epworth League, praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the sale of liquor in canteens of the Army and Navy and of Soldiers' Homes, and in immigrant stations and Government buildings, and for the maintenance of the prohibition law in Alaska; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. MITCHELL presented a petition of the Humane Society of Burlington, Wis., praying for the passage of the bill (S. 1552) for the prohibition of vivisection in the public schools of the District of Columbia, etc.; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented a petition of Local Union No. 183, Cigar Makers' International Union, of Madison, Wis., and a petition of Branch No. 5, Brewers' Union No. 9, of Sheboygan, Wis., praying for the passage of the eight-hour bill; which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented petitions of the congregations of sundry churches of Sun Prairie and the Congregational Church of Clinton, the Wisconsin Baptist State Convention, the Congregational Church of Fond du Lac, the Methodist Episcopal Church of Milton; of the president and faculty of Beloit College Academy, Beloit; of the First Baptist Church of Waupaca; of Andrew B. Ruger, of Racine; of the Presbyterian Church of Stevens Point, of the Baptist Young People's Union of Sun Prairie, of the Methodist Church of Kaukana, of the Congregational Church of Milton, and of the First Congregational Church of Appleton, all in the State of Wisconsin, praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the sale of liquor in canteens of the Army and Navy and of Soldiers' Homes, and in immigrant stations and Government buildings; which were referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. FAIRBANKS presented a petition of the legislature of Indiana, praying for the adoption of an amendment to the internal-revenue laws authorizing telegraph and express companies to pay the revenue stamp required on all messages and packages; which was referred to the Committee on Finance, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Certified copy of concurrent house resolution No. 5.

Whereas uncertainty as to the construction of certain provisions of the internal-revenue laws of the United States now exists and general dissatisfaction prevails because of the unjust demands of certain corporations: Therefore, be it

Resolved by the house of representatives of the State of Indiana (the senate concurring therein), That our Representatives and United States Senators in National Congress be requested to so amend the internal-revenue laws of the United States to define specifically and fix certainly that all telegraph companies and express companies shall pay the revenue tax upon all messages and packages forwarded by them, to the end that the expenses incurred by reason of the Spanish-American war be equally distributed and paid by the whole people.

STATE OF INDIANA, etc.:

I, Fred Kimbley, principal clerk of the house of representatives of the Sixty-first general assembly of the State of Indiana, now in session, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a full and true copy of concurrent house resolution No. 5, which said resolution was duly adopted by said house of representatives on the 6th day of February, 1899, and concurred in by the senate on the 15th day of February, 1899.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand this 10th day of February, 1899.

FRED KIMBLEY,

Principal Clerk of the House of Representatives.

Mr. FAIRBANKS presented the petitions of L. A. Foster and sundry other citizens of Hesston; of John Gilmerson, of Gent; of Louis A. Moomaw, of Stockport, and of T. M. Goff, of De Soto, all in the State of Indiana, praying for the establishment of postal savings bank depositories; which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

He also presented the memorials of P. Ross and 19 other citizens, of W. Parry and 19 other citizens, G. Brown and 19 other citizens, R. J. Loser and 19 other citizens, M. Coffman and 19 other citizens, G. G. Cooper and 19 other citizens, and Harry L.

Pearce and 19 other citizens, all in the State of Indiana, remonstrating against the passage of the anti-scalping bill; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. NELSON presented a petition of the legislature of Minnesota, praying that the lands in the Winnebago, Chippewa, and Leech Lake Indian reservations, in that State, be withheld from sale until after January 1, 1902; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. COCKRELL presented a petition of the board of managers of the St. Louis Traffic Bureau, of St. Louis, Mo., praying for the enactment of legislation providing additional quarantine powers; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of Local Union No. 13, Core Makers' International Union, of St. Louis, Mo., and a petition of the Brotherhood of Boiler Makers and Iron Shipbuilders of Kansas City, Kans., praying for the passage of the eight-hour bill; which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of the Manufacturers' Association of St. Louis, Mo., praying for the enactment of legislation to increase American shipping; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented the petition of Prof. H. A. Wheeler, president of the American Ceramic Society, of St. Louis, Mo., praying for the establishment of a division of mines and mining in the United States Geological Survey, and that an appropriation be made to enable the Director of the Geological Survey to make a study of the clay deposits of the United States; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. RAWLINS presented a petition of the legislature of Utah, praying for protection from the depredations of Ute and Navajo Indians in San Juan County, Utah; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

A memorial to Congress praying for protection from the depredations of Ute and Navajo Indians in San Juan County, Utah.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the governor and legislature of the State of Utah, respectfully memorialize your honorable bodies and represent:

That the Ute and Navajo Indians residing in Colorado and Arizona respectively, and having reservations therein, wander therefrom into San Juan County, Utah, and commit depredations upon the property of the people of said section.

The foregoing facts have been ascertained after careful inquiry and investigation, wherefore your memorialists pray for immediate and effectual relief, and further represent that adequate efforts are not made by the Government to protect the settlers of San Juan County from the incursions of the Indians named or to control and restrain them within the reservations officially set apart for their occupation. As a result, they cross the State border with their flocks and herds and denude the land of its pasturage, despoil white citizens of their property, and spread terror among them.

Your memorialists therefore respectfully and earnestly request that the necessary steps be taken by the proper department to restrain and prevent said Indians from coming into the State of Utah.

And as in duty bound, your memorialists will ever pray.

AQUILA NEBEKER,

President of the Senate.

WM. M. BOYLANCE,

Speaker of the House of Representatives.

HEBER M. WELLS, Governor.

Approved February 6, 1899.

STATE OF UTAH, Office of the Secretary of State.

I, James T. Hammond, secretary of state of the State of Utah, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a full, true, and correct copy of a memorial to Congress praying for protection from the depredations of Ute and Navajo Indians in San Juan County, Utah, approved February 6, 1899.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State of Utah this 20th day of February, A. D. 1899.

[SEAL.]

J. T. HAMMOND,

Secretary of State.

Mr. RAWLINS presented a petition of the legislature of Utah, praying for the enactment of legislation to provide for the creation of another judicial circuit of the United States, to have jurisdiction in Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, Idaho, and Montana; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Memorial praying Congress to enact into law the bill introduced into the Senate of the United States by United States Senator WOLCOTT, of Colorado, providing for the creation of another judicial circuit of the United States, to have jurisdiction in Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, Idaho, and Montana.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the governor and the legislature of the State of Utah, respectfully represent:

That United States Senator WOLCOTT, of Colorado, recently introduced in the Senate of the United States a bill for an act establishing another judicial circuit of the United States, to be known as the Tenth circuit and to have jurisdiction in and over the States of Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, Idaho, and Montana.

That the bill is of great importance to the State of Utah; that the people of Utah who have business in the circuit court of the United States, in order to be heard, must travel either to St. Louis or St. Paul, a distance of about 1,300 miles, and then be subject to indefinite delays because of the crowded state of business in the Eighth circuit; that the distance to be traveled by counsel at present to appear before the circuit court of appeals is so far and the expense so great that it would be preferable in many cases for litigants of limited means to suffer injustice and defeat.

That the Eighth circuit, comprising the States of Arkansas, Missouri, Iowa, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, Indian Territory, Oklahoma, and New Mexico, is so large and the amount of business so great that much delay is necessarily caused in the dispatch of business.

That Utah is rapidly becoming one of the greatest mining and irrigation States, and many foreign and local corporations have been and are being organized for the transaction of business; that a large amount of the legal business arising within this State is between citizens of different States, and such business is constantly increasing.

That the principal business which would fall within the jurisdiction of the proposed circuit is peculiar to the intermountain States, and is wholly different from that arising in the Mississippi Valley or on the Pacific coast, and it is of paramount importance that the laws should be administered by judges who are familiar with the conditions of this region; that circuit courts exert a wholesome influence over communities and should be nearer the homes of the people.

That owing to the large and constantly increasing business arising within the State of Utah every alternate term of the circuit court of appeals should be held in Salt Lake City.

That on account of the large number of questions of the gravest importance respecting mining and irrigation which arise within the limits of the proposed circuit, not less than three circuit judges should constitute the circuit court of appeals.

Your memorialists therefore respectfully memorialize your honorable bodies to enact into law said bill introduced by Senator WOLCOTT, so as to provide for the creation of said proposed Tenth circuit with jurisdiction as above indicated.

And your memorialists will ever pray.

AQUILA NEBEKER,
President of the Senate.
WM. M. ROYLANCE,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Approved February 16, 1899.

HEBER M. WELLS, Governor.

STATE OF UTAH, Office of the Secretary of State:

I, James T. Hammond, secretary of state of the State of Utah, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a full, true, and correct copy of a memorial praying Congress to enact into law the bill introduced into the Senate of the United States by United States Senator WOLCOTT, of Colorado, providing for the creation of another judicial circuit of the United States, to have jurisdiction in Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, Idaho, and Montana, approved February 16, 1899.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State of Utah, this the 20th day of February, A. D. 1899.
[SEAL.] J. T. HAMMOND, Secretary of State.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. FAULKNER, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6359) to quiet land titles in the District of Columbia, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. MITCHELL, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 11615) removing the charge of desertion from the record of William Moore, Company I, Twenty-third Regiment Kentucky Volunteers, reported it without amendment.

Mr. KENNEY, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 10295) granting an increase of pension to Mazie V. Sullivan, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. WARREN, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (S. 5565) to provide for the erection of a public building at Freeport, Ill., reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the amendment proposing to appropriate $25,000 for additional expenses for a public building at Cheyenne, Wyo., submitted by himself on the 23d instant, intended to be proposed to the sundry civil appropriation bill, reported favorably thereon, and moved that it be printed and referred to the Committee on Appropriations; which was agreed to.

Mr. MARTIN, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 5210) for the promotion and retirement of P. A. Surg. John F. Bransford, of the United States Navy, reported it without amendment.

Mr. CHANDLER, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred the joint resolution (S. R. 256) to authorize the appointment of George C. Thorpe a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps, reported it with amendments.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the joint resolution (S. R. 257) to authorize the appointment of Harry Lee a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. GALLINGER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 10355) granting an increase of pension to Catharine C. Goodrich;

A bill (H. R. 10933) granting a pension to Sarah A. Kizer;

A bill (H. R. 3806) granting an increase of pension to Elam Allen;

A bill (H. R. 10716) granting a pension to John S. Draper; and

A bill (H. R. 6876) to increase the pension of George Alexander.

Mr. HANNA, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally with amendments, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 3291) to increase the pension of James C. Carlton; and

A bill (S. 4730) to increase the pension of Levi Moser.

Mr. HANNA, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally with an amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 4097) granting a pension to Elizabeth Whisler; and

A bill (S. 4098) granting an increase of pension to Isaac H. Lynn.

Mr. HANSBROUGH, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally with amendments, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 3672) granting a pension to Capt. Oscar Taylor; and

A bill (S. 4437) granting a pension to B. H. Randall.

Mr. ALLISON. I am directed by the Committee on Appropriations, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 12008) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900, and for other purposes, to report it with amendments, and to submit a report thereon. I give notice that I will ask the Senate to take up the bill for consideration on Monday.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. CARTER, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 5487) to establish a Branch Home of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers at Castle Pinckney, in Charleston Harbor, South Carolina, for the use of disabled officers and enlisted men of the Volunteer Army and Navy of the United States, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. HANSBROUGH, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the amendment relative to mineral lands in California, submitted by Mr. WHITE on the 21st instant, intended to be proposed to the sundry civil appropriation bill, reported favorably thereon, and moved that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations and printed; which was agreed to.

COMMERCIAL RELATIONS OF THE UNITED STATES.

Mr. FRYE. A few days ago there was referred to the Committee on Commerce a message from the President of the United States, transmitting a communication from the Secretary of State accompanying the Commercial Relations of the United States for the year 1898. I move that the committee be discharged from the further consideration of the message and that it be referred to the Committee on Printing.

The motion was agreed to.

EXTENSION OF ANTI-CONTRACT LABOR LAWS TO HAWAII.

Mr. FAIRBANKS. I am directed by the Committee on Immigration to report certain amendments to the bill (H. R. 11247) to extend the anti-contract labor laws of the United States to Hawaii. I ask that the bill may be reprinted with the amendments and laid before the Senate on Monday.

I wish to give notice that after the close of the morning business on Monday next I shall ask the Senate to consider and act upon the bill.

Mr. CHANDLER. I understand that the bill with all of the amendments proposed by the committee is to be reprinted?

Mr. FAIRBANKS. That is the request I made.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CHILTON in the chair). That order will be made, in the absence of objection.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. MITCHELL introduced a bill (S. 5579) to provide for the construction of a public building at the city of Janesville, Wis.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. BURROWS. Some time since I introduced a bill to provide for the employment of women nurses in military hospitals of the Army. I desire to introduce now a modification of that bill which has received the approval of the War Department. I ask that the bill be read twice and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

The bill (S. 5580) to provide for the employment of women nurses in military hospitals of the Army was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. MORGAN introduced a bill (S. 5591) granting an increase of pension to Orpha W. Reynolds; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. ALLEN submitted an amendment declaring that it shall be lawful for the coupon cards and envelopes as patented and now or hereafter owned by the United States Economic Postage Association to be carried in the mails of the United States under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Postmaster-General, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the general deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment declaring that it shall be lawful for the coupon cards and envelopes as patented and now or hereafter owned by the United States Economic Postage Association to be carried in the mails of the United States under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Postmaster-General, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. MALLORY submitted an amendment providing that the duties heretofore performed by criers shall hereafter be performed by the marshals, their deputies, or the bailiffs, except in the courts of the District of Columbia, intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to appoint a board to determine the desirability of constructing a dry dock in the harbor of Key West, Fla., intended to be proposed to the naval appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. STEWART submitted an amendment proposing to amend the act of June 10, 1896, so as to permit the Secretary of the Navy to contract for three submarine boats of the Holland type, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the naval appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. CULLOM submitted an amendment proposing to pay Elias E. Barnes $2,720 for 3,700 cubic yards of top soil placed on the northwest corner of the Congressional Library building grounds, and for 500 cubic yards of crushed screened stone used by the superintendent on the premises of the Library building, at $1 per cubic yard, intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. WARREN submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $360,000 toward the construction of a military post at or near the town of Sheridan, Wyo., on lands now owned by the United States, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. WHITE submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $1,990 to pay Robert P. Troy for services rendered on the floor of the Senate, from August 18, 1893, to February 18, 1896, intended to be proposed by him to the general deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

JOHN DALY.

On motion of Mr. GALLINGER, it was Ordered, That the papers in the pension claim of John Daly (S. 5484) be withdrawn from the files of the Senate and transmitted to the claimant, no adverse report having been made in the case.

SARAH M. DOVE.

On motion of Mr. GALLINGER, it was

Ordered, That the papers accompanying the bill (S. 3067) for the relief of Sarah M. Dove be withdrawn from the files of the Senate and transmitted to the claimant, no adverse report having been made in the case.

LISTS OF JUDGMENTS AND CLAIMS ALLOWED.

Mr. HALE submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Attorney-General be directed to transmit to the Senate a list of judgments rendered against the United States by the circuit and district courts of the United States under the provisions of the act to provide for bringing suits against the Government of the United States, approved March 3, 1887.

Mr. HALE submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Attorney-General be directed to transmit to the Senate a list of judgments rendered by the Court of Claims in favor of claimants in Indian depredation cases requiring an appropriation by Congress.

Mr. HALE submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to transmit to the Senate a schedule of all claims allowed by the accounting officers of the Treasury, under appropriations the balances of which have been exhausted or carried to the surplus fund under the provisions of section 5 of the act of June 20, 1874, since the allowance of those heretofore reported to Congress at the present session.

Also, a list of judgments rendered by the Court of Claims not heretofore reported to Congress.

RESERVOIRS FOR IRRIGATION.

Mr. WARREN submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved by the Senate of the United States, That there be printed 5,000 copies of the letter of the Secretary of Agriculture to the President of the United States regarding the practical usefulness of reservoirs to agriculture in the irrigated region of the United States, 3,000 of which shall be for the use of the Department of Agriculture and 2,000 for the use of the Senate.

EIGHT-HOUR BILL.

Mr. KYLE submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved by the Senate, That there be printed for the use of the Committee on Education and Labor 5,000 extra copies of Senate Document No. 127, Fifty-fifth Congress, third session, comprising the hearings before said committee on the "eight-hour bill," H. R. 7369.

INDUSTRIAL PROPERTY.

Mr. LODGE. I move that there be a reprint of Senate Document No. 331, Fifty-fifth Congress, second session, being a report by Mr. DAVIS, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, of the delegates from the United States to the Brussels Conference, under the convention for the protection of industrial property, concluded at Paris March 20, 1883. There should be a reprint of this document to the extent of the usual number, and the typographical errors should be corrected.

The motion was agreed to.

REPRINT OF SHIPPING BILL.

Mr. FRYE. I move that the bill (S. 5024) to promote the commerce and increase the foreign trade of the United States and to provide auxiliary cruisers, transports, and seamen for Government use when necessary may be reprinted as an original bill, with all of the amendments already agreed to and with the proposed amendments contained in the bill.

The motion was agreed to.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVAL.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had on the 24th instant approved and signed the act (S. 5027) to correct the relative rank of Richard R. Steedman, captain, Eleventh Infantry, United States Army.

BENJAMIN F. TRAPP.

Mr. ALLEN. I ask unanimous consent to call up the bill (S. 3370) granting a pension to Benjamin F. Trapp, of South Omaha, in the State of Nebraska. It will not lead to any discussion.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments, in line 7, after the word "grant," to strike out "the said Benjamin F. Trapp" and insert "him;" and in line 8, before the word "dollars," to strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll of the United States the name of Benjamin F. Trapp, late a member of Company K, Fourteenth Regiment Missouri Home Guards, and grant him a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of any pension he may now be receiving.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting a pension to Benjamin F. Trapp."

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. McMILLAN. In accordance with the agreement made yesterday, I should like to call up some District House bills.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I think the Senator might well withhold for a few moments, until bills which seem necessary may be passed.

Mr. McMILLAN. Very well.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Until what time will the Senator from Michigan withhold the enforcement of the unanimous-consent agreement?

Mr. McMILLAN. For fifteen or twenty minutes.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. What was the unanimous-consent agreement?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The unanimous-consent agreement, as the Chair understands it, was that immediately after the routine business this morning bills relating to the District of Columbia which are unobjected to shall be taken up for the space of one hour.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I hope the agreement can unanimously be extended.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair hears no objection.

PATRICK O'SHEA.

Mr. MONEY. I ask the Senator from Michigan to allow me to call up the bill (H. R. 5328) granting a pension to Patrick O'Shea, a bill which passed the House and was reported by the committee here favorably. It is to pension a very old man, a veteran of the war, who has never enjoyed a pension. If the Senator will yield to me, it will take but a moment.

Mr. McMILLAN. I yield to the Senator from Mississippi, and then to other Senators who wish to have bills passed which will elicit no debate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill indicated by the Senator from Mississippi?

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Patrick O'Shea, late of Company K, Twenty-seventh Missouri Volunteer Mounted Infantry, and to pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FREE ENTRY OF CERTAIN ARTICLES.

Mr. BURROWS. I ask for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 7271) amending the act entitled "An act to allow the return free of duty of certain articles exported from the United States for exhibition purposes," approved May 18, 1896.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill; which had been reported from the Committee on Finance with an amendment, to insert the following proviso:

Provided, however, That the provision of this amendment shall apply only in such cases as those of foreign-born animals taken abroad, and inventories of which are filed prior to their leaving the country with the collector of customs at the port of their departure.

So as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act entitled "An act to allow the return free of duty of certain articles exported from the United States for exhibition purposes," approved May 18, 1896, is hereby amended so as to include in the privilege of free entry conferred thereby wild and other animals of foreign origin taken abroad temporarily for exhibition in connection with any circus or menagerie, subject, however, to the conditions and limitations prescribed in said act: Provided, however, That the provision of this amendment shall apply, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I move to amend the bill by inserting as section 2 the following:

SEC. 2. That on and after the passage of this act wheat imported by actual farmers, residents of the United States, for use by them, respectively, as seed on their own lands in the United States, and not for sale, shall be free of customs duty under special regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury: Provided, That not more than 500 bushels of seed wheat shall be imported under this act by any one person during any one year.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment submitted by the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. The bill called up by the Senator from Michigan has received the consideration of the Finance Committee, and here is an important amendment proposed which has not been considered by the Finance Committee. I do not think the Senator from North Dakota ought to attempt to incorporate it upon a bill which it is perfectly apparent ought to be passed and which will undoubtedly prevent the passage of the bill.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. The amendment has been before the Senate as a separate bill for some six or seven weeks, and I think the Committee on Finance have had one or two meetings since the bill was introduced and referred to that committee. If the Committee on Finance failed to take cognizance of the measure and give it proper attention, it is not my fault.

I will state further that this measure has been called to the attention of the Secretary of the Treasury and the officers who usually attend to customs matters in that Department, and that it meets with the approval of those officers, who believe that some legislation of this kind should be had.

My object in pressing the matter is to give the farmers of the Northwestern States the opportunity of renewing their seed wheat. The fact is that one of the most terrible blights to agriculture in the Northwest is what is known as smut in wheat, and to overcome smut necessitates the renewal of the seed from year to year. The farmers in my part of the country who have had the opportunity to go into what is known as the Saskatchewan country, or into Manitoba, Canada, and purchase seed wheat and bring it to North Dakota and Minnesota have found great benefit to their crops, and I think they should be given the privilege of doing that without paying the customary duty of 25 cents a bushel.

Mr. ALLEN. Is not the Senator willing that the benefit should percolate a little below Minnesota?

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I think it will in the course of time, but I know that the farmers of the northern part of the States I have named are the ones who will be immediately benefited. I am very much interested in those farmers first, and then in the farmers of the Senator's State afterwards.

Mr. ALLEN. Why not extend the bill so as to enable seeds of all kinds necessary to agriculture to be brought in free of duty?

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I could not agree to that.

Mr. ALLEN. I should like to have the bill and proposed amendment read again.

The Secretary read the bill and the amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from North Dakota.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT HOT SPRINGS, ARK.

Mr. BERRY. I should like very much to have a local bill passed this morning, if the Senator from Michigan will kindly allow me. I made an effort to get the floor earlier, before he came in.

Mr. McMILLAN. I will yield to the Senator from Arkansas. Mr. BERRY. I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 5548) to provide for a building for the use of the post-office, office of the superintendent of the Hot Springs Reservation, and other civil offices in the city of Hot Springs, Ark.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It directs the Secretary of the Treasury to cause to be constructed on the permanent reservation owned by the United States at Hot Springs, in the State of Arkansas, and at such spot thereon as may be selected and set apart by the Secretary of the Interior and accepted by the Secretary of the Treasury for such purpose, a suitable building, with fireproof vaults, to be used for post-office and other Government offices, not to exceed in cost the sum of $78,000, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall cause proper plans and estimates to be made, so that no expenditure shall be made or authorized for the full completion of said building beyond the amount herein specified.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GAME AND SONG BIRDS.

Mr. HOAR submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3589) to extend the powers and duties of the Commission of Fish and Fisheries to include game birds and other wild birds useful to man, having met, after full and free conference report that they have been unable to agree.

GEORGE F. HOAR,

A. O. BACON,

H. M. TELLER,

Managers on the part of the Senate.

GEORGE D. PERKINS,

SERENO E. PAYNE,

W. JASPER TALBERT,

Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. HOAR. I ask unanimous consent to enter at this time a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed and to reconsider the vote adopting the amendment in the Senate, and I ask that a message be sent to the House requesting the return of the bill. It turns out that both Houses have agreed upon a provision which nobody, not even the mover of it, desires to have retained. I suppose it is not necessary to detain the Senate, but that is the substance of the matter.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Massachusetts enters a motion to reconsider the votes he has indicated. He also asks that the House of Representatives be requested to return the bill to the Senate. The Chair hears no objection, and the order is made.

PAYMENT TO CHEROKEES.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 5462) to authorize certain persons who have intermarried with Cherokees to sue for their interest in certain moneys of the tribe from which they were excluded.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BERDAN FIREARMS MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 321) for the relief of the Berdan Firearms Manufacturing Company.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It authorizes the Berdan Firearms Manufacturing Company to institute a suit in the Court of Claims against the United States and for the benefit of Mrs. Mary Kimball Berdan, the widow of Hiram Berdan, the inventor of certain devices described and claimed in a patent issued to that company, dated March 30, 1869.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE L. PLUMMER.

Mr. NELSON. I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 3261) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of George L. Plummer.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to remove the charge of desertion standing against the military record of George L. Plummer, late of Company M, First Maine Cavalry Volunteers, and to grant to him an honorable discharge. But no pay, bounty, or other emoluments shall become due or payable by virtue of the passage of this act.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JACOB COVERT.

Mr. FAIRBANKS. I ask for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6930) for the relief of Jacob Covert.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to remove the charge of absent without leave against Jacob Covert, late first lieutenant of Company D, Twenty-fourth Regiment of Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and to grant him an honorable discharge, to date from the 1st day of August, 1862. But no pay, bounty, or other emoluments shall become due or payable by virtue of the passage of this act.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MONONGAHELA RIVER BRIDGE.

Mr. ELKINS. The Senator from Michigan yields to me to call up the bill (H. R. 11677) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Monongahela River at Morgantown, in the State of West Virginia. It is simply to give permission to the Secretary of War. The bill was reported unanimously by the Committee on Commerce, and there is no objection to it.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN G. ROSE.

Mr. SMITH. I ask unanimous consent to call up the bill (S. 3151) for the relief of John G. Rose.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to amend the records of the Navy Department so as to place the name of John G. Rose on the roll as an acting master's mate from the time of his second enlistment, February 10, 1865, to the time of his discharge, January 30, 1868, and to cause an honorable discharge to be delivered to Rose as an acting master's mate, to take the place of the discharge as seaman which he now holds.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LOUIS MILLER.

Mr. WARREN. I desire to call up the bill (S. 2022) for the relief of Louis Miller.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment, in line 6, to strike out "said regiment" and insert "date August 4, 1863, from Company I of said regiment: Provided, That no pay, bounty, or allowances shall be allowed by reason of this act;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to correct the military record of Louis Miller, late a member of the Sixty-second New York Infantry Volunteers, and to grant him an honorable discharge as of date August 4, 1863 from Company I of said regiment: Provided, That no pay, bounty, or allowances shall be allowed by reason of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELLEN HARDIN WALWORTH.

Mr. LINDSAY. I ask the Senator from Michigan to give way that I may call up a pension bill.

Mr. McMILLAN. All right.

Mr. LINDSAY. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 5474) granting a pension to Ellen Hardin Walworth. I call the attention of the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] to the bill.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments, after the word "Walworth," in line 6, to insert "late volunteer nurse, war with Spain," and in line 7, before the word "dollars," to strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty-five;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Ellen Hardin Walworth, late volunteer nurse, war with Spain, and pay her a pension at the rate of $25 per month.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PROCEDURE IN CERTAIN PENSION CASES.

Mr. GALLINGER. The bill (H. R. 80) providing procedure in certain pension cases, which had passed both Houses of Congress, was, on my motion, recalled from the House. I now desire to enter a motion to reconsider the action of the Senate in passing the bill. I simply enter the motion.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The motion will be entered.

EXTENSION OF PENNSYLVANIA AVENUE SE.

Mr. McMILLAN. I now ask that the order of the Senate regarding the consideration of District House bills be enforced. First, I call up House bill 11639.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 11639) for the extension of Pennsylvania avenue SE. to the District line, which had been reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia with amendments.

Mr. McMILLAN. I ask that the committee amendments may be acted upon as the bill is read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair hears no objection, and that course will be pursued.

The Secretary proceeded to read the bill. The first amendment was, in section 2, page 2, after line 17, to insert the following:

That of the amount found due and awarded as damages for and in respect of the land condemned under this section for the opening and extending of said street, one-half thereof shall be assessed by the jury in said proceedings against the pieces and parcels of land situate and lying upon each side of said Pennsylvania avenue extended, and also on any or all adjacent pieces or parcels of land which will be benefited by the said extension as herein provided.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert the following as an additional section:

SEC. 3. That within ninety days after the approval of this act the Commissioners of the District of Columbia be, and they are hereby, authorized and directed to begin suit for the condemnation of the land required for the extension of Staughton street from its present terminus westward through block 1 of the Meridian Hill subdivision to Columbia avenue, with a uniform width of 65 feet.

That of the amount found due and awarded as damages for and in respect of the land condemned under this act for the extension of said street, one-half thereof shall be assessed by said jury in said proceedings against those pieces or parcels of ground abutting on both sides of Staughton street and the extension thereof, as herein provided.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert the following as an additional section:

SEC. 4. That within ninety days after the passage of this act the Commissioners of the District of Columbia be, and they are hereby, authorized and directed to begin suit for the condemnation of the land required for the extension of Eckington place, between Q street and Florida avenue, to a full width of 60 feet by acquiring the necessary land below Q street on the west side of said Eckington place.

That of the amount found due and awarded as damages for and in respect of the land condemned under this act for the widening of the said Eckington place, one-half thereof shall be assessed by said jury in said proceedings against those pieces or parcels of ground abutting that portion of the street to be opened and extending to a depth of 200 feet from the westerly building line of said Eckington place.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert the following as an additional section:

SEC. 5. That within ninety days after the approval of this act the Commissioners of the District of Columbia be, and they are hereby, authorized and directed to begin suit for the condemnation of the land required for the extension and widening of Sherman avenue from Florida avenue to Whitney avenue with the uniform width of 100 feet.

That of the amount found due and awarded for damages for and in respect of the land condemned under this act for the extension of said Sherman avenue not less than one-half thereof shall be assessed by said jury in said proceedings against those pieces or parcels of ground abutting on both sides of Sherman avenue, and the extension thereof as herein provided, to a distance of 300 feet from the building lines on the east and west sides of Sherman avenue as widened and extended: Provided, That no assessment shall be made against those pieces or parcels of ground out of which land has already been dedicated to the District of Columbia for the purpose of widening Sherman avenue as herein provided for.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert the following as an additional section:

SEC. 6. That within ninety days after the approval of this act the Commissioners of the District of Columbia be, and they are hereby, authorized and directed to begin suit for the condemnation of the land required for the extension of Twentieth street southerly from Wyoming avenue to Columbia road, including the triangular-shaped piece of land bounded by the east line of Twentieth street thus extended, the south line of Wyoming avenue, and the west line of Columbia road.

That of the amount found due and awarded for damages for and in respect of the land condemned under this act for the extension of said Twentieth street not less than one-half thereof shall be assessed by said jury in said proceedings against those pieces or parcels of land situate and lying upon each side of said Twentieth street between Wyoming avenue and Columbia road, and also on any or all adjacent pieces or parcels of land which will be benefited by the said extension as herein provided.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert the following as an additional section:

SEC. 7. That within thirty days after the dedication to the District of Columbia of sufficient land to open Elm street from Linden street to Fifth street the Commissioners of the District of Columbia be, and they are hereby, directed to begin suit for the condemnation of the land required for the extension of Fifth street, Le Droit Park, between Elm street and Wilson street, a distance of one square.

That of the amount found due and awarded as damages for and in respect of the land condemned under this act for the extension of Fifth street not less than one-half thereof shall be assessed by said jury in said proceedings against those pieces or parcels of ground situate and lying on each side of said Fifth street between Pomeroy street and Spruce street, including the lots abutting on the said Fifth street, as extended.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert the following as an additional section:

SEC. 8. That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia are hereby authorized and directed to commence suit for the condemnation of the land required for the extension of Howard avenue through lot No. 130, in Chapin Brown's subdivision of Mount Pleasant and Pleasant Plains, within thirty days from the passage of this act; and the proceedings for such condemnation shall be under and according to the provisions of sections 257 to 267 of the Revised Statutes of the United States Relating to the District of Columbia, which provide for the condemnation of lands in said District for public highways.

That of the amount found due and awarded as damages for and in respect of the land condemned under this act for the widening of said avenue, one-half thereof shall be assessed by said jury in said proceedings against blocks 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6 of Chapin Brown's subdivision of Ingleside, and against lots 122 to 144, inclusive, of Chapin Brown's subdivision of Mount Pleasant and Pleasant Plains.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section (3) 9, page 7, line 2, after the word "under," to strike out "its" and insert "the;" and in line 3, after the word "provisions," to insert "of this act;" so as to read:

SEC. 9. That payment of the sum or sums of money adjudged to be due and payable for lands taken under the provisions of this act shall be made by the Treasurer of the United States, ex officio commissioner of the sinking fund of the District of Columbia, upon the warrant of the said Commissioners, out of the revenues of the District of Columbia; and a sufficient sum to pay such judgments and awards is hereby appropriated out of the revenues of the District of Columbia.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to strike out the following:

SEC. 4. That of the amount found due and awarded as damages for and in respect of the land condemned under this act for the opening and extending of said street one-half thereof shall be assessed by the jury in said proceedings against the pieces and parcels of land situate and lying upon each side of said Pennsylvania avenue extended, and also on any or all adjacent pieces or parcels of land which will be benefited by the said extension as herein provided.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert, at the end of section (6) 11, page 8, the following:

When the use of a part only of any piece or parcel of ground shall be condemned, the jury, in determining its value, shall not take into consideration any benefits that may accrue to the remainder thereof from the opening of said avenue, but such benefits shall be considered in determining what assessment shall be made on or against that part of such lot as is not taken, as is hereinbefore provided.

So as to make the section read:

SEC. 11. That when confirmed by the court the assessments shall severally be a lien upon the land assessed, and shall be collected as special improvement taxes in the District of Columbia, and shall be payable in five equal installments, with interest at the rate of 4 per cent per annum until paid. When the use of a part only of any piece or parcel of ground shall be condemned, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section (7) 12, page 8, line 17, after the word "of," to insert "sections 1 and 2 of;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 12. That when the Commissioners of the District of Columbia shall have taken possession of the pieces or parcels of ground in respect to which such judgment condemning the right of way shall have been entered under the provisions of sections 1 and 2 of this act, it shall be their duty to cause a roadway of said Pennsylvania avenue SE., as extended under the provisions herein, of such width and character of construction as in their judgment may be suitable, to be graded and regulated as soon as practicable thereafter.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. McMILLAN, the title was amended so as to read: "A bill for the extension of Pennsylvania avenue SE. to the District line, and for other purposes."

Mr. McMILLAN. I move that the Senate request a conference with the House of Representatives on the bill and amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Vice-President was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate; and Mr. McMILLAN, Mr. HANSBROUGH, and Mr. GORMAN were appointed.

GAME AND SONG BIRDS.

Mr. HOAR. In the matter of the bill (H. R. 3589) to extend the powers and duties of the Commission on Fish and Fisheries to include game birds and other wild birds useful to man, just reported from the committee of conference, as to which I entered a motion to reconsider the votes by which the bill was ordered to a third reading and passed, I now ask that the motion be acted upon.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Massachusetts moves that the votes by which the bill referred to by him was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed be reconsidered.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. HOAR. I now move to reconsider the motion amending the bill by adding certain sections.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Massachusetts to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was adopted.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. HOAR. I now move to amend the House bill by striking out all after the enacting clause and substituting what was added as new sections by the Senate to the bill. It is not necessary that the sections shall be again read, as they have been read.

Mr. COCKRELL. What is the pending measure?

Mr. HOAR. The bill in relation to birds.

Mr. COCKRELL. That is enough.

Mr. HOAR. That is the whole story. It is not necessary, I suppose, to make any explanation.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Will the Senator indicate to the Secretary what are the amendments he desires to have adopted?

Mr. HOAR. We have just reconsidered the vote by which the Senate added certain sections to the bill. I now move that instead of adding those to the bill as it originally came from the House to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert those sections as a substitute for the House bill. It is not necessary that they should be read.

Mr. CHILTON. What is the bill as to which the Senator proposes to strike out all after the enacting clause?

Mr. HOAR. I was about to make a statement, but the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] did not think it necessary. It is the bill for the protection of birds. The House sent over a bill to give jurisdiction over that subject to the Fish Commission. The bill was amended in the Senate by adding other sections for the protection of song birds, and so on, which were passed unanimously. Then the matter went into conference. Now, everybody is satisfied that it was a mistake to give that jurisdiction to the Fish Commission. But as the bill now stands it is not in the power of the conferees to withdraw it, because both Houses have agreed to it. The bill has now come back to the Senate, and the Senate has reconsidered its previous action. I now propose to make what the Senate heretofore passed a substitute for the House bill.

Mr. CHILTON. That is the way the bill was before?

Mr. HOAR. Yes; that is the way it was before. All the conferees agree to it. After my motion has been agreed to, I shall then ask for a new conference and the whole matter will open.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment submitted by the Senator from Massachusetts to strike out all after the enacting clause of the bill and insert what he has indicated.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. HOAR. I now move that the Senate ask for a committee of conference with the House of Representatives on the bill and amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Vice-President was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate; and Mr. HOAR, Mr. TELLER, and Mr. BACON were appointed.

CONSIDERATION OF PENSION BILLS.

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senator from Michigan [Mr. McMILLAN] kindly yields to me to make a request. I ask unanimous consent that at the hour of 5 o'clock this afternoon, provided that neither the military bill nor an appropriation bill be before the Senate, one hour be given to the consideration of pension bills on the Calendar.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senate has heard the request of the Senator from New Hampshire that at 5 o'clock this afternoon, if an appropriation bill or the military bill is not pending, one hour be given to the Pension Calendar. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and that order is made.

BRIG. GEN. JOHN R. BROOKE.

Mr. TELLER. I ask the Senator from Michigan to yield to me to call up a House bill which was under consideration yesterday, and which has been read.

Mr. McMILLAN. I yield for that purpose.

Mr. TELLER. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 7860) to amend an act entitled "An act for the relief of Brig. Gen. John R. Brooke, United States Army," approved March 30, 1894.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. This bill was read through yesterday.

Mr. TELLER. I want to say that the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN] has notified me that he has no further objection to the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

EXTENSION OF S STREET.

Mr. McMILLAN. I now ask for the consideration of House bill 11597.

The bill (H. R. 11597) to extend S street, in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia with amendments.

The first amendment was, in section 1, line 3, after the word "that," to insert "within thirty days from the passage of this act;" in line 5, after the words "directed to," to insert "commence suit for the condemnation of the land necessary to;" in line 9, after the words "Widow's Mite," to strike out "by condemnation;" and on page 2, line 1, after the word "streets," to strike out "and the Commissioners shall at once enter;" so as to read:

That within thirty days from the passage of this act the Commissioners of the District of Columbia be, and they are hereby, authorized and directed to commence suit for the condemnation of the land necessary to open and extend S, Twenty-second, and Decatur streets through lots 41 and 42 of Phelps and Tuttle's subdivision of Connecticut Avenue Heights, part of Widow's Mite: Provided, That the owners of the "Kall" tract dedicate the land in said tract contained within the lines of said streets.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 1, on page 2, after the word "enter," to insert:

And provided further, That of the amount found due and awarded as damages for and in respect of the land condemned under this section for the opening of said streets, not less than one-half thereof shall be assessed by the jury in said proceedings against the pieces and parcels of ground situate and lying on each side of the extension of said streets, and also on all or any adjacent pieces or parcels of land which will be benefited by the opening of said streets as herein provided.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after section 1, to insert as a new section the following:

SEC. 2. That within thirty days after the dedication to the District of Columbia of the lands lying within the lines of Sixteenth street NW. as extended (according to the highway plans), between the Piney Branch and the Blagden Mill road, and also between the Military road and the District of Columbia boundary line, the Commissioners of the District of Columbia be, and they are hereby, authorized and directed to commence suit for the condemnation of the remainder of the land required for the extension of Sixteenth street NW. from Morris street to the District of Columbia boundary line with the uniform width of 160 feet. That of the amount found due and awarded as damages for and in respect of the land condemned for the extension of Sixteenth street as in this section provided, not less than one-half thereof shall be assessed by said jury in said proceedings against those pieces and parcels of ground situated and lying on each side of said Sixteenth street NW. between Morris street and the Piney Branch, and between the Blagden Mill road and the Military road, to a depth of 250 feet, measured on each side from the building lines of the said Sixteenth street as extended.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after section 2, to insert the following:

SEC. 3. That within ninety days after the passage of this act the Commissioners of the District of Columbia are hereby authorized and directed to begin suit for the condemnation of the land required for the extension of Eleventh street NW. on a straight extension of the lines thereof, as now established in the city of Washington, with a width of 90 feet, from Florida avenue to Harvard street, and thence with the same width and in a straight line to Lydecker avenue, joining said avenue with its center line opposite the center line of Eslin avenue.

That of the amount found due and awarded as damages for and in respect of the land condemned under this act for the extension of the said Eleventh street at least one-half thereof shall be assessed by said jury in said proceedings against those pieces or parcels of ground abutting that portion of the street to be opened, and extending to a depth of 200 feet from the building lines of said Eleventh street as extended.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after section 3, to insert the following:

SEC. 4. That within ninety days after the passage of this act the Commissioners of the District of Columbia be, and they are hereby, authorized and directed to begin suit for the condemnation of the land required for the extension of New Hampshire avenue from the intersection of Whitney and Sherman avenues to the west line of Brightwood avenue at its intersection with the Rock Creek Church road, the same to be on a straight extension and of the same width of said avenue as now established in the subdivision of Petworth.

That of the amount found due and awarded as damages for and in respect of the land condemned under this act for the extension of said New Hampshire avenue, at least one-half thereof shall be assessed by said jury in said proceedings against those pieces or parcels of ground abutting that portion of New Hampshire avenue to be opened, and extending to a depth of 250 feet, measured on each side of the building lines of the said New Hampshire avenue as widened, and also on such other pieces or parcels of land as may, in the judgment of the said jury, be benefited by the extension and widening as herein proposed.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 4, after line 20, to insert "SEC. 5. That the:" in line 22, after the word "said," to strike out "land in said lots 40 and 42" and insert "lands as provided for in sections 1, 2, 3, and 4 of this act shall be;" in line 24, after the word "under," to insert "and according to;" on page 5, line 1, after the word "Columbia," to insert "which provide for the condemnation of lands in said District for public highways;" in line 4, before the word "hundred," to strike out "two" and insert "five;" in the same line, before the word "dollars," to strike out "and fifty;" and in line 5, after the word "Columbia," to strike out:

Provided, That if the benefits assessed by the jury shall be less than 50 per cent of the value of the property taken, then the condemnation proceedings herein provided for shall be dismissed, and said streets shall not be opened.

So as to make the section read:

SEC. 5. That the proceedings for the condemnation of said lands as provided for in sections 1, 2, 3, and 4 of this act shall be under and according to the provisions of chapter 11 of the Revised Statutes of the United States relating to the District of Columbia, which provide for the condemnation of lands in said District for public highways; and to provide the necessary funds for the cost of such condemnation proceedings the sum of $500 is hereby appropriated, out of the funds of the District of Columbia.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 5, after line 9, to insert:

SEC. 6. That payment of the sum or sums of money adjudged to be due and payable for lands taken under the provisions of this act shall be made by the Treasurer of the United States, ex officio commissioner of the sinking fund of the District of Columbia, upon the warrant of the said Commissioners, out of the revenues of the District of Columbia; and a sufficient sum to pay such judgments and awards is hereby appropriated out of the revenues of the District.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 5, after line 17, to insert:

SEC. 7. That the sums to be assessed against each lot and piece and parcel of ground shall be determined and designated by the jury, and in determining what amount shall be assessed against any particular piece or parcel of ground the jury shall take into consideration the situation of said lots and the benefits that they may severally receive from the opening of said streets. When the use of a part only of any piece or parcel of ground shall be condemned, the jury, in determining its value, shall not take into consideration any benefits that may accrue to the remainder thereof from the opening of said avenue, but such benefits shall be considered in determining what assessment shall be made on or against that part of such lot as is not taken, as is hereinbefore provided.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 6, after line 5, to insert:

SEC. 8. That when confirmed by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia the assessments shall severally be a lien upon the land assessed, and shall be collected as special improvement taxes in the District of Columbia, and shall be payable in five equal installments, with interest at the rate of 4 per cent per annum until paid.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 6, after line 11, to insert:

SEC. 9. That payment of the awards made in respect of the property condemned shall not be made until the assessments herein provided for shall have been made against the aforesaid property and duly confirmed.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. McMILLAN. I move that the Senate request a conference with the House of Representatives on the bill and amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Vice-President was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate; and Mr. McMILLAN, Mr. HANSBROUGH, and Mr. GORMAN were appointed.

SALE OF INTOXICATING LIQUORS ON SUNDAY.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. Under the unanimous-consent agreement, with the permission of the chairman of the committee [Mr. McMILLAN], I desire to call up at this time the bill (H. R. 11733) to prevent the sale of intoxicating liquors on Sunday in the District of Columbia.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. That is one of the bills on the list.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I now move that the Senate bill on the same subject, being the bill (S. 5328) to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors on Sunday in the District of Columbia, be indefinitely postponed.

The motion was agreed to.

GEORGE H. MATHER.

Mr. SEWELL. The Senator from Michigan consents that I may ask for the consideration of the joint resolution (S. R. 247) for the relief of ex-Naval Cadet George H. Mather. I ask that that joint resolution may be now considered.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution. It authorizes the President of the United States to appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, George H. Mather as an ensign in the Navy, to take rank as if his period of former service had expired at the present time, to wit, at the foot of the class of 1897, he having been graduated at the Naval Academy in 1892 and honorably discharged July 1, 1894, and having afterwards served as volunteer ensign in the late war; but he shall not receive pay for time when out of service, and he shall be required to pass an examination satisfactory to the Secretary of the Navy as to his physical, mental, and moral and professional qualifications for appointment.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PRESERVATION OF GAME, ETC.

Mr. McMILLAN. I now ask for the consideration of House bill No. 2524.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 2524) for the protection of birds, preservation of game, and for the prevention of its sale during certain closed seasons in the District of Columbia.

Mr. McMILLAN. The bill has been heretofore read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair so understands, but the amendments reported by the committee have not been acted upon.

The first amendment reported by the Committee on the District of Columbia was, in section 1, page 2, line 6, after the word "November," to insert "except the English ring-neck pheasant, or other pheasants of foreign origin, hatched and raised in farm poultry inclosures;" and on page 3, line 2, after the word "for," to strike out "each bird so killed, exposed for sale, or in possession," and insert "a violation of any of the provisions of this section;" so as to make the section read:

That no person shall kill, expose for sale, or have in his or her possession, either dead or alive, any partridge, otherwise quail, between the 1st day of February and the 1st day of November; nor kill, expose for sale, or have in his or her possession, either dead or alive, any woodcock, between the 15th day of January and the 15th day of July; nor kill, expose for sale, or have in his or her possession, either dead or alive, any prairie chicken, otherwise pinated grouse, between the 1st day of February and the 1st day of September; nor kill, expose for sale, or have in his or her possession, either dead or alive, any ruffed grouse, otherwise known as pheasant, between the 30th day of December and the 1st day of November, except the English ring-neck pheasant, or other pheasants of foreign origin, hatched and raised in farm poultry inclosures; nor kill, expose for sale, nor have in his or her possession, either dead or alive, any wild turkey, between the 30th day of December and the 1st day of November; nor kill, expose for sale, nor have in his or her possession, either dead or alive, any rabbit, except the species known as the English rabbit or squirrel, between the 1st day of February and the 1st day of November; nor kill, expose for sale, or have in his or her possession, either dead or alive, any snipe or plover, between the 1st day of May and the 1st day of September; nor kill, expose for sale, or have in his or her possession, either dead or alive, any wild duck, wild goose or brant, between the 1st day of May and the 1st day of September; nor kill, expose for sale, or have in his or her possession, either dead or alive, any water rail or ortolan, reed bird or rice bird or marsh blackbird, between the 1st day of February and the 30th day of August; nor shoot at nor kill the same except on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, between the 21st day of August and the 1st day of February, under a penalty of $5 for a violation of any of the provisions of this section, and in default thereof to be imprisoned in the workhouse for a period not exceeding thirty days.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 3, page 3, line 21, after the word "the," to strike out "executive curator of the National Museum" and insert "superintendent of police of the District of Columbia, in accordance with such restrictions as the Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution may prescribe;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 3. That no person shall expose for sale or have in his or her possession dead, at any time, any turkey buzzard, wren, bluebird, humming bird, blue jay, robin or migratory thrush, wood or song robin, martin, mocking bird, swallow, oriole, red or cardinal bird, catbird, pewee, whip-poor-will, goldfinch, capsucker, hanging bird, woodpecker, crow blackbird, or other insectivorous bird, save for scientific purposes upon permit from the superintendent of police of the District of Columbia, in accordance with such restrictions as the Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution may prescribe, and excepting the English sparrow; nor rob the nest of any wild bird of eggs or young or destroy such nest, except in the clearing of lands of trees or brush; nor trap, net, or ensnare any wild bird, or water fowl mentioned in this chapter, or have in his possession any trap, snare, net, or illuminating device for the purpose of killing or capturing any wild duck, wild goose, wild brant or bird, under a penalty of $3 for each wild duck, wild goose, wild brant, or bird killed or captured, or bird's nest and eggs destroyed, and, in default, to be imprisoned in the workhouse not exceeding thirty days.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 5, page 5, line 1, after the word "Columbia," to insert "with sworn information presented to such officer or warden;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 5. That to carry out the provisions of this chapter any police officer, game warden having police authority, or health officer, in the District of Columbia, with sworn information presented to such officer or warden, is authorized and empowered to thoroughly inspect any house, boat, market box, stall, cold storage, or other place of whatever character or kind, where he may believe game, meats, or birds, as heretofore mentioned in this chapter, may be stored or kept; and any proprietor, agent, employee, or other person refusing to permit such inspection shall be deemed guilty of interference with the police, and, upon conviction therefor, be fined not more than $100 nor less than $25, and, in default of such payment, to be imprisoned in the United States jail not exceeding six months.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 9, page 6, line 18, after the word "violation," to insert "and prosecution shall be brought in the name of the District of Columbia;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 9. That any officer or other person securing the conviction of any violator of any of the provisions of this act, in the police court or other court of the District of Columbia, shall receive one-half of any fine which may be imposed and paid for such violation, and prosecution shall be brought in the name of the District of Columbia.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

✓The bill was read the third time, and passed.

REORGANIZATION OF THE ARMY.

Mr. HAWLEY. I ask unanimous consent that at 1 o'clock the Senate take up for consideration the bill (S. 5378) for increasing the efficiency of the Army of the United States, and for other purposes.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request made by the Senator from Connecticut that at 1 o'clock the Army bill be taken up for consideration? The Chair hears none, and that order will be made.

REMOVAL OF UNSAFE BUILDINGS.

Mr. THURSTON. Will the Senator yield to me for a moment?

Mr. McMILLAN. Mr. President, the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY] has given notice that he wishes consideration for the Army bill at 1 o'clock. Therefore, I think I shall have to object to interruption for a while until I see how we get along with the consideration of the District bills.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made.

Mr. McMILLAN. I ask for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 11024) to authorize the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to remove dangerous or unsafe buildings and parts thereof, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GREATER AMERICA EXPOSITION AT OMAHA.

Mr. THURSTON. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the joint resolution (S. R. 225) relative to the Greater America Exposition to be held in Omaha, Nebr., in the year 1899, and to encourage the same by providing, without expense to the Government, for exhibits from Cuba, Porto Rico, the Ladrone Islands, and the Philippine Archipelago, and for the use of the Government buildings erected for exposition purposes in 1898, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

WASHINGTON PUBLIC LIBRARY.

Mr. McMILLAN. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 5389) to provide a site for a building for the Washington Public Library.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill.

Mr. McMILLAN. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to insert as a new section the following:

SEC. 5. No proceedings shall be taken by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia under the provisions of this act until the said Andrew Carnegie shall have entered into such an agreement with the Commissioners of the District of Columbia as will effectually provide the money for the erection of a library building as aforesaid.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

COMMERCIAL EXPOSITION AT PHILADELPHIA.

Mr. PENROSE. With the consent of the Senator from Michigan, I ask unanimous consent to call up the joint resolution (S. R. 242) authorizing foreign exhibitors at the commercial exposition to be held in Philadelphia, Pa., in 1899, to bring to this country foreign laborers from their respective countries for the purpose of preparing for and making their exhibits under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution, which had been reported from the Committee on Finance with an amendment, in line 17, after the word "than," to strike out "one year" and insert "three months;" so as to make the proviso read:

Provided, however, That no alien shall by virtue of this act enter the United States under contract to perform labor except by express permission, naming such alien, of the Secretary of the Treasury; and any such alien who may remain in the United States for more than three months after the close of the exposition shall thereafter be subject to all the processes and penalties applicable to aliens coming in violation of the alien contract-labor law aforesaid.

The amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. MEX., BOND ISSUE.

Mr. SHOUP. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 8694) to enable the city of Albuquerque, N. Mex., to create certain indebtedness, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Territories with amendments.

The first amendment was, on page 1, line 7, after the word "interest," to insert "not exceeding 5 per cent per annum;" so as to read:

That the city of Albuquerque, in the county of Bernalillo and Territory of New Mexico, is hereby authorized and empowered to issue bonds of the said city in a sum not to exceed $65,000 in all, in such denominations and at such rate of interest, not exceeding 5 per cent per annum, as the municipal government of said city shall provide, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALLEN. I should like to know the exact purpose of the bill.

Mr. CARTER. The terms of the bill confine the law as enacted strictly to the funding of certain outstanding warrants. It seems that the assessed valuation of property in that city materially decreased. The decrease was such that about $62,000 of outstanding warrants were thereby rendered illegal, in view of the 4 per cent limitation placed by law upon municipalities, and the Territories as well, in the creation of indebtedness. These warrants are outstanding and are drawing, I believe, 7 per cent interest. They are to-day, by operation of conditions and incidents over which that municipality had no control, rendered an excess over and above the legal limit; and it is desired that they be funded at a lower rate of interest.

Mr. STEWART. What is the interest named in the bill?

Mr. CARTER. It was not an illegal issue at the time the warrants were made, but they have become so by virtue of the decreased value of property in the city of Albuquerque.

Mr. ALLEN. Were they not in excess of the limit of taxation at the time they were issued?

Mr. CARTER. I do not understand that they were in excess at the time.

Mr. ALLEN. A year or so ago we had before us a bill which undertook to legalize the issuance of a lot of warrants in New Mexico, and it was either defeated or found its way to the foot of the Calendar and was never considered. I am a little bit suspicious about these bills that legalize the issue of warrants that were illegal at the time of their issuance. There is nothing here to show what the warrants were issued for.

Mr. CARTER. They were issued, according to the statement of the Delegate from New Mexico and according to a memorial by the city council of Albuquerque, in the ordinary course of business for necessary city improvements and for the ordinary current expenses of administration. The city council has memorialized Congress to permit the funding of these warrants. As far as the Committee on Territories were advised, there was not at any point in the city of Albuquerque or from any person directly or indirectly connected with New Mexican affairs any opposition whatever to the enactment of this bill. It seemed to be fair and just and proper. The committee scrutinized it with great care and cross-examined the Delegate from New Mexico with reference to the conditions existing there and the advisability of this legislation. The committee reduced the rate of interest named in the bill from 6 to 5 per cent, and recommend that the bill do pass.

Mr. ALLEN. Is it a House or Senate bill?

Mr. SHOUP. A House bill.

Mr. CARTER. A House bill.

Mr. ALLEN. I do not know that I ought to object—

Mr. CARTER. I think the legislation is necessary and, on the whole, just and proper.

Mr. ALLEN. I do not know that I ought to object to it, but I feel that this bill ought not to pass without a more extended explanation of it. It is a custom, almost an invariable custom, in some of these mushroom towns in the Territories to create an indebtedness in excess of their power; the warrants go to a discount, are bought for a mere song, and then the holders come to Congress to legalize the transaction and make their warrants par or better. I am not prepared to say—

Mr. CARTER. In that behalf I will say to the Senator from Nebraska that the committee made inquiry from the Delegate from New Mexico as to the persons holding the warrants, and he stated to us that the warrants were very largely in the hands of the persons to whom they were originally issued; that they had not been salable and were regarded as illegal, not because of the disposition of the officers of that municipality to issue illegal warrants, but because the assessed valuation of property had suddenly decreased to such an extent as to leave this part of the indebtedness exposed to the charge of illegality.

Mr. ALLEN. That, in the nature of things, could not be true if they were not illegal when issued. If they were not in excess of the rate of taxation, or if they did not exceed 4 per cent of the assessed valuation of property at the time they were issued, they were legal. Now the fact that values may have shrunk after that would not invalidate the warrants. They would be just as valid to-day as then.

Mr. CARTER. I think no controversy can arise in reference to the legal proposition stated by the Senator from Nebraska. It seems to be a fact that the common council of that city proceeded upon the theory that they had a right to issue the warrants, going forward until checked by some one who called attention to the fact that this issue, in view of the last assessment of property, was in excess of the limitation fixed by law. They proceeded on a condition that had passed away, in so far as the valuation of property was concerned. I think the overissue was a pure inadvertence. The city council in the memorial presented to the committee sets forth the fact that at the present time the city of Albuquerque is paying cash for all expenditures necessary in the administration of the city and for the making of necessary improvements.

Personally I know nothing of this bill or of the conditions to which it refers, except as information has come to me from the Delegate from New Mexico. His earnestness and zeal and persistence in endeavoring to secure relief for the people of that city impressed every member of the Committee on Territories, and on his account and on account of the merits of the case as he presents it I should like to see the bill passed.

Mr. ALLEN. I shall not object, but it strikes me that it ought to be investigated more thoroughly.

The next amendment of the Committee on Territories was, on page 2, line 12, before the word "per cent," to strike out "six" and insert "five;" so as to read:

Such bonds shall not be disposed of for less than their par value, and shall not bear a greater rate of interest than 5 per cent per annum.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

LANDS IN THE CITY OF WASHINGTON.

Mr. DANIEL. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 631) to confirm title to lots 13 and 14, in square 959, in Washington, D. C.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to release and quitclaim to Thomas Yates all the right, title, and interest, whether legal or equitable, of the United States of America in and to all those lots or parcels of ground situated in the city of Washington, D. C., and known on the ground plan of said city as lots Nos. 13 and 14, in square 959, upon the payment by the said Thomas Yates of such a sum as the said Secretary of the Interior shall deem just and equitable: Provided, That the said Thomas Yates pay to the proper officer of the District of Columbia all taxes heretofore assessed against said property, both general and special, now unpaid and standing against said property.

Sec. 2. That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to correct the records of the War Department in respect of any of the lots mentioned in Senate Document No. 277, Fifty-fifth Congress, second session (being a letter from the Secretary of War transmitting, in compliance with the resolution of the Senate of January 27, 1898, a letter from the Chief of Engineers, together with list of lots in the city of Washington, D. C., the title to which the records of his office show to be in the United States, and list of lots in the city of Washington, D. C., which are shown by the records of his office to have been donated by the United States), upon the filing by an actual occupant of any of the lots mentioned in said document sufficient proof that the said occupant or the party under whom he claims has been in actual possession of the said lot or lots for an uninterrupted period of twenty years, so that said records shall show the title to said lots to be in the said occupant.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. DANIEL. I move that the Senate request a conference with the House of Representatives on the bill and amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Vice-President was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate; and Mr. KENNEY, Mr. PRITCHARD, and Mr. PROCTOR were appointed.

JONATHAN BROOKS.

Mr. LODGE. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the joint resolution (S. R. 230) to authorize the President to appoint Jonathan Brooks an assistant paymaster in the Navy.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PUNISHMENT OF SEDUCTION.

Mr. McMILLAN. I call up the bill (H. R. 1136) for the punishment of seduction in the District of Columbia.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It provides that if any person shall seduce and carnally know any female of previous chaste character between the ages of 16 and 21 years, out of wedlock, in the District of Columbia, such seduction and carnal knowledge shall be deemed a misdemeanor, and the offender, being convicted thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment for a term not exceeding one year or fined not exceeding $200, or may be punished by both such fine and imprisonment.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HEIGHT OF BUILDINGS IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. McMILLAN. I call up the bill (H. R. 11023) to regulate the height of buildings in the District of Columbia.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

REDEMPTION OF OUTSTANDING CERTIFICATES.

Mr. McMILLAN. I call up the bill (H. R. 9760) to redeem outstanding certificates issued by the board of public works of the District of Columbia held by W. D. Williams.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia with an amendment, to insert the following as an additional section:

SEC. 2. That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia are hereby authorized and directed to receive and audit certificates of indebtedness No. 4352 (sewer bond), of the sum of $100; No. 4746 (sewer bond), of the sum of $50; No. 2916 (sewer bond), of the sum of $50; No. 2824, of the sum of $100, issued by the auditor or treasurer of the late board of public works of the District of Columbia. Also, certificates of indebtedness No. 3548, in the sum of $21.80; No. 6367, in the sum of $44.87; No. 573, in the sum of $23.61; No. 5570, in the sum of $31.34; No. 13456, in the sum of $4.90; No. 15576, in the sum of $10.72; No. 15677, in the sum of $6.87; No. 5279, in the sum of $3; No. 5280, in the sum of $28.90; No. 5744, in the sum of $56; No. 5746, in the sum of $27.42; No. 5747, in the sum of $24.94, issued by the late board of audit of the District of Columbia, for the redemption of which there is no existing law, and to pay to the holders of these, and to the holders of those issued by the auditor or treasurer of the late board of public works of the District of Columbia, as described in the first part of this bill, the amount respectively found due on such certificates, including interest thereon at the rate of 3.65 per cent per annum from the date of their issue to December 31, 1880; and a sufficient amount to pay the principal and interest of the certificates aforesaid is hereby appropriated, one-half from the revenues of the District of Columbia and one-half from any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to redeem certain outstanding certificates issued by the board of audit and the board of public works of the District of Columbia."

CAPITAL TRACTION COMPANY.

Mr. McMILLAN. I wish to call up the bill (H. R. 8656) authorizing and requiring certain extensions to be made to the lines of the Capital Traction Company in the District of Columbia.

Mr. GORMAN. I suggest to the Senator from Michigan that he had better let all the bills relating to District railroads go over until another morning, for a reason which he understands, I think.

Mr. McMILLAN. If objection is made to that bill, I will call up House bill 11570.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair understands the Senator from Maryland to object.

REMOVAL OF WEEDS IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. McMILLAN. I call up the bill (H. R. 11570) to cause the removal of weeds from lands in the city of Washington, D. C., and for other purposes.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DISPOSITION OF ASSESSMENT CERTIFICATES.

Mr. McMILLAN. I call up the bill (H. R. 6248) to provide for the disposition of assessment certificates of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

THOMAS HICKEY.

Mr. CULLOM. I ask the Senator from Michigan kindly to yield to me for the purpose of calling up a bill.

Mr. McMILLAN. I yield to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. CULLOM. I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5326) for the relief of Thomas Hickey.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment, in line 7, after the word "discharge," to insert "as of date November 19, 1861," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to remove the charge of desertion now standing against the military record of Thomas Hickey, late of Company I, Twelfth Illinois Volunteer Cavalry, and to issue an honorable discharge as of date November 19, 1861: Provided, That no pay, bounty, or other emoluments shall become due or payable by virtue of the passage of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

IMPERSONATION OF WEIGHMASTERS.

Mr. McMILLAN. I call up the bill (H. R. 8626) to punish the impersonation of weighmasters in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia with amendments.

The first amendment was, in line 6, section 1, after the word "fodder," to strike out "or corn;" so as to make the section read:

That it shall be unlawful for any person to falsely represent himself or herself as being a weighmaster of hay, straw, fodder, or corn, or to make, give, or issue any certificate of the quantity of hay, straw, fodder, weighed in the District of Columbia.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to strike out section 2, in the following words:

SEC. 2. That hereafter in the District of Columbia 350 pounds of corn on the cob shall constitute a barrel and 290 pounds of shelled corn shall constitute a barrel.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

REORGANIZATION OF THE ARMY.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FAULKNER in the chair). Under the unanimous-consent agreement of the Senate, the hour of 1 o'clock having arrived, the Chair lays before the Senate the following bill for consideration.

The SECRETARY. A bill (S. 5578) for increasing the efficiency of the Army of the United States, and for other purposes.

Mr. GEAR. The chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs yields to me. I ask leave to call up House bill 3567, to remove the charge of desertion against Gardner Dodge.

Mr. HAWLEY. I have been instructed by my associates to wait a few moments. So I yield to the Senator from Iowa and then to several other Senators, to call up bills which will provoke no debate.

GARDNER DODGE.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa asks consent, without displacing the bill just read by title at the desk, that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill indicated by him.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 3567) to remove the charge of desertion against Gardner Dodge, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment, in line 4, after the word "to," to strike out—

Remove from the records the charge of desertion against Gardner Dodge, of Company L, Ninth Iowa Cavalry Volunteers: Provided, That no pay, bounty, or other emoluments shall become due or payable by virtue of the passage of this act.

And insert:

Revoke and set aside Special Orders, No. 421, paragraph 14, dated War Department, Adjutant-General's Office, August 5, 1865, and Special Orders, No. 113, dated Headquarters Department of Arkansas, May 11, 1865, and General Orders, No. 39, Headquarters Department of Arkansas, Little Rock, Ark., May 6, 1865, approving the proceedings and findings of the general court-martial convened pursuant to paragraph 2 of Special Orders, No. 66, dated Headquarters Department of Arkansas, March 16, 1865, and confirming the sentence of such court in so far as such orders relate to and affect Gardner Dodge, of Company L, Ninth Regiment Iowa Cavalry Volunteers, and to disapprove the proceedings and findings of said court-martial relating to said soldier, and to remove the charge of desertion from his record, and to issue to him an honorable discharge as of date August 10, 1865: Provided, That no pay, bounty, or allowance shall be paid him by virtue of this act.

So as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized and directed to revoke and set aside Special Orders, No. 421, paragraph 14, dated War Department, Adjutant-General's Office, August 5, 1865, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

JOSEPH T. VINCENT.

Mr. HANNA. I ask for the consideration of the bill (S. 3831) to correct the military record of Joseph T. Vincent.

Mr. HAWLEY. I am willing to wait a few minutes longer.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Temporarily displacing the bill which was read by title at the desk, the Senator from Ohio asks for the present consideration of the bill indicated by him.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized and directed to revoke and set aside paragraph 5 of Special Orders, No. 39, War Department, Adjutant-General's Office, January 23, 1864, dismissing Joseph T. Vincent, regimental quartermaster of the First Tennessee Volunteers, African descent, dishonorably from the service, and to accept the resignation of said Joseph T. Vincent and to issue to him an honorable discharge as of date January 23, 1864, and to correct the records accordingly: Provided, That no pay, bounty, allowance, or other emoluments shall accrue to said Vincent by virtue of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE W. M'KINSEY.

Mr. FAIRBANKS. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 1800) to reimburse George W. McKinsey, postmaster at Kokomo, Ind., for money paid out by him as said postmaster.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection, temporarily displacing the unfinished business?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to pay to George W. McKinsey, postmaster at Kokomo, Ind., $620.20, that amount being paid out by him as such postmaster for clerk hire, rents, gas, light, and fuel, all of which was necessary to carry on and conduct properly the business of the post-office.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT ELIZABETH CITY, N. C.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. President, I wish to make a statement.

Yesterday morning I asked unanimous consent to pass a bill providing for the construction of a public building at Elizabeth City, N. C. In answer to some question I stated that a similar bill had already passed the House. I was mistaken. It had passed the Committee of the Whole in the House and had been recommended to the House, but it has not yet been finally acted upon. I wish to make that statement inasmuch as I thought yesterday morning that the bill had passed the House. The Senate bill is identical with the bill that has passed the Committee of the Whole in the House. I was mistaken in supposing that it had passed the House. I saw the statement in the newspapers, and I thought it had finally passed. It had passed the Committee of the Whole.

REORGANIZATION OF THE ARMY.

Mr. HAWLEY. I must explain that I am awaiting a conference of the members of the Military Committee and others in the Military Committee room. They asked me to wait before proceeding with the Army bill. But I can not consent to the introduction of anything that will involve any debate whatever.

Mr. FAULKNER. I ask the Senator from Connecticut to permit me to interrupt the unfinished business a moment to ask the passage of a short bill.

Mr. HAWLEY. I have no objection.

CHRISTIANA DENGLE.

Mr. FAULKNER. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 5374) for the relief of Christiana Dengler.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GALLINGER in the chair). The Senator from West Virginia asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill indicated by him. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It provides that all real estate lying in the District of Columbia heretofore purchased by and conveyed to Christiana Dengler shall be relieved and exempted from the operations of an act entitled "An act to restrict ownership of real estate in the Territories to American citizens," approved March 3, 1887; and remits all forfeitures incurred by force of that act in respect to such real estate.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BRIDGES ACROSS THE CONECUH RIVER, ALABAMA.

Mr. PASCO. I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 9381) authorizing the construction of three bridges across the Conecuh River, a navigable stream, in Escambia County, Ala.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HEIRS OF SAMUEL KRAMER.

Mr. WELLINGTON. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 3187) for the relief of the widow and heirs of Samuel Kramer.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to Matilda S. Kramer, widow, and heirs of the late Samuel Kramer, the pay of a chaplain of the Navy from July 3, 1880, to May 15, 1884, after deducting the amount already paid to him while acting at the navy-yard, Washington, D. C., by order of the Secretary of the Navy, there being no regular chaplain at the post, the payment not to exceed $1,800, which shall be in full for all service rendered.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

NEW YORK, NEW HAVEN AND HARTFORD RAILROAD.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I ask unanimous consent for the consideration at this time of the bill (S. 4817) for the relief of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company. It will take but a moment, I think.

Mr. HAWLEY. I shall not object to the request of my colleague, but, lest there be any misunderstanding, I now give notice that this is the last bill to which I can yield.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill named by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT]?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It directs the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company $4,440.20, in full satisfaction of all claims against the United States for the cost of necessary repairs on the company's pier 49, East River, New York City, and the company's car float No. 21, which was moored to the pier, damaged by the battle ship Maine, which came in collision with the pier and float, the same being in accord with the findings and report of a naval board duly appointed to investigate the collision and damages therefrom.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills, with amendments in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (S. 896) granting a pension to Mary J. Hill;

A bill (S. 1071) granting a pension to Abigail R. Ellet;

A bill (S. 1209) granting an increase of pension to Maj. John H. Gearkee;

A bill (S. 1345) granting an increase of pension to George W. Emery;

A bill (S. 1378) granting a pension to William F. Gowdy;

A bill (S. 1819) granting a pension to Michael Lannon;

A bill (S. 1976) granting an increase of pension to Annie E. Ruff;

A bill (S. 2217) to increase the pension of Aaron B. Page;

A bill (S. 2235) granting an increase of pension to Henry Hatch;

A bill (S. 2335) granting an increase of pension to Charles Edson;

A bill (S. 3136) granting an increase of pension to William O. Torrey;

A bill (S. 3335) granting a pension to Maria S. Whitney;

A bill (S. 4483) granting an increase of pension to John H. Crandall; and

A bill (S. 4681) granting an increase of pension to Joseph F. Mollere.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 877) granting a pension to Charles F. Holmes;
 A bill (H. R. 1206) granting an increase of pension to Sophia W. Buxton;
 A bill (H. R. 1388) to remove the charge of desertion from the record of Michael Baker;
 A bill (H. R. 1698) granting an increase of pension to Henry A. Thoburn;
 A bill (H. R. 1724) granting an increase of pension to Sophia Gruber;
 A bill (H. R. 1773) granting a pension to Robert Persley;
 A bill (H. R. 2366) granting an increase of pension to Lester P. Cooper;
 A bill (H. R. 2625) granting a pension to Mary Chamberlin;
 A bill (H. R. 2830) granting an increase of pension to Ira Bacon;
 A bill (H. R. 3476) granting an increase of pension to Andrew Morse, jr.;
 A bill (H. R. 4135) for the relief of Peter, alias Louis, Heck;
 A bill (H. R. 4498) granting an increase of pension to Jackson Neace;
 A bill (H. R. 4501) granting an increase of pension to Stephen A. Knowlan;
 A bill (H. R. 4661) granting a pension to Dortha E. Kennoch;
 A bill (H. R. 4670) to remove the charge of dishonorable dismissal from the military service of the United States of W. H. Castle;
 A bill (H. R. 4677) to increase the pension of Rebecca McMullen;
 A bill (H. R. 5497) to provide for terms of the circuit and district courts of the western judicial district of the State of Texas to be held at the city of Laredo, and for other purposes;
 A bill (H. R. 6329) granting a pension to Mary F. Cobb;
 A bill (H. R. 6433) granting an increase of pension to Jeremiah B. Moore;
 A bill (H. R. 8207) granting a pension to Abigail Wilson;
 A bill (H. R. 8406) granting an increase of pension to Martha Adams;
 A bill (H. R. 8669) for the relief of Henry Mulvin;
 A bill (H. R. 8804) granting an increase of pension to James S. Anderson;
 A bill (H. R. 9619) granting a pension to Ruth Walker;
 A bill (H. R. 10134) granting an increase of pension to John Keach;
 A bill (H. R. 10328) granting a pension to Ann Collins;
 A bill (H. R. 10896) granting an increase of pension to James W. Ingram;
 A bill (H. R. 10997) granting a pension to Erasmus L. Wentz;
 A bill (H. R. 10862) granting an increase of pension to Hollis O. Dudley;
 A bill (H. R. 10892) granting an increase of pension to Andrew J. Taylor;
 A bill (H. R. 10900) to increase the pension of James Cooper;
 A bill (H. R. 11148) granting an increase of pension to Orin Long;
 A bill (H. R. 11563) granting an increase of pension to William B. Paul;
 A bill (H. R. 11767) granting a pension to Daniel G. Emert;
 A bill (H. R. 11834) granting an increase of pension to Smith Jewell;
 A bill (H. R. 11876) granting an increase of pension to Clarence L. Chapman;
 A bill (H. R. 12013) to increase the pension of Delos M. Kenyon;
 A bill (H. R. 12104) granting an increase of pension to Maria S. Urban; and
 A bill (H. R. 12149) granting a pension to Eliza S. Redfield.
 The message further returned to the Senate, in compliance with its request, the joint resolution (S. R. 48) granting permission for the erection of a monument in Washington, D. C., for the ornamentation of the national capital and in honor of Samuel Hahnemann.
 The message also announced that the House had passed a concurrent resolution to print 5,000 copies of Commercial Relations, 1898, and (in separate form) 10,000 copies of the Review of the World's Commerce, etc.; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.
 The message further announced that the House had passed a concurrent resolution to print 12,000 additional copies of the Statistical Abstract of the United States for 1898, etc.; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills and joint resolutions; and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President:

A bill (S. 3909) for the relief of Mrs. Harriet A. Ferguson;
 A bill (S. 4159) relative to the payment of claims for material and labor furnished for the District of Columbia buildings;
 A bill (S. 5076) authorizing the Sioux City and Omaha Railway

Company to construct and operate a railway through the Omaha and Winnebago Reservation, in Thurston County, Nebr., and for other purposes;

A bill (S. 5391) to provide for an appropriate national celebration of the establishment of the seat of Government in the District of Columbia;

A bill (S. 5333) to permit volunteer regiments to retain their colors;

A joint resolution (S. R. 34) authorizing the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to alter, amend, or repeal certain ordinances;

A joint resolution (S. R. 231) providing for the further distribution of the compiled statutes of the District of Columbia;

A bill (H. R. 1417) for the relief of Thomas Mullen;

A bill (H. R. 2358) granting a pension to Mary E. Taylor;

A bill (H. R. 2668) for the relief of William Henry Johnson;

A bill (H. R. 4418) to remove the charge of desertion from the naval record of Horace G. Reed;

A bill (H. R. 7346) to amend section 4896 of the Revised Statutes;

A bill (H. R. 8816) for the relief of the heirs of Minnie Frederick;

A bill (H. R. 11455) granting to the city of Boulder, in the State of Colorado, certain lands for park purposes and for the preservation of the native trees on said lands, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 11737) granting the right of way to the Pensacola and Northwestern Railroad Company over and through the United States naval and military reservations near Pensacola, in the State of Florida; and
 A bill (H. R. 11867) to authorize the Georgia Pine Railway, of Georgia, to construct a bridge across the Flint River, a navigable stream in Decatur County, Ga.

REORGANIZATION OF THE ARMY.

Mr. HAWLEY. I now ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the Army bill, and ask that the bill may be read.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. 5578) for increasing the efficiency of the Army of the United States, and for other purposes.

The Secretary proceeded to read the bill, but before concluding was interrupted by—

Mr. HOAR. I desire to inquire if the bill is being read with the expectation that amendments may be offered as the reading proceeds?

Mr. HAWLEY. No; I desire to have the bill read through before making any amendments.

Mr. MASON. I have stated to the chairman of the committee that I desire to vote upon a proposed amendment which removes the age limit as affecting soldiers either of the civil war or the late Spanish war. I am obliged to be absent from the Chamber for an hour and a half or two hours, and I do not want to be precluded from voting upon that and taking five minutes to explain my vote. In other words, there are pending amendments, and one amendment which removes the age limit.

Mr. HAWLEY. Can not the Senator wait a few moments until the reading is completed?

Mr. MASON. Oh, yes; so long as I know I may have the opportunity I desire.

Mr. HAWLEY. I will do my best to give it to the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GALLINGER). The Chair will state that the bill is before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole, and after it has been read through it will be open to amendment.

Mr. MASON. I do not think the Chair quite understood me. I am obliged to be absent owing to a matter that I can not avoid, and I want the opportunity I have stated.

Mr. HAWLEY. I ask that the bill be read, and then we will consider the question whether the Senator shall have unanimous consent to make a few remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The reading of the bill will be proceeded with.

The reading of the bill was resumed and concluded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole, and open to amendment.

Mr. GORMAN. Mr. President, I want to appeal to the Senator from Connecticut in charge of this bill—

Mr. HAWLEY. I want to say a word. There are some committee amendments, and I should like to perfect the bill before going on with the debate.

Mr. GORMAN. Of course whatever the Senator desires to say in explanation of the bill we shall be delighted to hear, and whatever amendments he desires to offer to the bill may be laid before us and considered; but what I want to say is, and I trust he will accept the suggestion, after he shall have made his explanation of the bill, which I trust will be this morning, he will then permit this measure to go over until Monday morning immediately after the morning business, so that we may then take it up and consider it. It will be utterly impossible to proceed intelligently with the consideration of the measure to-day, as it has only come before us this morning. There will be no disposition, of course, to delay, and I suggest that we take it up immediately after the morning business on Monday. I think, if the Senator will permit the suggestion, that such a course will prove to be an economy of time.

Mr. HAWLEY. I should like to have a fuller Senate present, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut suggests the absence of a quorum. The roll will be called.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allen,	Gallinger,	Mallory,	Roach,
Allison,	Genr.	Mantle,	Ross,
Bacon,	Gorman,	Martin,	Sewell,
Bale,	Hanna,	Mason,	Shoup,
Berry,	Hansbrough,	Milla,	Simon,
Burrows,	Harris,	Mitchell,	Spooner,
Butler,	Hawley,	Money,	Sullivan,
Carter,	Heitfeld,	Morgan,	Teller,
Chilton,	Hoar,	Nelson,	Thurston,
Clark,	Jones, Nev.	Pasco,	Turley,
Cockrell,	Kenney,	Perkins,	Turner,
Cullom,	Lindsay,	Pettigrew,	Vest,
Daniel,	Lodge,	Pettus,	Warren,
Deboe,	McBride,	Platt, Conn.	Wellington,
Fairbanks,	McEnery,	Pritchard,	White,
Faulkner,	McLaurin,	Proctor,	Wilson.
Frye,	McMillan,	Rawlins,

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Sixty-seven Senators having answered to their names, a quorum of the Senate is present.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. President, the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] asks us to postpone the consideration of the bill until Monday, and to begin the debate then.

Mr. GORMAN. I should prefer that, unless the Senator desires to speak now.

Mr. HAWLEY. The Senator wishes at least to postpone the voting until Monday?

Mr. GORMAN. To postpone the consideration of the bill, so that we may have an opportunity to examine it between now and Monday and be prepared to discuss it intelligently.

Mr. HAWLEY. The Senator wants to postpone the bill until Monday—it amounts to that—with or without debate.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President—

Mr. HAWLEY. I should like to say something about that myself for just a moment; but I will yield to the Senator from Iowa, if he wishes.

Mr. ALLISON. I only wish to say one thing in reference to this bill, and that is, if it is postponed until Monday for any purpose those who are familiar with the details, I think, could very profitably occupy the attention of the Senate for a portion of to-day.

Mr. CHILTON. Especially the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY]. I think he ought to do so.

Mr. ALLISON. I think we ought now to have an understanding, if we can have one, as to when the vote shall be taken on this bill. I think it must be apparent to all that this bill must be considered in rather a brief space of time. That is the only suggestion I desire to make. I hope, if the matter is to go over until Monday, that at some fixed hour during the day we shall have a vote on the bill and any amendments which may be proposed to it.

Mr. HAWLEY. I can not possibly consent, unless I am overruled. I can not give a free consent to putting this bill over until Monday. This general subject has been in the minds of everybody, not to say members of Congress particularly, for weeks. For weeks we have had before us, or could have had before us on our desks and in our offices at home, copies of the various bills which have been presented, one presented by—perhaps I ought not to mention the names—Mr. HULL, of Iowa, another one by Mr. McCLELLAN, of New York, and there was still another one in the House of Representatives. I had the honor of presenting here precisely the bill that was presented by Mr. HULL in the House. There was also presented a bill by the Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR] with some valuable considerations. All these things have kept the subject before the country, and the necessities of the case have reached the lowest understanding. They are unquestionable. No matter how we came where we are, we are here. We have a vanishing army.

Mr. SEWELL. Will the Senator allow me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield to the Senator from New Jersey?

Mr. HAWLEY. Certainly.

Mr. SEWELL. On the basis of the proposition of the Senator from Iowa, it seems to me if we can fix a time to vote on this bill Monday we should do so.

Mr. HAWLEY. The Senator will please reserve his remarks until I am through. They are not applicable to the general question I am discussing. It is a little uncomfortable to have the floor taken away from one by interruption.

We are under very great stress. The Army we have on our hands, enlisted for the war with Spain, is vanishing. It is liable to disappear instantly as an effective force the moment the treaty between the United States and Spain shall have been approved by both countries and ratifications shall have been exchanged. From that time on the President has only the shadow of a right—no right really—to command the volunteer forces any further than may lead to a speedy discharge and speedy return to their homes.

Now, we have here a bill which has had consideration for weeks; the best consideration that can be given to it by the War Department, by the President, and by the Committee on Military Affairs in a free and frank discussion of it. Three of us—I may refer to them—the Senator from Missouri, the Senator from Montana, and I, had the last work to do in finishing it up, or polishing it up, if you choose, and in amending it in minor respects. I am happy to say in regard to it that we have come harmoniously to a conclusion in its favor; that we did not think of any word like surrender. We did not surrender. Nobody surrendered. Nobody compromised anything of any consequence. Of course there was more or less yielding here and there occasionally when some trifling difference of opinion arose, but it is not a bill of compromise or defeat or surrender. It is a bill agreed upon by those who we think are sensible men and the men best qualified to prepare a bill. The necessity is tremendous.

To adjourn it to Monday will take two days out of the seven that remain, and the bill has to go to the House for consideration there. I hope, being so nearly a resemblance of the other bill, that it will be passed by that body; and yet we know what things are likely to happen. The Senate, in my judgment, is as well qualified to proceed to the consideration and to vote upon the bill now as it will be on Monday. The moment we presented it last night at 6 o'clock I sent a speedy messenger to the Printer to have it printed—the full supply. I had copies carried to many persons, the President, the War Department. I ordered a copy to be put in every Senator's morning mail and one put upon his desk at 11 o'clock. I have done everything that could possibly be done to look after its consideration, and for my part I can only say go ahead.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, while it is no doubt true, as stated by the Senator from Connecticut, that he mailed copies of this bill to Senators, it is nevertheless certain that those bills were not received by all the members of this body. Personally I have some interest in this matter, and was unable to get a copy of the bill until it came into the Senate to-day. I have been endeavoring to familiarize myself with it and can certainly do so by Monday. But I trust the Senator will not insist upon having a vote to-night. We might proceed to debate and discuss it, but surely we ought to have the right to look into an important measure of this kind. While the Senator from Connecticut no doubt is very familiar with it, it is certain that those of us who have had no opportunity to investigate are not prepared to express ourselves intelligently upon it, and I trust, while we may go on with the debate to-night, that no vote will be insisted on here.

There is no desire to delay the consideration of the measure or a final vote, but the disposition, I take it, is to examine the measure and find out what is in it, so that we may know whether we can support the bill or not. Gentlemen who have charge of the measure have agreed unquestionably as to many of its details, but we must all pass upon it according to our own judgment and do the best we can after we know the facts. I think there is no disposition to do anything else than to ascertain the circumstances as they really are.

Mr. LODGE. I wish to ask what is the business before the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state to the Senator from Massachusetts that the Army bill is before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. COCKRELL obtained the floor.

Mr. CARTER. Before the Senator from Missouri proceeds, I wish to interject a remark. Possibly we may arrange to continue this matter until Monday, with the understanding that a vote will be taken at some hour on Monday. It is conceded on all hands that some legislation must be passed at the present session of the Congress in order to meet the necessities which now exist and are known to exist. If the hour of 4 o'clock on Monday could be fixed, or later—

Mr. ALLISON. I hope an earlier hour will be fixed, if this matter is not to be voted on until Monday. I think it is important that on Monday at some reasonable hour we shall proceed to the consideration of the sundry civil bill. So I suggest an earlier hour than 4 o'clock.

Mr. CARTER. Then I suggest the hour of 3 o'clock on Monday as the time to be fixed for a final vote on the bill and amendments then pending.

Mr. ALLEN. I hope it will not be taken for granted that this bill will not be discussed.

Mr. HAWLEY. I am willing to vote at 3 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. TELLER. Sunday?

Mr. HAWLEY. This is one of the occasions where there is no Sunday, or rather a very holy one, for such a purpose.

Mr. CARTER. We could devote to debate this whole day and the night as well, if Senators elect to remain, and such portion of Monday as the arrangement for adjournment will allow. The adjournment might obtain until 10 o'clock on Monday morning. It must be obvious to all Senators that it is necessary to get a vote at an early date on this measure, which is substantially the result of a general meeting of minds on a piece of legislation which is very important.

Mr. HAWLEY. The bill has five-sixths of the Senators in its favor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will inquire of the Senator from Montana whether or not he makes a request?

Mr. CARTER. I make a request for unanimous consent that this bill and all amendments then pending be voted upon at the hour of 3 o'clock on Monday.

Mr. ALLEN. To which I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will submit the request. The Senator from Montana makes a request for unanimous consent that the bill and all amendments pending be voted upon at 3 o'clock on Monday next. Is there objection?

Mr. ALLEN. I object.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I think that after we have proceeded with the debate upon the bill for a few hours we may be able to arrive at a conclusion and set an hour for disposing of the matter, but it will be impossible to do it now. I should have objected if the Senator from Nebraska had not; but at a later time to-day I presume we can come to an understanding as to when we shall vote on this measure. There is no disposition to delay it, I think, but rather a desire to dispose of it. But it is unusual to undertake to fix an hour for a vote upon a bill before it has been discussed at all or considered, and especially a bill that has come into our hands only within the last two or three hours.

Mr. COCKRELL. The bill is pending, is it not?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is pending in the Senate as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. COCKRELL. Mr. President, I desire to make a few remarks in regard to this bill, the manner of its preparation, and its effect, and my indorsement of it. As every Senator knows, efforts have been made in Congress for the last twenty years, twenty-four years, I will say, for a reorganization of the Army. In almost every Congress some project has been brought up. In the beginning of this Congress multitudinous measures were presented for the increase of the regular standing army to 100,000 men, and it was claimed that the proposition had the indorsement of the executive branch of the Government. That kind of a measure was introduced. It passed the House. It authorized the President to organize an army of 100,000 men, a regular permanent standing army, and then gave him permission to reduce the number of the men in the company, leaving the officer organization intact.

That matter was considered in the Committee on Military Affairs for a long time. A measure was reported by part of the committee, and certain propositions were made by the remaining half of the committee, the committee being equally divided. The matter was discussed here and statements were made upon the floor of the Senate in regard to the measure.

Now, this measure which comes here has been examined very carefully, and I want to say I indorse it. I indorse it because I believe it is right and just and proper and necessary; and in addition to that it will settle for years to come the question of the reorganization of the regular standing army. When 1901 comes the Army will revert to what it is provided for in the pending bill, without debate or contention, and it will remain at that figure; and I think that is amply sufficient.

Now, what does this bill do? We all know that the organization of the infantry of the United States has been 10 companies to a regiment, and the inefficiency of that organization induced Congress to make a provision that two of those companies might be skeletonized and that the officers could be put upon detached duty. So our regiments practically consist of 8 companies, 2 battalions. In the beginning of the war with Spain we authorized an increase of our infantry regiments to 12 companies, just as the cavalry has been for years, 3 battalions, with 3 majors, 1 colonel, 1 lieutenant-colonel, and a complement of officers. Everyone recognizes that that is the only efficient infantry organization known to-day and practiced to-day anywhere in the world by intelligent and progressive armies.

Then this bill simply authorizes the infantry arm of the service to be increased to 12 companies and hereafter to remain a 12-company organization, and that carries with it the men and the officers. In the cavalry there has been practically no increase by this bill over what it was prior to April, 1898.

Now, we come to the artillery. We have made an increase there of 14 batteries, 2 batteries to every one of the 7 regiments. You may say there is no necessity for it. Then there is no necessity for your fortifications. There is no necessity for your siege guns.

There is no necessity for your disappearing artillery. There is no necessity for the hundred million dollars which you have expended in fortifications and in the armament of those fortifications all around our coasts.

You have the fortifications, you have the improved machinery, you have the guns there. You must have intelligent men there who understand machinery and can use and protect it or it becomes a total loss. The artillery increase that we have given here, in my judgment, will not last until July 1, 1901. If the additional fortifications that are proposed all around our coasts, upon the Atlantic and the Pacific, are completed, and the guns are manufactured and put into them, you will have to have an additional increase of artillery. You can not get around it. If you have forts, if you have guns, if you have machinery, you must have men to take care of them. That is all there is about it. That is the increase we have made.

Then we have organized bands for each regiment. Heretofore a number of the members of the band have been detailed from the force. We have made the bands to consist of a given number, and they are to be enlisted for the bands and not to be taken out of the ranks, and they become soldiers in the band under military discipline. That necessarily increases the number of men nominally in the regiment.

With the infantry we give an increase of one major, because we create one new battalion practically. That gives three majors—the regular organization, the permanent organization. Then you have to give to the regiments of cavalry, infantry, and artillery a quartermaster, an adjutant, and a commissary. They get the pay of a captain. That is not really an increase in fact, but an increase in appearance. And then we make the lieutenants the adjutants of the battalions. There is an apparent increase, but practically it is not, because the same officers will serve. In the artillery we have given these increases; and necessarily with the 14 batteries must go 14 officers. This increase, I think, is perfectly justifiable, is absolutely essential.

When 1901 comes the Army drops back to what? To the organization prescribed in this bill. That is the organization. It is described in the first part of the bill down to section 12. All the prior sections relate to the permanent organization of the Army as it will exist on July 1, 1901, if no additional legislation is enacted, and that gives exactly the organization.

That makes an increase of a little over 2,200 in the artillery and something like between six and seven thousand in the infantry by the filling up of the companies, a total increase up to about 10,000 or a little over, including these regimental bands and the cooks. By the way, the cooks must not be charged to this, because there is a separate law authorizing the enlistment of cooks independent of any voluntary service or anything else. I have it here before me. It is a law to authorize the enlistment of a cook for every company. We provide for them. It is the first time they have been provided for, and we are charged up with the number of cooks to every company in the Army. The existing law makes them a part of the Army independently, but they are counted in as a part of this increase.

When it comes to the staff of the permanent army—

Mr. VEST. Will my colleague kindly state as succinctly as possible what will be the size of the Army when it drops back according to the sections preceding section 13?

Mr. COCKRELL. Between 37,000 and 38,000. That is for all branches of the service. It will be between 37,000 and 38,000. I have not the exact figures.

Mr. VEST. From 65,000 regulars and 35,000 volunteers back to 38,000?

Mr. COCKRELL. Yes.

Mr. PROCTOR. I believe it is 38,400.

Mr. COCKRELL. About 38,400. It will be about 10,000 increase beyond the present Regular Army, because there are others who have been put in the Army by special law who make the existing Army a little over 27,000. So you can say an increase practically of 10,000; probably a few hundred over that.

What have we done in regard to the staff? We find that there was a law passed during the last session increasing the ordnance staff by a certain number of officers, and there are other increases made. We made an increase in the Adjutant-General's Office and in the Inspector-General's Office at the last session, but it was provided as a temporary force. After an examination of this matter and the number of officers and the duties that will be devolved upon them, we thought that the increase which had been made in the Adjutant-General's Office and the Inspector-General's Office ought to be retained in the permanent organization; and therefore there is an increase. That is the only increase in the staff. We have left the quartermasters and the commissaries and the other officers when peace comes just as they were before. I can see no harm to come from this. When 1901 comes without any further legislation the law brings the Army back to exactly what is provided for here—about 38,000 men, artillery, infantry, cavalry, heavy artillery, batteries, and everything combined.

As to the additional 35,000 men who have been provided for here the provision speaks for itself. We have authorized the permanent standing army to be maintained at 65,000 enlisted men until July 1, 1901. There will be 65,000 enlisted men in the Regular Army up to July 1, 1901. How are they to be organized? The organization is already provided for; the whole organization is provided for. Some of the troops now in the service, some fifty-odd thousand in number, will be discharged, because they volunteered for and during the war, and when peace is proclaimed they will be discharged. In fact, they are being discharged very rapidly now all over the country. There is a general order to muster out the volunteers who were in the Regular Army, volunteers there for and during the war, as rapidly as possible, and enlist men only for three years unless sooner discharged. This will enable the President to maintain the regular standing army, as it is called, at 65,000 up to July 1, 1901, if their services are so long needed. It authorizes him to organize a volunteer force of 35,000 and to officer it, and that force must go out of existence on July 1, 1901, or sooner if there is no necessity for their continuing in the service.

This necessarily demands an increase of the staff department during this period, because the 35,000 volunteers are not from the States, are not officered by the States with quartermasters, commissaries, and surgeons. They come in as United States volunteers, and the United States has to furnish them with quartermasters and commissaries and surgeons and all the staff officers. We have here made provision for an increase in the different staff departments or corps; and I wish to say to the Senate that I reduced these down just as low as I thought the service would permit. Almost every reduction was made to the number I specified myself, and I am responsible for that part of it absolutely. I cut down the staff in the rank of the officers, and I cut them down in the number just as low as I thought the service would permit.

You will observe that in the Adjutant-General's Office there are three assistant adjutants-general with the rank of lieutenant-colonel and six assistant adjutants-general with the rank of major. In the Inspector's Office they are lieutenant-colonels and majors. In all the other departments they are only majors—nobody above a major. I thought the most efficient officers in the Army would be the majors, and therefore we will have an excess of them—an honorable title, very good pay, and I think the most efficient ones will be among them.

When it came to the organization of the general officers, I apprehend every Senator knows the pressure that has been brought upon the Senate for the purpose of increasing the number of general officers in the Regular Army. We have three major-generals and six brigadier-generals. This man wants an increase in the major-generals, and the other one wants an increase of the brigadier-generals. They want it in order that this man and that man and the other man may secure appointments in the Regular Army. I am totally opposed to an increase of the general officers of the Regular Army, and this bill makes no increase whatever in the brigadier-generals or in the major-generals of the Army.

Now, what did we do for the volunteers? Were we to turn them over to the President without any officers—35,000 men without a brigade commander and without a division commander? We discussed the question, and we fixed upon 4,000 men as a unit for a brigadier-general. We fixed upon 12,000 as a unit for a major-general. Then we counted the brigadier-generals in the Regular Army, and we added the volunteers to the Regular Army—about 100,000—and we made provision for one brigadier-general of volunteers and regulars combined, united, to every 4,000 men. That would give about 25 brigadier-generals—6 in Regular and 19 in Volunteer Army. Then it comes to the major-generals. We assign one major-general to every 12,000 enlisted men. There are 3 major-generals in the Regular Army, and we increase the number so that there will be one to every 12,000 men, an increase of about 5. Now, I submit that this is not a bad arrangement. It is not extravagant; it is not prodigal of the people's money. It is just as small a force as can efficiently and effectively manage the enlisted force provided by the bill.

Mr. President, under all these circumstances, after this long discussion and this effort year after year and Congress after Congress to reorganize the Army, if we have a bill here which promises to settle the question for Congresses to come, promises no heavy burden upon the people, gives no extra force that can be used for any improper purpose or elsewhere, I think it ought to be accepted. I have been on several commissions to reorganize the Army; I have been connected with several efforts to reorganize the Army. We have never been able to get anything that could meet with approval, and I believe honestly and conscientiously that this is the best measure that has been presented to the Congress of the United States for settling the Regular Army of the United States since I entered this Chamber, on the 4th day of March, 1875. I do not believe that you will ever get a better one. On the contrary, if this bill fails, my judgment is that what will come hereafter will be very different from this measure, not as good for the interests of the country as this will prove to be.

Therefore I shall indorse the bill. I vote for it heartily and cheerfully. I believe it is right in the sight of God and man, and I am willing to take all responsibility for it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is in Committee of the Whole and open to amendment.

Mr. FRYE. Mr. President, I am obliged to offer an amendment.

Mr. CARTER. Let the committee amendments be first offered.

Mr. FRYE. Oh, if there are committee amendments ready, I shall not offer one now.

Mr. HAWLEY. I propose as an amendment a proviso to be inserted on page 2, after line 6. It is not a matter of vital consequence, but it provides that the offices held now by Major McNally and Captain Loeffler, whom you all know, shall become extinct at the death or disappearance from the service of those two men.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be read by the Secretary.

The SECRETARY. At the end of line 6, page 2, insert the following proviso:

Provided, That when a vacancy shall occur through death, retirement, or other separation from active service in the office of storekeeper in the Quartermaster's Department and Ordnance Department, respectively, now provided for by law, said offices shall cease to exist.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the amendment be read again. About where does it come in?

The SECRETARY. At the end of section 1.

Mr. HAWLEY. The first section, the Senator will remember, is merely a catalogue of the subdivisions of the Army. The two men occupying anomalous positions are Major McNally and Captain Loeffler.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the amendment be read again. I myself think it is right, but I want to hear it again.

The Secretary again read the amendment.

Mr. COCKRELL. I think that is eminently proper and right.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment submitted by the Senator from Connecticut.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HAWLEY. On page 9 there are two or three lines that are rather entangled in their syntax. I propose an amendment, beginning on line 16. It does not change the sense at all, but transposes the phrase.

The SECRETARY. On page 9 it is proposed to strike out lines 16 and 17, and line 18 down to and including the words "and said force," in the following words:

No person other than an officer of the Regular Army who has passed the age of 45 years shall be appointed as a field officer in said force.

And insert:

No person who has passed the age of 45 years shall be appointed as a field officer in said force, officers of the Regular Army excepted.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I should like to know the force of the amendment.

Mr. SPOONER. What is meant by the words "said force?" Does that mean the whole force?

Mr. HAWLEY. The force preceding—infantry, cavalry, and artillery.

Mr. SPOONER. Does that apply to the 35 additional men authorized to be enlisted?

Mr. HAWLEY. I suppose it will apply to the whole increase.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Then, as I understand this provision, it would prevent the appointment of any officer who had served in the war against Spain, if he was over the age of 45 years, no matter what his experience, no matter what talent he had shown, etc. It seems to me that is entirely wrong and that those who served in the war against Spain should at least be excepted as well as those who served in the Regular Army. Therefore, I move to amend the amendment by excepting those who served in the recent war against Spain as well as those in the Regular Army.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment to the amendment will be read.

Mr. ALLEN. Let the proposed amendment as amended be read.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out, beginning in line 16, down to and including the word "force," in line 18, and to insert in lieu the following language:

No person who has passed the age of 45 years shall be appointed as a field officer in said force, officers of the Regular Army excepted.

Mr. HAWLEY. The Senator from South Dakota wishes to add an exception.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Dakota has moved an amendment to the amendment, which will be read.

The SECRETARY. "And also except officers who served in the war with Spain."

Mr. HAWLEY. "Officers of the Regular Army and officers who served in the recent war with Spain excepted."

Mr. ALLEN. Why should not also competent enlisted men who served in the recent war with Spain be included?

Mr. PETTIGREW. I think it would be entirely proper to include them.

Mr. ALLEN. And also enlisted men who are competent who served in the recent war and those who served in the civil war. I move to so amend the amendment.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I accept that as a part of my amendment. I think it is entirely proper.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Dakota can modify his amendment to the amendment, but an amendment in the third degree would not be in order.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I modify my amendment to the amendment to that extent.

Mr. SPOONER. That will not cover the whole case.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Then let us have it covered.

Mr. SPOONER. As I understand this provision, it applies only to field officers:

No person other than an officer of the Regular Army who has passed the age of 45 years shall be appointed as a field officer in said force—

If the Senator will look at the clause following—

nor as a company or staff officer therein if he be past the age of 35 years.

So, under this provision, as I understand it, a man may have served as captain or lieutenant with distinguished gallantry during the war with Spain and be capable in every way to command troops; but if he is 36 years of age, he will not be eligible to appointment even in this temporary force as a captain or a lieutenant. It seems to me the amendment should be broader.

Mr. PETTIGREW. It should be broader to cover the whole question.

Mr. ALLEN. The trouble with the amendment is that it is altogether too narrow. The provision is altogether too narrow, even as it is proposed to be amended by the Senator from South Dakota. This part of the section reads:

No person other than an officer of the Regular Army who has passed the age of 45 years shall be appointed as a field officer in said force, nor as a company or staff officer therein if he be past the age of 35 years; neither shall any person not a Regular Army officer be so appointed until he shall have demonstrated his moral, physical, and professional fitness for the grade in which he is to be commissioned to the satisfaction of an examining board.

Under the language I have just read a man must have been an officer before he can become an officer in this force, and that entirely apart from the question of his education, his aptitude, and his experience as a soldier. If he did not occupy the position of a commissioned officer in the service during the late war, he is forever barred from an appointment under the provisions of this bill.

Then he must undergo an examination at the hands of some kind of a board. Who is to compose that board? What class of officers or individuals are to be members of this proposed board? Are they to be Regular Army officers? If that is the case, it would be worse than futile; it would be the height of foolishness for any civilian or any volunteer officer to undertake to enter the service of the United States by passing an examination before such a board.

Mr. HAWLEY. I think the Senator is slightly in error. The limit of age is given at 45, but under 45 any man in the country can be appointed to a field officer's commission.

Mr. ALLEN. I am speaking now of the fact that he must satisfactorily pass an examination before the board provided for here. The bill does not say of whom the board shall be composed, whether of Regular Army officers or civilians.

Mr. HAWLEY. The existing statute provides for those boards.

Mr. ALLEN. It is to be composed of Regular Army officers, is it not?

Mr. HAWLEY. I do not know how it is in the volunteer force. I can not answer that question at this moment. I think for the volunteer force the members of the board are simply appointed by the superior officers out of the force.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, it is an absolute foreclosure of every man who wants to enter the service of the Government unless he comes in from the Regular Army.

Mr. HAWLEY. Oh, no.

Mr. ALLEN. Unless he comes from this absurdity called the Regular Army. Here we are making a distinction between the Regular Army and what other kind of an army? What else have we in this country? Have we an irregular army? To speak of an army as a regular army is a misnomer. There is no such thing as an irregular army in this country.

Mr. HAWLEY. It is a convenient term, however.

Mr. ALLEN. Every man who enlists in the service of the Government for any period is a regular soldier of the Government, whether his term of service be six months or six years. This is all rot about the Regular Army as contradistinguished from some other army.

Mr. CARTER. Will the Senator permit me to make a suggestion?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. ALLEN. Certainly.

Mr. CARTER. If the Senator from Nebraska will scrutinize the language which he is undertaking to criticize—

Mr. ALLEN. And which I am criticising.

Mr. CARTER. He will discern that the only discrimination in that language runs against the rank and file in the Regular Army.

Mr. ALLEN. How is that?

Mr. CARTER. The only discrimination to be found in the section, if any discrimination exists, runs against the enlisted men in the Regular Army.

Mr. ALLEN. Does the Senator know of an irregular army in this country?

Mr. CARTER. Well, now, that is a mere play upon words. The Senator knows that for the purpose of designating a regular force as distinguished from a volunteer force the term is necessarily employed.

Mr. ALLEN. Not necessarily.

Mr. CARTER. It does not mean that there is an irregular or disreputable army, or anything of that sort. It is the language that has been used from the foundation of the Government, and it is indispensable in order to distinguish between the forces regularly employed in the service of the United States and those occasionally brought into the service to meet emergencies.

But, Mr. President, to return to the language—and I desire to draw the attention of the Senator to it—it says that no other person than an officer of the Regular Army who has passed the age of 45 years shall be appointed an officer. That permits the appointment of anyone who has served in the war with Spain. It is not necessary that the person shall have been an officer. It is necessary that the person shall be under the age of 45 years.

Mr. ALLEN. That language prohibits any man not an officer from appointment.

Mr. CARTER. Of the United States Regular Army.

Mr. ALLEN. Exactly. So that the age qualification and the having previously held an office are both essential to his admission, and then he must run the gantlet of a mysterious sort of a board.

Mr. CARTER. But if the individual who seeks the appointment is in the Regular Army, he must show that he is an officer of the Army to be eligible to appointment in this force.

Mr. ALLEN. Exactly; that is what I say.

Mr. CARTER. If he is a citizen not in the Regular Army, the only question inquired of is whether he is under the age of 45.

Mr. ALLEN. Then he is barred entirely.

Mr. CARTER. Not at all. If over the age of 45, he is barred. If under the age of 45, he may be a storekeeper, a hod carrier, a bank clerk, a farmer who had never met with any service in any army at all.

Mr. ALLEN. This language is:

No person other than an officer of the Regular Army who has passed the age of 45 years shall be appointed as a field officer in said force.

Mr. CARTER. A field officer may be appointed from the Regular Army if over 45 years of age. Anyone can be appointed an officer who is under 45 years of age.

Mr. ALLEN. He can not under that language.

Mr. CARTER. That is what the language plainly indicates.

Mr. PROCTOR. Will the Senator from Nebraska yield to me a moment?

Mr. ALLEN. Yes, sir.

Mr. PROCTOR. An amendment has already been adopted changing that language and making it so direct that it will be clear—

Mr. ALLEN. I think the amendment proposed is pending.

Mr. PROCTOR. The amendment makes it clear that it applies to any person in the Regular Army. The word "regular," by the way, is surplusage there. There is nothing known to the law but the Army. The military forces consist of the Army, which means in the law the Regular Army, volunteers, and militia. Any person in the Army over 45 years of age can be appointed under that provision.

Mr. ALLEN. This language is not capable of the construction put upon it by the honorable Senator from Vermont, with all due deference to his opinion.

Mr. President, the language "No person other than an officer of the Regular Army who has passed the age of 45 years shall be appointed as a field officer in said force" excludes every person upon the face of this earth not a Regular Army officer who is over the age of 45 years, and there is not a solitary exception to it. No amount of explanation, no amount of argument, can do away with the force of that language.

But I did not care so much about this provision. This is one of the many defects of the bill. I dislike very much to disagree with my friend at my right [Mr. COCKRELL], who has been my neighbor for so many years, with whom I have sustained such elegant personal relations, and with whose political beliefs, to some extent, I have sympathized. I was surprised, however, to hear the honorable Senator from Missouri say this is a good bill; that it is a just bill; that he approves of it, etc. If there ever was a hideous skeleton, if there ever was a legislative deformity and a nondescript, if there ever was a monstrosity in the form of legislation that stuck up its hideous head in either branch of Congress, this is one. It is a deformity; it is warped; it is disjointed; it is dislocated; it lacks science; it lacks coherence; it lacks good sense.

Mr. HAWLEY. I can answer the question—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Connecticut?

Mr. ALLEN. I yield, of course, to the Senator.

Mr. HAWLEY. I can answer the question the Senator asked some time ago about the appointment of boards of examination in the volunteer service. He asked if the boards were regular officers. Public act No. 67, approved April 22, 1898, in section 14, provides:

That the general commanding a separate department or a detached army is authorized to appoint from time to time military boards of not less than three nor more than five volunteer officers of the Volunteer Army to examine into the capacity, qualifications, conduct, and efficiency of any commissioned officer of said army within his command.

That is one protection they have.

Mr. ALLEN. That is not all, by any means, Mr. President. Take up this bill at the very first section. Section 1 creates eight distinctive departments in the Army. First, an Adjutant-General's Department; second, an Inspector-General's Department; third, a Judge-Advocate-General's Department; fourth, a Quartermaster's Department, a Subsistence Department, a Medical Department, a Pay Department, a Corps of Engineers, an Ordnance Department, a Signal Corps, etc., without end.

Why, Mr. President, it would be almost impossible the way business is transacted in the War Office here to transact the Army business through departments like these. Everything must go according to red-tape in the War Office; it does not make any difference how insignificant it may be. If there is a requisition for a little quinine, or something of that kind, it must run the prescribed course, and probably half a dozen doctors and half a dozen or more subordinates must have something to do with it before the medicine reaches the sick soldier.

Now, there are the Quartermaster's Department, the Commissary Department, and the Medical Department. Why are they not all placed under the charge of one officer or in one department? They all belong to the same general line of service. They all mean to supply the soldiers' wants in health and in sickness. Why are they not all placed under the charge of one general officer or one department instead of being scattered to-day through two or three?

The nearer you can come to the one-man power in military life the nearer you come to efficiency. Here we have department after department, amounting to eight or nine or more, all pulling at cross-purposes, as the recent war shows and as the civil war demonstrated thirty-odd years ago.

It was due, Mr. President, to bureaucracy during the late civil war that the termination of the war was not reached in two years. It was constant interference from Washington with those in the field that blocked the progress of our Army. So it was during the recent war.

The second section provides for the organization of the cavalry branch of the service. There is a strange thing running through this entire bill. The most important part of every regiment, according to the bill, is a colonel.

A regiment shall consist of a colonel. He is the first fellow. Finally they get down to a few private soldiers. Colonels, lieutenant-colonels, majors, captains, first lieutenants, second lieutenants, sergeants, corporals are all mentioned and all named, even down to the cooks. Then a few private soldiers are thrown in. That constitutes a regiment.

Why does not this bill say that a regiment of cavalry shall be composed of so many men of the line, so many private soldiers, and then so many officers? Under this bill you could have a regiment if you simply had a colonel. You might need possibly a trumpeter.

Mr. SPOONER. Will the Senator allow me a question?

Mr. ALLEN. I yield to my honorable friend from Wisconsin.

Mr. SPOONER. The colonel generally rides at the head of the regiment, and why should he not be named at the head in the bill?

Mr. ALLEN. I did not hear the Senator.

Mr. SPOONER. I understood the Senator's criticism to be rather as to the order in which the particular officers are mentioned in the bill.

Mr. ALLEN. Yes.

Mr. SPOONER. The colonel generally rides at the head of his regiment, and why should he not be first mentioned?

Mr. ALLEN. Whether he rides at the head of the regiment or at the foot of the column depends largely on the colonel. I believe his position is several paces in the rear of the regiment under certain circumstances, and usually he is there in discharge of his duty.

I am not disposed to criticize, because I am not at all a military man, and the Senator in charge of this bill [Mr. HAWLEY] is a distinguished military man, as is my friend the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL].

Section 3 deals with the artillery. The artillery is organized in a general way upon about the same basis as the cavalry.

Then comes the infantry line.

That each regiment of infantry shall consist of one colonel, one lieutenant-colonel, etc.

It would be too bad, Mr. President, to place the colonel in his proper position, in the rear of the regiment. I speak of this in a facetious manner, it is true, but I speak of it also in a solemn manner. It represents that shoddy genteel, that codfish aristocracy, which is permeating every branch of the public service. A man, to be a man and to be a soldier and a citizen of the United States, must, according to these people, have some kind of a title, even if it is not greater than that of corporal.

Mr. President, this may be a small thing, and doubtless it is; but the small things of this world indicate the drift of public sentiment. Who is it who fights your battles, who holds aloft your flag in smoke and in carnage? Is it the colonel, the lieutenant-colonel, the major, or the captain? It is the man with the gun, the unknown man. Why not give him his proper place and rank in the bill?

The honorable Senator from Missouri sees in this bill a great improvement in the infantry branch of the service over the service as it existed a few years ago. I will not pretend to set up my judgment against that of so eminent a military chieftain as the Senator from Missouri, and one of much experience, but my own belief is that the smaller and more compact you can make your regimental organization, the more efficient it will be. I think any man who has seen a regiment in action will come to the conclusion that that is true.

Mr. President, I recollect an instance coming under my own observation during the late civil war, where a regiment of over 1,000 men was ordered into a charge and refused to go, refused to move. The battle had already opened; the line was to be carried. They were placed under arrest and sent to the rear. Then a regiment from Kansas, numbering 175 men, were ordered in their place and carried the line. They were soldiers, and the others were not, although they wore blue clothes. So I say it is the compactness of the organization, the efficiency, which tells.

What is a soldier for, Mr. President? His purpose, his mission on earth is to fight battles, to win victories. That is his mission, and if he can not fight battles and win victories, he ought not to be mustered into the service. He is not there for parade; he is not there to wear tinsel; he is not there to receive smiles and congratulations and roses; he is there for the service of his country. That kind of organization, that kind of discipline, whatever you may call it, which will fight battles and win victories is the organization we need and ought to have, and I believe that notwithstanding what any great man may say to the contrary.

So we have got one of these infantry regiments up to 12 companies—a great, big, bulky, unwieldy thing—three battalions of four companies each, with an adjutant to each battalion, and then a regimental adjutant. Why, Mr. President, it reminds me very much of the story which Mr. Lincoln used to tell about the rabbit, who said he was perfectly able to go to war and perfectly willing if he could only have his tail patched out a little longer; that it was necessary as ballast. Well, it was patched out, and finally he kept calling for more tail, more tail, so that he might be able to win a battle. Eventually they wrapped his tail around his body, and he broke down in consequence of the weight and was unable to get into the battle at all. Here it is proposed to break the regimental organization down with officer after officer as useless as the blowing of the idle wind; and then we are told all this is necessary because the great nations of the world have their armies organized on this principle. It is a wonder we do not transfer to Europe bodily.

But, Mr. President, this bill will go through. There is no doubt about it. It is decreed, I suppose, that way. We are going to have 14 captains, mark you, Mr. President. I suppose that is upon the principle on which baseball is played, where you must have two or three supernumeraries sitting around on a bench, so that if one man gets knocked out you can have another to take his place. In the olden days we had but one captain to a company, and when he got knocked out by battle or by disease the first lieutenant took his place, and so on down until very frequently a company would come under the command of a corporal, and in some instances under the command of a private soldier. I think I have known regiments to go into action under the command of an orderly sergeant, but under our reorganized Army we are to have 14 captains to a regiment.

What are you going to do with these two extra captains? What earthly use have you for them? They are to be detailed or they may be detailed for certain services, but the services they are to be detailed for have their officers, also appointed to discharge those duties. Why this extra number of captains and why this extra number of first lieutenants? Is there any other reason for it than that it is to open the ranks of the Army that certain classes of people may be quartered upon this Government? This unwieldy organization of a regiment with three battalions of four companies each is to be the standard and the unit of our Army, as unwieldy as an overloaded tumblebug in a street.

Section 5 provides:

That all vacancies created or caused by the provisions of this act above the grade of second lieutenant in the line of the Army shall be filled by promotion according to seniority in the several arms, subject to the examinations now prescribed by law: Provided, That the additional second lieutenants now attached to each regiment of artillery shall be absorbed in the artillery or transferred to other arms where vacancies exist without loss of relative rank, leaving but one second lieutenant in each battery.

There is another close corporation. There is no right to a civilian or a volunteer to enter the service to fill up one of these vacancies. He must come up in regular gradation. However competent he may be, however apt he may be for the discharge of military duties, he is to be excluded.

Vacancies in the grade of second lieutenant shall be filled as now provided by law, except that no person shall be appointed from civil life before he shall have reached the age of 21 years nor after he shall have reached the age of 37 years, nor until he shall have passed a satisfactory examination as to his moral, physical, and educational qualifications.

In the ranks of second lieutenant, therefore, a vacancy may be filled by a civilian, provided he stands the examination which may be prescribed for him by a board whose mission and purpose it is to keep him out of the Army.

Mr. President, we are growing up a military aristocracy in this country. I was surprised less than two years ago to hear an officer in the Army say that he believed the time had come when the office should be transmitted by inheritance, that the office should pass from father to son.

Look, if you will, Mr. President, at the scandal that was going the rounds of this country less than two years ago about a Lieutenant Lang, I think it was, who happened to marry the daughter of an orderly sergeant or a sergeant. All militarism were scandalized by it. They held up their hands in holy horror that a man with epaulettes on his shoulders should be guilty of the indiscretion of marrying the daughter of a man who did not wear shoulder straps, and yet probably the parents of many of these persons who were scandalized might themselves have been potato diggers or tillers of the soil.

Here, Mr. President, in democratic and republican America, in less than a century and a third of our national existence, we have raised up an aristocracy in military circles that is scandalized because a second lieutenant married a virtuous, nice little girl who happened to be the daughter of a man who did not wear shoulder straps. There must have been weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth around military firesides at that time; and according to the reports a system of persecution was inaugurated by these virtuous people so strong and so persistent that the lieutenant, for his own peace and the happiness of his wife, was compelled to resign his commission in the Army and seek a station in private life. God help—if He can not do any worse—an aristocracy of that kind! Mr. President, they are to be found everywhere; everywhere they sing the same song; they are all in favor of the Regular Army, with especial emphasis on the "Regular."

We see that crudity expressed in this bill repeatedly—the Regular Army. In God's name, have we an irregular army? If a man enters the First United States Infantry, takes the oath of allegiance, and signs the necessary papers to be mustered in as a soldier, is he any more regular than he would be if he should enter the First Nebraska Regiment and take the same oath and perform the same duty? It is a good deal like the quackery in medicine; every fellow says he belongs to the regular school, as though everything that did not square with his notions of propriety or his theories of medicine was irregular.

Section 6 treats of the Adjutant-General's and Inspector-General's Departments, and provides that those "shall consist of the number of officers now in those departments respectively." I do not pretend to know how many there are, but nowhere is there a reduction. I have looked through this bill with a view of ascertaining if in any place there was a reduction of the officers in the Army. I find none—not a solitary place.

The Adjutant-General's and Inspector-General's Departments shall consist of the officers now there, regardless of the needs of the service. So as respects the Judge-Advocate-General's Department, the Quartermaster's Department, Subsistence Department, Medical Department, Pay Department, Corps of Engineers, Ordnance Department, and Signal Corps. The bill provides that they "shall consist of the officers and enlisted men now provided by law."

There is no reduction there. Then it says:

Provided, That the battalion of engineers, and the officers serving therewith, shall constitute a part of the line of the Army: Provided further, That in time of war retired officers of the Army may, in the discretion of the President, be employed on active duty, other than in the command of troops, and when so employed they shall receive the full pay and allowances of their grades: And provided also, That no person in civil life shall hereafter be appointed a judge-advocate, paymaster, or chaplain until he shall have passed satisfactorily such examination as to his moral, mental, and physical qualifications as may be prescribed by the President; and no such person shall be appointed who is more than 40 years of age.

No requirement of that kind is enforced against the person who comes from what this bill calls "the Regular Army;" but if the applicant happens to be a civilian, whatever his qualifications may be, immediately the barrier of an examination is to be raised against him, which means in ninety-nine cases out of every one hundred that he will be denied a position in the service.

Section 8 treats of the Chief of the Record and Pension Office of the War Department, and I do not desire to say anything about that.

Section 9 is an important part of this bill, and really one of the most important features of it. It provides:

That the cooks authorized by this act shall have the pay and allowances of sergeants of infantry.

That is, it requires a higher order of talent to cook than it does to fight. It does not make any difference what that may be, and I presume if all that has been said about canned beef and embalmed beef be true, the rank of an ordinary army cook ought to be raised to that of colonel, because it would require a high order of skill to successfully cook and serve such food.

I am not concerned individually in this delightful fight going on between the Secretary of War and the General of the Army. Out of it all will come good; will come the truth. If the Army of the United States has been fed on embalmed beef, if the Commissary Department has been imposed on, or has imposed on the soldiers, let the truth be known. There is no punishment too great, there is no disgrace too humiliating, to a man who would consciously compel the defenders of this nation to feed upon trash like that.

I never was an admirer of General Miles since he wrote an article for the July number, 1894, of the North American Review. I admire his courage as a soldier, but in that article he gave expression to ideas which are hostile to a republican form of government, which he would have to explain to me before I could ever be induced to vote to reestablish the grade of lieutenant-general for his benefit; but I honor him in this fight. I do not believe that there is an intelligent citizen in the United States who does not understand, or at least believe, that our Army was fed upon this trash, and that a great percentage of the sickness which came to them in camp and a large percentage of the mortality was due to the food which was given them.

Mr. President, if General Miles shall make that truth patent, he will have my respect, at least, humble as it may be. Where there is so much smoke, there must be some fire. Here is a contention going on between the Secretary of War and the General of the Army, to the infinite delight no doubt of military circles in Europe and to the constant humiliation of the people of the United States. It proves, sir, that we have been pursuing the wrong course.

When the late war between the United States and Spain broke out, why was not the Army turned over to General Miles as the commander in chief, and he held responsible for the campaign? He was the senior major-general commanding the armies of the United States. Why were not those armies placed under his command, and he given distinctly to understand that he would be held responsible for their management, for their equipment, their discipline, and their campaigns? There has been a little too much of the bureaus, a little too much jealousy, a little too much pulling apart. It was marvelous that the campaigns were conducted as successfully as they were under the circumstances.

So, Mr. President, the same thing has got into the Navy. What a glorious thing it was for Dewey that he was 10,000 miles from Washington when he sailed into Manila Harbor! What a glorious thing it was for him that he had presence of mind enough to cut the cable! [Laughter.] He was not the originator of cutting a cable. When Grant swung around Vicksburg and was subject to the capricious orders of Halleck, who changed his orders with every meal according to the condition of his stomach [laughter], Grant was wise enough to cut the wire, and it remained cut, and Halleck's orders never reached Grant until ten days after they had been sent, and until battle after battle had been fought and won. Dewey profited by that precedent, because Dewey was in the Mississippi River at that time with the fleet. So it was a fortunate thing for Dewey that he was away from Washington and that he cut the cable in time.

Here we have again a controversy about the seniority of the two admirals, as to whether or not the man who fought the battle shall outrank the man who did not fight it. That is about the only issue, whether the man who was present discharging his duty and through whose military prowess and military and naval skill Cervera's fleet was destroyed shall outrank the man who was 10 miles away. They are fighting the battle over in the Navy Department, and it is waxing fierce and fast, like the dance of the warlocks and the witches in Tam O'Shanter. It is hard to tell how it will come out.

Mr. President [Mr. FAULKNER in the chair], you and I have practiced law a good many years, and we know when we get the judge to arguing against the man on the other side, we have won the case. We do not usually say anything after that. But, unfortunately, if he goes to arguing the case with us, we know what that means. We are defeated. I am afraid Admiral Schley has got to arguing the case with the Secretary of the Navy.

No difference how many titles may be given Sampson—and I am saying nothing against Sampson. I believe him to be a good naval officer. I believe he would have discharged his duties faithfully and bravely if he had been there. But he was not present at the time—and whatever may be said in his behalf, there are 75,000,000 honest hearts and honest souls in the United States who will always believe that Schley was the hero of that battle and through him it was won. And yet the fight goes on, shuttlecock and battledoor. On it goes, Mr. President, in a very convenient place over in the Navy Department. There is not much water over there, there is not much danger of any bloodshed over there, but there is great danger of the shedding of a great deal of ink. If these different bureaus and departments were brought down under the charge of one man and consolidated, putting a discreet, brave, competent man at the head of each to direct, and to direct justly, all this scandal and contention would disappear and efficiency would result.

Mr. President, this bill does say something about volunteer soldiers:

SEC. 12. That to meet the present exigencies of the military service the President is hereby authorized to maintain the Regular Army—at a strength of not exceeding 65,000 enlisted men, to be distributed amongst the several branches of the service according to the needs of each, and raise a force of not more than 35,000 volunteer infantry to be recruited as he may determine from the country at large, or from the localities where their services are needed, without restriction as to citizenship or educational qualifications, and to organize the same into not more than 30 regiments organized as are infantry regiments of war strength in the Regular Army: Provided, That each regiment shall have one surgeon, with the rank of major; two assistant surgeons, one of whom shall have the rank of captain and one that of first lieutenant, and three hospital stewards.

There it comes again—Regular Army—

I call particular attention to the fact that 35,000 of these troops are to be enlisted by the President of the United States. What becomes, under these circumstances, of the invariable precedent followed in this country of the governors appointing the officers of the volunteer forces including the colonels? There has been no exception to it in the history of this country until the recent war. What becomes of the whole policy of this Government of enlisting the militia of the several States when the services of more troops are needed? There is not a governor in the United States who can appoint an officer in one of these volunteer regiments. They are turned over to the President of the United States. All this vast residuary military power that belongs to the separate States is ruthlessly taken from them by the provisions of this bill, and yet this is one of the most harmonious and beautiful military bills ever presented in the history of the country, so it is said. How do you make those men responsible to the people?

They should come from every State. They should come from every State from Maine to California. They should be appointed from the rank and file of the best citizenship of each of the States. Yet all this is ignored and set aside by the provisions of this wonderful bill, that the President may have an opportunity to reward a few military favorites.

Mr. President, the bill does provide that an ordinary man can serve as a private soldier; and it is a wonder to me that it provides even that. There is one position open to the ordinary fellow. He can shoulder his rifle and put on his canteen and haversack and knapsack and cartridge box, and he may march to the tune of Yankee Doodle and Dixie, but he must do it under the orders of some fellow appointed to command him. That is the one position left to him. The man who enlists in the ranks may himself have an exceptional aptitude for military life. He may be a scholar, a philosopher; he may be one man out of ten thousand; and yet some tack-headed fellow with a spoon full of brains, who can run the gantlet of the President or an examining board, puts on a sword to command him in the field. Such will be the wonderful composition of the American Army under this bill.

Then we come to the brigadiers. I suppose they are necessary. We are to have a brigadier for every 4,000 and a major-general for every 12,000, so it is said. I am not inclined to object to that, although it strikes me as making the generals a little more numerous than is necessary. So it is as we pass through this bill. I have not called attention to as many of the vital defects in the bill as I desired. You find it full of snares and crudities and pitfalls.

Mr. President, it is really too bad that in dealing with a great question like this, which concerns the reorganization of the Army of the United States in all of its branches, we can not get along without favoritism. I should like to see the time come when those best fitted by nature and by education and by other qualifications will be permitted to lead in both civil and military life.

There never can be upon American soil a permanent institution known as the Regular Army. If there was anything that Jefferson, Washington, Hamilton, and all the fathers of the Republic warned us against, it was the danger of a standing army.

They told us that in time of war we should resort to the militia of the State, and there never has been a war in which we have participated when the tocsin was sounded by the Chief Magistrate of the nation that the sons of the North and the South, the East and the West did not fill up the ranks and pour out their blood in rivers in defense of the nation. Who can do more than that? Are we to have a standing army of a hundred thousand, whose occupation it shall be to be trained in the art of killing men, for that is what soldiering means, or shall we have enough well-educated military men and a standing army large enough as a nucleus for a great force of volunteers, to be mustered into service at the first signal of danger?

I challenge any gentleman on this floor to point out in the history of our country, in the wars through which we have passed, a great battle where the brunt of the fighting fell upon what is called the regular soldier. I do not say he is not a good soldier. I say he is, because he is an American citizen. I say he is the equal of any; but if you will turn your mind back to the history of this country, to its great wars, the great battles and the great losses have fallen to the volunteer soldiers. So it has been throughout the history of the wars of continental Europe. For what purpose do we want this tremendous army? For what are we to have it? For what do we need it? Sir, we do not need it. I shall not at this time enter into a discussion of the other branch of this subject, which looks to the solution of our contention with the Philippine Islands. At another time I hope to take up that matter in connection with this bill and discuss it.

Mr. PROCTOR. Mr. President, I believe the Senator commenced to discuss the pending amendment in regard to the age limit, but he formed his line of battle according to what is known in modern military parlance as "extended formation," and I shall not undertake to follow him any further. It is necessary to have some age limit. There are thousands of officers of the volunteer force who will be glad to have the appointments. The service is in foreign countries, in an unfavorable climate, in an unhealthy climate, and it is certainly for the benefit of the service that young officers should be selected. When there are so many hundreds and thousands more than can receive appointments, it seems to me the age limit is a wise one.

Mr. CULLOM. In view of the fact that I am called into committee, I should like to suggest an amendment to the same section. In line 19, page 9, after the words "thirty-five years," I move to insert "unless a Regular Army officer or a person who served in the war with Spain." It seems to me it is important and right that those who served in the war with Spain shall have an opportunity to get these positions, if they desire to do so.

Mr. CHILTON. Will not the language at the bottom of the page cover it?

Mr. HAWLEY. Has the Senator read that?

Mr. CULLOM. I will read it:

Provided, That the field officers of the force herein authorized may be appointed from officers of the Regular Army or from persons who served as officers of volunteers in the war with Spain.

Mr. SPOONER. I suggest to the Senator from Illinois that that is limited to the field officers.

Mr. CULLOM. So I see.

Mr. SPOONER. And it may not be certain that that excludes the age limit.

Mr. CULLOM. I do not propose to disturb the age limit in that line of the service. What I am seeking is to get the provision so amended as that persons who have served in the war with Spain shall be eligible to take such places regardless of the age limit. Whether the proviso at the end of the section or nearly to its end covers it, I am not sure.

Mr. PROCTOR. They are now within the age limit.

Mr. CULLOM. Are you sure of that?

Mr. PROCTOR. There is no restriction.

Mr. CULLOM. I am not seeking to disturb the age limit in line 19, as you will see. I am only seeking to insert the words "unless a Regular Army officer or a person who served in the war with Spain," so that they may be eligible notwithstanding the age limit.

Mr. CHILTON. Was the amendment adopted? I think it covered that, but I am not sure. Was there an amendment adopted on that subject a while ago?

Mr. PROCTOR. It is wide open.

Mr. CHILTON. It is pending.

Mr. CULLOM. The Senator from Vermont insists that the door is wide open to officers of the Army and those who served in the war with Spain, and if that is true I am satisfied.

Mr. PROCTOR. It is open to everybody.

Mr. CARTER. Within the age limit.

Mr. CULLOM. I am not seeking to disturb the age limit in that particular portion of the bill, so far as concerns people generally. If it seems to be understood that the ones whom I seek to take care of are already protected, I will withdraw the amendment.

Mr. CARTER. Of course, it must be understood that they are taken care of with the exception of the age limit.

Mr. CULLOM. That is what I am trying to provide for.

Mr. CARTER. That is, a captain and other company officers must be under the age of 35.

Mr. CULLOM. I think it ought to be made 40 instead of 35.

Mr. CARTER. The Senator's amendment seeks to exempt from the age limit certain persons who served in the war with Spain.

Mr. CULLOM. Let the amendment which I have offered be read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Connecticut has offered an amendment, and the Senator from South Dakota has offered an amendment to the amendment.

Mr. CULLOM. I should like to have the amendment which I have offered read.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to insert, after the word "years," in line 19, page 9, the words "unless a Regular Army officer or a person who served in the war with Spain."

Mr. CULLOM. The amendment takes these persons out of the age limit.

Mr. CARTER. It takes out those two classes.

Mr. CULLOM. It removes the two classes—those in the Regular Army and those who served in the war with Spain. Has the Senator any objection to the amendment? If not, I should like to have it adopted.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Connecticut has offered an amendment. Does he withdraw his amendment?

Mr. HAWLEY. I hardly know whether it is worth while to make any change in that respect. We reported it and were satisfied with it. I reconstructed the sentence, so as to make it read:

No person who has passed the age of 45 years shall be appointed as a field officer in said force, officers of the Regular Army excepted.

I want to change that by saying "officers now or heretofore in the Regular Army." There are many officers who resigned and would be glad to go back into the Army if there was a war.

Mr. CULLOM. Many of these men will merely enlist for the next two years.

Mr. CARTER. I will say to the Senator from Connecticut, the chairman of the committee, that the amendment of the Senator from Illinois refers to that portion of the section which immediately follows after the word "force," and reads as follows:

Nor as a company or staff officer therein if he be past the age of 35 years.

Now, the Senator from Illinois desires to insert:

Unless an officer of the Regular Army or a person who served in the war with Spain.

The amendment of the Senator from Illinois would permit a person over 35 years who was an officer in the Regular Army or who had served in the war with Spain to be appointed as a company or staff officer notwithstanding the 35-year limit named in that section.

Mr. HAWLEY. I understand. If my colleague thinks that would be well, I will agree to it.

Mr. CARTER. I do not urge the amendment. I merely desire to reach an understanding as to what the amendment refers to.

Mr. CULLOM. It seems to me, as the service is for a brief period, that there are many soldiers now engaged in the war with Spain or who have just been mustered out who are above the age of 35 who could take these positions and be of greater service or of as great service as any who are in the Regular Army or outside. I do not see how it can possibly interfere with the service at all or be of any disadvantage whatever. I hope the Senator will allow the amendment to be adopted.

Mr. SPOONER. Why should a man be excluded from company service if he is over 35? I know one captain over 45 years of age. He served with as much gallantry at Santiago as any man in the world could serve, and he is capable, so far as concerns all a man can know or see, of rendering until 1901 as effective service as a line officer or as a field officer as any man, I think, in the Regular Army. Why should he be excluded? I can understand the wise purpose of the age limit as to men who are to become part of the permanent establishment and who are to be retired at the age of 62. There would seem to be good reasons for not appointing from civil life men 50 or 55 years of age who are to be retired at the age of 62 on pay. But when you consider only the cases of men who are to serve until 1901 and then go out of the service, what possible reason can there be for this age limit, in view of the fact that this section declares—and it is a very wise provision:

No person other than an officer of the Regular Army who has passed the age of 45 years shall be appointed as a field officer in said force, nor as a company or staff officer therein if he be past the age of 35 years; neither shall any person not a Regular Army officer be so appointed until he shall have demonstrated his moral, physical, and professional fitness for the grade in which he is to be commissioned to the satisfaction of an examining board.

I can not for the life of me see why a man who is able to demonstrate before a proper examining board his moral fitness, his mental fitness, his physical fitness, and his professional fitness should be barred from entering the Army to serve for two years and four months. I hope that that limit, so far as it applies to officers whose services are to be limited in duration, will be stricken from the bill.

Mr. CULLOM. It seems to be useless where the service is for so brief a time.

Mr. HAWLEY. Let the amendment be read again.

Mr. CARTER. It must be borne in mind that this section relates to the Regular Army as well as to volunteers.

Mr. PROCTOR. I do not doubt, as the Senator from Wisconsin says, that there are many cases where officers past the age of 35 or 45 have done excellent service, but they are exceptional cases. The law very wisely limits enlistments in the ranks to the ages between 18 and 35. Everybody knows very well that the percentage of men fit for duty among younger men is much greater than among the older men. I think the provision as a whole is a wise one. There are many thousands of officers to pick from, and a small portion of those who have been in the volunteer service can be appointed under this provision. Why not adopt a line and pick from those who are the best adapted on the whole? I admit the force of exceptional cases, but you must make a rule for the whole.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, I have no amendment to offer, but I suggest that there should be an age limit so far as the regular establishment is concerned.

Mr. SPOONER. I agree to that.

Mr. WARREN. That is entirely evident. On the other hand, I see no reason why there should be any age limit as to volunteers. You are considering a bill here that leaves it largely in the discretion of the President, so far as the provisional part of the Army is concerned. We ought to be able to give him the same discretion as to officers.

I should be willing that the age limit should be waived as to those who served in the Spanish war. But the moment you do that you inferentially declare an invidious distinction against the man who served his country during the civil war. I have in my eye two or three Senators, among which I am one, who served in the civil war, and I am not willing to say in so many words that I am too old even to serve again in the ranks.

So if we are going to make an exception in favor of those who served in the late war, I believe we should take off the limit entirely as to volunteers. It has been thought best, and that is the combined wisdom of both sides of this House, to have a provisional army; to give the President of the United States, as Commander in Chief of the Army, as you might say, carte blanche regarding the same. Then why put a limit of age upon these officers?

Mr. CHILTON. It seems to me there is no true ground for any distinction between the regulars and volunteers mentioned in this particular part of the bill, for both the regulars and the volunteers under the provision at the end of section 13 go out of the service not later than the 1st of July, 1901.

It appears to me that the suggestion of the Senator from Wisconsin is a very judicious one. For men who are to serve not longer than July, 1901, there is no occasion to make any discrimination whatever on account of age. The President will have the power to make all just selections from among those who have served in the war with Spain or in the Regular Army or in civil life, and in making the selections he will no doubt pay due attention to the physical condition, the record made in the late war, and other circumstances. Especially is that true when it is reinforced by that part of the section which provides that an examination shall be had:

Neither shall any person not a Regular Army officer be so appointed until he shall have demonstrated his moral, physical, and professional fitness for the grade in which he is to be commissioned to the satisfaction of an examining board.

When you take the discretion of the President, in the first place, to make these appointments, and then establish the prerequisite of an examination by a board, such as is mentioned in this section, it seems to me that it is not necessary to go further and undertake to superadd an age limit to the employment of officers whose terms will expire two years from now.

Mr. GORMAN. Mr. President, I have but little interest in the pending amendment, which has engaged the attention of the Senate. It is a mere matter of detail, fixing the age limit at which the officers may enter the service. But I do desire to say a few words upon the general frame of the bill.

Mr. President, for the first time in the history of the country has a serious and urgent attempt been made by the executive branch of the Government to largely and permanently increase the standing army at the close of a war, and after peace has been practically declared.

The conditions which confront us have been brought about in part by the action of Congress, which committed the Government to regulate the affairs of the people of Cuba and to use the great power of this Government to free that people. But the serious trouble—the one that gives us the greatest concern—has been forced upon us by the executive branch of the Government and the treaty-making power.

The acquisition of the Philippine Islands has brought upon us obligations and conditions most extraordinary and alarming. I shall not discuss that question further than to say that with the Executive primarily must remain the responsibility for involving us in the serious complications with which we are now confronted. But for the questions involved in that acquisition, I do not believe there would be many advocates of a proposition to create a large standing army in this country.

While disclaiming any part of the responsibility for these conditions, I agree that we shall make ample provision to uphold the honor and dignity of the country.

Mr. President, I would not in any way hamper the Administration in the adjustment of the affairs that unfortunately confront us. I desire to act toward the Administration in the same manner that I did when the declaration of war against Spain was made. We then voted, with great unanimity, all the money and all the men the Executive desired or could use, the only condition being that when peace should be declared the officers and enlisted men of the Army and Navy should be reduced to a peace footing.

Now that the war has closed, recognizing there is an insurrection in the Philippine Islands and that a small military force is necessary in Cuba and Porto Rico, we say we are prepared to vote all the money and make provision for all the men that the President of the United States may require to pacify those islands. But in doing so there must be a limit as to the time for which the Army shall be so increased; that it shall be temporary and only for the purpose indicated.

The attempt to force through Congress, in the closing hours of a busy session, a measure for the partial reorganization of the standing army and a measure which provides for a large increase in that army, is unwise, for the reason that it can not be fairly or accurately framed, and there is no time to consider the details of such an important matter. Mr. President, the Executive branch of the Government ought not to ask Congress to grant him greater power than was given him when the declaration of war with Spain was made, and Congress ought not to grant, no matter how insistent the Executive may be, a large increase of the Regular Army in time of peace.

Mr. President, the pending bill providing for a large increase of the standing army and a temporary force amounting altogether to 100,000 men can not be defended. It is no answer to say that we have a revolution in the Philippine Islands; that there is some threatened disorder in Cuba, and unrest, if you please, in Porto Rico. That does not justify the demand for a standing Army when we say to you that we will give you all the men that the Commander in Chief of the Army may think necessary to suppress the rebellion in the Philippine Islands or to maintain peace in Cuba and Porto Rico, and that when those cases shall have been adjusted the Army must resume its normal condition.

That, Mr. President, is what we have always done in the case of war. We gave to the President of the United States, the Commander in Chief of the Army, in the war with Spain, for temporary use in that war, and to last until the end of that war and until peace was declared, all the men and money he required. There was no permanent increase of the standing army, except possibly two regiments of artillery, which increase was said to be necessary on account of the additions to our fortifications.

This, Mr. President, is all we did in the war of 1812-14 and in the war with Mexico. Immediately upon the conclusion of peace following those wars, the Regular Army was reduced to a peace footing. What possible reason can be given for departing from this well-settled policy of the Government at this time? There is none, absolutely none.

Now, Mr. President, I confess my amazement, my astonishment, at the terms of this bill, because I understood it was agreed that it should only be a measure which would give the President all the necessary officers, from major-generals down, and all the men he would require, or that are required in the judgment of the War Department, to meet the conditions which exist, and that there would be no attempt at this session of Congress to reorganize the Army.

Mr. WARREN. May I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. GORMAN. Certainly.

Mr. WARREN. I should like to ask the Senator from Maryland if this bill is not written along lines that were suggested by himself and some others from that side of the Chamber? I have been informed that it was. I ask the question for information.

Mr. GORMAN. Mr. President, if this bill can have one provision added to it, it would then be what some of us understood it was to be, and that is a single proviso that all the increase contained and authorized in the bill shall continue until July, 1901, both officers and men, and at that date, unless the next Congress of the United States shall otherwise direct, all the increased force shall be mustered out of the service, and the Army shall be reduced to a peace footing of 27,000 men.

Mr. WARREN. May I ask the Senator a question right there? Does the Senator believe that with 27,000 men the coast fortifications already authorized by the Government can be properly manned? If so, how will he dispose of the testimony of General Miles on the one hand and of various Army officers and experts on the other, who all unite in the opinion that it will take over 20,000—and very nearly 21,000—men and officers for artillery service, some 15,000 or 16,000 in heavy artillery, and the others in light artillery, in order to give one relief only; or, in other words, in order to have one man each where there is a necessary place for a man on our coast defenses? If it takes twenty-odd thousand or 21,000 to man the coast defenses, does the Senator then think that the Army should be reduced to a total of 27,000—cavalry, infantry, engineers, artillery; the several corps—Hospital Corps, Signal Corps—and all?

Mr. GORMAN. Mr. President, the Senate of the United States has presented a spectacle within the last week which answers the question of my friend from Wyoming. After great deliberation by an intelligent committee, as intelligent as there is in this body, we found that committee equally divided as to how and when and in what manner and to what extent the Army should be reorganized.

The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY], the honored chairman of the committee, who served his country gallantly in the field and who has great knowledge of legislative affairs, the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN] himself, the Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR], who was Secretary of War; the Senator from Missouri upon my left [Mr. COCKRELL], who has had great experience in the Army and in the service of the committee, and the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. MITCHELL], a gallant soldier in the late war, presented to this body widely divergent views, convincing all who heard them that it is utterly impossible to properly reorganize the Army at this time. No man can tell what will be the proper action for that organization, although the views of the distinguished Senator from Vermont as to the methods of reorganizing the staff commend themselves more strongly to me than any other proposition which has been presented.

Now, I answer the Senator from Wyoming frankly. I dislike to have a great standing army in this country in time of peace. I do not believe that there is any present or immediate future necessity for a great standing army. I do not believe that with our conditions at home and our relations abroad any such increase as is urged and has been forced upon Congress is necessary.

But whatever that increase may be, it would be amply provided for if we give you 100,000 men to suppress a third-class rebellion and permit them to remain in the service of the country four months after President McKinley's term shall have expired, and when you will have another Congress which can deliberate and determine whether General Miles's estimate is right, or whether the estimate of the Secretary of War is right, and how many batteries you judge to be necessary, and how many officers you intend to commission in addition to the present Regular Army. It, in other words, gives this Administration greater power than any Administration has had from General Washington's down to this day. It is a tender on our part on this side of the Chamber more liberal than has ever been made to a President of the United States by the majority or was ever submitted to by the minority.

Why, Mr. President, is advantage to be taken, if I may use that term, of the closing hours of a Congress, when every man admits that this subject can not be intelligently dealt with, simply because the doors of the Treasury have been thrown wide open to the President of the United States in the trouble that we have had with Spain, and because millions have been poured out since the close of the war without a criticism and with scarcely an examination? This, too, at a time when, by the confession of the leader of the Republican party in financial matters, we stand with a Treasury already threatened with depletion and with your Secretary of the Treasury already contemplating the issue of further obligations of the Government. We say that you shall have every dollar and every man and every officer that the Commander in Chief of the Army considers necessary.

We will give aid to you. We will give it to you precisely as you want it, with the number of major-generals and brigadiers that you may require. But what we do insist on, Mr. President—and I shall insist on it until my voice ceases to be heard in this Chamber—is that, having given you all that you have ever asked when war with another nation was imminent, you have no right to ask us, when we have not time to consider it, to enlarge the standing army permanently. All we ask is that Congress may have an opportunity to deal with this question when Congress has the time. Make the increase temporary, and a future Congress can determine whether it shall be made permanent.

Can you not trust the next Congress to do it? It will be Republican in every branch. The Executive, who now wants a standing army of 100,000, stands ready to approve it unless one thing occurs, and, if I mistake not the sense of the American people, that thing will occur. A sound will come up from the bottom, rolling through this country, that will make even your majorities hesitate to impose this increase upon a people, taxed now, and to be taxed more than ever before in their history.

You will hesitate, then, in my judgment, to make the increase. I desire that the people shall have that opportunity to be heard, that they shall have that opportunity to instruct their public servants. Pass it now, it becomes a law, and it would require the action of the Senate and of the House and of the President to terminate it. Make it temporary, and let the people's representatives deal with it hereafter. It can not embarrass you; it gives you all you want; and it gives the people the opportunity to correct it and modify it.

WAR OF 1812-1814.

Mr. President, the echoes of the last gun of the war of 1812-1814 had hardly ceased and the ink was scarcely dry on the signatures to the treaty of peace with Great Britain when at the last session of the Thirteenth Congress, which began in December, 1814, and ended March 3, 1815, the House of Representatives, by a bill which passed that body, insisted upon the immediate reduction of the standing Army from 60,000, the war footing, to 6,000, which was deemed the proper military peace establishment. There appeared to be a general concession at that time that 6,000 men was a sufficient standing army in time of peace.

The Secretary of War and the President and the supporters of the Administration in Congress opposed so great a disarmament at that time solely on the ground that the clouds of war had not sufficiently passed away, and the hostile armies and fleets were still hovering about our borders. It was contended that the unsatisfactory treaty of peace might prove only a truce. Finally the House, in a committee of conference, reluctantly agreed to let the Army stand for the time at 10,000 men. But the further reduction of the standing Army was persistently pressed in succeeding Congresses, and was finally accomplished.

A small extract from the House debates of 1814-15, as contained in the Annals of Congress, will serve to show how jealously the representatives of the people then viewed a large military establishment and how generally the spirit of our Constitution in restraint of a large standing army was recognized by all public men of all parties at that day.

Mr. Stockton, of New Jersey, said he could not but be alarmed to find that the Secretary of War had recommended the keeping up of a Regular Army of 20,000, to hear that this plan met the approbation of the Administration, and to see that it found advocates in that House. Mr. Stockton said that if there was any one principle which might be called fundamental to our civil institutions, and which above all others had received the decided approbation of the friends of civil liberty in the United States, without distinction of party, it was this, that a standing army was not to be tolerated in time of peace.

Yet the plan seemed to have made many friends. All the commonplace reasons in favor of such a measure (and none other had been urged) had been resorted to—reasons which always had been and always would be pressed into such a service. Such as the unsettled state of the world; large armies kept up by rival powers; the unruly disposition of savage tribes; the necessity of always being prepared for war to preserve peace. This and the like species of drapery always had and ever would be held up to conceal the real motives of political action. The same arguments had been used for more than a century to support the same measure, and served only to prove a solemn truth—that an army was always in favor of those in power.

MEXICAN WAR.

At the commencement of the Mexican war Congress appears to have guarded carefully against the continued maintenance of the standing Army after the cessation of hostilities, for we find it definitely provided in the act of February 11, 1847, "to raise for a limited time an additional military force," that "the officers, musicians, and privates authorized by this act shall immediately be discharged from the service of the United States at the close of the war with Mexico."

POLK.

In the Mexican war the militia proved itself worthy of all the reliance which the framers of our Constitution had imposed upon them. On this subject President Polk, in his fourth annual message, thus spoke:

One of the most important results of the war into which we were recently forced with a neighboring nation is the demonstration it has afforded of the military strength of our country. Before the late war with Mexico, European and other foreign powers entertained imperfect and erroneous views of our physical strength as a nation and of our ability to prosecute war, and especially a war waged out of our own country. They saw that our standing Army on the peace establishment did not exceed 10,000 men. Accustomed themselves to maintain in peace large standing armies for the protection of thrones against their own subjects, as well as against foreign enemies, they had not conceived that it was possible for a nation without such an army, well disciplined and of long service, to wage war successfully.

President Polk, in his fourth annual message, refers to the prompt reduction of our military establishment to a peace footing, in conformity with the provision of the act of Congress, in the following language:

On the return of peace our forces were withdrawn from Mexico, and the volunteers and that portion of the Regular Army engaged for the war were disbanded. Orders have been issued for stationing the forces of our permanent establishment at various positions in our extended country where troops may be required. Owing to the remoteness of some of these positions, the detachments have not yet reached their destination. Notwithstanding the extension of the limits of our country and the forces required in the new Territories, it is confidently believed that our present military establishment is sufficient for all exigencies so long as our peaceful relations remain undisturbed.

Thus it appears that the peace establishment of 10,000 men, which existed at the commencement of the Mexican war, was deemed amply sufficient immediately after the termination of hostilities, notwithstanding the acquisition of new territory.

When it came to the war between the States of the Union, that great captain, afterwards President of the United States, recommended that the Army should be reduced. Aye, sir, before the recommendation he reduced the Army himself, by allowing the expiration of enlistments, down to about 38,000 men.

But, Mr. President, owing to the conflicting plans as to the "reconstruction" of the seceded States, the return to the old military peace establishment was for a time delayed, until the strong public sentiment against the maintenance of a standing army became so manifest that such military men as Gen. John A. Logan took a firm stand in favor of reduction. By the act of July 28, 1866, the military peace establishment had been temporarily fixed at 5 regiments of artillery, 10 regiments of cavalry, and 45 regiments of infantry.

But, so great was the popular demand for a more thorough and permanent reduction, that a provision was incorporated in the Army appropriation bill of July 15, 1870, by which the President was "authorized and directed," on or before the 1st day of July, 1871, "to reduce the number of enlisted men to 30,000," and it was provided that "thereafter there shall be no greater number at any one time."

One of the prime movers and chief advocates of this permanent reduction of the Army was Gen. John A. Logan, at that time chairman of the House Committee on Military Affairs. The following extract from his speech on that occasion will illustrate his position on the question at issue:

We know, sir, whenever there is an attempt made to reduce the Army, however much it may be to the interest of the country, we are always met with serious opposition. * * * We (the Committee on Military Affairs) believe in a government like ours that the military arm should never be stronger than absolute necessity requires.

Mr. President, a reduction of the standing Army at the close of hostilities has been the invariable rule. This is the first time in the history of the country that the President of the United States ever desired or urged an increase of the standing Army, and this, too, at the close of a war which lasted but a few days, with a weak power, that surrendered after a single battle on land, which would have been considered only a small skirmish as compared with the battles of the civil war.

With no hostile power upon the sea, with no threat from any other source on this earth, President McKinley is the first President of the United States, in this condition, with only this rebellion in Manila on his hands, who comes and asks us for a hundred thousand men.

A hundred thousand men, Mr. President! Why, already we have given him, at the cost of several millions of dollars, an increase of marines in the Navy, who at least can be used effectively as infantry on shore. And that organization did great and gallant service in Cuba. Probably the most prominent action that took place was that fight of the marines at Guantanamo. We have given the President more officers and men in the Marine Corps than were in that corps during the war with Spain, nearly double the number we had during the war with England in 1812-14, more than twice the number that we had during the Mexican war.

These men he has permanently. And now comes this bill, which my friend from Missouri has indorsed so heartily, not giving the temporary use of a hundred thousand men, but absolutely attempting, as it does, to reorganize the Army so far as the number of officers in the staff department is concerned, and places in the Regular Army hereafter 10,000 or 11,000 additional men, bringing the Army on a peace basis, as proposed by this bill, up to 38,000 men, and leaving open the question after July 1, 1901, how many of the remaining temporary force of 95,000 shall be retained in the service.

I object to the bill, because that provision for the increase of the permanent Army ought not to have a place here. I object to the bill, because the attempt to reorganize and increase the staff of the Army ought not to be considered at this time, beyond the provision to give the Administration all the officers they want until 1901.

Mr. President, if the Senator from Wyoming and the Senators in charge of the bill will place in the very last section of the measure what I supposed was there until I read it this morning—

Mr. WARREN. May I interrupt the Senator?

Mr. GORMAN. Certainly.

Mr. WARREN. I desire to say that I am not in charge of the bill, but the question which I asked, and which remains unanswered, was whether the Senator did or did not think 27,000 was sufficient for a standing army. That embraces some of the points he has raised. I do not understand that we are making the staff any larger permanently than when the Army was but 25,000. Having the point before us that it takes over 20,000 men to man the coast defenses, and which coast defenses have been provided for largely through the efforts of the very able Senator from Maryland in his duties upon the Appropriation Committee, I, as a member of the Military Committee, wish to say it has never been questioned in our committee room that we needed more than 27,000 men for our regular standing Army. Though we may have differed, six one way and six the other, as the Senator says, yet I do not understand that there were six—or three—who ever thought that 25,000 or 27,000 would be a sufficient standing army hereafter.

The Senator from Maryland represents most ably a coast State, and I come from the interior. I want to know whether he considers 27,000 men enough after this war is over, because I want to know whether I shall follow him and continue voting money for coast fortifications which we do not expect to man, or whether we expect to man those fortifications with 20,000 men, thus taking all the troops we have for use on the coast, and leaving us without any in the interior or on the frontier. We have had no less in late years than 21,000 cavalry and infantry for interior and frontier use. Is it the idea to take all the troops from the interior and locate them on the coast? The purpose of my question is to know whether 27,000 troops will be enough in the estimation of the Senator for the standing Army of the nation. And I say parenthetically that so far as the staff are concerned, there will be no more regular officers under the proposed reorganization than with the Army of 25,000, as we used to have it.

Mr. TILLMAN. Will the Senator from Maryland allow me a moment?

Mr. GORMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. TILLMAN. I should like to ask the Senator from Wyoming whether the examinations before the Military Committee have shown that it takes the number of nineteen or twenty thousand, whichever he spoke of, to take care of the fortifications, so as to simply keep them in a state of preservation and keep the guns from rusting?

Mr. WARREN. That is the testimony of all the officers, I think.

Mr. TILLMAN. That, then, will not be a sufficient complement of artillery to use those guns?

Mr. WARREN. It would be sufficient to man and use the guns and machinery for an hour or two, or perhaps for a day, but there would be no reserve relief for the men—that is, if you were in a battle for any length of time, you could not relieve each man for rest or sleep as nature would require in any protracted attack.

Mr. TILLMAN. I suppose if there were a battle they would be cared for, or if there were a war we would supply the additional forces before the enemy could reach our shores. But I simply want to know if it is the purpose now of those who are contending for an increase of the Regular Army, that we should have a sufficient number of men to fight these guns or only enough to take care of them—to keep them from rusting, to keep them in good order, and to care for the machinery?

Mr. GORMAN. I answer I do not know; and I suggest, with great deference to the Senator from Wyoming, that he does not know.

Mr. WARREN. I am trying to find out.

Mr. GORMAN. And I doubt whether any Senator on this floor knows precisely how many men ought to be stationed at each of the great points we are fortifying in this country; and that is the gist of all I am saying on that phase of the measure—that you do not know to-day, the officers of the Army do not know, and no man yet knows just what that increase ought to be up to the point of absolute safety.

Mr. President, I live upon the coast, as the Senator from Wyoming has said. We have within 40 miles of this city great batteries with 8, 10, and 12 inch guns located on the Potomac River and also at Hawkins Point below Baltimore; and yet this war has demonstrated what? That no ship which flies the flag of any foreign nation would ever dare to enter the Potomac River and come within 10 miles of one of those guns or within 50 miles of the batteries in front of the city of Baltimore, for the reason that the developments in electricity, the improvements in mines and torpedoes, are such that no vessel of war would ever dare to approach them.

That has been the demonstration of this war. Admiral Sampson and Admiral Schley in front of Santiago did not enter that harbor, under the order of the Secretary of the Navy, because even the Spaniards, who are far inferior to us in mechanism and in the use of electricity and torpedoes, were so protected by mines that a ship of the American Navy dared not attempt to enter the harbor of Santiago. So it is upon our coast.

Who can state now, who has the right to speak for the American people or the American Congress and say, "We need 100 men or 500 men at Fort Washington?" I do not know; but we will give you all that the Chief Magistrate of the nation says he wants; all, and more than all, that the Commanding General of the Army says is necessary in this condition, and we are willing to provide that that force shall last four months beyond President McKinley's term.

So his successor, or the Congress which assembles in December next, may take up this question in detail, and if you can demonstrate the fact that the safety and the protection of the country from any foe require 40,000 additional men, the American people will gladly vote them. I would do so if I were here. But until I know by figures, by demonstration, and by argument, that such an increase of the Regular Army is absolutely necessary, I shall oppose it so long as I have a seat upon this floor.

Mr. President, the Senator in charge of this bill has asked the Senate, "Who is afraid of a regular army, a large standing army?" I answer him that every State in the Union—Connecticut, Maryland, and all the States—have inserted provisions in their constitutions against a large standing army. There has never been a statesman who has occupied a page in American history who has not opposed it. I am opposed to it, because I have been taught to believe that a large standing army is contrary to the genius of our institutions. It has been the chief pride of the American nation that nearly 75,000,000 people can conduct their Government without subjecting themselves to bayonet rule or taxing their substance to keep a large and useless standing army in time of peace.

Mr. President, I fear a standing army. I have seen the great captain of a million men, in 1876, after he had passed away from the military branch of the Government and become President of the United States, and having himself voluntarily reduced the Army, order, through his then Lieutenant-General, batteries and companies to Washington at a time when there was great political excitement and when the Presidency itself was in the balance. Those few companies, not over 600 men all told, were ordered suddenly to Washington. When the history of those times shall be truthfully written, it will be satisfactorily shown that the presence of even that small military force was enough to awe men who had to deal with the grave question then demanding solution. Happily that question was settled, as I think and believe all great questions can be settled, by the Congress of the United States. I remember that scene and remember the quiet intimidation of it.

I can not agree to give the opportunity, I can not agree to place in the hands of any man, no matter how conservative he may be, no matter how democratic—and I mean that in the broad sense—he may be in his views, no matter how much he may be attached to the institutions of his country—I can not agree to give him great military power. The temptation to use it improperly is too great, and human nature is too weak to be thus tempted.

Mr. President, I am asked to have confidence in President McKinley. I have great respect for him as an individual, and I have no special criticism to make upon his conduct of this war, except that out of his good nature or otherwise, he has permitted weakness in his Departments. Inefficiency has permeated more than one place. If it be not shown to be something worse, as an American citizen I will rejoice.

Time alone will tell whether it is something worse or not, but I have seen nothing, absolutely nothing, in his recommendations or in the statements of his friends who are supposed to speak for him, to justify us in placing such enormous power in his hands. Remembering the action of the great President, General Grant, or that of President Polk, or that of any of his predecessors, I think we should trust the control of the Government of the United States to the American people, relying upon a small army and a well organized and disciplined militia, which have always been sufficient to protect and defend our country. President McKinley seemingly does not take that view. He is now entering upon a scheme which, in my judgment, when properly understood, will appall the country.

Why, Mr. President, with a Navy, which it now costs $60,000,000 to maintain in its present condition, with the fifty ships, large and small, on the stocks or under contract to be added to that Navy, and with another new addition coming, which will add ten or twelve ships more, costing three or four million dollars each, where will we stand in the money point of view? That in the present condition has not received much consideration, but it must be considered. We boast of being a free people without an Army, and yet we shall have an expenditure until 1900, in all probability, of $145,000,000 to maintain the Army; $80,000,000 for the Navy, and $150,000,000 on account of pensions and for the Soldiers' Homes, which can not be reduced, and for incidentals.

These items alone make an expenditure on account of the military branch of our Government under President McKinley and for the increase urged here of $369,000,000 per annum, a greater sum, Mr. President, than is expended by any Government on the face of the earth for such purposes; greater than was ever contemplated by the American people for the Army and Navy. There will be the expenditure of more money in each year until this Army is reduced than this Government expended for all purposes of every sort and description from 1856 to 1880. It is more than was expended for all governmental affairs—civil, Army and Navy, and pensions—between the year 1871, under Republican control, and 1876. It is greater than the expenditure has been at any time from 1876 down to and including 1891.

Mr. President, with such an expenditure, and with the other expenditures of this Government mounting up this year, including the interest on the public debt and the sinking fund, to $750,000,000—nearly $800,000,000 during the fiscal year—I ask you if it is not time to pause? I ask you if you intend to go on, when, as has been shown by a distinguished Representative from Illinois in another branch, Mr. CANNON, and moderately shown, that your deficiency will be $159,000,000 on the 1st of July next. Mr. President, it will be $179,000,000 to $180,000,000, for he was overmodest in the statement of the case against his own friends.

You have then got to face what? Increased taxation. You can get no more from the tariff. Your "open-door" and your acquisition policy have reduced the revenue from that source; and rates put up will not produce more revenue. That means a direct tax upon the individuals in this country or the issuance of more bonds or certificates of indebtedness.

All we ask is that you shall make this great burden, which you are about to place upon the American people, temporary; that you will not at this time, in the closing hours of the session, when we can not examine into the details, do more than provide the necessary legislation until 1901.

Mr. HAWLEY. I wish the Senator would allow me just there to read three lines of the bill.

Mr. GORMAN. With pleasure.

Mr. HAWLEY. The bill, on page 9, line 13, reads:

Provided further, That such increased regular and volunteer force shall continue in service only during the necessity therefor, and not later than July 1, 1901.

Mr. GORMAN. I should like to have some information on that point. Do I understand the Senator in charge of the bill, the chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs, to say now that that is the intention of the bill? Does he want to limit the expenditures under this bill to the year 1901?

Mr. HAWLEY. Why, most assuredly—the increased expenditure.

Mr. GORMAN. Very good. If that be true, Mr. President, I will read my amendment, and I hope the Senate will agree to it at once, because we are directly on that line. If the Senator will agree to this amendment, so far as I am concerned, I will stop talking and let the bill pass through in an hour. There can not be any mistake about this provision. It is as follows:

Provided, That each and every provision of this act shall continue in force until July 1, 1901, and on and after that date the officers and men, including general officers and staff officers, shall be restored to the rank and numbers as provided for by law prior to April 1, 1893, except the cadets appointed under this act prior to July 1, 1901, and except as provided for in the act to authorize two additional regiments of artillery, approved March 8, 1898.

That makes it perfectly plain that this is a temporary measure, and if the Senator will agree to have this provision placed in the last section of the bill I shall not have one word more to say, but will think that the Senator has rendered the country a service, and the bill will have been placed in the position in which I had a right to suppose it would be. Will the Senator accept that amendment?

Mr. HAWLEY. No.

Mr. GORMAN. No, Mr. President. The Senator will not accept it. I know not why.

Mr. HAWLEY. I know you do not; but I do.

Mr. GORMAN. I shall be glad to have the Senator tell me.

Mr. HAWLEY. The Senator does not know why I would not accept it. He knows why he wants to offer it.

Mr. GORMAN. I only know what the effect of the rejection of the amendment will be. I for one can not see any reason on the face of the earth why that proposition should be rejected.

Mr. WARREN. Will the Senator allow me a word there?

Mr. GORMAN. With pleasure.

Mr. WARREN. The Senator, as I understand by his amendment, proposes to turn the clock or the tide of events backward and do away with any improvements already made since the date he cites in his amendment. For instance, we struggled here for years for a three-battalion system in the infantry, as I explained in my speech the other day. It had gotten to a point where we were the only country in the world, except China, that had such an antiquated system of organization, and the reform of this is one of the things we have legislated upon since the date the Senator mentioned.

I do not believe the distinguished Senator from Maryland, notwithstanding there are accusations sometimes made that the party to which he belongs goes backward, is a nonprogressionist. I do not believe he knows what the effect of his amendment would be or he would not offer it. I only instance one item in the bill, but there are others which would be affected by adopting his amendment.

Mr. GORMAN. Well, Mr. President, the Senator will find out, I presume, that the country will not be misled by such statements as he has been making. There is but one question here: Do we intend at this session of Congress, without the opportunity of consideration, without the possibility of knowing what is right, to change the organization of the Army and to increase the standing Army so that it will require the action of all branches of the Government to undo it, or will the Senate agree to the proposition I make and give the President of the United States, just as we did in April last, when we declared war against Spain, all the money and all the men and every needed facility to put down the rebellion in the Philippines and control the islands below us?

Mr. TILLMAN. Will the Senator from Maryland allow me to ask a question?

Mr. GORMAN. With pleasure.

Mr. TILLMAN. Why is it necessary that we should have regulars to put down a rebellion in the Philippines, when the rebellion in this country—some people call it a rebellion, but I never acknowledged it to be such—was put down by volunteers?

Mr. GORMAN. Mr. President, in the late war and in all wars—

Mr. TILLMAN. Perhaps I did not make myself clear to the Senator. This is a rebellion now in the Philippines, and we need regulars to put it down. The civil war, or the great rebellion, was put down by volunteers. The Spanish war for liberty was put down by volunteers. Now, is it not a commentary upon the existing situation that we do not dare try to put down the rebellion in the Philippines with volunteers?

Mr. GORMAN. Mr. President, I myself think the suggestion of the Senator is quite right, but that is not the real case. It is not a question of destroying the Filipinos. We shoot them down, and dispatches have come to us stating that we mow them down like grass. Dewey will shell them out of every jungle.

Mr. TILLMAN. But the guns do not reach any farther than about 12 miles inland.

Mr. GORMAN. No, but they will be supplemented by guns on shore. I have no doubt of the ability of the American people to go on and destroy most of the people on those islands. It may be expensive; it will cost a good many men and an immense amount of money; but that does not concern the real interests which are behind this bill. A provision is made in it for life officers. Ten thousand more soldiers are to be put in the Army so that officers may command them. They want commands so more people can wear shoulder straps.

If you look back in the records of this Congress since the little, small, insignificant war with Spain began—as I said a moment ago, with only a small skirmish at Santiago and two battles upon the ocean, which were far-reaching and great in their effect—you will find that you have passed more bills to promote Army officers, to put them on the rolls and give them increased pay, than were passed in the first year of the war of the rebellion, when all the people south of the Potomac were in arms against the Government. This has been an era of epaulets, and major-generals and brigadier-generals never were so plentiful in Washington. This army of officers alone would be sufficient to put down the Spanish army in Cuba, but very many of them did not get there. [Laughter.]

Mr. TILLMAN. The Senator means that the applicants were sufficient in number to put down the war with Spain.

Mr. GORMAN. I mean the men who were around Washington and who were appointed and promoted to positions here.

We passed one day a little measure for the gentlemen who are in the Army and who wanted to remain in Washington and keep as far away from the yellow fever in Cuba as possible. It is a simple little act, which came here from the committee, authorizing the appointment and promotion and advancement in the Quartermaster and Commissary Departments of officers of inferior rank to any grade in that department.

Seventeen of them were promoted. Some of them from lieutenants to colonels, some from majors to lieutenant-colonels; nothing higher than a colonel, it seems. There were 17 of them in one department; there were 29 of them in the Quartermaster's Department. The increase in compensation was about one-third greater than their previous pay. Many of them were here in Washington and never went away. This was so flagrant that the pending bill, as I understand, contains a provision to repeal that act authorizing these appointments. They were not only to last during the war—the officers who were in the field and were fighting went out at the termination of the war—but under that provision of law they were to remain one year after the declaration of peace to close up affairs and to be here to urge upon Congress an increase in the standing Army.

Mr. President, I am not going back to criticize the Administration or the hasty legislation of Congress. It has been hasty. It has been in volume greater than at any other period when we were at war, and in a great war. What I ask is that when you fix this permanent establishment, you fix it yourselves, fix it after deliberation, fix it when you have time to do it. My friend the Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR] was a distinguished Secretary of War. Differing with him as I do, and as widely as men can differ, in politics, I say give him the opportunity to put in form the suggestion he made in his speech the other day about organizing the War Department, with its various chiefs of divisions, so that we may have efficiency and intelligence.

It is not in this bill. My friend the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] said "Pass the bill, and it will remain for twenty years." If that be true, it is another and a sounder reason why we should defeat it. I would not like to see the organization of the War Department remain another year. I trust the Senator from Vermont, with his experience in and his knowledge of that Department, will insist that opportunity shall be given every four years to select heads of bureaus as is done in the Navy, so that new life and vigor may be injected.

That Department never has been and it never can be organized under its present head so as to be efficient and vigorous—I will not say honest, because I believe these men to be honest. So far as I know, they are honest, but they are so inefficient, they are so advanced in age, that their want of capacity was most disastrous to the Army when it was in the field. I do not, Mr. President, include in this the Engineer Department, of which no adverse criticism has been made.

Mr. TILLMAN. I understand the Senator from Maryland, then, to say that we are not protected by this bill from any further scandals in regard to embalmed beef?

Mr. GORMAN. I do not know much, if anything, about embalmed beef.

Mr. TILLMAN. None of us know yet. We have been reading it in the papers, and we have got an idea that we can almost smell it.

Mr. GORMAN. I am perfectly familiar with the statements of the day. For this Department, organized as it is, Secretary Alger, whatever may be said of him, is not responsible.

Mr. TILLMAN. I did not intend, if the Senator will excuse me, by my utterance to cast any reflection upon the Secretary.

Mr. GORMAN. None at all. I did not mean that.

Mr. TILLMAN. I am simply trying to express in a feeble way my belief that the Senator from Vermont knows where the cancer is, and we ought to cut it out now.

Mr. GORMAN. I did not intend to apply my remarks to the Senator from South Carolina. I want to say in passing, because Secretary Alger is a very much abused man (I do not know enough about the facts to express an opinion), that the Secretary of War is not responsible for that Department with its present heads of bureaus. The law fixes them. They are promoted and appointed for life.

This is not the first time in the history of the country that the same conditions have been found. In the war of the rebellion the same conditions and the want of power to change every four years, as it is in the Navy Department, destroyed absolutely a Secretary of War. It forced him from the Cabinet. They were compelled to bring up a captain and make him Quartermaster-General, and to change other heads of the Department in order to make it efficient.

The same thing precisely occurred then that has occurred now. There is no way to relieve it except by adopting the suggestion made by the Senator from Vermont—to give the head of the Department the right to select from the corps the most efficient man, so far as concerns brains and activity and executive ability, he can find, and change him every four years. When this reorganization bill passes that provision ought to be a foundation stone of the reorganization.

Both the Senator from Vermont and I know that in these closing hours of the session it is impossible to accomplish that with all the influence Army officers have—and it is great in Washington—with their social life, being brought in contact with Senators and Members of Congress. The Senator from Vermont has a great struggle in front of him to overcome the influence which will be brought to bear to prevent action of that sort; but it ought to be done. If it can not be done, the reorganization ought not to be attempted or any increase in number made until we can go thoroughly into the matter.

Mr. President, if there were nothing else in the whole scheme except that, I should oppose any attempt to change the staff department of the Army until we shall have had time to examine the matter thoroughly. I regret that we can not agree upon a temporary measure. I regret that what I supposed was a success has turned out to be a failure. I regret that this power that wants life appointments and a permanent army overshadows every other consideration.

I regret that, in these closing hours of the session, we could not devote the remainder of our time, after an agreement upon this matter for temporary service only, to the other questions which confront us. The appropriations for the support of the Government go through, as I have said, as never before in any other Administration in the last sixty years, without criticism, without much examination as to amounts or the class of expenditures. They will be rushed through, leaving a fearful responsibility upon the President and the heads of Departments for the economy they shall exercise and the carefulness with which they expend these millions and millions and millions of dollars.

I should like to have seen some other measures considered looking to the relief of our people, the expansion of our commerce, and the development of our country. Nine or ten hundred million dollars for war and destruction can be brought back in part and rapidly by increased commerce, by increased facilities for commerce. Yet questions of the character we are discussing block the way of progress in Congress and make it impossible to give our people additional opportunity for trade.

It does seem to me the height of unwisdom. Mr. President, if there were a proposition or suggestion on this side to embarrass the Administration, to prevent it from suppressing the rebellion which that branch of the Government has made possible, I ought to say for which it is responsible, then I could understand the position of our friends on the other side of the Chamber and their placing in jeopardy everything else, because the honor of the nation would be involved.

But no such condition exists. Name the number of men, if a hundred thousand are not sufficient; fix the sum of money that you intend to expend, limited only as to the time, and run that beyond the present Administration. On the other hand, if with no time to consider the interests of our country, with no time to consider the details of the measure, this matter is pressed and pressed to the exclusion of all other interests, let the responsibility be taken by the gentlemen who advocate it.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President, the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] is always plausible and forceful in his remarks. During his eloquent speech to which we have just listened everyone must have been deeply touched with the pathetic solicitude manifested by him for the fate of the present Administration of the National Government. In voice touched even with tears the Senator from Maryland predicted what might befall this Administration if in a moment of recklessness it should fail to follow his advice.

Anyone stepping in from the outside and unadvised as to the conditions preceding this hour and surrounding us now would from his remarks be impressed with the idea that all the colleagues of the Senator from Maryland, save and except a few, had become bent upon the destruction of the liberties of their countrymen by a needless, reckless, and extravagant increase in the standing army, which was destined to be a menace to the public good.

Again, this bystander would be led to believe in the pathetic words of the Senator from Maryland that we had undertaken in the closing hours of Congress, when matters from all directions were pressing for attention, to foist upon an unwilling people an unnecessary armed force, spirited through under boot and spur and without any existing necessity whatever. Again, this bystander, stepping in from the outside, would be led to expect that there existed in this Chamber, and upon the part of the Administration for the time being intrusted with the Federal Government, a desire to recklessly and needlessly increase the burden of taxation upon the people.

This bystander would likewise, accepting his version of what has happened within the last year, be led to believe that this country had been hopelessly humiliated in the war with Spain; that through the incompetence of people at the head of the Army and in the Department, perchance through the cowardice of men in the field, this great Republic for the first time in its history had suffered humiliation in conflict before the eyes of the civilized world.

Mr. President, these conclusions would be misleading to the bystander. The facts are that the conditions which imperatively demand the maintenance of a considerable force in our Army evolved from circumstances and events not of our seeking. One month before this country, responding to humanity's call, declared war against the Kingdom of Spain, profound peace prevailed throughout this broad and highly favored land of ours. The only evidence of unrest anywhere to be found was in the vigorous, healthy competition of men in the walks of peace.

In the commercial, financial, and industrial life of this country there was a month before that war began a spirit of emulation, a spirit of rivalry breeding a certain sort of healthful unrest. The country had just emerged from a period of marked depression, somewhat enlightened by experience, but undaunted in courage. From one end of the country to the other and in every walk of life activity of a most pronounced character prevailed. In the busy hours of the passing day no one stopped to inquire where the Army was, or of what it consisted, or who was managing it. The Army had been left to its officers and the Department, and was only brought to the notice of Congress as the annual appropriations for its maintenance were passed in a perfunctory way.

Mr. President, this was the condition to which the armed forces of the United States had become minimized in the opening days of 1898, and yet thousands, yea millions, of our countrymen had been soldiers in the ranks. Within the period of thirty-five years unhappily one section of this country had been desolated by war. Yet so naturally and so quickly did our countrymen abandon the ways of war for the ways of peace that within the period of thirty-five years the military spirit was confined to the army posts and the Military Academy at West Point. In the light of this experience of forty years of our history, who can now be heard to say that the liberties of these people must stand menaced by militarism?

Mr. President, the American people have demonstrated in the last forty years, as in the years preceding, that their greatest ambition for achievement rests in the line of science, industry, and art. Recall, if you please, the magnificent exhibition made at Chicago a few years ago. Witness, if you please, the exposition held in the city of Omaha last year. Witness, if you please, the effort which is being made to get up a great industrial exposition at the city of Buffalo. Witness the effort now being made for a great industrial exposition in the city of St. Louis. The man who witnesses these things aright will determine that operations come to us as a necessity and not in obedience to a desire.

The present situation evolves from the war with Spain. War with Spain evolved from the quickened conscience of an outraged country, responding to the demands of an oppressed people for a right to live and breathe God's pure air as their birthright entitled them to breathe it.

The war with Spain did not spring, I imagine, from any desire to engage in a magnificent crusade of arms. The President of the United States sought in a manner that provoked most caustic criticism from some quarters at the time to prevent involving his Administration in the turmoil and horrors of war. His Administration evolved from a great economic contest that was fought over in every village, school district, and town in the United States.

It was not an Administration brought into being for the purpose of inaugurating a crusade nor of establishing a great military power. If we may judge men aright by their words and their actions, the President of the United States looked with the most serious concern upon the disturbance of the peace or the interjection of war into the term through which he was to pass.

Senators who are now seeking peace at any price, even in the form of a disgraceful retreat from the Philippines, within a twelvemonth were applying the lash of criticism to the President of the United States because he was seeking to avoid war by exhausting diplomatic processes for that purpose.

Now, Mr. President, the war has closed, and our arms, contrary to the suspicion that would arise from the remarks of the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN], were generally victorious; and notwithstanding the remarks of the Senator from Nebraska, this great victory, which humiliated the power of Spain, was achieved with the least loss of life in camp, hospital, and field that ever occurred in the history of man in a war between two nations for a like period of time.

Let us take the written record, contested by no one and incontestable by anyone, and see what it says. I will read from the report of the Adjutant-General of the Army for the year 1898. I will refer Senators to page 21 of that document for the facts. It shows the grand total of casualties in killed and wounded during the war with Spain. I will read only the totals, asking that the details be inserted as a part of my remarks.

The total number of officers killed during that war was 23, all told; of enlisted men, 257; officers wounded, 113; enlisted men wounded, 1,464.

The number of deaths from all causes between May 1 and September 30, inclusive, as reported to the Adjutant-General's Office up to October 3, were: Killed, officers 23, enlisted men 257; died of wounds, officers 4, enlisted men 61; died of disease, 80 officers, 2,485 enlisted men, a total of 107 officers and 2,803 men, being an aggregate of 2,910 out of a total force of 274,717 officers and men, or a percentage of 1.059, a less percentage than the death rate in the Tropics, in which the men were serving, if the people were there under normal conditions.

The table referred to is as follows:

Grand total of casualties in killed and wounded during the war with Spain.

Locality.	Killed.		Wounded.
	Officers.	Enlisted men.	Officers.	Enlisted men.
Cuba.....	23	257	99	1,332
Porto Rico.....	3	3	4	36
Manila.....	17	17	10	96
Total.....	23	257	113	1,464

The number of deaths from all causes between May 1 and September 30, inclusive, as reported to the Adjutant-General's Office up to October 3, were—

	Officers.	Enlisted men.
Killed.....	23	257
Died of wounds.....	4	61
Died of disease.....	80	2,485
Total.....	107	2,803

being an aggregate of 2,910 out of a total force of 274,717 officers and men, or a percentage of 1.059.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President, these mute figures, the witnesses to be consulted by the historian, tell their tale, and the vaporings that seemingly controvert them with success for this moment will pass away as the mist in the presence of the uncontradicted truth.

Mr. President, so much for the war with Spain. The victory was great, but, like all great successes in life, whether in the history of individuals or nations, great responsibilities came with it. We captured within one summer 2,000 islands, distributed in the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans. In those islands were destroyed the last vestige of Spanish power. The Spanish Government was the only recognized governing force in the islands when we approached them in the prosecution of the war. Then came the negotiations for peace.

If there was one proposition more firmly established in the minds of the people of this country than another, it was that, whatsoever might be the fate of those liberated people, they should not be returned to the dominion of Spain. What, then, was the United States to do with them? Would we have been justified in turning the Filipinos, the Cubans, and the Porto Ricans, or any of them, loose as anarchy-ridden political derelicts, drifting about the Pacific and Atlantic oceans?

Mr. President, such cowardly and base action as that would have constituted the national crime of all the centuries. It would have been a base refusal to perform a clear and well-defined national obligation, an obligation not only to the inhabitants of those islands, but to the family of nations in which we live and of whom we expect, if need be, intend to extort, the respect due a great Christian power.

Having accepted for the time being jurisdiction and sovereignty, we are confronted as a first and as an absolutely unavoidable duty by the demand for the establishment and maintenance of law and order within the islands.

To do less than that would be to do less than our duty. To do less than that would be to fail to respond to the clear aspirations of the American people. No one can tell what rests beyond, but every American, be he in or out of official life, must to-day recognize the fact that the duty rests with the people of the United States to establish law and order in Cuba, Porto Rico, and the Philippines.

We found varying conditions of civilization in those islands, the highest order existing in Cuba and Porto Rico. In those islands the people recognized the fact that they were not in a condition to suddenly establish a government capable of discharging the obligations, internal and external, of an orderly state. In the Philippine Islands we found conditions of civilization ranging from the college professor in his chair at Manila to the wild pigmy near the mountain tops.

Some of the people who had followed our Navy down there had reached out and organized a rebellious force. It was believed by many that their purpose was to follow up the war by looting the city of Manila and the other civilized centers within the islands. Whatsoever may have been their purpose, they were not a government. We constitute the only authority there. We are responsible to the Almighty, to ourselves, and to the nations of the earth to preserve peace and order and respect for person and property while we remain there.

What may be done, Mr. President, after order shall have been restored no man can at this moment, with any degree of certainty, predict. He who would call this movement to establish law and order and respect for our flag in the Philippines an aggressive movement to expand our territory deals in misnomers calculated but to deceive the public mind.

We will take one step at a time in this matter, Mr. President. We will first perform the duty of the hour, and there breathes not a man in this Chamber to-night who would have us retreat in disgrace and disorder or surrender the flag of the United States to Aguinaldo and the insurgents who wantonly fired upon it.

Guided by the intelligence and the conscience of this country, we will take another step when the light becomes clearer and the duty is made plain. I am not prepared to say what position I will take under conditions of which I know naught. The ignorance prevailing throughout this country concerning those distant islands is great indeed. What must be the ignorance prevailing throughout the islands with reference to the people of the United States? There is not more than a temporary misunderstanding, a misconception of our purposes and aims, on the part of the Filipinos. In due course of time the light of better information will dissipate this misunderstanding, and law and order will reign supreme throughout the Philippine Islands.

Yea, Mr. President, in due course of time, and the day is not far distant, on each one of these liberated islands the people will meet on the regular holiday prescribed and celebrate the landing of the American troops on the islands as the birthday of freedom for them.

As I stated a moment ago, a serious duty, an unavoidable obligation, springs out of these conditions. The commanding general in the Philippines says that he requires 30,000 troops at least. Who is to be heard to say that his estimate is too great? Who will be heard to deny that a strong force is liable to produce by its very presence a condition of peace where a weak force would invite disorder and assault? If 30,000 troops are needed by General Otis in the Philippines, do not send him 29,000; rather send him 31,000.

It is conceded, Mr. President, that the great armaments along the seacoast, which we have been erecting at enormous cost, delicately constructed guns having splendid mechanism connected with them, require constant attention in order to avoid needless and wasteful decay. The officers of the Army claim that 21,000 men are necessary in order to take care of these seacoast defenses. I realize that the General of the Army thinks that 15,000 men might do this work. The General of the Army has made the lowest estimate furnished by anyone claiming to be conversant with the subject-matter. Then let us take 30,000 in the Philippines and the estimate of General Miles as to the coast defenses, and you have 45,000 men.

Take the island of Cuba with its six provinces, and it is claimed that we need 2,000 men to each one of those states or provinces, making 12,000 men. That would be 57,000 men on the Philippines and Cuba, with no provision made for Hawaii or Porto Rico.

So, Mr. President, when just arrangements are made for needed relief, you have the whole 65,000 men taken up that are provided for in this bill for the Regular Army as increased.

But, Mr. President, beyond that we have established throughout this country a series of military posts, places which the wisdom of Congress has directed should be established for the Regular Army. I can speak more intelligently of my own State than of other States. There is not a military post in Montana which is not a necessity. If any question exists upon this point, I call attention to a memorial of the legislature of the State of Montana, which I hold in my hand, passed by that body and certified to by the secretary of state on the 11th day of February, 1899, which I ask permission to insert in the RECORD as a part of my remarks. I will state its substance merely.

This memorial proceeds to say that, observing there were no troops at any of the military posts in that State, the 12,000 Indians living in Montana have begun to roam about the country, becoming impertinent, invading the homes of people and insolently demanding support, refusing to comply with the request of their agents to remain upon, or when absent to return to, their reservations. These conditions existing in that Northwestern country have been duplicated in the Southwest.

The memorial referred to is as follows:

Joint memorial No. 1.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Whereas, owing to the fact that the Indians resident upon reservations within the State of Montana are allowed to and do habitually make a practice of leaving their reservations in large numbers and roaming over the country, and in and through settled and cultivated portions of the State, to the terror and annoyance of the people of Montana and to the wholesale and useless destruction of the game of the State, such Indians are a continual menace to the peace of the people of Montana and the preservation of the game of the State, and commit numerous depredations and violations of law and disturbances of families and communities, and uselessly slaughter and destroy every year great quantities of game; and

Whereas it is impracticable and often impossible for the civil authorities of Montana to prevent or punish such acts by such Indians and an attempt so to do would be attended by great and unjustifiable cost and expense: Therefore be it

Resolved, That we, your memorialists, the legislative assembly of the State of Montana, respectfully represent that we ask the Congress of the United States to enact proper and effective legislation to prevent all of such acts by Indians in the State of Montana and to make it unlawful for Indians resident upon reservations in the State of Montana to ever at any time or for any purpose leave or be found off of their reservations, and to enact such measures as will stringently enforce such legislation. It is by us

Further resolved, That the secretary of state of Montana be, and he is hereby, ordered to furnish a copy of this memorial to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

A. E. SPRIGGS, President of the Senate.
HENRY C. STIFF, Speaker of the House.

Approved February 11, 1899, at 10.45 o'clock a. m.

ROBT. B. SMITH, Governor.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President, at the breaking out of this war a regiment of troops was removed from near the Kiowa and Comanche reservations, and before they had gone 100 miles the War Department was compelled to send them back, because Geronimo and his band of Apache Indians had determined to take advantage of their absence and to do business on their own account. To leave the Army posts untenanted by withdrawing the Regular Army from the Indian country is to invite disaster where peace will remain and abide if we leave the ordinary force there to command the peace.

Now, Mr. President, no one will pretend to figure out that the garrisons in the West can be taken care of with less than 25,000 men. I have a statement here showing the military posts that are to be taken care of. Why, sir, since 1885 we have invested in improving those posts $10,938,201.64. We have as an approximate estimate of the total value invested in those posts to-day $23,371,548.47. Fort Myer, across the river, overlooking the capital of the country, with more than $2,000,000 worth of property subject to destruction by fire, is to-night in charge of 3 men and 32 sick men.

A post in my own State that cost the Government $400,000 in good money paid out within four years, is to-night in charge of two men and a few sick men who are left there. This statement might be repeated with reference to this kind of governmental property all over the United States. Is it possible that we are so apprehensive that the liberties of the people will be subverted by an army that we dare not stay the hand of destruction from our own property?

Again, Mr. President, it is necessary to garrison those posts and to maintain the garrisons, because it is a fact well known, and nowhere questioned by men who have investigated, that troops can only serve in the Tropics for a limited period of time. If we send 30,000 troops to Manila to-day, inside of nine months we shall have to transport every man of them back here to a temperate climate to recuperate, and we shall have to send 30,000 more down in their places. This will not all occur at once, but there will be a gradual exchanging from the temperate zone to the Tropics.

This shows that the men who are in the garrisons on the American continent to-day will twelve months hence, if need be, be in service down in the Philippine Islands, in Cuba, or in Porto Rico, as the case may be.

This number of 25,000, for home garrison, added to those indispensably necessary for the Philippines, Cuba, Porto Rico, and Hawaii, will bring this army up to about 92,000 men. I believe that is the exact number.

Now, Mr. President, another fact. It is well known that at least one-fifth of an army is at all times and under the most favorable conditions unable to respond for active duty. Sickness, leaves of absence, unavoidable absence from one cause and another, will reduce the ranks one-fifth, so that a company of 100 men is in splendid condition if 80 men regularly respond to the roll call for duty every morning. So we would not have, under the provisions of this bill, excluding the sick, the absent, and those unable to perform military duty of an active character, a sufficient number of men to fill out the quota prescribed by the War Department and by the most enlightened men of the Army as absolutely necessary to perform imperative service.

The Senator from Maryland suggests that this will involve great expense and that it is placing in the hands of the President of the United States an enormous power. Granted. Will you disgrace this nation and put a brand upon it for all the centuries by telegraphing General Otis and Admiral Dewey to-night to humiliate the nation by withdrawing from the Philippines? There can not be found upon this continent a man so base or incapable of comprehending his country's duty as to answer "yes" to that question.

Then, sir, it behooves us, regardless of party, regardless of section, regardless of the future of political factions, to unite as American citizens to discharge the duty of this hour in such manner that the benedictions of posterity will justly fall upon our heads.

The suggestion of the Senator from Maryland that the President might abuse the power conferred upon him falls flat and discredited to the ground in the presence of the fact that this same President, within the last four months, has reduced the Army of the United States in the volunteer and regular service from nearly 300,000 men down to about 120,000, all told. In view of the fact cited and the knowledge that to-day numerous regiments of the Volunteer Army are being mustered out of the service of the United States, it is only rational to assume that no man in this Chamber will be more gratified with the approach of the day that the Army can be reduced than will the President, if we may judge the future by the past.

Mr. President, this situation called forth the splendid burst of patriotic eloquence which came from the lips of the senior Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] this afternoon. I can add nothing to his lucid analysis of the details of the pending bill. In his own words, "In the sight of God and his fellow-countrymen," he sees his duty and is willing to accept all the responsibility for it. He made that statement knowing the Regular Army was not authorized to be increased one single man more than necessity required. Who can be found who would refuse to increase it that much? He knew that this bill did not provide for the enlistment of a single volunteer unless necessity required it. Conceding the necessity, who would deny the right and still, standing under the Stars and Stripes, claim to be a worthy citizen of the country?

Mr. President, something was said about the expense of maintaining this army. My theory is that if an adequate army is pushed to the front and handled vigorously this situation will be under control within a few months, and many of these troops can be discharged. God knows we all hope that that result may follow; but, as we are now about to adjourn and repair to our respective homes, is it not best that we should leave the coordinate branch of the Government in condition to maintain the rights of the United States, respect for its flag, and all that our present situation imposes upon us?

The next Congress may increase this Regular Army, suggests the Senator from Maryland. So it may be said with equal force that the next Congress may obliterate the Army altogether. What we insist now is that there shall be left in the hands of the President of the United States, during the vacation about to begin, an army adequate for all the necessities of the service in this country and elsewhere in so far as we can foresee the contingencies. If next autumn we find that the President has disbanded the volunteers and reduced the Regular Army, we shall be gratified. If, on the other hand, we should leave him without an adequate force and disaster should come to our arms in the Philippines or elsewhere, we should certainly have reason to feel, whether we so felt or not, a twinge of conscience from duty unperformed, a dereliction for which we could not readily excuse ourselves.

I have here a list of the Army posts of the United States and the cost of each post. I likewise have a statement of the various coast batteries, and I ask unanimous consent to insert them as a part of my remarks. They contain useful information that may be of service to us.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask that they may be also printed as a separate document.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CHILTON in the chair). Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Montana? The Chair hears none, and that order is made.

The statements referred to are as follows:

Statement showing approximately expenditures on interior posts constructed since 1885 to February 20, 1899.

Post.	Amount.
Fort Bliss, Tex.	$658,280.04
Fort Brady, Mich.	273,473.92
Columbus Barracks, Ohio (reconstruction)	330,820.45
Fort Crook, Nebr.	722,805.01
Fort Ethan Allen, Vt.	590,714.64
Fort Harrison, Mont.	306,271.92
Jefferson Barracks, Mo. (reconstruction)	503,653.94
Fort Leavenworth, Kans. (reconstruction)	841,007.18
Fort Logan, Colo.	621,942.38
Fort Logan H. Roots, Ark.	224,134.77
Madison Barracks, N. Y.	896,736.16
Fort McPherson, Ga.	719,299.43
Fort Myer, Va.	554,800.43
Plattsburg Barracks, N. Y.	661,225.16
Fort Riley, Kans. (reconstruction)	1,106,735.52
Fort Sheridan, Ill.	1,317,071.20
New post near Spokane, Wash.	165,497.71
Fort Thomas, Ky.	702,119.08
Fort Yellowstone, Wyo.	127,441.41
Fort Sam Houston, Tex. (including department headquarters and quartermaster depot); total	705,132.00
Total	10,908,201.04

Statement showing approximate value of all improvements at each of the military posts not abandoned.

Fort Adams, R. I.	$175,000.00
Fort Barrancas, Fla.	75,000.00
Fort Columbus, N. Y.	150,000.00
Columbus Barracks, Ohio	500,000.00
Fort Ethan Allen, Vt.	590,714.00
Governors Island, N. Y.	90,000.00
Fort Hamilton, N. Y.	175,000.00
Jackson Barracks, La.	75,000.00
Koy West Barracks, Fla.	75,000.00
Madison Barracks, N. Y.	500,000.00
Fort McHenry, Md.	200,000.00
Fort McPherson, Ga.	719,299.43

Statement showing approximate value of all improvements at each of the military posts not abandoned—Continued.

Fort Myer, Va.	600,000.00
Fort Niagara, N. Y.	150,000.00
Plattsburg Barracks, N. Y.	700,000.00
Fort Porter, N. Y.	250,000.00
Fort Preble, Me.	50,000.00
St. Francis Barracks, Fla.	75,000.00
Fort Schuyler, N. Y.	75,000.00
Fort Slocum, N. Y.	500,000.00
Fort Thomas, Ky.	702,119.08
Fort Trumbull, Conn.	40,000.00
Fort Wadsworth, N. Y.	120,000.00
Fort Warren, Mass.	80,000.00
Washington Barracks, D. C.	225,000.00
West Point, N. Y.	1,000,000.00
Willetts Point, N. Y.	280,000.00
Fort Brady, Mich.	273,473.92
Jefferson Barracks, Mo.	700,000.00
Fort Leavenworth, Kans.	1,000,000.00
Fort Reno, Ind. T.	150,000.00
Fort Riley, Kans.	1,200,000.00
Fort Sheridan, Ill.	1,317,071.21
Fort Sill, Okla.	175,000.00
Fort Wayne, Mich.	275,000.00
Fort Logan H. Roots, Ark.	224,134.77
Fort Assiniboine, Mont.	400,000.00
Fort Harrison, Mont.	306,271.92
Fort Keogh, Mont.	200,000.00
Fort Snelling, Minn.	600,000.00
Fort Yates, N. Dak.	50,000.00
Fort Yellowstone, Wyo.	140,000.00
Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo.	350,000.00
Fort Crook, Nebr.	722,805.01
Fort Robinson, Nebr.	500,000.00
Fort Washakie, Wyo.	275,000.00
Fort Niobrara, Nebr.	250,000.00
Fort Meade, S. Dak.	150,000.00
Fort Apache, Ariz.	175,000.00
Fort Bayard, N. Mex.	60,000.00
Fort Du Chesne, Utah.	300,000.00
Fort Douglas, Utah.	150,000.00
Fort Grant, Ariz.	140,000.00
Fort Huachuca, Ariz.	621,942.38
Fort Logan, Colo.	50,000.00
Fort Wingate, N. Mex.	358,280.04
Fort Bliss, Tex.	150,000.00
Fort Brown, Tex.	300,000.00
Fort Clark, Tex.	25,000.00
Camp Eagle Pass, Tex.	50,000.00
Fort McIntosh, Tex.	90,000.00
Fort Ringgold, Tex.	600,000.00
Fort Sam Houston, Tex., and Headquarters Department of Texas	60,000.00
Alcatraz Island, Cal.	150,000.00
Angel Island, Cal.	60,000.00
Benicia Barracks, Cal.	40,000.00
Fort Mason, Cal.	800,000.00
Presidio of San Francisco, Cal.	10,000.00
San Diego Barracks, Cal.	40,000.00
Boise Barracks, Idaho	80,000.00
Fort Sherman, Idaho	100,000.00
Fort Spokane, Wash.	250,000.00
Vancouver Barracks, Wash.	100,000.00
Fort Walla Walla, Wash.	195,437.71
Spokane, Wash., new post near	75,000.00
Seattle, new post near	22,371,548.47
Total

EXHIBIT A.

Table showing the artillery force needed to furnish one relief for the guns of the coast armament actually installed June 30, 1899, strength of the battery being 100 men.

Harbors and posts.	Armament actually installed June 30, 1899.	Batteries of artillery to man those guns.
Atlantic coast.
Kennebec River, Maine.	1 8-inch gun, on old mount	1
Portland:
Fort Preble.	16 mortars (12-inch).	2
Portland Head.	5 guns (10-inch) and 1 rapid-fire (6-inch).	2
Great Diamond Island.	6 mortars, 2 guns (12-inch), 8 guns (8-inch), and 4 R. F. guns.	5
Cushing Island.	2 guns (12-inch), 2 guns (10-inch), and 3 R. F. guns.	3
Portsmouth:
Fort Constitution.	2 guns (8-inch).	1
Jerry's Point.	2 guns (8-inch).	1
Gerrish Island.	3 guns (10-inch).	2
Boston:
Grover's Cliff.	16 mortars and 3 guns (12-inch).	4
Long Island Head.	5 guns (10-inch) and 4 R. F. guns.	3
Paddocks Island.	8 mortars (12-inch).	1
Nantucket Head.	2 guns (12-inch) and 2 R. F. guns.	2
Fort Warren.	2 guns (12-inch), 5 guns (10-inch), and 5 R. F. guns.	5
Clarke Point.	2 guns (8-inch) and 2 R. F. guns.	2
Fort Adams.	16 mortars, 2 guns (10-inch), 1 gun (8-inch), and 1 R. F. gun.	4
Fort Greble.	8 mortars, 3 guns (10-inch), and 3 R. F. guns.	3
The Dumpings.	2 guns (12-inch) and 2 R. F. guns.	1
Napatree Point.	2 guns (8-inch) and 2 R. F. guns.	2
Fishers Island.	2 guns (12-inch) and 2 guns (10-inch).	2
Great Gull Island.	2 guns (12-inch) and 2 guns (10-inch).	2
Plum Island.	8 mortars, 2 guns (10-inch), and 1 R. F. gun.	2
Gardiners Point.	2 guns (8-inch) and 2 R. F. guns.	1
Fort Slocum.	16 mortars and 1 gun (8-inch).	2

Table showing the artillery force needed, etc.—Continued.

Harbors and posts.	Armament actually installed June 30, 1899.	Batteries of artillery to man these guns.
Atlantic coast—Cont'd.
Fort Schuyler .....	2 guns (12-inch), 2 guns (10-inch), and 2 R. F. guns.	3
Willels Point .....	8 mortars, 2 guns (12-inch), 2 guns (10-inch), 2 guns (8-inch), and 4 R. F.	4
Fort Wadsworth .....	4 guns (12-inch), 4 guns (10-inch), 7 guns (8-inch), and 6 R. F. guns.	8
Fort Hamilton .....	8 mortars, 4 guns (12-inch), 7 guns (10-inch), and 4 R. F. guns.	8
Fort Hancock .....	16 mortars, 6 guns (12-inch), 5 guns (10-inch), and 2 R. F. guns.	8
Fort Mott .....	3 guns (12-inch), 3 guns (10-inch), and 2 R. F. guns.	3
Fort Delaware .....	5 guns (12-inch) and 4 R. F. guns.	5
Battery Point .....	16 mortars, 2 guns (8-inch), and 2 guns (12-inch).	4
North Point .....	8 mortars, 2 guns (12-inch), and 4 R. F. guns.	3
Hawkins Point .....	1 gun (12-inch), 3 guns (8-inch), 4 R. F. guns.	2
Fort Carroll .....	2 guns (12-inch) and 4 R. F. guns.	2
Fort Washington .....	8 mortars, 7 guns (10-inch), and 4 R. F. guns.	4
Sheridan's Point .....	3 guns (8-inch) and 2 R. F. guns.	2
Fort Monroe .....	16 mortars, 3 guns (12-inch), 3 guns (10-inch), 5 guns (8-inch), and 3 R. F.	12
Fort Caswell .....	8 mortars, 2 guns (12-inch), 4 guns (8-inch), and 3 R. F. guns.	4
Sullivan's Island .....	16 mortars, 4 guns (10-inch), and 6 R. F. guns.	6
Fort Sumter .....	2 guns (12-inch) .....	1
Hilton Head .....	2 guns (8-inch) .....	1
St. Helena Island .....	3 guns (10-inch) and 2 R. F. guns.	2
Tybee Island .....	8 mortars, 2 guns (12-inch), 4 guns (8-inch), and 5 R. F. guns.	4
Fort Pulaski .....	1 gun (8-inch) and 2 R. F. guns.	1
Fort Clinch .....	1 gun (8-inch) .....	1
Jacksonville .....	2 guns (8-inch) .....	1
Key West .....	8 mortars, 2 guns (12-inch), 4 guns (10-inch), 2 guns (8-inch), 6 R. F.	7
Gulf coast.
Mullet Key (Tampa) .....	8 mortars .....	1
Egmont Key .....	4 guns (8-inch) and 2 R. F. guns.	2
Fort Pickens .....	8 mortars, 2 guns (12-inch), 4 guns (10-inch), and 4 R. F. guns.	4
Fort McRae .....	2 guns (8-inch) and 2 R. F. guns.	1
Fort Morgan .....	8 mortars, 2 guns (12-inch), 4 guns (8-inch), and 4 R. F. guns.	4
Fort Gaines .....	2 guns (8-inch) .....	1
Fort St. Philip .....	2 guns (10-inch), 4 guns (8-inch), and 4 R. F. guns.	3
Fort Jackson .....	2 guns (8-inch) and 2 R. F. ....	1
Sabine Pass .....	1 gun (8-inch) .....	1
City Beach .....	8 mortars, 2 guns (10-inch), and 2 R. F. guns.	12
Bolivar Point .....	2 guns (8-inch) and 3 R. F. ....	1
Fort Point .....	8 mortars, 2 guns (10-inch), and 4 R. F. ....	8
Pacific coast.
San Diego .....	4 guns (10-inch) and 4 R. F. ....	3
Fort Baker .....	5 guns (12-inch), 3 guns (8-inch), and 3 R. F.	5
Fort Winfield Scott .....	32 mortars, 8 guns (12-inch), 5 guns (10-inch), 3 guns (8-inch), 7 R. F.	14
Fort Mason .....	1 gun (8-inch) .....	1
Angel Island .....	2 guns (8-inch) .....	1
Fort Stevens .....	8 mortars, 6 guns (10-inch), and 2 R. F. ....	4
Chinook Point .....	3 guns (8-inch) and 2 R. F. ....	1
Admiralty Head .....	10 mortars, 4 guns (10-inch), and 2 R. F. ....	4
Narrowstone Point .....	2 guns (12-inch), 4 guns (10-inch), and 2 R. F.	3
Point Wilson .....	2 guns (12-inch), 5 guns (10-inch), and 2 R. F.	3
Orchard Point .....	2 R. F. guns .....	1
Bean Point .....	2 R. F. guns .....	1

Total number of batteries of artillery needed to man the guns actually installed June 30, 1899, 196.

EXHIBIT B.

Table showing artillery force required to man the proposed armament of the United States.

Harbors and posts.	Seacoast guns.			12-inch mortars.	R. F. guns, large.	R. F. guns, small.	Batteries required.
	12-inch.	10-inch.	8-inch.
Atlantic coast.
Penobscot River.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	3	4	.....
Kennebec River.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	3	4	.....
Portland, Me.:.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
Portland Head.....	4	5	.....	.....	3	3	.....
Cushing Island.....	4	4	.....	16	3	6	.....
Fort Preble.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
Fort Scammon.....	.....	.....	.....	16	.....	.....	.....
Great Diamond Island, south.....	.....	.....	5	16	4	12	.....
Great Diamond Island, north.....	.....	.....	3	16	.....	.....	.....
Cow Island.....	5	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....

Table showing artillery force required to man the proposed armament of the United States—Continued.

Harbors and posts.	Seacoast guns.			Mortars, 12-inch.	R. F. guns, large.	R. F. guns, small.	Batteries required.
	12-inch.	10-inch.	8-inch.
Atlantic coast—Continued.
Portsmouth, N. H.:
Jerry's Point.....	3				2	2	1
Gerrish Island.....		3		16			3
Fort Constitution.....			32			32
Boston, Mass.:
Fort Warren.....	5	5			4	11	5
Nantasket Head.....	6	5			6	4	6
Long Island Head.....		5			32	4	2
Deer Island.....	3		5	32	4	6	8
Grover's Cliff.....	3			32	3		6
Nahant.....				32			4
Little Hog Island.....				16			12
Paddock Island.....				16			2
New Bedford, Mass.:
Clarks Point.....			2	8	4	6	4
Narragansett Bay:
Fort Adams.....		2		16	2	3	3
Fort Dumplings.....	2				6	6	2
Conanicut, Eastern.....	2	3		16			4
Conanicut, Fox Hill.....	3				12	2	2
Dutch Island.....		3		16	3	6	4
Boston Neck.....	2				2		1
Paradise Rocks.....				16			12
Long Island Sound, eastern entrance:
Napatree Point.....			2		4		1
Fishers Island.....	2	2		16	3		5
Bartlets Reef.....	3				4		2
Great Gull Island.....	2	2	1		4		3
Plum Island.....		2		16			3
Gardiners Point.....			2		32		1
New York:
Eastern entrance—
Willels Point.....	4	4	2	16	2	8	6
Fort Schuyler.....	7	2			2	8	4
Gardiners Point.....	3					12	1
Hewletts Point.....				16			2
Sands Point.....				16			2
Fort Slocum.....				16	3	4	3
Southern entrance—
Fort Wadsworth.....	10	4	5	16	6	8	15
Fort Hamilton.....	13	7		16	4	8	11
Plum Island.....				32			4
Sandy Hook.....	12	5		32	7	12	14
Point Comfort.....				16		2	2
Wards Point.....					4	6	1
Philadelphia:
Fort Delaware.....	8				3	8	4
Finns Point.....		6			3	12	2
Near Delaware City.....			2	16	2	4	3
Baltimore:
Fort Carroll.....	3				4	12	2
Hawkins Point.....	1		3		2	12	1
North Point.....	4				8	12	3
Rock Point.....				8	2	12	2
Potomac River:
Fort Washington.....	22	4		8	4	7	5
Sheridan's Point.....	12		3		12	6	2
Hampton Roads:
Fort Monroe.....	4	3	1	16	6	12	7
Fort Wool.....	6						3
Willoughby Spit.....				16			2
Wilmington, N. C.:
Fort Caswell.....			3	8	2	7	3
Smiths Island.....		2			2	7	1
Charleston, S. C.:
Fort Sumter.....	2				2		1
Sullivan's Island.....	3			16			3
Fort Moultrie.....		4			5	5	3
Port Royal Sound:
St. Helena.....		3			4	6	2
Parry Island.....		2		8	4	5	3
Hilton Head.....					2	6	1
Savannah:
Tybee Island.....	2		4	16	2	5	4
Fort Pulaski.....					2	4	1
Cumberland Sound:
Fort Clinch.....		2		8	2	4	3
St. Johns River:
St. Johns Bluff.....				8	4	5	2
St. Augustine, Fla.....					2	4	1
Gulf coast.
Key West.....	2	4	12	32	11	21	10
Tampa, Fla.....		4		8	7	19	4
Pensacola:
Fort Barrancas.....				16	2	4	4
Fort Pickens.....	2	4			3	4	1
Fort McRae.....			2				1
Mobile:
Fort Morgan.....	3		4	8	4	6	3
Fort Gaines.....				16	3	3	2
New Orleans:
Fort St. Philip.....		2	12	8	6	6	4
Fort Jackson.....				12	6	6	2
Fort Pike.....				3	2	3	1
Fort Macomb.....					2	3	1
Sabine Pass.....					2	4	1
Galveston:
Bolivar Point.....			12		4	6	1

Table showing artillery force required to man the proposed armament of the United States—Continued.

Harbors and ports.	Seacoast guns.			12-inch mortars.	R. F. guns, large.	R. F. guns, small.	Batteries required.
	12-inch.	10-inch.	8-inch.
Gulf coast—Continued.
Galveston—continued:
Port Point.....		12 12 12		16	4	4	3
City Beach.....				16		4	3
Pelican Slip.....					12	4	1
Pacific coast.
San Diego:
Point Loma.....		2		16	4		3
The Island.....					12 12 12	4	12 12
Ballast Point.....		4
Coronado Beach.....				16	12 12 12	4
San Francisco:*
Point Bonita.....	3	4		16			5
Gravelly Beach.....	4						5
Alcatraz Island.....	5						5
Point Lobos.....	6			32			7
Lime Point.....	5						12 12
Point Cavallo.....		5					12 12
Yellow Bluff.....			5				12 12
Angel Island.....		4	4				3
San Jose.....			2				1
Presidio.....			8				3
Fort Point.....	10	10	5	64			14
Laguna.....				32			4
Columbia River:
Cape Disappointment.....		3		16			3
Scarboro Hill.....			3	16			3
Point Adams.....		8		16	3	3	4
Desdemona Sands.....	2						1
Puget Sound:
Point Wilson.....	2	5		16			5
Marrowstone Point.....	3	3		16			4
Admiralty Head.....		7		16			4
Agate Passage.....			3		3	6	1
Bean Point.....			3	16	6	12	4
Orchard Point.....		3	3		3	6	1
Middle Point.....					2	2
Magnolia Bluff.....				16			2
Point Defiance.....					8		1
Dash Point.....				8			1
Lake ports.
Lake ports:
Fort Montgomery.....					3	6	1
Fort Wayne.....		3	3	18	7	9	3
St. Lawrence River.....	2	6		18			4
Total.....	190	180	94	1,008	233	410	362

* The data in my possession gives 35 R. F. guns for this harbor without stating number of large and small or distribution. I have added 3 companies to those necessary for the B. L. guns.

† Ten-inch mortars.

‡ The 35 R. F. guns at San Francisco are not included.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, under ordinary circumstances and under ordinary conditions, on the broad question of an increase of our standing army, I should oppose it; but at a time like this, when this Government by a treaty, which was ratified only a few days ago, has made a departure so wide that the general conditions which have heretofore always existed have been changed, it seems to me but wise and prudent that we should consider the great question which is now presented to us in the light of the existing situation, and not from that which existed in the past.

I recognize, Mr. President, that in giving to the Chief Executive of this country a great standing army we must take the chances of what disposition he may make of that army, either in suppressing the voice of the people or of the press, in preventing the free assemblage of the people, or in aiding and encouraging the great corporations and trusts of the country.

I also recognize the fact that but a few weeks ago, by the necessary two-thirds vote, the Senate ratified the treaty with Spain, by which we agreed to pay $20,000,000 for the Philippine Islands, with the possibility of an expenditure of at least four hundred or five hundred millions more, to say nothing of the lives of our American boys and men who may be sacrificed without number. I did not concur in that action, but that was the act of a majority of the representatives of the States.

I wish to God that our President had taken the advice of my honored colleague [Mr. SEWELL] when he said to the President, as he informed us in his speech yesterday, that he wished the President would order Admiral Dewey to sail from Manila. If that advice had been followed, we should not now here be confronted with the question of an increased army, with the question of the expenditure of millions of money to be paid by our people, and with the sacrifice of the lives of American soldiers. I have no apology to make for my vote on that treaty, but what I have stated is a matter of history.

We are now confronted with the fact that we have commenced a war, and yet some of our friends ask, and even the Administration asks, that this Army bill be limited to the year 1901. I have a high regard for the honored Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN], who is desirous of curtailing the time when this Army shall be continued in existence; but, in my humble judgment, the weakness of this bill lies in the fact that it has any limitation at all placed upon it, because I believe, sir, that we have embarked in a war and made a new departure in the history of this country which has brought about a state of affairs the result of which no man now living can tell.

Mr. President, we talk about the volunteers and speak of the brave work they did and the victories they obtained from Bunker Hill to Yorktown, at New Orleans, at Mexico, in the great war of the rebellion, and down to the recent war with Spain; and we say we can rely upon them. I have the greatest faith in the patriotism of the American people. But what caused those volunteers to leave their homes in order to go to fight for their country and their people and to sacrifice their lives was patriotism. That was a cause which appealed to the heart of every American citizen. But it is different when you come to ask volunteers to go 8,000 miles to the Philippine Islands, where, as my friend who has just taken his seat has said, every six months a new army will have to be sent; and that is the reason why they want so many men—because they will die of disease if not by the sword or by being shot.

When you call for volunteers and ask the American man and the American boy to leave his home to go there—to protect whom and what?—will the same incentive be there for him that there was when he went to Yorktown, or to New Orleans, or to Mexico, or into the war of the rebellion, or into the war with Spain? If I mistake not the American people, when it is known what that treaty means, what holding the Philippine Islands means, I would not be surprised that instead of having volunteers you will have to resort to a draft to secure soldiers.

I believe this is a great crime, a great wrong on the American people. At the same time we on this side of the Chamber particularly, or a large majority of us, are not responsible for the taking of the Philippines. We did not believe that the men who fought there should with us for their freedom should be taken into camp and shot down by us in order to acquire territory. I say here, without any chance of its being contradicted, that no Senator on this floor, if, when the resolutions were passed declaring war with Spain, it had been declared that the Philippines were to be taken and made a part of this Government, would ever have voted for declaring war.

But, Mr. President, it is here. We must meet it. I am a Democrat, and I always expect to be, but I am an American citizen first, and as such I will vote to give the Administration as many soldiers as they may want, and I will leave it to the American people, when they read of the death by disease and by shot of their sons and husbands and ponder over the taxes they have to pay, to determine whether they are satisfied with their action. I believe they are safe arbiters, and, so far as I am concerned, I propose that they shall have that privilege. In voting for this bill I do not do it believing in the principle, but believing that the Administration which brought on this condition ought to be allowed to finish it in their own way. Then let the American people settle with them hereafter.

Mr. WHITE obtained the floor.

Mr. TILLMAN. Will the Senator from California yield to me for a moment?

Mr. WHITE. Certainly.

SIXTH LIGHT-HOUSE DISTRICT.

Mr. TILLMAN. There is a little bill here involving an important matter. It passed the House and came over and has been amended. It will take but a few moments to get it through, and I wish to get it into conference. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 3293) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to purchase a site for a new depot for the Sixth light-house district and erect the necessary buildings.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with an amendment, in line 6, after the word "depot," to strike out the remainder of the bill and insert:

And the sum of $20,000 is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the purchase of a site and the beginning of such improvements.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. TILLMAN. I move that the Senate request a conference with the House of Representatives on the bill and amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Vice-President was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate; and Mr. McMILLAN, Mr. MCBRIDE, and Mr. PASCO were appointed.

MONUMENT TO SAMUEL HAHNEMANN.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, yesterday a request was made of the House of Representatives to return to the Senate the joint resolution which I hold in my hand, being the joint resolution (S. R. 48) granting permission for the erection of a monument in Washington, D. C., for the ornamentation of the national capital and in honor of Samuel Hahnemann. I move to reconsider the vote whereby the joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed, read the third time, and passed.

The motion to reconsider was agreed to.

Mr. GALLINGER. The joint resolution of course has been read heretofore. I move to amend it by striking out, in lines 8 and 9, the words "officer in charge of the new Library building" and inserting "Chief of Engineers, United States Army."

Mr. COCKRELL. How is that?

Mr. GALLINGER. I will say to the Senator from Missouri that I meant to consult him about this matter, but I am sure the change will meet with his concurrence. It is proposed to strike out the words "officer in charge of the new Library building" and insert "Chief of Engineers, United States Army."

Mr. HOAR. What is the joint resolution?

Mr. GALLINGER. It is the joint resolution that has passed the Senate two or three times, in reference to the erection of a monument to Samuel Hahnemann.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. Where is it proposed to erect it?

Mr. GALLINGER. If it is desired that I should make an explanation, I will do so. The original proposition was to place the monument in the Capitol grounds; but the Senator from Missouri objected, and that was specifically excluded in the joint resolution.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from New Hampshire.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GALLINGER. After the word "the," in line 9, I move to insert "chairman of;" so as to read "chairman of the Joint Committee on the Library."

The amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

REORGANIZATION OF THE ARMY.

Mr. WHITE. As I have the floor, I desire to suggest to the Senator from Connecticut that, it being very late and several Senators desiring to be heard upon the Army bill, it seems to me advisable to postpone its further consideration until Monday. I took the floor intending to speak upon it. The Senator from Tennessee [Mr. BATE], who is a member of the committee, informs me that he desires to speak, and I prefer to yield to him when we meet next Monday. Will the Senator from Connecticut agree to an adjournment now?

JOHN L. SMITHMEYER AND PAUL J. PELZ.

Mr. STEWART. I ask unanimous consent to call up the bill (S. 3901) for the relief of John L. Smithmeyer and Paul J. Pelz.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. PETTIGREW. I object.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is objection.

CONSIDERATION OF PENSION BILLS.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I desire to make a request. This morning the Senate kindly granted unanimous consent that the Pension Calendar should be considered from 5 to 6 o'clock. I request that the order be changed so that it shall operate from 6 to 7 o'clock this evening.

Mr. STEWART. There is no objection to that.

Mr. GORMAN. No other business to be transacted.

Mr. STEWART. No other business to intervene.

Mr. GALLINGER. No other business to come in.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senate has heard the request of the Senator from New Hampshire that the unanimous-consent order made this morning be modified so as to take effect this evening.

Mr. GORMAN. With no other business to be transacted.

Mr. GALLINGER. No other business to be done.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. No other business to be done than the Pension Calendar. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY.

Mr. HOAR. I ask permission for the Committee on the Judiciary to sit during the sessions of the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

HOOR OF MEETING.

Mr. HOAR. I desire to move a brief executive session. I suppose it need not take more than three or four minutes.

Mr. HAWLEY. I wish to be heard for a moment. I am in charge of the Army bill, and I have a word to say.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Massachusetts withdraw his motion for that purpose?

Mr. HOAR. Yes.

Mr. HAWLEY. I move that when the Senate adjourn this evening it be to meet at 11 o'clock on Monday morning. I wanted to have the Senate meet at 10 o'clock, but I do not think Senators wish to meet so early.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Connecticut.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. WHITE. If I understand the situation, after the consideration of pension matters we will adjourn until 11 o'clock Monday morning.

Mr. HAWLEY. That when we adjourn it shall be until 11 o'clock. I should be glad to make it 10.

COURTS IN TEXAS.

Mr. CHILTON. I ask the Chair to lay before the Senate the bill concerning the holding of terms of the circuit and district courts of the western judicial district of Texas, so that it may be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary. That committee will meet on Monday morning.

The bill (H. R. 5497) to provide for terms of the circuit and district courts of the western judicial district of the State of Texas to be held at the city of Laredo, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. HOAR. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After ten minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened.

ADDITIONAL PETITIONS.

Mr. GEAR presented a petition of Belknap Post, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Iowa, of Keokuk, Iowa, praying for the enactment of legislation granting a service pension to all old soldiers; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. PENROSE presented a petition of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the McDowell Memorial Presbyterian Church, of Philadelphia, Pa., praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the sale of liquor in canteens of the Army and Navy and of Soldiers' Homes, and in immigrant stations and Government buildings; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented a petition of the Board of Trade of Erie, Pa., praying for the enactment of legislation to increase American shipping; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of 57 citizens of Philadelphia, Pa., and a petition of Pride of Newcastle Lodge, No. 2, Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel, and Tin Workers, of Newcastle, Pa., praying for the passage of the eight-hour bill; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. HANNA presented the petitions of R. C. Hill, of West Alexandria, Ohio; of W. E. Wight, of Delaware, Ohio, and of Leonard Pearson, dean of the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Pa., praying that the rank of second lieutenant be granted to veterinary surgeons in the Army; which were referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented a petition of the United States Playing Card Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, praying for the enactment of legislation providing more efficient quarantine regulations; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented petitions of the congregations of the First Baptist Church of Elyria, the Methodist Episcopal Church of Willoughby, and of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Steubenville; of the Ohio Woman's Christian Temperance Union; of the Ohio Anti-Saloon League, of Cleveland; of John MacCurdy, of Thompson; of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Cleveland; of Rev. T. B. Warner, of Glenville, and of W. A. Ellis & Co., of Racine, all in the State of Ohio, praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the sale of liquor in canteens of the Army and Navy and of Soldiers' Homes, and in immigrant stations and Government buildings; which were referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented petitions of Iron Molders' Union, No. 4, of Cincinnati, Ohio; of the Iron Molders' Journal, of Cincinnati, Ohio; of Iron Molders' Union, No. 108, of Troy, Ohio; of N. W. Holbrook, of Oneida, N. Y.; of George Fuehrer, of Hamilton, Ohio; of John Brannon, of Hamilton, Ohio; of Henry Weiss, of Hamilton, Ohio; of Harry E. Myers, of Hamilton, Ohio; of J. C. Strategier, of Hamilton, Ohio; of John Howard, of Hamilton, Ohio; of F. H. Diemar, of Hamilton, Ohio; of Kodge No. 148, International Association of Machinists, of Springfield, Ohio; of Cigar Makers' Union, No. 85, of Dayton, Ohio; of Cigar Makers' Union, No. 9, of Troy, N. Y.; of A. G. Kaufmann, of Akron, Ohio; of William Meehan, of Detroit, Mich.; of Granite Cutters' National Union, of Baltimore, Md.; of the International Union of Bicycle Workers and Allied Mechanics, of Toledo, Ohio; of the Brotherhood of Boiler Makers and Iron Shipbuilders of Kansas City, Kans.; of the Northern Mineral Mine Workers' Progressive Union, of Negaunee, Mich.; of the Trades and Labor Council of Nashville, Tenn.; of William J. Shearer, J. B. Wonetler, Charles Madle, John T. Early, Frank E. Geegan, George W. Sallade, John Riehl, Charles S. Rihl, Daniel M. Naughton, Charles Larson, John M. Gilbert, John Fletcher, Alexander Shearer, George F. Walton, and Samuel Carson, all of Philadelphia, Pa.; of the Industrial Council of Kansas City, Mo.; of the United Labor League of Philadelphia, Pa.; of Iron Molders' Union, No. 151, of Bellaire, Ohio; of Edward F. Reilly, Clarence H. Broadbelt, H. L. Shildrake, Jarry Evans, E. Craig, John Sinclair, all of Philadelphia, Pa.; of the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners of Cleveland, Ohio; of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters, of Cincinnati, Ohio; of the Central Labor Union of Omaha, Nebr.; of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of Columbus, Ohio; of C. E. Sparks, of Omaha, Nebr.; of Charles H. Sebaugh, of Zanesville, Ohio; of the Central Labor Union of Indianapolis, Ind.; of the Bakers and Confectioners' International Union, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; of the Central Labor Council of Oil City, Pa.; of the Council of Building Trades of Detroit, Mich.; of Henry J. Ellers, of Hamilton, Ohio; of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of Hamilton, Ohio; of J. F. Murphy, of Zanesville, Ohio; of F. Y. Seabright, of Detroit, Mich.; of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of Zanesville, Ohio; of the Central Labor Union of Toledo; of the Central Labor Union of Cleveland; of Typographical Union, No. 52, of Troy; of Eugene V. Staley, of Hamilton, Ohio; of the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employees, Division No. 53, of East Liverpool, Ohio; of Iron Molders' Union, No. 132, of Zanesville, Ohio; of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers of Philadelphia, Pa.; of Cigar Makers' Union, No. 17, of Cleveland, Ohio; of Dayton Typographical Union, No. 57, of Dayton, Ohio; of the Oneida Trades and Labor Assembly, of Oneida, N. Y.; of Iron Molders' Union, No. 94, of Piqua, Ohio; of the Central Trades and Labor Council of Zanesville, Ohio; of William H. Smith, George Herold, Fred A. Fillmore, H. William Ellers, John F. Mayer, and Edward G. Weiss, all of Hamilton, Ohio; of the Trades and Labor Council of Fort Wayne, Ind.; of Edward Ansel, of Zanesville, Ohio; of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters, of Zanesville, Ohio; of the Amalgamated Wood Workers' Union, No. 59, of Zanesville, Ohio; of the Screw Makers' Union, No. 2, of Toledo, Ohio; of Iron Molders' Union of America, of Cincinnati, Ohio; of the Trades and Labor Council of Lowell, Mass.; of William Francis, of Asheville, N. C.; of Lewis Sauer, Richard Lenehan, Oscar Schlichter, Fred Huseman, Henry Buelters, H. S. Hammerle, and Charles V. Albert, all of Hamilton, Ohio; of Peter Rohman, of Overpeck, Ohio; of the United Brotherhood of Leather Workers of St. Joseph, Mo.; of the city council of Toledo, Ohio; of the Central Labor Council of Cincinnati, Ohio; of R. H. Metcalf, of Cincinnati, Ohio; of Frank J. B. Liesner, of Hamilton, Ohio; of Joseph Schawe, of Hamilton, Ohio; of F. M. Miller, mayor of Asheville, N. C.; of John Kitz, of Oshkosh, Wis.; of Jacob Hemler, of Hamilton, Ohio; of the International Association of Machinists and the Central Federation of Labor, of Troy, N. Y.; of Iron Molders' Union, No. 68, of Hamilton, Ohio; of Charles Brunson and Machlon S. Harris, of Hamilton, Ohio; and of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of Lima, Ohio, praying for the passage of the eight-hour bill; which were ordered to lie on the table.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Pensions:

- A bill (H. R. 4745) to increase the pension of George W. Detwiler;
- A bill (H. R. 4905) granting an increase of pension to Stephen P. Choate;
- A bill (H. R. 9502) granting a pension to Eliza Sickler;
- A bill (H. R. 11673) to increase the pension of Patrick O'Neal;
- A bill (H. R. 877) granting a pension to Charles F. Holmes;
- A bill (H. R. 1206) granting an increase of pension to Sophia W. Buxton;
- A bill (H. R. 1698) granting an increase of pension to Henry A. Thoburn;
- A bill (H. R. 1724) granting an increase of pension to Sophia Gruber;
- A bill (H. R. 1773) granting a pension to Robert Persley;
- A bill (H. R. 2386) granting an increase of pension to Lester P. Cooper;

- A bill (H. R. 2625) granting a pension to Mary Chamberlin;
  - A bill (H. R. 2830) granting an increase of pension to Ira Bacon;
  - A bill (H. R. 3476) granting an increase of pension to Andrew Morse, jr.;
  - A bill (H. R. 4498) granting an increase of pension to Jackson Neace;
  - A bill (H. R. 4501) granting an increase of pension to Stephen A. Knowlan;
  - A bill (H. R. 4661) granting a pension to Dortha E. Kennoch;
  - A bill (H. R. 4677) to increase the pension of Rebecca McMullen;
  - A bill (H. R. 6328) granting a pension to Mary F. Cobb;
  - A bill (H. R. 6433) granting an increase of pension to Jeremiah B. Moore;
  - A bill (H. R. 8207) granting a pension to Abigail Wilson;
  - A bill (H. R. 8406) granting an increase of pension to Martha Adams;
  - A bill (H. R. 8668) for the relief of Henry Mulvin;
  - A bill (H. R. 8804) granting an increase of pension to James S. Anderson;
  - A bill (H. R. 9619) granting a pension to Ruth Walker;
  - A bill (H. R. 10134) granting an increase of pension to John Keach;
  - A bill (H. R. 10328) granting a pension to Ann Collins;
  - A bill (H. R. 10696) granting an increase of pension to James W. Ingram;
  - A bill (H. R. 10697) granting a pension to Erasmus L. Wentz;
  - A bill (H. R. 10863) granting an increase of pension to Hollis O. Dudley;
  - A bill (H. R. 10892) granting an increase of pension to Andrew J. Taylor;
  - A bill (H. R. 10900) to increase the pension of James Cooper;
  - A bill (H. R. 11148) granting an increase of pension to Orin Long;
  - A bill (H. R. 11568) granting an increase of pension to William B. Paul;
  - A bill (H. R. 11767) granting a pension to Daniel G. Emert;
  - A bill (H. R. 11824) granting an increase of pension to Smith Jewell;
  - A bill (H. R. 11876) granting an increase of pension to Clarence L. Chapman;
  - A bill (H. R. 12013) to increase the pension of Delos M. Kenyon;
  - A bill (H. R. 12104) granting an increase of pension to Maria S. Urban; and
  - A bill (H. R. 12148) granting a pension to Eliza S. Redfield.
- The following bills were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs:
- A bill (H. R. 1388) to remove the charge of desertion from the record of Michael Baker;
  - A bill (H. R. 4135) for the relief of Peter, alias Louis, Heck; and
  - A bill (H. R. 4670) to remove the charge of dishonorable dismissal from the military service of the United States of W. H. Castle.

STATISTICAL ABSTRACT OF THE UNITED STATES.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution from the House of Representatives; which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring). That there be printed 12,000 additional copies of the Statistical Abstract of the United States for the year 1898, prepared by the Bureau of Statistics, Treasury Department, 3,000 copies for the Senate, 6,000 for the House of Representatives, and 3,000 for the Bureau of Statistics, Treasury Department.

COMMERCIAL RELATIONS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution from the House of Representatives; which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring). That the Public Printer be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to print for distribution by the Department of State 5,000 copies of Commercial Relations, 1898, and (in separate form) 10,000 copies of the Review of the World's Commerce, etc., being part of said Commercial Relations.

REPORT ON PRODUCTION OF GOLD AND SILVER.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution from the House of Representatives; which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring). That there be printed and bound in cloth, for the use of the Director of the Mint, 3,000 extra copies of the Report on the Production of Gold and Silver for the Calendar Year 1897.

JOSEPH F. MOLLERE.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 4631) granting an increase of pension to Joseph F. Mollere, which was, in line 8, before the word "dollars," to strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty-four."

On motion of Mr. GALLINGER, the amendment was concurred in.

JOHN H. CRANDALL.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 4483) granting an increase of pension to John H. Crandall.

The amendments were, in line 9, to strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty-four;" and in line 10, after the word "receives," to insert "same to be paid to the committee of his person and estate."

On motion of Mr. GALLINGER, the amendments were concurred in.

MARIA S. WHITNEY.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 3325) granting a pension to Maria S. Whitney, which was, in line 6, after the name "Whitney," to insert "the dependent."

On motion of Mr. GALLINGER, the amendment was concurred in.

WILLIAM O. TORREY.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 3136) granting an increase of pension to William O. Torrey.

The amendments were, in line 6, to strike out "Torrey" and insert "Torrey;" in line 8, to strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty."

Amend the title so as to read: "An act granting an increase of pension to William O. Torrey."

On motion of Mr. GALLINGER, the amendments were concurred in.

CHARLES EDSON.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2335) granting an increase of pension to Charles Edson.

The amendments were, in line 4, to strike out the words "at the rate of" and insert "subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws;" in line 5, to strike out "$50 per month;" in line 7, after the word "Infantry," to insert "and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month."

On motion of Mr. GALLINGER, the amendments were concurred in.

HENRY HATCH.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2235) granting an increase of pension to Henry Hatch, which was, in line 6, to strike out "Light" and insert "Heavy."

On motion of Mr. GALLINGER, the amendment was concurred in.

AARON B. PAGE.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2217) to increase the pension of Aaron B. Page, which was, in line 7, after the word "Volunteers," to insert "and pay him a pension."

On motion of Mr. GALLINGER, the amendment was concurred in.

ANNIE E. RUFF.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1976) granting an increase of pension to Annie E. Ruff.

The amendments were, in lines 7 and 8, to strike out the words "subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws;" in line 9, after the word "pension" where it first occurs, insert "at the rate."

On motion of Mr. GALLINGER, the amendments were concurred in.

MICHAEL LANNAN.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1619) granting a pension to Michael Lannon.

The amendments were, in line 6, to strike out "Lannon" and insert "Lannan;" and amend the title so as to read: "An act granting a pension to Michael Lannan."

On motion of Mr. GALLINGER, the amendments were concurred in.

WILLIAM F. GOWDY.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1378) granting a pension to William F. Gowdy.

The amendments were, in line 7, after the word "Infantry," to insert "and pay him a pension;" and in line 8, to strike out the words "from the passage of this act."

On motion of Mr. GALLINGER, the amendments were concurred in.

GEORGE W. EMERY.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1245) granting an increase of pension to George W. Emery, which was, in line 8, to strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty-four."

On motion of Mr. GALLINGER, the amendment was concurred in.

JOHN H. GEARKEE.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1209) granting an increase of pension to Maj. John H. Gearkee.

The amendments were, in line 4, after the word "roll," to insert "subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws;" in line 5, to strike out "Major;" in line 5, after the word "late," to insert "major;" in line 6, after the word "Infantry," to insert "and pay him a pension;" in line 7, to strike out the words "said pension to be;" in line 7, to strike out the words "the one" and insert "that."

Amend the title so as to read: "An act granting an increase of pension to John H. Gearkee."

On motion of Mr. GALLINGER, the amendments were concurred in.

ABIGAIL R. ELLET.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1071) granting a pension to Abigail R. Ellet.

The amendments were, in line 7, to strike out "grant" and insert "pay;" in line 7, to strike out "fifty" and insert "thirty."

On motion of Mr. GALLINGER, the amendments were concurred in.

MARY J. HILL.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 896) granting a pension to Mary J. Hill, which was, in line 7, to strike out "Missouri" and insert "Wisconsin."

On motion of Mr. GALLINGER, the amendment was concurred in.

ELIZABETH V. LITZENBERG.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States; which was read: To the Senate:

In compliance with a resolution of the Senate of the 23d instant (the House of Representatives concurring), I return herewith the bill H. R. 4838, entitled "An act granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth V. Litzenberg."

WILLIAM MCKINLEY.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, February 25, 1899.

Mr. GALLINGER. I move to reconsider the votes whereby that bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, with a view of amending it.

The motion was agreed to.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill (H. R. 4838) granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth V. Litzenberg is now before the Senate and open to amendment.

Mr. GALLINGER. I move to amend, in line 6, by striking out the name "Henry" and inserting "Hervey;" so as to read, "Hervey M. Litzenberg;" and in line 7, before the word "Regiment," by striking out "Eighty-eighth" and inserting "Eighty-second;" so as to read, "Company I, Eighty-second Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry."

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. GALLINGER. I now ask that the bill may be passed in its amended form.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

REBECCA S. FOSTER.

Mr. GALLINGER. The first bill on the Pension Calendar which I desire to have considered is the bill to increase the pension of Mrs. Rebecca S. Foster, which was objected to by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] the last time the Pension Calendar was before the Senate. The Senator from Missouri has withdrawn his objection.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3271) to increase the pension of Mrs. Rebecca S. Foster, which had been reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments, in line 4, after the word "place," to insert "on the pension roll;" in line 7, after the word "Infantry," to strike out "upon the pension roll;" and in line 8, before the word "month," to strike out "a" and insert "per;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll the name of Rebecca S. Foster, widow of the late Lieut. Col. John A. Foster, of the One hundred and seventy-fifth Regiment of New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of the pension she now receives.

Mr. GALLINGER. I ask the Senate to nonconcur in the amendments proposed by the committee.

The amendments were rejected.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The Committee on Pensions reported to amend the title of the bill so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Rebecca S. Foster."

The amendment to the title was rejected.

KITTY ANN PATTERSON.

The bill (H. R. 8155) granting a pension to Kitty Ann Patterson was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Kitty Ann Patterson, widow of Isaiah Loggins or Patterson, late private of Company D, Twenty-eighth Regiment United States Colored Infantry, and to pay her a pension of $8 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FRANK S. DEVOL.

The bill (H. R. 8123) granting an increase of pension to Frank S. Devol was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place the name of Frank S. Devol, late a private in Company B, Thirty-eighth Regiment of Indiana Volunteer Infantry, on the pension roll and to pay him a pension of $24 per month in lieu of the pension he now receives.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JONATHAN SCOTT.

The bill (H. R. 4880) granting a pension to Jonathan Scott was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Jonathan Scott, late of Company M, Fifth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Cavalry, and to pay him a pension of $50 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE BROWN.

The bill (H. R. 10385) granting a pension to George Brown was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension roll the name of George Brown, late of Company G, Tenth United States Cavalry, and Company M, Ninth United States Cavalry, and to pay him a pension of $12 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ARBA CAPRON.

The bill (H. R. 7046) granting an increase of pension to Arba Capron was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Arba Capron, late of Company I, Fiftieth New York Volunteer Engineers, and to pay him a pension of $24 per month in lieu of that he now receives.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

OLIVER J. LYON.

The bill (S. 2991) granting an increase of pension to Oliver J. Lyon, of Sabetha, Kans., was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension roll the name of Oliver J. Lyon, late of Company K, Twenty-fifth Iowa Volunteer Infantry, also of Company G, Forty-fifth Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and to pay him a pension of $30 per month in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Oliver J. Lyon."

JAMES WEBB.

The bill (H. R. 10056) increasing the pension of James Webb was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of James Webb, late a private of Company F, Ninth Regiment of Tennessee Cavalry, and to pay him a pension of $40 a month in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LYDIA F. WILEY.

The bill (S. 2634) granting a pension to Lydia F. Wiley was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 8, before the word "dollars," to strike out "thirty" and insert "eight;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions of the pension laws, the name of Lydia F. Wiley, widow of John Wiley, late surgeon of the Sixth Regiment of New Jersey Infantry Volunteers, at the rate of $8 per month.

Mr. GALLINGER. I ask the Senate to disagree to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. GALLINGER. In line 5, after the word "provisions," I move to insert "and limitations;" so as to read "the provisions and limitations of the pension laws."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GALLINGER. In line 7, after the word "Volunteers," I move to insert "and pay her a pension."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FREDERICK AUER.

The bill (S. 5415) granting a pension to Frederick Auer was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments, in line 6, after the word "late," to strike out "a private;" in line 7, after the word "Regiment," to strike out "of;" in the same line, after the word "Infantry," to insert "and pay him a pension;" and in line 8, after the word "month," to insert "in lieu of that he is now receiving;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Frederick Auer, late of Company F, Eighty-second Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month, in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Frederick Auer."

JAMES PORTER.

The bill (H. R. 10303) granting an increase of pension to James Porter was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of James Porter, late of Company K, Thirty-second Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and to pay him a pension of $24 per month in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMERICA EASTON.

The bill (H. R. 9843) granting a pension to America Easton was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of America Easton, widow of Jacob Easton, who was a private in Company H, One hundred and fourteenth Regiment of United States Colored Infantry, and to pay her a pension of $8 a month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY B. CHRISTOPHER.

The bill (S. 4916) granting a pension to Mary B. Christopher was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 8, after the words "rate of," to strike out "twenty-five" and insert "eighteen;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Mary B. Christopher, formerly widow of James Bringham, surgeon of the Twenty-eighth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $18 per month.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GALLINGER. I move that the word "formerly," in line 6, before the word "widow," be stricken out.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HENRY H. LEWIS.

The bill (S. 4919) granting a pension to Henry H. Lewis was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 7, after the words "pension of," to strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Henry H. Lewis, late a member of the Fifth Illinois Light Artillery, or Elgin Battery, and pay to him a pension of $20 a month in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

Mr. GALLINGER. I move to insert, in line 7, after the word "pension," the words "at the rate."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ANDREW J. SNOWDEN.

The bill (H. R. 2298) granting an increase of pension to Andrew J. Snowden was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Andrew J. Snowden, late of Company B, Fifteenth United States Infantry, and to pay him a pension of $24 per month in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BEERI SERVIS.

The bill (H. R. 10738) granting an increase of pension to Beeri Serviss was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Beeri Serviss, late a private in Company K, Ninety-sixth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and to pay him a pension of $45 per month in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY A. KENNEDY.

The bill (H. R. 12033) granting a pension to Mary A. Kennedy was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension roll the name of Mary A. Kennedy, dependent mother of Peter Kennedy, late of Company F, Fifty-second New York Infantry, and to pay her a pension of $12 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

NELLY V. CROSBY.

The bill (H. R. 10480) granting a pension to Nelly V. Crosby was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Nelly V. Crosby, permanently dependent and helpless child of Henry Crosby, late of Company G, Nineteenth Maine Infantry, and to pay her, through her legally constituted guardian, a pension of $12 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RICHARD ATKINSON.

The bill (H. R. 9455) granting an increase of pension to Richard Atkinson was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Richard Atkinson, late a private, Company F, Ninety-eighth Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and to pay him a pension of $20 per month in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM F. BOLAN.

The bill (H. R. 123) granting a pension to William F. Bolan was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of William F. Bolan, permanently helpless and dependent son of John V. Bolan, late a private in Company A, Third Regiment Rhode Island Heavy Artillery, and to pay him a pension of $12 per month through his legally qualified and appointed guardian.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES J. MARCHER.

The bill (H. R. 8740) granting a pension to James J. Marcher was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension roll the name of James J. Marcher, late of Company E, First California Cavalry Volunteers, and to pay him a pension of $20 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HOWARD L. JAMES.

The bill (H. R. 635) increasing the pension of Howard L. James was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place the name of Howard L. James, late sergeant of Company G of the Ninth Indiana Volunteers, on the pension roll and to pay him a pension of $18 per month in lieu of the pension he now receives.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CHARLOTTE B. COZZENS.

The bill (H. R. 6013) granting an increase of pension to Charlotte B. Cozzens was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Charlotte B. Cozzens, widow of Henry H. Cozzens, first lieutenant, Twenty-first Battery New York Volunteer Artillery, and to pay her a pension of $25 per month in lieu of that she now receives.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES E. SEARL.

The bill (H. R. 7657) granting an increase of pension to James E. Searl was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension roll the name of James E. Searl, late of Company F, One hundred and eighty-sixth New York Volunteers, and to pay him a pension of $24 per month in lieu of the pension he now receives.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CHARLES N. SMILEY.

The bill (H. R. 12077) granting an increase of pension to Charles N. Smiley was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Charles N. Smiley, late captain Company B, Eighty-first Regiment United States Colored Infantry, and to pay him a pension of $30 dollars per month in lieu of the pension he now receives.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MIANDA A. SANFORD.

The bill (H. R. 10860) granting a pension to Mianda A. Sanford was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Mianda A. Sanford, widow of Ryland M. Harvey, late of Company K, One hundred and sixty-first Regiment New York Volunteers, and to pay her a pension of $12 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. SUSAN STEDMAN.

The bill (H. R. 8568) granting an increase of pension to Mrs. Susan Stedman was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to increase the pension of Mrs. Susan Stedman, widow of Kinsley Stedman, late a private in Company H, Eighty-third Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, from $8, the amount now received by said widow, to $15 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

THOMAS CRINIGAN.

The bill (H. R. 12026) to increase the pension of Thomas Crinigan was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Thomas Crinigan, late a private in Company C, Fourteenth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Cavalry, and to pay him a pension of $24 per month in lieu of that which he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES R. ZEARING.

The bill (H. R. 855) granting an increase of pension to James R. Zearing was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of James R. Zearing, late surgeon of the Fifty-seventh Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and to pay him a pension of $30 per month in lieu of pension he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ANNA M. ROWE.

The bill (H. R. 11296) granting a pension to Anna M. Rowe, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Anna M. Rowe, permanently helpless and dependent daughter of Jerome Rowe, late captain Company A, Thirty-second New York Volunteers, and to pay her a pension of $12 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE W. REISINGER.

The bill (H. R. 8578) granting an increase of pension to George W. Reisinger was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of George W. Reisinger, late lieutenant-colonel of the One hundred and sixty-sixth Regiment Pennsylvania Infantry and adjutant of the Two hundred and first Regiment Pennsylvania Infantry, and to pay him a pension of $30 per month, in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN BEGLEY.

The bill (H. R. 9344) granting an increase of pension to John Begley was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of John Begley, late a private of Captain Newman's company, First Tennessee Cavalry, Mexican war, and to pay him a pension of $20 per month, the same to be in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was reported without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

TIMOTHY A. ALLEN.

The bill (H. R. 9569) granting an increase of pension to Timothy A. Allen, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension roll the name of Timothy A. Allen, late quartermaster of the One hundred and forty-fifth Regiment of New York Volunteers, and to pay him a pension of $24 per month in lieu of the pension now received by him.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SAMUEL B. KOONTZ.

The bill (H. R. 4249) granting a pension to Samuel B. Koontz was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Samuel B. Koontz, and to pay him a pension of $15 a month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN DOEBLER.

The bill (H. R. 247) granting an increase of pension to John Doebler was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension roll the name of John Doebler, late captain of Company A, One hundred and twenty-sixth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and to pay him a pension of $25 per month in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HENRY BULLEN.

The bill (H. R. 9415) granting an increase of pension to Henry Bullen was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Henry Bullen, of Latrobe, Pa., late of United States Marine Corps, and to pay him a pension of $24 per month in lieu of that he now receives.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MINNIE B. TITUS.

The bill (H. R. 8610) granting a pension to Minnie B. Titus was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Minnie B. Titus, permanently helpless and dependent daughter of Edward H. Titus, late a private in Company A, Thirteenth New Jersey Infantry Volunteers, and to pay her a pension of $12 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES H. NICHOLS.

The bill (H. R. 10417) granting a pension to James H. Nichols was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of James H. Nichols, dependent father of John S. Nichols, late of Company C, First Regiment Michigan Light Artillery Volunteers, and to pay him a pension of $12 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DAVID CARROLL.

The bill (S. 3216) granting a pension to David Carroll was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 7, after the word "Navy," to strike out "on the U. S. S. Flocks" and insert "at the rate of $8 per month;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of David Carroll, dependent father of Eugene Carroll, late a steward in the United States Navy, at the rate of $8 per month.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the time, and passed.

JOSEPH B. PRESDEE.

The bill (S. 4006) for the relief of Joseph B. Presdee was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments, in line 8, before the word "dollars," to strike out "forty" and insert "twelve;" and in the same line, after the word "month," to strike out "from the 1st day of April, A. D. 1890;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Joseph B. Presdee, late captain and lieutenant-colonel of Company H, Second Indiana Cavalry, and pay him a pension of $12 per month.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting a pension to Joseph B. Presdee."

ANNIE CUSACK.

The bill (H. R. 10605) to increase the pension of Annie Cusack was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place the name of Annie Cusack, widow of Patrick Cusack, late captain, Ninth Cavalry, United States Army, on the pension roll, and to pay her a pension of $20 per month in lieu of that which she is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. GALLINGER. There were a few bills reported from the Committee on Pensions this morning, and I ask consent that they also be now considered.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, it will be so ordered.

MAZIE V. SULLIVAN.

The bill (H. R. 10285) granting an increase of pension to Mazie V. Sullivan was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Mazie V. Sullivan, widow of George R. Sullivan, late of Company G, Eleventh Maryland Volunteer Infantry, and to pay her a pension of $12 per month in lieu of that which she is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CATHARINE C. GOODRICH.

The bill (H. R. 10355) granting an increase of pension to Catharine C. Goodrich was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Catharine C. Goodrich, widow of Charles H. Goodrich, late first lieutenant Company M, First Regiment Ohio Volunteer Cavalry, and to pay her a pension of $17 per month in lieu of that she now receives.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SARAH A. KIZER.

The bill (H. R. 10933) granting a pension to Sarah A. Kizer was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Sarah A. Kizer, blind and dependent daughter of David L. Kizer, deceased, late sergeant, Company K, Thirty-first Regiment Ohio Veteran Volunteer Infantry, and to pay her a pension of $12 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELAM ALLEN.

The bill (H. R. 3906) granting an increase of pension to Elam Allen was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place the name of Elam Allen, late of Company E, Thirty-third Iowa Infantry Volunteers, on the pension roll and to pay him a pension of $20 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN S. DRAPER.

The bill (H. R. 10716) granting a pension to John S. Draper was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place the name of John S. Draper, late a private in the war with Mexico, and subsequently a sergeant in Company E, Third United States Infantry, upon the pension roll, and to pay him a pension of $12 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE ALEXANDER.

The bill (H. R. 6876) to increase the pension of George Alexander was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of George Alexander, late of Company G, First Regiment Michigan Volunteer Cavalry, and to pay to him a pension of $24 per month in lieu of the pension now received by him.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELIZABETH WHISLER.

The bill (S. 4007) granting a pension to Elizabeth Whisler was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 8, to fill the blank before the word "dollars" by inserting "twelve;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Elizabeth Whisler, widow of Solomon Whisler, late of Company H, Forty-ninth Ohio Volunteers, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES C. CARLTON.

The bill (S. 3291) to increase the pension of James C. Carlton was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments, in line 6, after the word "Regiment," to strike out "of;" and in line 7, after the word "pension," to strike out "of $50 per month in lieu of the pension of $12 per month he is now receiving" and insert "at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll the name of James C. Carlton, late a corporal in Company F, Fifth Regiment Indiana Volunteers in the Mexican war, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to James C. Carlton."

LEVI MOSER.

The bill (S. 4730) to increase the pension of Levi Moser was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments, in line 5, before the word "fourth," to strike out "a;" in the same line, after the words "Company I," to strike out "of the;" in line 6, before the word "Pennsylvania," to strike out "of;" and in line 7, after the word "Volunteers," to strike out "at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of the pension now received by him under the law" and insert "and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll the name of Levi Moser, late fourth sergeant of Company I, One hundred and fifty-third Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ISAAC H. LINN.

The bill (S. 4098) granting an increase of pension to Isaac H. Linn was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 7, to fill the blank by inserting "fifty;" so as to read: "$50 per month in lieu of the pension he is now receiving."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

B. H. RANDALL.

The bill (S. 4437) granting a pension to B. H. Randall was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of B. H. Randall, late a sutler at Fort Ridgely, Minn., during the Sioux Indian outbreak, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CAPT. OSCAR TAYLOR.

The bill (S. 3672) granting a pension to Capt. Oscar Taylor was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 7, before the word "Cavalry," to insert "Volunteer;" and in the same line, after "Cavalry," to strike out "volunteers at $30 per month," and insert "and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. PRITCHARD. I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 6 o'clock and 38 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Monday, February 27, 1899, at 11 o'clock a. m.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate February 25, 1899.

REGISTER OF THE LAND OFFICE.

A. C. McGillivray, of Dickinson, N. Dak., to be register of the land office at Bismarck, N. Dak., vice Edwin A. Lamb, term expired.

COMMISSIONER TO EXAMINE AND CLASSIFY LANDS.

Edwin A. Jones, of Ottumwa, Iowa, to be a commissioner to examine and classify lands within the land-grant and indemnity land-grant limits of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company in the Helena land district in Montana, vice William R. Manning, resigned. In the nomination of said Jones sent to the Senate January 17, 1899, his name was erroneously given as Edward, and that nomination was confirmed January 24.

APPOINTMENTS IN THE ARMY.

Signal Corps.

First Lieut. George O. Squier, Third Artillery, to be first lieutenant, February 23, 1899, vice Allen, promoted.

APPOINTMENTS IN THE VOLUNTEER ARMY.

Fifth Regiment Volunteer Infantry.

Capt. James K. Vardaman, to be major, vice Money, promoted. First Lieut. Thomas B. Franks, to be captain, vice Vardaman, promoted.

Second Lieut. John Burke, to be first lieutenant, vice Franks, promoted.

Sergt. Jack D. Turner, Company B, to be second lieutenant, vice Burke, promoted.

POSTMASTER.

W. W. Montgomery, to be postmaster at Bellefonte, in the county of Center and State of Pennsylvania, in the place of D. F. Fortney, whose commission expired April 11, 1898.

CIRCUIT JUDGE.

William R. Day, of Ohio, to be United States circuit judge for the Sixth judicial circuit, as provided for by the act of Congress approved January 25, 1899.

SURVEYOR OF CUSTOMS.

Jeremiah J. McCarthy, of Massachusetts, to be surveyor of customs in the district of Boston and Charlestown, in the State of Massachusetts, to succeed Daniel F. Buckley, whose term of office has expired by limitation.

APPRAISERS.

S. Stillman Blanchard, of Massachusetts, to be appraiser of merchandise in the district of Boston and Charlestown, in the State of Massachusetts, to succeed Albert B. Stearns, removed.

POSTMASTERS.

David Cammack, to be postmaster at Muncie, in the county of Delaware and State of Indiana, in the place of Edward Tuhey, removed.

Roger H. Murphey, to be postmaster at Urbana, in the county of Champaign and State of Ohio, in the place of Maryneal H. Smith, deceased.

PROMOTIONS IN THE ARMY.

Corps of Engineers.

Second Lieut. Louis C. Wolf, to be first lieutenant, October 26, 1898, vice Harts, promoted.

Second Lieut. Sherwood A. Cheney, to be first lieutenant, January 26, 1899, vice Echols, appointed associate professor at the Military Academy, who resigns his commission in the corps.

Cavalry arm.

Maj. Almond B. Wells, Eighth Cavalry, to be lieutenant-colonel, February 14, 1899, vice Norvell, Ninth Cavalry, retired from active service.

Capt. Earl D. Thomas, Fifth Cavalry, to be major, February 14, 1899, vice Wells, Eighth Cavalry, promoted.

First Lieut. Samuel D. Freeman, Tenth Cavalry, to be captain, February 14, 1899, vice Thomas, Fifth Cavalry, promoted.

Second Lieut. Julian R. Lindsey, Ninth Cavalry, to be first lieutenant, February 14, 1899, vice Freeman, Tenth Cavalry, promoted.

Artillery arm.

Lieut. Col. Henry C. Hasbrouck, Fourth Artillery, to be colonel, February 13, 1899, vice Sinclair, Seventh Artillery, appointed brigadier-general.

Maj. George B. Rodney, Fourth Artillery, to be lieutenant-colonel, February 13, 1899, vice Hasbrouck, Fourth Artillery, promoted.

Maj. Carle A. Woodruff, Second Artillery, to be lieutenant-colonel, February 13, 1899, vice Ramsay, Seventh Artillery, deceased.

Capt. Frederick Fuger, Fourth Artillery, to be major, February 13, 1899, vice Rodney, Fourth Artillery, promoted.

Capt. John C. Scantling, Second Artillery, to be major, February 13, 1899, vice Woodruff, Second Artillery, promoted.

First Lieut. Charles G. Woodward, Third Artillery, to be captain, February 13, 1899, vice Fuger, Fourth Artillery, promoted.

First Lieut. Edward E. Gayle, Second Artillery, to be captain, February 13, 1899, vice Scantling, Second Artillery, promoted.

Second Lieut. Frank E. Harris, First Artillery, to be first lieutenant, February 13, 1899, vice Woodward, Third Artillery, promoted.

Second Lieut. George Blakely, Second Artillery, to be first lieutenant, February 13, 1899, vice Gayle, Second Artillery, promoted.

Infantry arm.

First Lieut. Tredwell W. Moore, Twenty-second Infantry, to be captain, January 16, 1899, vice Ebstein, Twenty-first Infantry, promoted.

First Lieut. Raymond R. Stevens, Twenty-third Infantry, to be captain, February 6, 1899, vice Richards, Sixteenth Infantry, promoted.

Second Lieut. James W. Clinton, Seventh Infantry, to be first lieutenant, January 16, 1899, vice Moore, Twenty-second Infantry, promoted.

Second Lieut. Alexander T. Ovenshire, Seventeenth Infantry, to be first lieutenant, February 6, 1899, vice Stevens, Twenty-third Infantry, promoted.

Second Lieut. Henry E. Eames, Nineteenth Infantry, to be first lieutenant, February 6, 1899, vice Mitchell, Fourteenth Infantry, deceased.

Second Lieut. Robert Field, Fourteenth Infantry, to be first lieutenant, February 11, 1899, vice Russ, Eleventh Infantry, deceased.

WITHDRAWAL.

Executive nomination withdrawn February 25, 1899.

POSTMASTER.

Roger H. Murphy, to be postmaster at Urbana, in the State of Ohio.

CONFIRMATION.

Executive nomination confirmed by the Senate February 25, 1899.

POSTMASTER.

W. W. Montgomery, to be postmaster at Bellefonte, in the county of Center and State of Pennsylvania.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

SATURDAY, February 25, 1899.

The House met at 11 o'clock a. m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. HENRY N. COUDEN.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

CLEARWATER SHORT LINE RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 5427) granting to the Clearwater Short Line Railway Company a right of way through the Nez Perces Indian lands in Idaho.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the right of way is hereby granted to the Clearwater Short Line Railway Company, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Montana, and its successors and assigns, for the construction and operation of its railroad and telegraph lines through the Nez Perces Indian Reservation in the State of Idaho, and also through lands formerly embraced within said reservation which have been allotted to the individual members of the Nez Perces tribe of Indians, beginning at a point on the western boundary of the said Nez Perces Indian Reservation, to the east boundary line of said Nez Perces Indian Reservation, together with a branch therefrom beginning at or near Spalding town site, in section 22, of township 36 north, of range 4 west, Boise meridian, and extending to the south line of said Indian reservation.

SEC. 2. That the right of way hereby granted shall be 50 feet in width on each side of the central line of said railroad as aforesaid, and said company shall also have the right to take from said lands adjacent to the line of said road material, stone, earth, and timber necessary for the construction of said railroad; also ground adjacent to such right of way for station buildings, depots, and machine shops, side tracks, turn-outs, and water stations, not to exceed in amount 300 feet in width and 3,000 feet in length for each station, to the extent of one station for each 10 miles of road.

SEC. 3. That before said railroad shall be constructed through any land, claim, or improvement held by individual occupants or owners according to any treaties or laws of the United States, compensation shall be made such occupant or owner or claimant for all property to be taken or made done by reason of the construction of such railroad. In case of failure to make satisfactory settlement with any such claimant the district court of the State of Idaho for the county within which such land may be situated shall have jurisdiction, upon petition of either party, to determine such just compensation in accordance with the laws of the State of Idaho provided for determining the damage when property is taken for railroad purposes, and such compensation shall be determined as provided for by the laws of the State of Idaho; and the amount of damages resulting to the tribe of Indians pertaining to such reservation in their tribal capacity by reason of the construction of said railroad through such lands of the reservation as are not occupied in severalty, and the time and manner of making payment therefor, shall be ascertained and determined in such manner as the Secretary of the Interior may direct, and be subject to his final approval.

SEC. 4. That said company shall cause maps showing the route of its line through said reservation and allotted lands, including the grounds for station buildings, depots, machine shops, side tracks, turn-outs, and water stations, to be filed in the office of the Secretary of the Interior before constructing any portion of said railroad.

SEC. 5. That the rights herein granted shall be forfeited by said company unless the road shall be constructed through the said reservation and allotted lands within three years after the passage of this act.

SEC. 6. That nothing herein contained shall restrict or impair the rights which said company may now have or hereafter acquire to the benefits and provisions of the act of Congress approved March 3, 1875, entitled "An act granting to railroads the right of way through the public lands of the United States."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time; and accordingly it was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. SHERMAN, a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the bill was passed was laid on the table.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, I have several resolutions from the Committee on Printing for which I ask present consideration.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the first resolution.

COMMERCIAL RELATIONS.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the Public Printer be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to print, for distribution by the Department of State, 5,000 copies of Commercial Relations, 1898, and (in separate form) 10,000 copies of the Review of the World's Commerce, etc., being part of said Commercial Relations.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The concurrent resolution was agreed to.

STATISTICAL ABSTRACT OF THE UNITED STATES.

The next business was a concurrent Senate resolution; which was read by the Clerk, as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there be printed 12,000 additional copies of the Statistical Abstract of the United States for the year 1898, prepared by the Bureau of Statistics, Treasury Department; 3,000 copies for the Senate, 6,000 for the House of Representatives, and 3,000 for the Bureau of Statistics, Treasury Department.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the concurrent resolution?

There was no objection.

The concurrent resolution was agreed to.

MAPS OF ALASKA.

The next business was the Senate joint resolution (S. R. 239) authorizing the Director of the Geological Survey to prepare maps of Alaska, showing all known topographic and geologic features, etc.

The Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives, etc., That the Director of the Geological Survey is hereby authorized and directed to prepare maps of Alaska, showing all known topographic and geologic features, including what is known of the gold-bearing rocks, and a text of the same, the text to contain also an explanation of the best known routes and methods of reaching the gold fields; 20,000 copies of the maps and text to be printed, 5,000 for the use of the Senate, 10,000 for the use of the House of Representatives, and 5,000 for distribution by the Geological Survey; and the Director is authorized to have said maps and text prepared and printed in the engraving and printing division of the Geological Survey; and $4,200 is hereby appropriated for the purpose, and that this appropriation be made immediately available.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

There was no objection.

The joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time; accordingly it was read the third time, and passed.

REPORT ON THE FINANCIAL AND INDUSTRIAL CONDITIONS OF THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

The next resolution was the Senate joint resolution (S. R. 202) providing for the printing of the Report on the Financial and Industrial Conditions of the Philippine Islands, by Edward W. Harden, special commissioner of the United States.

The Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there be printed 9,000 copies of the Report on the Financial and Industrial Conditions of the Philippine Islands, by Edward W. Harden, special commissioner of the United States; 3,000 copies for the use of the Senate, 5,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and 1,000 copies for the use of the Treasury Department.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time; and accordingly it was read the third time.

Mr. COX. I would like to make this inquiry: Is that subject to amendment?

The SPEAKER. It is not subject to amendment; it has passed the amendment stage.

Mr. COX. I am always past the stage. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER. The question now is on the passage.

The joint resolution was passed.

THE COLONIAL SYSTEMS OF THE WORLD.

The next resolution was the concurrent resolution No. 59.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved by the Senate of the United States (the House of Representatives concurring), That there be printed 10,500 copies of the report entitled "The Colonial Systems of the World," prepared by the Bureau of Statistics, Treasury Department, 5,000 copies for the use of members of the House of Representatives, 3,000 copies for the use of members of the Senate, and 2,500 copies for the use of the Bureau of Statistics, Treasury Department.

Mr. COX. Now, Mr. Speaker, I think I am in time, and I offer the following amendment.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the proposed amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Add as a new paragraph:
"That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, directed to print and publish 12,000 copies of maps of the island of Cuba similar and alike to those lately published by the War Department, 8,000 for the use of the House, 2,000 for the use of the Senate, and 2,000 for the War Department, the same to be paid for out of the appropriations for the War Department."

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, I think I shall have to make a point of order on that that it is not germane.

The SPEAKER. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, the Chair has not heard me.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will retract his decision and hear the gentleman.

Mr. COX. No, Mr. Speaker, I agree with the Chair; but if the House is going to publish maps of Alaska and everything else, why should it not publish the maps of Cuba when there is a demand from the Adjutant-General of the United States that they be published? I do not see why the gentleman from Iowa will not let us have the Cuban maps. It is close to my country, and I hope the gentleman will yield. If he is going to make points of order against me, I shall have some trouble with him directly. [Laughter.]

Mr. PERKINS. I will say to the gentleman from Tennessee that the resolution he has in mind is not before our committee, but is before the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. COX. It has been unanimously reported by that committee.

Mr. PERKINS. It is not before our committee.

Mr. COX. Well, I think our committee is just as good as yours. [Laughter.]

Mr. PERKINS. There is no doubt; but you want to do this printing of the map in a different way from what we propose.

Mr. COX. Very well. I will withdraw the proposition for the present, hoping to have an opportunity to get recognition to call it up hereafter.

The SPEAKER. The amendment is withdrawn.

The concurrent resolution was adopted.

REPORT ON PRODUCTION OF GOLD AND SILVER.

Mr. PERKINS. I want to ask to call up the concurrent resolution H. R. 62.

The SPEAKER. The resolution will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there be printed and bound in cloth, for the use of the Director of the Mint, 3,000 extra copies of the Report on the Production of Gold and Silver for the calendar year 1897.

Mr. BAILEY. I desire to ask the gentleman if this is a privileged resolution?

Mr. PERKINS. It is not.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has asked unanimous consent.

Mr. BAILEY. I have no objection, provided the resolution is confined to the mere question of the production of the precious metals in the United States. But I never intend, if I can prevent it, that that Department shall again make another argument in connection with the subject in its reports.

Mr. PERKINS. This simply states the facts and figures.

Mr. BAILEY. Then I have no personal objection to its consideration.

The concurrent resolution was considered, and agreed to.

RECONSIDERATION.

On motion of Mr. PERKINS, a motion to reconsider the various votes by which the resolutions from the Committee on Printing were agreed to was laid on the table.

PUBLIC LOT, ST. AUGUSTINE, FLA.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (S. 2675) authorizing the exchange of lot 6, of square 10, known as the old custom-house lot, in the city of St. Augustine, Fla., for lands adjoining that part of the United States military reservation in said city designated as the powder-house lot.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read, subject to the right of objection.

The bill was read at length.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, this seems to be a complicated real-estate transaction, and I think in the brief time we have to-day that we can hardly get sufficient information about it to act intelligently upon it. I think I shall have to object to its consideration. Let it go over.

Mr. BAILEY. I suggest to the gentleman from Florida that he allow the matter to lie over, in view of the objections which have been made, with the privilege of being recognized to call it up again hereafter.

Mr. PAYNE. The gentleman can, no doubt, secure recognition at some other time; and being, as I have said, a complicated matter, we had better have a little more time to consider it.

Mr. DAVIS. I think I can explain to the gentleman in half a minute. This is a Senate bill passed by that body—

Mr. PAYNE. That does not explain it.

Mr. DAVIS (continuing). And the piece of property in the city of St. Augustine to which reference is made in the bill, and which is owned by the Government, is abandoned property of very little value except to the gentleman whose property it adjoins. And the gentleman with whom the exchange is proposed to be made owns a larger piece of property adjoining the barracks belonging to the Government, which, if acquired by the Government by this exchange, will enable it to extend the buildings whose extension is very much needed.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I am not willing to let this pass without looking into it further.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

Mr. DAVIS. I ask that it lie over for the present.

Mr. PAYNE. I object to the consideration. The gentleman can call it up again if he secures recognition for that purpose.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

EDWIN L. FIELD.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 3808) for the relief of Edwin L. Field, of Gray, Cumberland County, Me.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to Edwin L. Field, of Gray, Me., $3,700, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, being the amount of a judgment against him recovered by James B. Atkins for personal injuries sustained by the piling of a guy to a derrick owned by the United States while being used by the War Department in the construction of the two-gun battery at Portland Head, in the town of Cape Elizabeth, Me., provided said Field produces evidence satisfactory to said Secretary that he has paid said judgment.

Mr. COX. From what committee does that come?

Mr. MANN. From the Committee on Claims.

Mr. COX. What State is the party a resident of?

Mr. DOCKERY. I reserve the right to object.

Mr. MANN. The person resides in Maine. He was foreman under the United States Government in the matter of construction—

Mr. BAILEY. I suggest, Mr. Speaker, that it would take just as much time to get information as to the merits of this bill as that to which objection was made a few moments ago. I think those that would require time, in view of the objection made by the gentleman from New York, should go over, and take up those that will require no explanation and dispose of them.

Mr. MANN. If the gentleman will not object, it will not take a moment to explain the matter.

Mr. BAILEY. It involves the responsibility of the Government for damages sustained by the use of an appliance that belonged to a contractor, or at least to a third party—

Mr. MANN. No, Mr. Speaker; and if the gentleman will pardon me, the appliances belonged to the Government and were being operated by the Government. A man was in charge as foreman.

Mr. BAILEY. Then, if the gentleman will pardon me, how did they get a judgment against somebody else?

Mr. MANN. Well, that is one of the mysteries—

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. MANN. If the gentleman will pardon me, just for a moment—

The SPEAKER. Objection is made by the gentleman from Tennessee.

COMPENSATION FOR PROPERTY IN YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK.

Mr. HARTMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 1040) to provide compensation for a bridge and for buildings and other improvements constructed by certain persons upon public lands afterwards set apart and reserved as the Yellowstone National Park.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc. That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the several persons in this act named the several sums mentioned herein, to be received and accepted in each case as full and final compensation for a certain bridge, buildings, and other improvements constructed and made by said persons upon public lands afterwards reserved and set apart as the Yellowstone National Park by the act of March 1, 1872, namely:

To C. J. Baronett, of Gardiner, Mont., for the bridge known as "Baronett's Bridge," over the Yellowstone River, and the approaches thereto, $5,000.

To James C. McCartney, of Gardiner, Mont., for certain buildings at or near Mammoth Hot Springs taken and used by the United States, $3,000.

To Matthew McGuirk, of Los Angeles, Cal., for certain buildings at or near Mammoth Hot Springs taken and used by the United States, $1,000.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I simply desire to ask the gentleman from Montana if this property was taken by the Government or by some contractor?

Mr. HARTMAN. It was taken by the Government.

Mr. BAILEY. Under the authority of the Government?

Mr. HARTMAN. Under the authority of the Government.

Mr. BAILEY. And no payments have ever been made?

Mr. HARTMAN. No payments have ever been made of any kind.

Mr. BAILEY. It seems to me there has been a good deal of delay about the matter.

Mr. LACEY. The statement made by the gentleman from Montana does not strictly cover all the details of the matter, but I can explain it in a moment.

Mr. DOCKERY. Reserving the right to object—

The SPEAKER. The Chair will see on all these matters that there is no swiftswiftness to prevent any gentleman objecting who desires, because this legislation requires the careful scrutiny of each member.

Mr. LACEY. Whilst my friend from Montana is accurate in a general way, it perhaps conveys a wrong impression to the gentleman from Texas. This property was not taken by the United States, but the United States created a national park, including this property within its limits, and excluded everybody from coming in. Subsequently the Government used the property, with the consent of the owners, and for the last six or eight years the Secretary of the Interior in his annual report has every year asked Congress to fairly compensate these three parties, so that all vestige of private title in the park might be eliminated. These three or perhaps four parties—

Mr. HARTMAN. Three only.

Mr. LACEY. Are the only private individuals who have any such interest in the national park. The buildings have been destroyed, but the bridge is still in condition to be used.

Mr. HARTMAN. And is still being used.

Mr. DALZELL. Why did these persons put these improvements on Government property?

Mr. HARTMAN. They did not. It was unsurveyed land.

Mr. LACEY. When the improvements were put there it was unsurveyed and unreserved land. The bridge was built on a toll road, and the buildings were erected by settlers under the public-land laws. An act of Congress was passed to create a national park including the curiosities of the Yellowstone; but these buildings and improvements had been constructed before that.

Mr. BURKE. Did these people own the land on which these improvements were constructed?

Mr. LACEY. They had taken claims.

Mr. BURKE. Then, if the Government bought the land, why did it not pay for it?

Mr. LACEY. The Government did not buy the land. These persons had taken claims on unreserved public land.

Mr. BURKE. They were trespassers.

Mr. LACEY. No; not at all. The law authorized that, and this land had not at that time been set apart as a national park. When it was so reserved, the Government refused to perfect the title of these parties and took possession of the buildings and used them.

Mr. HARTMAN. And took possession of the bridge.

Mr. LACEY. And of the bridge also.

Mr. HARTMAN. And it is being used to-day in the transportation of passengers through the park.

Mr. LACEY. It is a matter very much desired by the Government, and has been for a number of years.

Mr. DOCKERY. Has it been reported upon by your committee?

Mr. LACEY. Yes; three or four times, and has passed the Senate.

Mr. SHAFROTH. It is unanimously reported.

Mr. DOCKERY. I do not object to the bill. On the statement of the gentleman from Iowa it seems to be very proper, but it appears that this bill is reported by the Committee on Public Lands. It is nothing but a claim.

Mr. LACEY. No; it is entirely different from a claim. It is more than a claim. It involves the extinguishment of private claim to title.

Mr. DOCKERY. This has occurred over and over again where a gentleman who is a member of a committee has introduced a bill and had it go to his own committee through the box.

Mr. HARTMAN. But I am not a member of the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. SHAFROTH. The gentleman from Montana is not a member of that committee.

Mr. LACEY. We at one time tried to get rid of this bill by sending it to the Committee on Private Land Claims or the Committee on Claims—

Mr. DOCKERY. I do not complain of the judgment of this committee, a proper conclusion, but I think the rule as to claims should be enforced.

Mr. LACEY. The reason it goes to the Committee on Public Lands is because it proposed an acquisition and was not a mere claim for damages. It provides for the acquisition of the title to the bridge and this property, and as the Public Lands Committee has had charge of the Yellowstone matters, it came to that committee.

Mr. HARTMAN. I ask for a vote, Mr. Speaker.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. HARTMAN, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

TOLEDO CENTENNIAL.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to print in the RECORD the proclamation of the governor of Ohio in relation to the Toledo Centennial.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio asks unanimous consent that the proclamation of the governor of Ohio may be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. GROSVENOR. It relates to the Toledo Centennial. It is made in pursuance of a statute of the State.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The proclamation is as follows:

In the name and by the authority of the State of Ohio. Executive department.

PROCLAMATION.

On November 29, 1802, by adoption of a constitution, which was recognized by the Congress of the United States by the act of February 19, 1803, the people of Ohio inaugurated the State and secured its admission to the Union. This was the first encroachment upon the vast and rich Northwest Territory, which was instituted by the ordinance of 1787, and which, after the war for independence, became the scene of many of the most stirring events of an important historical era. The sturdy and adventurous pioneers from the South and East, aided by the colonists from far New England, who at Marietta found a second Plymouth Rock in the wilderness, had laid a firm foundation upon which the structure of the civilization of Ohio was reared. To the broad and fertile fields and the thriving villages which offered the hope of adequate rewards for the industry of the husbandman and an opportunity for the artisan, there came speedily a population which established the character of the generations succeeding and thus provided for the youthful State strong, resolute, and resourceful men and courageous, helpful, and able women. All did their part, and the advance of public and private interests was steady and healthy. A marvelous development ensued. Agriculture and commerce, manufacturing and mining found wonderful expression in Ohio, the result being that in the present day there is literally an increase of an hundredfold.

The proud record thus established and the near approach of the centennial period of the State inspired the people of Ohio with the desire to commemorate fittingly the epoch which would mark the end of a century's glorious history. In recognition of this sentiment the general assembly of Ohio, by a joint resolution adopted April 21, 1898, indorsed the purpose and chose the city of Toledo as the place for an exposition which would be illustrative of not only the progress of our citizenship, but also of the achievements of our sister States of the Northwest Territory, and of all the States of the Union. It was declared that this celebration, which primarily would honor the hundredth anniversary of the beginning of our State, should be so broad in scope, ambitious in design, and perfect in detail as to typify the results attained by the American nation and by the countries of the world in the opening years of the new century. The preliminary work in connection with the proposed centennial celebration has been well performed and there is promise of complete success in the undertaking.

Therefore, pursuant to the mandate of the general assembly of Ohio, and by request of the Ohio centennial commission, a body appointed under law to assist in the preparation for the exposition, this proclamation is issued to announce to the General Government of the United States, to the American States, and to the various countries of the world, that the centennial anniversary of the State of Ohio will be celebrated in the year of 1902-3. And further, it is the purpose hereby to extend a cordial invitation to all governments and peoples to participate in the exposition by making exhibits of their products of every class and by accrediting representatives. Under the favorable auspices which it is believed will mark the history of this project, the Ohio centennial exposition will be a worthy memorial to the triumphs of the past and an augury for even greater honor and success in the future.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto subscribed my name and caused the great seal of the State of Ohio to be affixed at Columbus, the 21st day of February, in the year of our Lord 1899, and in the one hundred and twenty-third year of the independence of the United States of America.

[SEAL.]
By the governor:
CHARLES KINNEY,
Secretary of State.

ASA S. BUSHNELL,
Governor of Ohio.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the purpose of further considering the Army bill.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker—

DAILY HOUR OF MEETING.

Mr. HENDERSON. Mr. Speaker, pending that motion, I would like to call the attention of the House to the fact that only one week of this Congress remains, with three general appropriation bills to pass, and only three have gone to the President. I therefore ask unanimous consent that the sessions of this House during the balance of the session commence at 11 a. m. instead of 12.

Mr. BAILEY. I think that is desirable, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa asks unanimous consent that the daily sessions shall commence at 11 o'clock instead of 12. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. HULL. I will withdraw my motion until the matters on the Speaker's table can be disposed of.

The SPEAKER. The Chair would like that to be done, because there are but few remaining.

WILLIAM HENRY WOODWARD.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the bill (H. R. 3297) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of William Henry Woodward, with the following Senate amendment:

In line 8, after "discharge," insert "as of date December 4, 1865."

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the amendment be concurred in.

The motion was agreed to.

RESURVEY OF CERTAIN LANDS IN CHEYENNE COUNTY, NEBR.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the bill (H. R. 8739) to authorize a resurvey of certain lands in Cheyenne County, in the State of Nebraska, and for other purposes, with the following Senate amendment:

Strike out the preamble.

The Senate amendment was concurred in.

WILLIAM BRITTON.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the bill (H. R. 5740) to remove the charge of desertion against William Britton, with the following Senate amendments:

In line 7 strike out "fifth" and insert "fourth."

In lines 7 and 8 strike out "sixty-three" and insert "sixty-four."

In line 8, after "pay," insert "allowance."

In line 9 strike out "fifth" and insert "fourth."

In line 10 strike out "sixty-three" and insert "sixty-four."

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I move to concur. It simply changes the date.

The amendments were concurred in.

ADDITIONAL INDEBTEDNESS OF THE TERRITORY OF NEW MEXICO.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the bill (S. 5169) authorizing the legislative assembly of the Territory of New Mexico to create an additional indebtedness for the completion and furnishing of the Territorial capitol.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc. That the legislative assembly of the Territory of New Mexico is hereby authorized to cause to be issued bonds of the Territory for the sum of $80,000 for the purpose of raising the necessary additional funds for the completion and furnishing of the Territorial capitol now in course of erection at Santa Fe: Provided, That the interest on such bonds shall be made payable in lawful money of the United States, the rate of interest not to exceed 5 per cent per annum: Provided further, That such bonds shall not be sold for less than par nor shall any part or portion of the proceeds thereof be used for any other purpose than that herein specified: And provided further, That nothing in this act shall be so construed as to make the Government of the United States liable or responsible for the payment of any of said debt by this act authorized to be contracted.

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Speaker, is this a Senate bill?

The SPEAKER. It is a Senate bill. There is a House bill of a similar character is the reason why it is on the Speaker's table.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I renew my motion.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa moves that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the purpose of considering the Army appropriation bill.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, Mr. HOPKINS in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the Army appropriation bill, and by direction of the House general debate is closed, and the Clerk will now read the bill by paragraphs.

The Clerk read as follows:

ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT.

For contingent expenses at the headquarters of the several military departments and in inspection districts, including the staff corps serving thereat, except the department judge-advocates, being for the purchase of the necessary articles of office, toilet, and desk furniture, binding, maps, books of reference, professional newspapers and periodicals, and police utensils, $3,000, to be allotted by the Secretary of War, and to be expended in the discretion of the several military department commanders.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, that concludes the reading of one paragraph. I move to strike out, in line 13, on page 1, the words "and in inspection districts." I will state that is done in response to a letter of the War Department, in which they give the following reason:

These words should be omitted, as the inspection districts established by General Orders of March 30, 1895, on lines independent of departmental limits, were virtually abolished by the provisions of General Orders No. 11, of March 23, 1896, which placed inspectors-general or acting inspectors-general assigned to a military department under the immediate direction of its commanding general.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For contingent expenses of the military information division, Adjutant-General's Office, including the purchase of law books, books of reference, periodicals and newspapers, and of the military attachés at the United States embassies and legations abroad, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War, $3,640.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out "three" and insert "six," and submit the following explanation from the War Department:

The creation of a number of military departments beyond the limits of the United States made necessary an increase of the contingent fund for the several departments, and on December 2, 1898, a supplemental estimate ($3,000) was submitted for the service of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900. It is noticed, however, that the bill appropriates only $3,000, and while it may be possible that the supplemental estimate may be provided for in some other bill, it is suggested whether the entire amount ($6,000) deemed necessary should not be appropriated in this bill. This can readily be effected by substituting the word "six" for the word "three."

Mr. DOCKERY. This is an increase of this amount?

Mr. HULL. It increases the amount $3,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Contingencies of the Army: For all contingent expenses of the Army not provided for by other estimates, and embracing all branches of the military service, to be expended under the immediate orders of the Secretary of War, $200,000.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I had on a previous occasion, in the course, I think, of the debate on the sundry civil appropriation bill, stated that in my opinion the appropriation in this bill would not be sufficient for the Army, and in that statement I was backed up by the distinguished gentleman from Illinois, chairman of the Committee on Appropriations of this House. This bill appropriates $79,500,000 for the support of an army of 100,000 enlisted men, besides about 4,000 officers.

Mr. HULL. Oh, no.

Mr. HAY. I hold in my hand the Senate bill, reported on yesterday, which provides for 100,000 enlisted men, and the officers will be increased by not less than 4,000. It was stated in the hearings before the Committee on Military Affairs that $1,000 was necessary to maintain a man in the Army of the United States for one year in the United States proper, and that $1,500 was necessary to maintain a soldier abroad.

Therefore if we compute that one-half of these soldiers will serve abroad and the other half in this country, then the cost of the Army will not be less than $125,000,000 a year. It is impossible for us to believe that there can be such a great saving so suddenly effected in the maintenance of our standing Army. It is said repeatedly that if anything should happen by which this appropriation should not be sufficient, it could be covered in the deficiency bill next December.

The whole purpose, I believe, is not to let the country into the fact that this army is going to cost a great amount of money. It is well known that an army of 100,000 men can not be maintained for less than $100,000,000 per year; the failure to make the necessary appropriation will not deceive anybody.

As a matter of fact, you are spending more for these 100,000 men than is expended by Austria for her army on a peace basis. You will expend, by the time the various expenditures for these purposes are footed up, for the end of the fiscal year beginning the 1st of July, 1899, as much on your standing Army as is spent by Germany and Austria for their two great standing armies.

The minority members of the committee did not vote for the bill, because at that time it was not known how many men would have to be provided for; because, in fact, we were working in the dark, and to-day we are still ignorant.

Mr. HULL. Replying to that at this time, Mr. Chairman, I hold in my hand the bill that has been reported favorably in the Senate, and if it shall become a law, there is no doubt but what there will be a deficiency of large proportions. It appropriates for 55 new regiments of infantry where the House provided for 30. It provides for a large staff of officers, which will make an increase over that provided in the House bill. So that I concede that if that becomes a law there will be a deficiency.

Under the House bill there was only 97,000 enlisted men in all the different branches of the Army, the artillery, the cavalry, infantry, Engineer Corps, and the Hospital Corps, while under this bill there may be 100,000 enlisted men alone, and in addition to that, there will be the officers of 20 additional regiments of infantry. So there will be a deficiency if that becomes a law. But the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. HAY] must know that such a proposition as that embraces, so far as the large number of regiments are concerned, substantially his bill.

Mr. HAY. No; I never offered to provide—

Mr. HULL. You did not offer to provide so many regulars.

Mr. HAY. My bill only provided for 80,000 men—regulars and volunteer forces.

Mr. HULL. I am talking about the temporary force.

Mr. HAY. So am I.

Mr. HULL. The committee in considering this bill had certain propositions before them, but we could not look into the future and tell what the gentlemen sitting at the other end of the Capitol were determined to force upon the House, and we have been compelled to figure on the best obtainable information we could get. I say to the House and to the country now that if the bill that passed the House could be enacted into law, this bill, in place of a deficiency, would carry more money than would be required for the support of the Army for the ensuing year. But on the prospective Senate bill there will be a deficiency.

Mr. SMITH of Kentucky. Will the chairman of the committee allow me a question?

Mr. HULL. Certainly.

Mr. SMITH of Kentucky. Assuming that the bill reported in the Senate yesterday afternoon becomes a law, about what will be the deficiency in the appropriation?

Mr. HULL. It will be in the line of the Army. There will be a difference of enlisted men and, I should think, 1,000 officers to pay for, and what that deficiency will be requires close figuring of the whole list in order to arrive at it. I should think it would cost at least from two to five million dollars extra, on that line.

The Clerk, proceeding with the reading of the bill, read as follows:

United States service schools: To provide means for the theoretical and practical instruction at the artillery school at Fort Monroe, Va.; the infantry and cavalry school at Fort Leavenworth, Kans.; and the cavalry and light-artillery school at Fort Riley, Kans., by the purchase of text-books, books of reference, scientific and professional papers, and for all other absolutely necessary expenses, to be allotted in such proportions as may, in the opinion of the Secretary of War, be for the best interest of the military service, $8,500.

The Clerk, proceeding with the reading of the bill, read as follows:

PAY OF OFFICERS OF THE LINE.

For pay of officers of the line, $4,000,000.

For pay of officers for length of service, to be paid with their current monthly pay, $235,000.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I want to improve this opportunity to say one word further with reference to the question that was raised here on yesterday. The Chair will remember that in the confusion of debate the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. JOHNSON] asked unanimous consent to print with his speech the speech of the President of the United States recently made in Boston. I raised the question as to whether that could be done under the authority granted by the House. By reference to the RECORD it will be seen that the consent of the House was given upon the request of the gentleman from New York [Mr. SULZER], in these words:

Mr. SULZER. I ask unanimous consent that all gentlemen who may speak on this bill may have leave to extend their remarks in the RECORD.

My understanding is that under that leave any gentleman speaking on this bill would have authority to extend his remarks in the RECORD, but would not have authority to insert in the RECORD the remarks of any other gentleman. He would not have authority to incorporate in the RECORD a reprint of any speech delivered elsewhere or any book or any public document.

Mr. VINCENT. Suppose he should quote from the Declaration of Independence, would that be out of order?

Mr. PERKINS. I think anything which he would naturally put into a speech by the way of quotation, by way of amplification, by way of citation, in connection with his remarks, of course, would be permissible.

But, Mr. Chairman, upon a moment's reflection it can be seen to what abuses any such interpretation of the consent of the House might extend. Some of the members present will doubtless recollect that a few years ago an entire book was printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD and afterwards was circulated as a public document.

Now, it is certainly not the purpose or the intention of the House to engage in this sort of business. The leave to print does not extend that far.

And again, sir, when on this subject let me state that I suppose my attention, as chairman of the Committee on Printing, has been more directly called to this abuse of the privilege accorded to members than possibly that of any other gentleman on the floor of the House. It is natural that it should be so.

The CONGRESSIONAL RECORD is of course a matter entirely within the keeping of the House, so far as its proceedings are concerned. But my attention was called, and has been repeatedly called, to the constant and steady increase of the printing bills of the United States. In the sundry civil appropriation bill passed the other day—one single bill—we appropriated money aggregating $4,750,000 for printing, not including the printing of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. We are constantly and enormously increasing the printing bills of the Government. Gentlemen here who haggle over an appropriation of a few hundred dollars unfortunately will readily consent to the printing of a matter which involves thousands upon thousands of dollars for the mere privilege of gaining a few copies of a given document for themselves or their constituents.

Now, my judgment is that it would be well if we abolished the folding room altogether. In the matter of whatever reform may be effected touching the public printing, of course the responsibility is largely upon the members of the House.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Will the gentleman allow me to interrupt him for a question for information?

Mr. PERKINS. Yes.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I want to ask the gentleman—

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. SHAFROTH and Mr. LOW asked unanimous consent that the time of Mr. PERKINS be extended for five minutes.

Mr. SHAFROTH. My purpose in asking the extension, Mr. Chairman, is to be permitted to ask a question which I think the House would like to be informed upon, as to whether there has been an increase in recent years—

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. The gentleman from Colorado asks unanimous consent that the gentleman may be permitted to proceed for five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Now, will the gentleman inform us whether there has been an increase in recent years in the cost of printing for the Government which involves the RECORD only?

Mr. PERKINS. I will say in response to the interrogatory of the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. SHAFROTH] that there is not a single line in which the cost of the printing has not been greatly increased in recent years.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Can you give us about the rate of increase?

Mr. PERKINS. Oh, no. When you come to segregate the amounts which aggregate the total cost, involving the cost of the RECORD, of course I can not say. For one thing, the number of copies of the RECORD which are given to each member for distribution has been increased. Of course, this increases the cost of the RECORD. The estimate of the Public Printer on the cost of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD is $8 a copy for the long session and $4 for the short session. So that in the increase merely in the number of copies accorded to members for distribution, without reference to the cost of the printing, there is a considerable increase in the cost.

Again, the habit has grown up here on the floor, for the purpose of shortening the time of general debate on particular bills, and, on various occasions, for the purpose of advancing a measure, to grant leave to members generally to print remarks in the RECORD. That is just the same privilege that we have given now to every member who may have spoken or who may speak on the pending bill—to extend, to any limit he pleases, his remarks in the RECORD.

There is no censorship over the RECORD in that regard. Each member on the floor is placed on his personal honor as to what he may insert. Any member can take anything he pleases and send it to the desk, and it will be inserted in the RECORD under what is assumed to be his privilege. After it is printed the question may come up as to whether it has been properly inserted or not; but of course the expense has been already involved and whatever abuse there may be in it perpetrated.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Do I understand the gentleman to claim that he is promoting a reform in this particular regard?

Mr. PERKINS. Oh, Mr. Chairman, when I became the chairman of the Committee on Printing I had an idea that there might be some reform in the matter of the public printing. I introduced a bill, had it referred to the committee, and it was considered and passed by the House, which had for its purpose a saving in expenditure on the part of the Government. Not only would it have effected the saving of a large amount of money to the Treasury, but it would have expedited greatly the distribution of public documents. But I met so much opposition here and elsewhere that the bill failed to become a law.

The Joint Committee on Printing now have under consideration some measure that may be introduced in the next Congress. I hope such a measure may be framed. I hope the members of that Congress may see it as a part of their public duty to second such a reform; but whether it will ever come about I do not know.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I do not know that I have anything further to say. I did not know that I would have another opportunity to speak upon this subject, and so I desired to improve this opportunity to say this much.

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Chairman, in the absence of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. JOHNSON], I desire to say simply a word. I do so because the criticism which seems to be made against the gentleman from Indiana would apply with as much force to myself and every other member on the floor as to that gentleman. If I understand the position of the gentleman from Iowa, it is this, that under a leave to print or to extend remarks a member is limited to his own remarks. In other words, he is forbidden to make any quotation from the President's message or any other document.

Mr. PERKINS. I did not say that, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. DOCKERY. Then I misunderstood the gentleman.

Mr. PERKINS. In response to a question that was propounded to me here I said that anything in the orderly line of a gentleman's remarks, or a quotation or citation, would be perfectly proper.

Mr. DOCKERY. Then I misunderstood the gentleman. I do not desire to occupy the floor more than a moment. If the gentleman did not desire to be understood as saying that a member under leave to print could not quote from an official report, or from a President's utterance in a public speech, or from a message sent to Congress, of course the criticism I was about to make would not lie.

Mr. PERKINS. I simply had in mind to say that the leave was not so broad that a member without really making any remarks himself could reprint a book or a speech of some other gentleman.

Mr. DOCKERY. Well, I can conceive how there might have been an abuse in printing a book.

Mr. HULL. I should like to rise to a point of order on this. I think the House understands it, and this is not—

Mr. DOCKERY. I am coming right to the point.

Mr. HULL. This is not a debate on the bill at all, and this is the five-minute debate, when the discussion should be confined to the pending measure.

Mr. DOCKERY. I was going to make that very point against the remarks of the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. HULL. I will allow the gentleman to answer that.

Mr. DOCKERY. As I understood him, I wished to correct what seemed to me to be an error. In referring to the leave to print he had been forced into the attitude of violating the rules himself, because he was not addressing himself to the paragraph under consideration. But the gentleman says he did not desire to be understood as saying that a gentleman could not quote from speeches, documents, etc., and if that is true, of course—

Mr. SIMPSON. Will the gentleman from Missouri allow me a suggestion?

Mr. DOCKERY. Certainly.

Mr. SIMPSON. The gentleman from Iowa cited as one of the abuses—in fact, I think he tried to convey the idea that the beginning of this abuse was the so-called conspiracy entered into to print in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD Henry George's Protection and Free Trade. Now, I was one of the arch conspirators who got that book into the RECORD, and it is one of the bright things and one of the best things that has ever appeared in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

Mr. PERKINS. The New Testament would be a good document, too.

Mr. SIMPSON. Well, it is even as good as the New Testament, and I do not know but better. There is a society in Washington here to-day as the result of that effort, and they are getting requests from colleges and men of education, not alone in the United States, but all over the world, for that publication that was given such a great advertisement because it appeared in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

Mr. STEELE. And because it did not cost anything.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I move to strike out the last two words. I wish to say just a word. I will not occupy the time of the committee. The gentleman from Iowa has made certain statements concerning the cost of printing, to which I wish to reply.

Mr. HULL. I wish to suggest that this is absolutely out of order.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I will not take two minutes. It will be better to let me finish what I have to say.

Mr. HULL. After this I shall raise the point of order against gentlemen discussing things that are not relevant.

Mr. SHAFROTH. The gentleman's friend complains that there is a great cost involved in allowing members to extend their remarks in the RECORD. Now, under the rules of this House it becomes almost impossible for a member to say what he wants to say upon any measure that comes before this House, and his only recourse is to put into the RECORD that which he would like to have said upon the floor of the House.

Mr. DOCKERY. He must, under the rules, make his remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I take it, Mr. Chairman, that the cost of printing the RECORD itself has not materially increased in the last ten or fifteen years. I remember the volumes and the size of the volumes of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of the Fifty-first Congress, and I warrant that they are fully as large as the RECORD of the Fifty-fifth Congress, and the abuse which the gentleman has referred to has not grown in that direction. It has grown more in the direction of Congress ordering publications for distribution among the constituents of members.

While there may be some question as to the propriety on occasions on the part of some Congressmen, I have no doubt in the information the people receive there is compensation at least equal to the outlay on the part of the Government. Everybody wants economy in this matter, and there ought not to be an abuse, but to curtail the right of extending remarks in the RECORD would be something very detrimental to the interest of gentlemen of the House.

Mr. HULL. I call attention to the cutting out of $776,000 in this matter. If this bill that the gentleman from Virginia refers to should become law, there will be quite a deficit. Now, in reference to what the gentleman said in respect to the Austrian army. He said that our Army would cost more than the Austrian army at the rate we pay our Army. I want to call the attention of the House to the fact that the Austrian Government gives breakfast and dinner to the soldier and pays him the magnificent sum of 90 cents a month for his services. I do not believe it is a fair comparison to compare the cost of this Government to that of any government making that kind of a provision for men in its service in the army.

Mr. DOCKERY. Just a word. I desire to ask the gentleman a question. I notice an increase in this amount from $2,865,000 to $4,000,000. Is the appropriation of $4,000,000 carried in the bill based on the Hull bill or the Senate bill—the compromise bill?

Mr. HULL. There is a bill which is designated as a compromise bill in the Senate. I do not know of any compromise that the House has made, but I understand there has been one made in the Senate.

Mr. DOCKERY. If that bill should become a law, there will be a deficit.

Mr. HULL. Of course; it is only a guess—in the neighborhood of $3,000,000 to $5,000,000 in pay of officers and enlisted men.

The Clerk read as follows:

For pay of officers for length of service, to be paid with their current monthly pay, $825,000.

Mr. DOCKERY. Just one other question. I notice that this amount is brought up to $13,000,000. Now, if the compromise bill becomes law, will there be a deficiency here?

Mr. HULL. There will be, because the terms of the compromise bill provide for more enlisted men.

Mr. DOCKERY. The gentleman is not able to state the amount?

Mr. HULL. I am not able to state it, because it is a matter of computation.

The Clerk read as follows:

For additional pay for length of service, $725,000.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend in line 12 by adding:

"That all officers and enlisted men in the Regular Army who enlisted subsequent to the declaration of war, and for the war, and hereafter mustered out of the service who have served honestly and faithfully beyond the limits of the United States shall be paid two months' extra pay on muster out and discharge from the service, and all officers and enlisted men in the Regular Army who enlisted subsequent to the declaration of war, and for the war, and hereafter mustered out of the service who have served honestly and faithfully within the limits of the United States, shall be paid one month's extra pay on muster out and discharge from the service, from any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, said moneys to be immediately available."

Mr. HULL. I raise the point of order upon that. It is utterly worthless so far as the volunteers are concerned, and out of order as new legislation.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I move to strike out the last word. I brought this to the attention of the House, knowing that perhaps it was subject to a point of order, in order to do justice to these men.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I move to strike out the last word. I knew this amendment was not in order at this time, but as this was the only way in which I could bring the matter to the attention of the House, I proposed the amendment. There is no reason why the men who enlisted in the Regular Army for the war should not be accorded the same treatment as is accorded the men who enlisted in the different State regiments.

A few weeks ago a law was passed allowing those men who enlisted in the volunteer militia from the different States for the war an additional two months' pay if they served outside of the territory of the United States, and one month's pay if they served within the territory of the United States. A separate bill was also passed a short time ago allowing to the enlisted men in the Navy who served outside the waters of the United States an additional two months' pay, and allowed to the men who served within the waters of the United States an additional one month's pay.

In my own district, and in the district, I believe, of every member on the floor of this House, hundreds of men enlisted in the Regular Army for the war. They have braved all its dangers and perils and withstood its hardships, and it seems to me that they should be entitled to the additional consideration that has already been granted to the volunteers in the Army and the men who enlisted for the war in the Navy. I think that every member of this House who has read the history of the struggle with the Spaniards, both in Cuba, Porto Rico, and the Philippine Islands, will agree with me that no braver body of men ever fought for any country or any flag than those who enlisted for the war as members of the Regular Army.

Their heroic deeds and actions have added new luster to American glory and have woven new laurels for the American soldier and added greater honors to the American flag. I think that it is an oversight that the men in the Regular Army were overlooked in this matter, as I know too well the high honor in which these men are held by the members of this House. I therefore consider that it is only necessary to bring the attention of the members of the House to this omission in order to give these men the justice which is theirs.

We have only six more legislative days remaining of the session, and it will be impossible to secure this legislation with a special bill. If no objection is offered by the members of the House, this amendment can be incorporated in the present bill and the law enacted almost immediately.

Mr. HULL. Will the gentleman yield to me for one moment? The law was passed giving the volunteers exactly what this provides. You have not only included the Regular Army, but officers.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I beg the gentleman's pardon.

Mr. HULL. I understood from the reading of the amendment that you have provided for officers and enlisted men in the Regular Army. They were not appointed for the war, but were appointed from the Regular Army and detailed, and would be returned to their regiments. They should not have been included. I will say to the gentleman that if he will modify his amendment so that it will provide for the men enlisted in the Regular Army, giving them the same pay the volunteers will have, that will be all right.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I intended when I introduced this amendment to make it for the enlisted men, but I did not know what the law was in regard to the officers, so, to be sure, I included them.

Mr. HULL. If the gentleman will offer an amendment to give those who enlisted in the Army thirty days for those who were not out of the country and sixty days for those who were, perhaps the objection will be removed.

Mr. DOCKERY. I insist, Mr. Chairman, that an amendment of that kind ought to be considered. Over and over again we have seen the effect of accepting amendments without careful preparation.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Massachusetts has expired.

Mr. FITZGERALD. But I wish to discuss the point of order, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. There is no point of order. The Chair has sustained the point of order made by the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. FITZGERALD. But the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HULL] said that if I withdrew the obnoxious paragraph he would accept the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. But the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DOCKERY] objects to that.

Mr. DOCKERY. No, Mr. Chairman, I do not object. I said that an amendment of that kind ought to be carefully prepared and considered.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Well, I will redraw my amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. If the gentleman desires to present an amendment, he will frame it and send it to the desk in accordance with the rules.

Mr. FITZGERALD. My amendment is before the House.

The CHAIRMAN. It has been ruled out of order.

Mr. BRUCKER rose.

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. BRUCKER. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. I have not a copy of the bill before me, but I would like to ask, if this paragraph is now passed without this amendment suggested by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FITZGERALD] being offered, whether or not it can at a subsequent stage of the reading of the bill be offered and be in order?

The CHAIRMAN. Not to this paragraph, if it is passed.

Mr. BRUCKER. Would it be to any subsequent paragraph?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has not read the subsequent paragraphs.

Mr. BRUCKER. I am laboring under the same misfortune as is the Chair. I have not a copy of the bill before me.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I now desire to present my amendment modified. I ask that it be inserted as a new paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Add after line 10, page 4, the following:

"All enlisted men in the Regular Army who enlisted subsequent to the declaration of war and hereafter mustered out of the service who have served honestly and faithfully beyond the limits of the United States shall be paid two months' extra pay on muster out and discharge from the service; and enlisted men in the Regular Army who enlisted for the war and served in the United States shall be paid one month's extra pay."

Mr. HULL. I raise the point of order, that is entirely different from what I suggested.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. BRUCKER. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment.

Mr. PAYNE. I would like to suggest to gentlemen that it is impossible to frame a proper amendment on the floor.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I think the chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs misunderstands my purpose.

Mr. BRUCKER. I will say that I have not the amendment prepared at this time, Mr. Chairman, but I will offer it unless there is objection. It is that all men who enlisted subsequent to the declaration of war and served until the peace treaty with Spain was ratified—

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the Chair will say to the gentleman from Michigan, an amendment must be in writing and sent to the Clerk's desk.

Mr. BRUCKER. I will say, Mr. Chairman, that that rule has not been universally invoked. I will prepare the amendment.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I ask that this paragraph be passed over, to be returned to, so that we can perfect an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection that the paragraph be passed over without prejudice?

Mr. PAYNE. I do not want to object to passing over the paragraph; but I want to suggest to the chairman of the committee that if it is not prepared by the Committee on Military Affairs, I shall be likely to raise the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from New York object to passing the paragraph?

Mr. PAYNE. I do not.

The Clerk, proceeding with the reading of the bill, read as follows:

ENGINEER REGIMENT.

Three hundred and seventy-five thousand three hundred and twenty-four dollars.

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Chairman, reserving the point of order, I desire to ask whether the Engineer Department is provided for in the compromise bill?

Mr. HULL. No, sir; the compromise bill makes a battalion of engineers.

Mr. DOCKERY. What does the gentleman propose to do about it?

Mr. HULL. I am perfectly willing not to appropriate a dollar for that, if the gentleman does not want to.

Mr. DOCKERY. I do not propose to raise a point of order against anything that the Committee on Military Affairs desire to incorporate in the bill and necessary to maintain the Army. I propose to stand by the Army and Navy fully and completely and for all proper appropriations, regardless of any question of policy about which we may differ. I find, however, there is no law authorizing the engineer regiment. I suppose under the Hull bill there would have been such authorization. I call attention to the fact that this appropriation is without authority of law.

Mr. HULL. No; there is no regiment of engineers provided by law. The amount of the appropriation here is for the engineer force as provided in the House bill. There is only a battalion of engineers now provided by law.

There is in the compromise bill pending before the Senate—if I can refer to that without being called down—a proposition to continue simply the battalion of engineers; and if that passes, the Senate can amend this bill to conform to that action, whatever it may be. If there should be a regiment of engineers, then this appropriation is correct.

Mr. DOCKERY. The gentleman from Iowa thinks the Senate will amend the bill when this bill is passed, and that these appropriations will be made to harmonize with what will probably be the action on that bill?

Mr. HULL. We have been compelled to proceed on that theory. Of course, before final action is taken by the Senate on this bill the question of the reorganization of the Army on some lines like the Hull bill will be taken. The House can not in the present appropriation proceed on any other theory than that which I have already suggested.

Mr. DOCKERY. I am glad to have the statement of the gentleman from Iowa, because I find in the very next paragraph following the Ordnance Department appropriation a provision for the noncommissioned staff unattached to regiments. No provision, as I understand it, is now made by law for this force.

Mr. HULL. No; the noncommissioned staff is provided for on the lines of the Senate compromise or Hull bill.

Mr. DOCKERY. The compromise bill?

Mr. HULL. Yes; or so-called Hull bill, either. Both are about the same.

Mr. STEELE. Should not this provision—if there is no arrangement for the engineer regiment which is provided for, should it not go out of the bill altogether?

Mr. HULL. That would be, of course, for Congress to determine after the question of reorganization is settled. I am informed that it is the intention not to allow the Army bill to go into conference at all. So far as I am concerned, I know nothing of that. But there is an engineer battalion authorized by law which should be appropriated for—

Mr. COX. Will the gentleman allow an interruption?

Mr. HULL. Certainly.

Mr. COX. Will the gentleman please state, for the benefit of the House, on what ground he makes the statement that the Army bill can not get into conference?

Mr. HULL. It has been suggested that the House bill will not be considered, or amended, because it might get into conference, and the two Houses come together on the lines of that bill. So that the Senate must, to avoid that danger, send us an independent bill.

Mr. COX. Well, that is a new statement, and a wonderful statement to me.

A MEMBER. Well, it is a correct statement.

Mr. HULL. There are wonderful things, as the gentleman will find, on all sides, if he keeps his eyes open.

Mr. DOCKERY. Let me ask the gentleman from Iowa, if the compromise bill becomes a law, will the amount involved in this bill be the same?

Mr. HULL. Oh, no; not at all. There would be a difference of two-thirds at least.

Mr. DOCKERY. I mean with reference to the noncommissioned staff to which I have just referred.

Mr. HULL. Well, that would be the same in either bill. There is not much difference one way or the other, no matter which bill becomes a law.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Do I understand, if the compromise bill is adopted, that this amount, now carried by the pending bill, will not be needed with reference to the $375,324 provided for the engineer regiment?

Mr. HULL. No, it will not; only a portion of it.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Well, this bill, then, is based on the general lines of the Hull bill in that regard?

Mr. HULL. Yes.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. If it becomes a law, this will be the necessary amount?

Mr. HULL. This will be the amount required to pay the regiment of engineers. Of course, if the battalion only is maintained, as I have said before, it will not require such a large sum.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. If the compromise bill becomes a law, then this amount will be necessary?

Mr. HULL. If the Senate bill becomes a law—the so-called compromise bill—then only one-third of the amount will be necessary.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Is there any possible way that this money could be used over and above what is necessary in case the appropriation is made?

Mr. HULL. Not at all. The only way it can possibly be used is for the payment of the men enlisted under the law in the engineer battalions or regiments.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. And their salary is fixed by the law—the officers and the men?

Mr. HULL. Yes; this payment, however, is not for the officers, but for the enlisted men alone.

The Clerk read as follows:

Pay to clerks and messengers at headquarters of the Army.

Mr. HULL. After the word "messengers," in line 4, the words "at department headquarters and" should be inserted; so that it will read:

Pay to clerks and messengers at department headquarters and at headquarters of the Army.

That was an error in the print.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa will be considered as adopted. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SIMPSON. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Chairman. What was the last paragraph read?

The CHAIRMAN. Line 5, page 5. There was an amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HULL], which was just adopted; but the Chair put it in such form that if the gentleman from Kansas objects the Chair will put it again.

Mr. SIMPSON. No, I do not object. I want to be heard on the next paragraph.

The Clerk read as follows:

Fifteen clerks, at $1,800 each per annum, $27,000.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. Mr. Chairman, I see here a very large increase in the number of clerks. I hope I will have the attention of the chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs. Here is first a provision for 15 clerks at $1,800 per annum. That is an addition to the force now employed. In line 8 there is a provision for 15 clerks at $1,600 each. Those are new. Then in line 10 there is a provision for 20 clerks at $1,400 each. Now, these are all high-class clerks.

Mr. DOCKERY. And never existed before.

Mr. SIMPSON. Never existed before, and there is no provision of existing law for them. I should like to know why we get in this bill so many of these high-class clerks? Then it provides further on here for 11 clerks at $900 each per annum. Those are new. Then there is a provision for 18 messengers at $840 each. Those are new.

Of course you will make the plea that the increase in the Army, because of the increased business to be transacted at the War Department, demands an additional force of clerks; but what we want to know is, why these are nearly all high-class clerks?

Mr. COX. I want to call the gentleman's attention to one point there.

Mr. SIMPSON. In a minute. There is another point I want to make. Here is a provision for 246 clerks and 69 messengers; a messenger for every 8 clerks. Now, I am informed—I do not vouch for the truthfulness of it—that it is the practice in the War Department, and, in fact, in other Departments, for the heads of Departments, and even subordinate officers—chiefs of division—to employ these messengers at their residences as butlers and coachmen, and for various occupations. I think this would be a question that ought to be investigated and looked into, to see if those are facts. If the people of this country are paying for men who are supposed to be employed in the Departments, when in fact they are performing duties at the private residences of the heads of Departments, the people should know that fact.

Mr. COX. Will my friend yield to me for one moment?

Mr. GROSVENOR. Will the gentleman allow me to call his attention—

Mr. SIMPSON. I yield first to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I sympathize with the suggestions made by the gentleman from Kansas, but I will suggest to him another line of investigation. Investigate the civil pension list of the United States, that to-day amounts in a single post-office of the United States, as I am informed by the statement of the head of one of the Departments, to $70,000 a year for clerks retained under this bureaucracy who do not earn one dollar a month. And if you will extend your investigations through the Departments of this city you will find that by degrees we are carrying a civil-service pension list under this system, which we call the merit system in the United States, and I am prepared to demonstrate every word which I have said on this subject.

Mr. SIMPSON. I am satisfied that the gentleman from Ohio is entirely right in regard to that.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Furthermore, a distinguished officer of one of the great Departments of this Government stated to the Civil Service Commission a short time ago that he would undertake to carry on that enormous branch of the Government at 60 per cent of what it is costing now if he could be allowed to get rid of this dead timber. And another gentleman, whose name and occupation I can not mention, said he would like to be a partner in that at 40 cents on the dollar.

Mr. SIMPSON. I am satisfied the gentleman is right, and that is one of the reasons why I took occasion, in connection with this bill, to see if the chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs can give us a good reason why so many of these high-priced clerks are employed.

Mr. COX. Now, will the gentleman allow me?

Mr. SIMPSON. I know the civil service does not apply to these—

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman—

Mr. SIMPSON. I hope that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR] will give us the name and the place where these abuses have crept in. I think it is the duty of Congress to put a check on them.

Mr. STEELE. It applies to every Department.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. The Clerk will read.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I was waiting until the gentleman from Kansas had relinquished the floor, so that I could be recognized on that paragraph, so as to make the point of order against the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman makes the point of order on what paragraph?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. On the paragraph "15 clerks, at $1,800 each per annum, $27,000." I make the point of order that it is new legislation.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair desires to state to the gentleman from Alabama that after a discussion—

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I can not hear what the Chair says.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee will be in order.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say to the Chair that when the gentleman had obtained the floor I started to rise, and as soon as he had relinquished the floor, I then rose and addressed the Chair, and stated for what purpose I rose, and would, if it were necessary—

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair desires to say to the gentleman from Alabama that if it was his purpose to make the point he should have done it, regardless of the question of the gentleman from Kansas getting the floor. Under the rules, after debate has been had upon a question, it is too late to make that point.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Well, then, I will say to the Chair now, conceding his ruling, I desire to make the point of order on the other paragraphs of this page, and ask recognition for that at the time.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, referring to the remarks of the gentleman from Kansas, I want to say to the House that I do not believe there has ever been any evidence bearing out his assertion of the use of these clerks as butlers. If there have been any butlers used, it has been from the laborers. If there has, I do not know anything about it. These clerks are under the civil service the same as the clerks in the War Department. I call attention to the fact that every Army appropriation bill carries an appropriation for these clerks, to the number of 125, fixing their pay on a different scale to what it is fixed, but appropriated for 125 of them, and this is an increase of 81 clerks, because of the different department headquarters and the headquarters of the Army, and that increase is largely reduced from the estimate of the War Department.

We cut off one-sixth of the number they asked for, and the reason the committee fixed the wages of the different classes of clerks here was for the purpose of putting those clerks, who do as much work, on the same basis as those who work in the Departments. They are at more expense. They are at the different headquarters, and while they have to go out to the different headquarters, they are away from their families; and when the headquarters is changed, they are changed. Those clerks who work in the War Department are permanently in the city. We thought it no more than just to pay them on the same scale and the same rate as the different clerks in the War Department are paid.

Mr. DOCKERY. Will my friend allow me to call his attention to the fact that the highest salary paid under existing law is $1,000?

Mr. HULL. It is $1,200.

Mr. DOCKERY. And you make three new classes, 15 at $1,600, and 20 at $1,400.

Mr. HULL. Yes.

Mr. DOCKERY. Now, if my friend will allow me. Following out the line of the suggestion made by the gentleman from Ohio, it is known that the Government of the United States pays more for its clerical service—that is, for all salaries for services rendered, from $800 to $1,800—than is paid by private enterprise. Above that we pay but little for "brains."

Mr. PAYNE. May I ask the gentleman from Missouri whether a conference report that was passed through the two Houses a day or two ago did not increase the thirty days' leave to thirty-five days on an appropriation bill?

Mr. DOCKERY. The gentleman can not "shake his gory locks" at me on that question.

Mr. PAYNE. I understand the gentleman is a member of the committee.

Mr. DOCKERY. The gentleman is very well advised that in these differences between the House and the Senate you have to give and take as to sundry provisions.

Mr. PAYNE. But that was one of those provisions changing existing law, and the rule generally is when a change of existing law is ingrafted on an appropriation bill, and either House insists that that change shall go off, that the House proposing the change yields.

Mr. DOCKERY. I was only one of the three conferees, and opposed that provision. The gentleman from Iowa has made these increases of salaries. It may be necessary to have the clerical services required by the bill. I think that may be proper, but I do not see the necessity of making three grades of high-class clerks. The gentleman is certainly mistaken in saying that it is more expensive to live at headquarters than here.

Mr. HULL. That is because they are separated from their families.

Mr. DOCKERY. It is true they are separated from their families, but there is no opportunity to spend anything at army posts. They are out on the frontier.

Mr. HULL. I know better; there is. If the gentleman will investigate the living out at these places, he will find that the additional expense is made up by the fact that their families are supported somewhere else.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, the Clerk had not completed the reading of the preceding paragraph when I rose to make the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state his point of order.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. My point of order is against lines 8 and 9, that it is new legislation. There is no law on the statute books providing for these clerks at that compensation. It is unnecessary to argue the point.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I will read all the law there is on the subject. In every appropriation bill the number of clerks is mentioned that they desire to appropriate for, and they have heretofore fixed the price at the same time. They fix it for 90 clerks at $1,000, 25 clerks at $1,100, 10 clerks at $1,200 each, and that has been fixed by the Army appropriation bill of each year, and it is the only law on the subject. I do not believe that anything but the most technical construction of the rule would sustain this point of order on the ground that the salary is not the same as heretofore fixed in an appropriation bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair desires to say that, in the opinion of the Chair, it would depend somewhat on the law that created the War Department. Of course, the War Department must have its clerical force to maintain it.

Mr. HULL. The Departments are not created by law; they are a matter of regulation, and the number of clerks provided for is to meet the demands of the Government.

Mr. COX. Will the chairman of the committee allow me a question?

Mr. HULL. I will say that there appears to be some confusion about this. This is not the War Department; it is the department headquarters. It is outside of the War Department and independent of it, so far as clerical force is concerned. It is the headquarters of the Army. We have headquarters in Manila, headquarters of the Gulf, headquarters of the Atlantic, headquarters in Havana, and these are the departments referred to.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman—

Mr. COX. Will the gentleman from Alabama pardon me? I want to ask a question. The two clerks that you are providing for is not only new legislation, but everyone of them, messengers and all, are under the civil service, and it is so construed by the War Department.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I wish simply to say at this time—

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair desires to say to the gentleman from Alabama that the Chair must have some authority presented to him. The Chair will assume in making his rulings that the Committee on Military Affairs has complied with the law, unless gentlemen can show that this is a violation of it.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I simply say that I am surprised the Chair should take such a position. I think that when a proposition comes in here in an appropriation bill, and it is charged on the floor that it is an increase in the number of employees not authorized by law, that the burden lies on the committee to show that it has authority of law, and I never heard any Chairman that did not call on the committee reporting the bill to show the law that authorized the appropriation. I must say that the Chair takes me by surprise when he says that the gentleman making the point of order must be prepared to show a negative proposition. Can I bring in all the laws of the United States and lay before the Chair to show him that this proposition is not found in it and not authorized?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman know whether this is new legislation or not?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I can say that it is new legislation; that the Appropriations Committee has no right to bring before Congress a provision to pay clerks that have not been authorized by law. I say there is no law in this country authorizing the employment of these fifteen clerks, and I challenge the gentleman, the chairman of the committee, to show any law on the statute book authorizing their employment.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, if I mistake not, the chairman of the committee yesterday said, although I do not find it in the RECORD, it was in his oral remarks, that this was obnoxious to a point of order.

Mr. HULL. I said I wanted to call attention to all that, by any possibility of construction, might be subject to a point of order, but I did not believe this would be. I did not revise my remarks, and if the gentleman will look in the RECORD he will find just what I said. I do not want to discuss the point of order at any length. The regulations of the War Department creating the different department headquarters have the authority of law unless in contravention of the statutes of the United States. There has been an increased number of department headquarters in the field, not here in Washington, but an increased number of headquarters in the field by the orders of the War Department. The law has always provided for all the department headquarters, and I beg the committee not to confuse us with the Department here, the headquarters of the Army. The law has always provided for all the clerks in the appropriation bill, and at the same time fixed their pay in that appropriation bill and in that only.

And the gentleman can see that it would be impossible to show any law on the statute books of the United States, in my judgment, which uses the word "hereafter" to provide that the compensation shall be paid under the circumstances here.

But I am willing to leave the matter to the discrimination of the Chair and the judgment of the House.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has expressed a desire that one side or the other shall furnish the law upon the subject.

Mr. HULL. I have given the Chair and the House the law on the subject, as far as there is any law governing it. It is in the appropriation bills for some years past.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The gentleman from Iowa admits, Mr. Chairman, that there is no statute covering this provision.

Mr. HULL. No, there is no statute covering it in express terms; but the appropriation bills which have heretofore been enacted have provided the number of clerks at the various headquarters of the Army and have made provision for precisely this character of expenditure.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. In other words, the contention of the gentleman from Iowa is that if the War Department wants an appropriation put into a bill it is only necessary for it to make a regulation.

Mr. HULL. Oh, no.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Then what is the gentleman's contention?

Mr. HULL. Why, the law, before the consolidation of the headquarters of the Army, fixed the clerical force required, and the appropriation bills subsequently made provision for their payment. Under the regulations which were provided a few years ago, more clerks were necessary, and more clerks were provided for in the appropriation bills. For the last few years the amounts so appropriated have been the same, or there has been very little variation.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Why, Mr. Chairman, it has been repeatedly held here on the floor of the House—I remember a case particularly in point when the committee brought in a provision to pay one of the secretaries $5,000 instead of $3,500, which had been his salary previous to this, as allowed by law. The point of order was made and the Chairman of the committee ruled that the proposition was out of order in the bill, and was sustained by the House.

Mr. HULL. But that is an entirely different question. The gentleman will perceive that that is fixed by statute law. This is not. This is a matter of mere regulation and is covered by the appropriations.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. But you have no right to create a position on an appropriation bill. Under Rule XX you have no right to make a change in existing law. And if the gentleman makes this provision, I ask if it does not create new law, a new provision? Do you not, if you undertake to insert it in a provision of this kind in an appropriation bill, make a new law just as much as if Congress, in the regular channels, had enacted a new law?

Mr. HULL. I think we can appropriate for the clerks at department headquarters wherever they are needed, without in any way conflicting with the rule to which the gentleman refers.

This is a necessary part of the service, and may vary at times. The only question is as to whether the increase of pay is subject to the point of order.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The gentleman intimates that we can create new clerks on an appropriation bill? Certainly he would not hold that we can create new officers of the Army on that same principle?

Mr. HULL. Certainly not.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Then, what is the distinction? I would like the gentleman to explain. Could we raise the number of enlisted men from 61,000 to 100,000 on an appropriation bill? Where then is the distinction?

Mr. HULL. Let me say to the gentleman, so that he will have the matter before him in the further discussion of the point of order, that if the Secretary of War, in his discretion, may create twenty new regiments of troops, he would certainly have the right to enlist men to fill these regiments. Otherwise the law would be inoperative and of no avail.

Now, if you vest in the Secretary of War the power to create new department headquarters of the Army, that power must be construed to carry with it the privilege of incurring the necessary expenses which must be incurred.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Not at all. If you create in this way any new department, the law must state positively what the department shall be; what their duties shall be; and if they are created under the general law, that general law must specify what the departments are created for, what authority they have, and to what extent we may involve the Government in expenditures.

Mr. HULL. Then, as I understand the gentleman, he contends that we could not under any circumstances, even in the varying conditions of the Army, provide for a single additional clerk?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. We can not under the law. The gentleman, of course, is chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs, and he can introduce a bill to provide for these additional clerks and have it acted upon if he thinks necessary.

Mr. HULL. Under that contention we could not provide for the appropriations for the next year.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Oh, yes, if they are provided for by law; and we can make the appropriations to meet the expenditures.

Mr. HULL. But the word "hereafter," unless it is inserted in the provision, as I understand the contention of the gentleman, would leave the matter in the air, and it could not be acted upon by Congress under our rules.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. But this is a question of creating a new provision on the appropriation bill. It is a proposition that should not be allowed under the rules of the House, anyhow. In view of the fact that we have a deficit of $159,000,000, I think it is the duty of the guardians of the interests of the people, who are sent here for that purpose, to look carefully into and scrutinize closely all these matters which involve such a large increase of expenditures upon their part.

Mr. STEELE. Does this discussion fit the point of order?

Mr. DOCKERY. Let him have time.

Mr. STEELE. I do not think the gentleman is discussing the point of order. He is discussing finance.

The CHAIRMAN. If the gentleman will confine himself to the point of order—

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Certainly. All I wish to say—

Mr. DOCKERY. The deficiency is a very delicate subject across the aisle.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. That the time has come when we should not put additional clerks into these departments.

Mr. CANNON. I want to say a word on the point of order. I do not know as to the propriety of specifically appropriating for these clerks, but I do know that in all the Departments, as well as at the headquarters of the Army, there is a clerical force under general provision of law that is larger or smaller from year to year as the necessities of the service seem to indicate, and that it is always in order upon a general appropriation bill to increase or decrease the item for clerk hire. For instance, I will call the attention of the Chair to Title IV of the Revised Statutes:

The clerks of the Departments shall be arranged in four classes, distinguished as first, second, third, and fourth.

And so on.

No clerk shall be appointed in any Department in either of the four classes above designated until he has been examined.

And so forth.

Then it provides for the appointment of women. Now, the next section, 167, provided what the salaries of the clerks shall be—first class, $1,800; second class, $1,600; third class, $1,400; fourth class, $1,200. Then it provides that the women shall receive at the rate of $900, and so forth, and then for messengers at $840, and assistant messengers and watchmen—

Except when a different compensation is expressly prescribed by law.

And so forth.

Every head of a Department is authorized to employ such number of clerks of the several classes recognized by law and such messengers—

And so forth—
at such rates of compensation as may be appropriated for by Congress from year to year.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Is not that the law authorizing it, right there?

Mr. CANNON. The gentleman says you can not employ an additional clerk without a new law.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; I said where it was not authorized by law, and there is the provision of law in those cases that you read authorizing it.

Mr. CANNON. Now, what I undertake to say—

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman—

Mr. CANNON. Just let me complete this sentence. What I undertake to say is that the clerical service of the Army and Navy may be 500 or it may be 100, just according to the necessities of the service, and without the necessity of formally passing a separate law. It is a matter that abounds in appropriations, as under the law and as an incident of the service necessarily—

Mr. COX. The only point I make—

Mr. CANNON. So that it is perfectly clear to me, without discussing the wisdom of the provision, that it is in order to make appropriation for one or one hundred clerks.

Mr. COX. Now, let me ask you, under that statute which you have read—and we have all gone through it in the committee—those employees pass under the civil service?

Mr. CANNON. Oh, I suppose they are under the civil service by virtue of the subsequent statute.

Mr. COX. No; that law means to put them all under the civil service.

Mr. CANNON. Oh, no; not at all. This law is older than the gentleman or myself.

Mr. COX. It is a pretty old law, then.

Mr. CANNON. Yes; it is a very old law.

Mr. COX. But that means to put these messengers under the civil service.

Mr. CANNON. Oh, no; it has no effect on the civil service.

Mr. HULL. They are already under the civil service.

Mr. COX. The chairman concedes that they already come under the civil service.

Mr. CANNON. By virtue of a subsequent law.

Mr. HULL. Not this act nor the appropriation bill. They are there under the general law affecting clerks and messengers.

Mr. CANNON. There is no doubt about the provision in the appropriation bill being in order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair desires to call the attention of the gentleman from Illinois to section 169, of Title IV, of the Revised Statutes, which reads as follows:

Each head of a Department is authorized to employ in his Department such number of clerks of the several classes recognized by law, and such messengers, assistant messengers, copyists, watchmen, laborers, and other employees, and at such rates of compensation, respectively, as may be appropriated for by Congress from year to year.

Does the gentleman hold that that statute applies to the section under consideration?

Mr. CANNON. It seems to me that it applies to the section under consideration, because this is for the military establishment. But even without reference to the statute, anywhere in the public service, in my judgment, where the necessities of the service require clerical assistance, it is a matter that abounds merely in appropriations from time to time.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, I want to call attention to another point that the gentleman does not seem to have taken into his mind at all. Supposing the section you refer to covers the question, when you put them in the civil service is that new legislation?

Mr. CANNON. The question of civil service cuts no figure in the point of order at all.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Alabama desire to be heard?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I only want to say that while the law authorizes the employment of a particular man, such as the gentleman read, I can not say that it is not in contravention of this rule; but Rule XXI expressly says that no new legislation shall be put on an appropriation bill. The gentleman, in reporting this bill, in his speech, said this was new legislation. These men are not employed. He admitted in his argument but a few moments ago that the salary is to be increased greater than now paid for similar clerks. If we can not increase the salary of a man whose position is provided for by law, it is just as much in contravention of the rule to increase these men's salaries as it is to increase them, it seems to me.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will rule. Title IV, section 158, reads as follows:

The provisions of this title shall apply to the following Executive Departments: First, the Department of State; second, the Department of War.

Section 169 reads as follows:

Each head of a Department is authorized to employ in his Department such number of clerks of these several classes recognized by law, and such messengers, assistant messengers, copyists, watchmen, laborers, and other employees, and at such rate of compensation, respectively, as may be appropriated for by Congress from year to year.

Under this statute it seems clear to the Chair that this is simply following what is authorized by law, and in this Department of War, and is not in violation of section 2 of Rule XXI, as contended for by the gentleman from Alabama. The Chair therefore overrules the point of order.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Then I move to strike out the provision. The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the yeas seemed to have it.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Division.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 31, yeas 64.

So the amendment was rejected.

[Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri addressed the committee. See Appendix.]

The CHAIRMAN. How much time does the gentleman ask?

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Ten minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri asks unanimous consent that he be permitted to speak for ten minutes.

Mr. HULL. I object to any further extension of the time for general debate.

Mr. SIMPSON. I hope the gentleman will not make that objection. The gentleman from Missouri does not frequently address the House.

Mr. HULL. If you are going to extend the time for general debate, you are simply going to get into a sea of discussion without any limit.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Since objection is made, it should not prevent us from saying that this is not the first time, nor will it be the last during the course of discussion by our friends upon that side, that they are permitted in the closing hours of a debate to make statements challenging this side of the House, with the distinct understanding that nobody on this side would be accorded the opportunity to reply. It is not the first time the point of order and the rules of the House have been invoked to protect the rear of the retreating column.

Mr. LEWIS of Washington. Do I understand the gentleman from Iowa to say that no debate shall proceed over his objection beyond five minutes?

Mr. HULL. Oh, no; there has been a long time devoted to the consideration of this bill. The general debate on the bill ran five hours, and if we commence general debate again, as we have only one week, it will be simply impossible to conclude the bill.

Mr. LEWIS of Washington. I would like to confine myself to the bill. I should like a few minutes.

The Clerk, proceeding with the reading of the bill, read as follows:

FOR PAY OF THE GENERAL STAFF.

Adjutant-General's Department: For pay of officers in the Adjutant-General's Department, $71,500.

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word of the paragraph which has just been read, in order to ask a question of the chairman of the committee. The usual provision is in this language: "For pay of officers in the Adjutant-General's Department as now authorized and prescribed by law."

Mr. HULL. I will say to the gentleman from Missouri that that was left out for the reason that the law is all in the air. If the bill is passed as agreed to by the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, this amount will be too much, and that applies to the staff department right through.

Mr. DOCKERY. And that same explanation applies to the bill all the way through, and the gentleman expects that it will be corrected in the Senate after it is determined what the provisions of the compromise bill may be?

Mr. HULL. Yes; that will be corrected after the bill has been determined upon.

The Clerk, proceeding with the reading of the bill, read as follows:

For additional pay to such officers for length of service, to be paid with their current monthly pay, $15,300.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, it would be delightful if the chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs should find a little time to determine the details of this bill, which—

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman from Missouri wants ten minutes, I will consent to it, and then I will let the gentleman from Washington in for ten minutes, and then I give notice that I shall invoke the rule for the remainder of the time.

Mr. LEWIS of Washington. I do not want a monopoly of the matter. [Laughter.]

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. COCHRAN] may have ten minutes, and then that the gentleman from Washington [Mr. LEWIS] may have ten minutes, and that they be not confined to the amendments pending in the bill.

There was no objection.

[Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri addressed the committee. See Appendix.]

[Mr. LEWIS of Washington addressed the committee. See Appendix.]

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose; and the Speaker having taken the chair, a message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had agreed to reports of committees of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House of Representatives to bills of the Senate of the following titles:

S. 1154. An act for the relief of George Hughes, of Portland, Oreg.; and

S. 1776. An act to increase the pension of Mrs. Letitia Semple. The message also announced that the Senate had insisted upon its amendments to the bill (H. R. 11683) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900, disagreed to by the House of Representatives, had agreed to the conference asked by the House, and had appointed Mr. QUAY, Mr. ALLISON, and Mr. PETTIGREW as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills of the following titles:

H. R. 1186. An act for the punishment of seduction in the District of Columbia;

H. R. 11024. An act to authorize the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to remove dangerous or unsafe buildings and parts thereof, and for other purposes;

H. R. 11771. An act to amend section 1 of an act to provide for the entry of lands in Greer County, Okla., to give preference right to settlers, and for other purposes;

H. R. 11733. An act to prevent the sale of intoxicating liquors on Sunday in the District of Columbia;

H. R. 11677. An act to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Monongahela River at Morgantown, in the State of West Virginia;

H. R. 11023. An act to regulate the height of buildings in the District of Columbia;

H. R. 7860. An act to amend an act entitled "An act for the relief of Brig. Gen. John R. Brooke, United States Army," approved March 30, 1894;

H. R. 6930. An act for the relief of and to correct record of Jacob Covert;

H. R. 5329. An act granting a pension to Patrick O'Shea;

H. R. 3261. An act to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of George L. Plummer;

H. R. 321. An act for the relief of the Berdan Firearms Manufacturing Company;

H. R. 1800. An act to reimburse George W. McKinsey, postmaster at Kokomo, Ind., for money paid out by him as said postmaster;

H. R. 6248. An act to provide for the disposition of assessment certificates of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes;

H. R. 9281. An act authorizing the construction of three bridges across the Conecuh River, a navigable stream, in Escambia County, Ala.; and

H. R. 11570. An act to cause the removal of weeds from lands in the city of Washington, D. C., and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments the bill (H. R. 11795) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, in which the concurrence of the House was requested.

The message also announced that the Senate had disagreed to the amendment of the House of Representatives to the joint resolution (S. R. 189) to promote the relocation of certain tracks of the City and Suburban Railway Company of the District of Columbia, asked a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. McMILLAN, Mr. PROCTOR, and Mr. FAULKNER as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment the following resolution:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring). That during the last six days engrossing and enrolling of bills and joint resolutions by printing, as provided by act of Congress, approved March 2, 1895, may be suspended, and said bills and joint resolutions may be written by hand.

The message also announced that the Senate had reconsidered the vote by which the bill (H. R. 3589) to extend the powers and duties of the Commission on Fish and Fisheries to include game birds and other wild birds useful to man was passed with amendments, and had again passed the same with an amendment, asked a conference with the House on the bill and amendment, and had appointed Mr. HOAR, Mr. TELLER, and Mr. BACON as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. HAGER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

H. R. 8816. An act for the relief of the heirs of Minnie Friedrich;

H. R. 2668. An act for the relief of William Henry Johnson;

H. R. 1417. An act for the relief of Thomas Mullen;

H. R. 4418. An act to remove the charge of desertion from the naval record of Horace G. Reed;

H. R. 2358. An act granting a pension to Mary E. Taylor;

H. R. 11455. An act granting to the city of Boulder, in the State of Colorado, certain lands for park purposes and for the preservation of the native trees on said lands, and for other purposes;

H. R. 11737. An act granting the right of way to the Pensacola and Northwestern Railroad Company over and through the United States naval and military reservations near Pensacola, in the State of Florida;

H. R. 7346. An act to amend section 4896 of the Revised Statutes; and

H. R. 11867. An act to authorize the Georgia Pine Railway, of Georgia, to construct a bridge across the Flint River, a navigable stream in Decatur County, Ga.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills and joint resolutions of the following titles:

S. R. 231. Joint resolution providing for the further distribution of the compiled statutes of the District of Columbia;

S. R. 34. Joint resolution authorizing the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to alter, amend, or repeal certain health ordinances;

S. 5076. An act authorizing the Sioux City and Omaha Railway Company to construct and operate a railway through the Omaha and Winnebago Reservation, in Thurston County, Nebr., and for other purposes;

S. 3909. An act for the relief of Mrs. Harriet A. Ferguson;

S. 5533. An act to permit volunteer regiments to retain their colors;

S. 5391. An act to provide for an appropriate national celebration of the establishment of the seat of Government in the District of Columbia; and

S. 4159. An act relative to the payment of claims for material and labor furnished for the District of Columbia buildings.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

The committee resumed its session.

Mr. LACEY. Mr. Chairman, I have been listening for weeks hoping to hear some protests from the other side of this House, hoping for some recognition of our soldiers who have been standing in the tropic heat, in the trenches, in the thorns, in the cactus around Manila. On yesterday the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. SIMPSON], one of the leaders on that side of this Chamber, made these remarks:

We fought in Cuba and liberated them. So we did in Manila, side by side with the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands. We fought to drive the Spanish power from those islands, in the interest of humanity, but after all the expenditure of money and the glorious achievements of our Army and Navy, we have turned it into what? We have taken and are taking to-day the place of Spain. We have become the oppressors in the place of Spain.

The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LENTZ] yesterday referred to Aguinaldo as a "Patrick Henry;" another gentleman called him a "Lafayette;" still another makes him out as a "Bolivar," and many others as a "George Washington." I have been hearing these constant praises from the other side of the Chamber until I begin to think that nothing but a constitutional inhibition would prevent Aguinaldo from having at least the second place on the next ticket, in 1900, upon the opposition side. Possibly if the determination to annex the Philippines should make him an American citizen, this new "Washington" could take the second place, and then the brilliant eulogies we have heard would be very useful. The speeches would need but little change. Gentlemen forget that when Dewey sunk the fleet at Manila, Aguinaldo was a fugitive at Singapore, with $25,000 reward offered by the Spanish for his head.

Mr. BARTLETT. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him one question?

Mr. LACEY. I have no time, but will yield to my friend.

Mr. BARTLETT. The gentleman will not forget that the United States consul at Singapore sent him back to Manila on the McCulloch.

Mr. LACEY. Certainly. He could not have got back except on one of our ships, and he was landed on the coast of Luzon by an American vessel. As soon as he got there, he did not wait to have the fatted calf killed, but he attempted to take possession of the United States Army. He claimed everything that the Americans had won, and attempted to dictate what the terms of our occupation should be. After the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. SIMPSON] on yesterday made this statement it certainly was not a pleasing thing to look at the newspapers this morning and see that while he was talking here yesterday one Kansas man was killed by this "Washington" and nine men of the Twentieth Kansas were wounded in battle in front of Manila. A synopsis of the gentleman's speech appeared in the papers this morning in one column and the list of killed and wounded at Manila in another. The gentleman's constituents will not read the speech with much satisfaction in connection with the following names of killed and wounded Kansas soldiers:

Twentieth Kansas—killed: Company F, Private George H. Monroe. Wounded: Company L, First Lieut. William A. Callahan, thigh, slight; Company I, Private John M. Webber, hand, slight; Company C, James E. Riley, scalp, slight; Company F, Corp. Herbert Sands, leg, severe; Company K, Oscar Mallicoat, head, serious; Company L, Private William Wolf, thigh, severe; Musician Tolandoo Blansch, thigh, severe.

The gallant Twentieth Kansas will hardly relish this language from their Representative in Congress. No party necessity will justify him in thus assailing the soldiers from his own State who are now defending themselves from the murderous attacks of the insurgents at Manila.

And yet the gentlemen in this House are firing in the rear of Otis, sounding the praises of Aguinaldo and of Agoncillo. Agoncillo, you remember, hung around this Capitol for weeks. He sent his card to every Representative and Senator, inviting them to call upon him, and was here waiting in vain for recognition as a representative of an independent republic. Finally, one night he disappeared. It was reported by his secretary that he had gone to Baltimore. The papers said he had gone there, and would be back the next day. He turned up in Montreal, and on his arrival in Canada the battle began around Manila. He lighted the fuse by cable and fled. The attack was made on our troops, and they were shot down in cold blood by men under command of this modern "George Washington."

Gentlemen, cease this comparison, and do not further libel the Father of his Country. You have had too much party pride to refer to him as "a Thomas Jefferson." I commend you for that. I have heard no intimation of that kind, for Jefferson's name has been too sacred; but the Father of his Country has been constantly held up as the exemplar to whom this Malay cutthroat has been compared. If Washington had made a night attack on the camp of D'Estaing and Lafayette, if he had shot down Lafayette's troops in their tents around Yorktown, then it would have been proper to compare Washington to Aguinaldo, but not until then. [Applause on the Republican side.] If Washington had sold himself to Lord Howe, there might have been some excuse for the comparison. If Washington's troops had marched into Philadelphia from Valley Forge and had attempted to burn the city, he then might have been compared to Aguinaldo. I compliment my friend from the State of Washington [Mr. LEWIS] on his protest against the iniquity of this comparison and the false position in which his party confers have been placing themselves on the other side of the Chamber.

Mr. LEWIS of Washington. I can not accept the approval of my friend. [Laughter.]

Mr. LACEY. Is it not true that gentlemen on the other side have been espousing the cause of Aguinaldo? Is it not true that they have held up our soldiers as oppressors? Is it not true that they have taken the side of the enemy of the United States in this controversy? If it is not, there has been a great deal of talk misunderstood from that side. The gentleman who has just taken his seat, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. COCHRAN], has taken substantially the same position. You can not escape by saying you borrowed your position from the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. JOHNSON]. The applause of his remarks in attacking the President of the United States came from that side of the Chamber, and my friend from Washington, who is usually saluted with abundance of manifestations of approval, had to protest a moment ago against the applause, which was limited to the Republican side of this Hall, when he criticised his party friends for the position they had taken.

It is time for us to stand together. It is time, gentlemen, that you should understand that you can obtain no cheap party advantage by an assault on our troops 10,000 miles across the water nor upon their Commander in Chief at the White House.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. I would like to inquire if the gentleman means, when he says we should stand together, that we should be in favor of the forcible acquisition of the Philippine Islands?

Mr. LACEY. The gentleman knows our position very well. We captured Manila. Aguinaldo wanted to sack the city the next day. He wanted to go in and loot the stores, take possession of the German, English, and American goods there, and the line was drawn up to keep him out, and he was kept out by our troops. What time has there been since then when we could withdraw our forces without the certainty of a universal massacre?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Iowa has expired.

Mr. LACEY. I ask unanimous consent for five minutes more.

Mr. GREENE of Nebraska. If the time will be extended on our side five minutes, I do not object; otherwise I will.

Mr. LACEY. You have had twenty minutes on that side now, and we have only had five.

Mr. GREENE of Nebraska. Well, I will not object.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. LACEY. Now I want to call attention of the gentlemen on the other side before they set apart Aguinaldo's birthday as a national holiday [laughter] to a dispatch from General Otis which was published on Washington's birthday.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri rose.

Mr. LACEY. Wait a moment; I will yield to the gentleman later. It was published in the papers all over the country, in which it was proposed by Aguinaldo that there should be an attack on the Americans and a universal massacre in the city of Manila. It seems to me in the presence of that dispatch the gentleman from Missouri should have sat in his seat in silence.

The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LENTZ] might have withheld his statement of Aguinaldo being a second Patrick Henry, and the gentlemen, also, who designated him as a Bolivar or a Washington might have honored themselves by discreet silence.

Mr. BARTLETT. Who on this side called him a "George Washington?"

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. I want to ask the gentleman a question now. He said he would yield. Do you wish us to join with you in favor of the forcible annexation of the Philippine Islands? [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. LACEY. No such question is presented; no such question is involved in this controversy.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Answer the question.

Mr. LACEY. The proposition with which we were confronted was the destruction of the city of Manila which came into our possession during the war with Spain; and the insurgents there have since managed to pass around our lines and set fire to the city, burning about a third of it, while it was protected by our troops. The question was and is the protection of human life and property in that locality while it is under our control.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Answer the question. Do you decline to answer it?

Mr. LACEY. It is not the question involved here at all. No such issue is presented. We were not in a position involving such an issue. I shall discuss the actual situation and not the imaginary one so much talked about by gentlemen on the other side. We were in control of the islands as a result of the war. We had driven from them the last vestige of the sovereign authority of Spain and agreed to send the Spanish soldiers to the Old World, where they should remain. The capital city, its property, the lives and liberties of the people of that region came under our military control, and our responsibility for the safety and peace of the people alone was involved. We had overturned the old government. Under the laws of nations we incurred liabilities and responsibilities which we could not shun.

There has not been a day when if the American troops had been withdrawn from Manila that there would not have been a massacre of the inhabitants and destruction by fire and sword of the whole city. And I trust that because gentlemen apotheosize Aguinaldo they will not go to the extent of trying to put us in a position that we do not assume, and never have assumed, in connection with the islands. This is a matter that will be taken care of promptly and properly by the party which has control of the Senate and House in the next Congress.

There are some facts that we can not ignore. We must act in the light of known facts. The attack on our troops, following immediately on the flight of Agoncillo to Montreal, gave positive strength, if not complete proof, of the statement that the Filipinos at the time the attack was made on our troops were operating under directions from their agent here in Washington, and encouraged by the statements in Congress that the gentleman from the State of Washington has so wisely and ably deplored this morning.

Possibly some of these declarations have been misconstrued and may be attributed to exuberant rhetoric rather than lack of patriotism. But whether that be true or not, the question is, Are we to stand by our troops or begin a fire in their rear?

I do not discuss the advisability of the permanent annexation of the Philippines or of a continued protectorate over them. The fortune of war drove the Spaniards to the wall and left us responsible for the situation of those islands, at least for a time. The war was not of the President's making. He was constantly assailed before it began because of his pacific intentions by the same men who now criticise him because he does not abandon the responsibilities that were left on our hands when that war was concluded.

All lawful authority had been overthrown by our Army and Navy, and the Spanish army were prisoners of war. The insurgent forces under Aguinaldo demanded the right to pillage the capital and demonstrated such a ferocious desire to destroy that it imposed upon us the duty, for a time at least, to protect life and property in these islands. The President undertook without hesitation the difficult and dangerous duty thus thrust upon us. This is the sum total of his offending.

Whether the occupation of these islands should be permanent or not was left an open question, to be determined by Congress in the full light of subsequent events, investigation, and developments. Whether we should permanently occupy them or not, we ought to stand by our soldiers and sailors in the discharge of their great and dangerous duties there.

Several hundred of our men have been killed and wounded. I have listened in vain in this debate for a word of commendation to our American soldiers from the other side of the House.

My neighbor boys of the Fifty-first Iowa are now exposed to the hostile fire of these misguided Filipinos.

It has become unbearable to listen to the praises of the men who have been attempting to kill the very soldiers who have driven the Spanish oppressors from the islands.

General Otis is on the ground, and I prefer to take his account of the conduct of these so-called patriots rather than the florid rhetoric of Agoncillo at Montreal, whose version is accepted without question by so many gentlemen in this House.

I will read a dispatch from General Otis, and in the light of this information I ask those gentlemen who so greatly admire the Philippine leader to say what there is in his conduct to call for their adulation?

[Washington Post, February 22, 1899.]

PLOT FOR A MASSACRE—FILIPINO PLAN TO EXTERMINATE AMERICANS AT MANILA—UPRISING INTENDED IN THE CITY—BLOODTHIRSTY CIRCULAR ISSUED FROM THE INSURGENT HEADQUARTERS AT MALOLOS CALLING UPON THE NATIVES IN MANILA TO REVOLT ON FEBRUARY 15 AND ARRANGING THE DETAILS.

The following dispatch was received yesterday afternoon from General Otis:

MANILA, February 21, 1899.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL, Washington, D. C.:

Following issued by an important _____ officer of insurgent government at Malolos, February 15, 1899, for execution during that evening and night in this city.

OTIS.

"First. You will so dispose that at 8 o'clock at night the individuals of the territorial militia at your order will be found united in all of the streets of San Pedro, armed with their bolos and revolvers, or guns and ammunition, if convenient.

"Second. Philippine families only will be respected; they should not be molested; but all other individuals, of whatever race they may be, will be exterminated without compassion after the extermination of the army of occupation.

"Third. The defenders of the Philippines in your command will attack the guard at Bilbid and liberate the prisoners and 'presidarios,' and having accomplished this they will be armed, saying to them: 'Brothers, we must avenge ourselves on the Americans and exterminate them that we may take our revenge for the infamy and treachery which they have committed upon us; have no compassion upon them; attack with vigor. All Filipinos en masse will second you. Long live Filipinos' independence.'

"Fourth. The order which will be followed in the attack will be as follows: The sharpshooters of Tondo and Santa Ana will begin the attack from without, and these shots will be the signal for the militia of Tondo, Binondo, Quiapo, and Sampaloc to go out into the street and do their duty; those of Pako, Ermita, and Malate, Santa Cruz, and San Miguel will not start out until 12 o'clock, unless they see that their companions need assistance.

"5. The militia of Tondo will start out at 3 o'clock in the morning. If all do their duty our revenge will be complete. Brothers, Europe contemplates us; we know how to die as men, shedding our blood in defense of the liberty of our country; death to the tyrants.

"War without quarter to the false Americans, who have deceived us.

"Either independence or death."

The portion of General Otis's dispatch indicated by dashes, the officials were unable to decipher.

Almost every member from every part of the country voted to instruct the President to embark upon the war. He went into it reluctantly. It was his desire to avoid it if possible. The war began, Manila came into our hands, and the insurgents desired an opportunity of sacking the city and destroying the inhabitants. Our troops resisted them and refused them admission, assigned them limits to which they could come or may come, and it would be the height of dishonor for us to withdraw now, leaving these people at the mercy of the insurgents. It would cover us with dishonor in the face of the civilized world. [Applause.]

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Chairman, a great many years ago our country was engaged in war with the Government of Mexico. It was a war about which, or about the propriety of which, there was a great deal of dispute in our own country.

There lived in the State of Ohio at that time the most popular man who had ever lived in that State, the idol of his own party, and wonderfully popular even with his opponents. On one occasion, in the Senate of the United States, he used this language:

Were I a Mexican, as I am an American, I would welcome your soldiers with bloody hands to hospitable graves.

For that utterance he died a broken-hearted man, absolutely repudiated by the men of his own party, and went down to his grave with regret upon his lips that he had ever made that utterance.

The American soldiers were dying along the Rio Grande—

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. GROSVENOR. No; I must decline to yield. The gentleman absolutely refused, although he had ten minutes, to allow me a single question. Now he interposes in the brief space of five minutes allotted to me. Treat me with ordinary fairness is all that I ask. The flag of the country had been raised upon the soil of Mexico and our soldiers were contending in an inhospitable climate against the enemy on the battlefield.

To-day the men of Tennessee, the men from Union City, are dying on the battlefields of the Philippine Islands. Who shall stop now to discuss questions of law and to hesitate whether these men shall be protected and defended or not? I have not risen to answer the argument of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SETTLE] made yesterday, nor yet the eloquent gentleman from Missouri [Mr. COCHRAN] to-day; but at the proper time I will put into this RECORD and I will read the authorities. First, there was the declaration of the President of the United States, hurled over the ocean to Manila within a short time after the full news of the capture of Manila had come, absolutely forbidding any and all alliance of every character with anybody on those islands. [Applause on the Republican side.]

And now comes a great lawyer who says that down in Hong-kong or Singapore, or in some other British possession, some consul-general entered into some conspiracy, a treaty of alliance, defensive and offensive, with a scalawag who had fled from his own country to get rid of turning over $400,000 that he had gotten as a bribe, and the gentleman solemnly says that that consul had the power to commit this Government to an alliance with what, with whom? Aguinaldo? Who was Aguinaldo then? He had not an office in the world. He represented nobody but himself. He had no way to get back to the Philippine Islands. He was simply a vagabond running away; that was all. And Mr. Williams or Mr. Wildman or Mr. Somebody entered into some sort of an arrangement with him by which he was to go back on a neutral vessel.

Mr. FLEMING. And Dewey indorsed him.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Dewey never indorsed him in such connection.

Mr. FLEMING. Yes, he did.

Mr. GROSVENOR. And when the proper time comes, I will show you that General Merritt utterly refused to have him come into his presence when he got there.

Mr. FLEMING. General Greene's testimony read yesterday—

Mr. GROSVENOR. I care nothing about General Greene's testimony. Greene was not there. Greene came later. The order absolutely forbidding every alliance had reached Dewey long before that time.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Was not that after the capture of Manila?

Mr. GROSVENOR. Certainly; there could not have been much alliance until after the capture of Manila. I stated that that was the first order that went from here following the capture of Manila.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. GROSVENOR. Under the authority given to me to extend my remarks I more fully refer to the case of Mr. Corwin. When he made the unfortunate speech to which I have referred he was a Senator from Ohio, having been elected for a term of six years.

He had been elected a Senator to the Twenty-ninth Congress. He had been beaten by Shannon for governor of Ohio and then had beaten Shannon and then again Shannon beat him, but the Whigs had a majority in 1845 and elected him a Senator. Before the close of his term it became entirely manifest that he could not be reelected, and he took a position in the Cabinet of Mr. Fillmore, who was the reactionary successor of Taylor, of the Mexican war.

His speech to which I have referred made impossible his reelection, notwithstanding all his magnificent popularity. Eight years afterwards the affection for him which had been so strong in Ohio had narrowed down to a single Congressional district, and he was twice elected to the House of Representatives after retiring with the most brilliant prospect that any Ohio man ever had for a long term in the Senate. His subsequent public service was a brief period in a diplomatic relation with Mexico.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, I think in two minutes I can say all that I desire to say touching this matter.

First, I want to say that if the speech of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. SIMPSON], and of some other gentlemen on the other side made yesterday, had been made yesterday by them in Manila, they would have been arrested, tried by a drumhead court-martial, and shot. [Applause on the Republican side.] Second, I want to answer a question in a sentence for myself for once and all.

The United States has and exercises sovereignty over the Philippines, and will continue to do so [applause and cries of "Good!" on the Republican side], and if they are obstructed in exercising that sovereignty, the power of the whole people, represented by the Army and the Navy, will see to it that it is exercised, and rocks and the mountains will fall on the individual and the party that obstructs. [Prolonged applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. SIMPSON, Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri, Mr. CARMACK, and Mr. GREENE of Nebraska rose.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Nebraska. Mr. GREENE of Nebraska. Mr. Chairman, I trust the storm has blown over. I think the danger, at least, has all passed, as the thundering has subsided. Now, what is all this talk about?

Mr. MORRIS. Political buncombe.

Mr. GREENE of Nebraska. Yes; it is all political buncombe of the simplest and purest kind.

Mr. SIMPSON. It may be simple, but it is not pure.

Mr. GREENE of Nebraska. There is not a gentleman on this floor who has the slightest idea that there is any other gentleman on either side of this Chamber who with his heart and soul is not in sympathy with every brave son of America on either Cuban or Philippine soil. There is not a man in this Chamber who believes that there is a gentleman on this side of the Chamber who would refuse to do anything and all things for the uplifting and glorification of our American soldiers wherever they are.

I warn you Republicans you are not fooling the great mass of our people by this childish twaddle. You may deceive yourselves and the unthinking part of our people, but do not presume too much on the ignorance of the American farmer. He sees through your shams and pretenses. He knows that you are at your old tricks, trying to hide your nakedness and political shame behind the blue coats of our soldiers and within the folds of the American flag. Sir, in all the ages past the greatest political crimes of history have been committed in the name of patriotism. You Republicans, conscious of the weakness of your position and of the great wrongs being committed by your party, are now seeking to distract public attention from your evil deeds by pulling around you the flag, and shouting "Patriotism!" and wrongfully attempting to deceive our people into a belief that whatever or whoever calls attention to your wicked policy is disloyal and an enemy to our soldiers.

Now, whenever gentlemen get up on that side of the House and say that gentlemen on this side are against the American soldier, or opposing him, or in any way, either by word or act, detracting from his honor or valor, I say you ought to be ashamed of yourselves, for not one of you believe it.

Mr. STRODE of Nebraska. May I ask my colleague a question?

Mr. GREENE of Nebraska. I decline to be interrupted. There is not one of you, I repeat, who believes it, or even dreams it. You just simply send that out as a little cheap political thunder to catch the small suckers throughout your respective districts. [Loud applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. STRODE of Nebraska. Will my colleague allow me to ask him a question?

Several MEMBERS. Talk to the Democrats, not to us.

Mr. GREENE of Nebraska. I talk to you, because I do not come to call the righteous but sinners to repentance—

Mr. HULL and several other members on the Republican side. Turn to the other side!

Mr. GREENE of Nebraska. No; I am talking to the crowd who need it most. Why ought we not, as members of Congress, to be honest—honest to ourselves and honest to the country; deal honestly with our constituents? Why try to deceive them and lead them away from the truth?

Mr. SIMPSON. You are asking impossibilities of the Republican party.

Mr. GREENE of Nebraska. Everybody knows that the American soldier must do what his officer commands him to do. Everybody knows that the officers in the Army are subject to the orders of the President of the United States, as Commander in Chief of the Army, and nobody has found fault with the soldiers. It is the policy that has made possible the great trouble in which we are engaged now that we are criticising. It is not the soldiers. God bless the soldiers! They are doing their duty as brave, noble men, in obedience to the commands of their superiors. [Loud applause.] And I say that nobody on this side of the Chamber, or in this country, has anything to say against the men who are wearing the uniform of our country. It is the policy, I repeat, which has made necessary their suffering and death in the Philippines that we criticise.

Mr. PERKINS. What policy would you have pursued?

Mr. GREENE of Nebraska. I will tell you what policy I would have pursued. If I had the duty imposed on me as Mr. McKinley did, I would have had a policy and announced that policy to the world before the great bloodshed in which we are now engaged had begun.

Mr. GIBSON. What would that have been?

Mr. GREENE of Nebraska. I would not have waited until others who are interested told me what that policy ought to be. I would not have waited for instructions from Wall street before formulating a policy.

Several MEMBERS. What policy would you have pursued?

Mr. GREENE of Nebraska. I would have held up the American flag as the ensign of liberty and human freedom; I would have announced long ago to the people of those islands that it was not the intention of this country to hold them perpetually; I would have told them, as we have told Cuba, that we come to make you free, not to enslave; that the mission of our flag is freedom, not oppression. And, sir, had this policy been announced to the people there not one drop of blood would have been shed in the islands, our dear dead boys would to-day be among the living, our wounded and dying would be in health, and ere long all would be in the embraces of loved ones at home. Sir, it is that accursed policy of colonization—the offspring of monarchy, the enemy of liberty—that has filled our land with sadness. Let us then abandon it [loud applause] and again teach, as our fathers did, that all men shall be free under the stars and stripes. [Great applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman—

Mr. SIMPSON. I rise to a question of personal privilege.

Mr. HULL. I move that the committee do now rise.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair desires to state that the gentleman from Kansas has stated to the Chair that he rose to a question of personal privilege. Is it a matter that has occurred in committee?

Mr. SIMPSON. It has occurred in debate.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state his question.

Mr. SIMPSON. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON] a few moments ago, in his address to the committee, said if I had been in Manila and uttered the words there that I uttered on this floor on yesterday, that I would have been court-martialed and shot. [Laughter.] Mr. Chairman, that may be true and it may not be true. I do not know, in choosing between two difficulties of this kind, whether I would rather be court-martialed and shot in Manila or be shot with an old muzzle-loading brass Cannon like that I was shot with a few moments ago. [Great laughter.]

Mr. HULL. I rise to a question of order.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. Chairman, I said on yesterday in part:

We fought in Cuba and liberated them. So we did in Manila, side by side with the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands. We fought to drive the Spanish power from those islands, in the interest of humanity, but after all the expenditure of money and the glorious achievements of our Army and Navy, we have turned it into what? We have taken and are taking to-day the place of Spain. We have become the oppressors in the place of Spain. We are taking up the same policy that we compelled her to let go, and we are to-day witnessing the spectacle of the volunteers who enlisted to fight in the interest of humanity being used to fight against those people who fought side by side with us to attain that glorious privilege of which we have boasted for more than a hundred years—the right to govern ourselves.

Mr. Chairman, I am glad that we have a free country yet and a Congress in which a man can express his views upon the policy of a State without being shot and without being court-martialed. I say to-day that the soldiers who have fallen recently and those who have fallen from the State of Kansas, in defense of the policy of the Administration, for the subjugation of these people—that the blood of those brave soldiers deserves to rest, and will rest, upon the President of the United States, the Commander in Chief of the Army. [Loud applause on the Democratic side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will take his seat. The Chair desires to state the gentleman is not now discussing a question of personal privilege. He is discussing the Administration, and not a speech for which the gentleman was recognized.

Mr. HULL. I move that the committee rise.

Mr. SIMPSON. I will not longer take up the time of the committee. I know that the chairman of the committee is anxious to get on with the bill. I simply want to protect myself against the charge of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON] and the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LACEY], who put me in a bad light before the people, that I was opposed to the soldiers, and so guilty of treason. I am not. I glory in the manhood, patriotism, and the soldierly bearing of our soldiers. They who are in the Army have but to obey the orders of their superiors and do their duty like men. [Applause.]

Theirs not to reason why,
Theirs to do and die—

at the command of their superiors.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise.

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. CARMACK. A point of order, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. HAY. Division, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. HULL. I will say, Mr. Chairman, I made the motion at the request of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. ALLEN], who has charge of the eulogies that are to take place this afternoon.

Mr. HAY. I do not care at whose request the gentleman made it.

The CHAIRMAN. What is the point of order of the gentleman from Tennessee?

Mr. CARMACK. I have been recognized by the Chair—
The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state to the gentleman from Tennessee that a motion that the committee rise is always in order.

Mr. CARMACK. Is it in order when I have the floor, having been recognized by the Chair?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks the gentleman from Tennessee did not have the floor in the sense which he states it to the Chair. That was not the understanding of the Chair; and in addition to that, there is a special order this afternoon, and this motion is made in obedience to that order. The Chair thinks that that will have precedence.

The question is on a division.

Mr. CARMACK. Mr. Chairman, I will withdraw the demand for a division.

The motion of Mr. HULL was then agreed to; and the committee determined to rise. Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. HOPKINS, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration House bill 12106, making appropriations for the Army for the next fiscal year, and had come to no resolution thereon.

REPORT OF JOINT COMMITTEE ON DISPOSITION OF WASTE PAPER.

Mr. BREWER. Mr. Speaker, I want to present a report from the joint select committee of the Senate and House of Representatives appointed on the 21st of April, 1898, on the disposition of waste paper in the Departments.

The report was read at length.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Alabama present anything for action on the part of the House?

Mr. BREWER. I ask to have the report of the committee adopted.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will suggest that there is no resolution connected with it for the action of the House.

Mr. BREWER. Then, Mr. Speaker, I will withdraw it until the resolution is prepared.

BICYCLE MESSENGERS FOR ENROLLING ROOM.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following resolution; which the Clerk read:

Resolved, That the Clerk of the House of Representatives be authorized and empowered to employ for the remainder of the session two bicycle messengers for day and night service between the enrolling room of the Clerk's office and the Government Printing Office, to be paid each out of the contingent fund of the House of Representatives, at $5 per day.

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Speaker, does that come from the Committee on Accounts?

The SPEAKER. From the chairman of the Committee on Enrolled Bills.

The resolution was agreed to.

EULOGIES ON THE LATE SENATOR WALTHALL AND THE LATE REPRESENTATIVE LOVE.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. Speaker, I present the following resolution under the special order of the House.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution to the House.

The Clerk read as follows:

Whereas the House of Representatives has heard with profound sorrow of the death of the Hon. E. C. WALTHALL, late a Senator of the United States from the State of Mississippi, and also of the death of Hon. W. F. LOVE, late a member of this House from the State of Mississippi: Therefore, be it

Resolved, That the business of the House be now suspended that opportunity may be given for tributes to the memory of the late Senator E. C. WALTHALL and of the late Representative W. F. LOVE, and as a particular mark of respect to the memory of the late Senator WALTHALL and the late Representative LOVE, and in recognition of their eminent abilities and distinguished public services, the House, at the conclusion of these memorial proceedings, shall stand adjourned.

That a copy of these resolutions be transmitted to the family of the late Senator WALTHALL and the family of the late Representative LOVE; and

That the Clerk be ordered to communicate these resolutions to the Senate.

The resolutions were unanimously agreed to.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. Speaker, I desire to submit some remarks now on the life and character and distinguished public services of the late Senator WALTHALL. It may appear that this mark of respect to his memory is somewhat belated. It has been postponed to this time in order to accommodate some of our colleagues who were anxious to be present and participate in these ceremonies and have been unable to be present at an earlier day. No man who has participated in the legislative councils of this nation and has passed away has, in my judgment, a better claim to any respect that could be shown him by his legislative colleagues than the late Senator WALTHALL.

It has been said, Mr. Speaker, that misfortunes never come singly. Bereavements come very much like misfortunes. I served as a member of this House for six terms without ever having been called upon to perform the sad duty of burying or paying tribute to the memory of one of my colleagues from Mississippi. In this my seventh term we have been called upon to bury two great

United States Senators and one member of this House from our State.

EDWARD CAREY WALTHALL was born in Richmond, Va., on the 4th day of April, 1831. At about the age of 10 years he removed with his father's family to the beautiful little city of Holly Springs, Marshall County, Miss., and there grew up to manhood. He received an academic education at St. Thomas Hall, an Episcopal institution of learning located in Holly Springs. Connected with this school was the polemic society known as the St. Thomas Hall Debaters, of which he was a conspicuous member, and it was there he laid the foundation of his beautiful and well-rounded life.

Among his schoolmates and associates there were many young men who afterwards became distinguished leaders in the law, legislative, judicial, and military service of the Commonwealth. Among them Gen. C. H. Mott, who fell leading his command at the battle of Williamsburg, Va., one of the very best, bravest, and most promising officers of the Confederate army; Gen. James R. Chalmers, a brigadier-general in the Confederate army, and for many years a distinguished member of this House; Judge H. H. Chalmers, an eminent jurist who was for a long time and at the time of his death chief justice, of the supreme court of the State of Mississippi; Col. James L. Autry, Maj. W. M. Strickland, Col. Nat. Taylor, and many others who rendered distinguished services in the Confederate army and stood high as professional men and citizens after the close of the war.

With such friends and companions he grew up to manhood, and to the day of his death had a warm place in his heart for and often spoke of these friends of his boyhood. He was a very popular young man, not only among his immediate associates, but was much loved and respected by the entire community in which he lived. After completing his literary studies at St. Thomas Hall he studied law in the office of his brother-in-law, Mr. George R. Freeman, at Pontotoc, Miss. At the age of 21 he was licensed and commenced the practice of his profession at Coffeeville, Miss.

He was elected district attorney of the Tenth judicial district of Mississippi in 1856 and reelected in 1859. At the beginning of hostilities in the war between the States he resigned the office of district attorney, enlisted in the Confederate army, was elected lieutenant of his company, which became a part of the Fifteenth Mississippi Regiment, which was one of the best regiments contributed by Mississippi to the Confederate army, was soon afterwards elected lieutenant-colonel of the regiment, in the spring of 1862 was elected colonel of the Twenty-ninth Mississippi Regiment, and in the same year promoted to brigadier-general, and in June, 1864, was again promoted to major-general.

After the close of the war he returned to Coffeeville and resumed the practice of his chosen profession. In 1871 he moved to Grenada, Miss., which place was his home to the time of his death, and where he continued to practice law until 1885, when he was appointed to the United States Senate by Gov. Robert Lowry, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of his life-long and closest friend, Hon. L. Q. C. Lamar, who had resigned to accept the position of Secretary of the Interior under President Cleveland.

In January, 1886, he was elected by the legislature to fill out the remainder of the unexpired term; was reelected in January, 1888, to a full term expiring on the 4th of March, 1895. In January, 1892, was reelected to a term that would have expired on the 4th of March, 1901. On account of ill health, in January, 1894, he resigned the unexpired portion of the term ending March 4, 1895.

He expected at that time to resign the full succeeding term when he could do so, but his health improved, and at the earnest solicitation of his friends and constituents reconsidered his determination to resign, and came back to the Senate and served until the 21st day of April, 1898, on which day he died at his hotel in this city. He was a delegate at large from Mississippi to every national Democratic convention held after the close of the war, and was at each convention either the chairman of the delegation from his State or a vice-president of the convention.

This, Mr. Speaker, is an epitomized statement of the youth and public services of Senator WALTHALL, and yet one might read this sketch and know very little of the real distinguishing, admirable traits and superior qualities of this great man as they were known to those of us who had the good fortune to know him well and enjoy his friendship.

I think I can truly say that from the time he was first elected district attorney every position, honor, and distinction he received from the people of his beloved State came to him without his seeking or asking it. I saw him frequently during the war, but was never under his command. I remember well now the impression he made upon me then.

He was one of the handsomest and most graceful soldiers in the army, noted for his soldierly bearing, his cool and intrepid courage, his skill as a commander, his respectful and courteous demeanor to those who served under him, as well as those who commanded him, and devoted to the welfare of his men, and idolized by them. While he was a splendid disciplinarian, no man who served under him feared he would not get justice at his hands.

He performed promptly and well all the duties devolving on him, and his soldiers knew he expected the same of them, and their love and admiration for him made it seldom necessary to resort to any harshness to secure their obedience to orders. In my judgment, that war that produced so many great soldiers and commanders produced no more magnificent specimen of the ideal volunteer soldier than was found in Gen. E. C. WALTHALL.

He was brave, discreet, judgmatical, and tactful, enjoying the unbounded confidence of those who commanded him and those under his command. I have heard that when Hood's army was beaten by Thomas at Nashville, when General Hood asked General WALTHALL to take command of the infantry of the rear guard of his army and assist General Forrest in protecting his retreat back across the Tennessee River, after pointing out to him the dangerous mission with which he was intrusting him, asked if he was willing to pick his command and perform this service, he is said to have replied:

As a soldier I have never sought a post of danger nor shirked one of duty.

I am not sure that I give the exact words, but they convey the idea, and I know they illustrate the true character of the great soldier to whom they are attributed. He was not courting for himself or his men death or danger, but there was no place demanded by duty where he would not have sacrificed the lives of both.

I was a private soldier in that retreating army, a witness of and sharer in its hardships and privations, but was not under the command of General WALTHALL, but there are others here who will pay tribute to him to-day, among them my colleague, Captain SPIGHT, who served under him through the war, and my friend General SPALDING, who fought on the other side and was in his front all the way from Nashville back to the Tennessee River.

I will leave it for them to tell how well he performed the desperate duty to which General Hood assigned him. Suffice it to say, Hood's retreat was covered, and what was left of that splendid army after the battles of Franklin and Nashville recrossed the Tennessee River, and WALTHALL's command was the last to cross. The fact that he fought his way from the position of lieutenant to that of major-general and never received promotion that he did not merit is a splendid tribute to his soldierly qualities.

Mr. Speaker, I listened to the tributes paid Senator WALTHALL by his colleagues in the Senate. They were all beautiful and impressive, and, I am sure, sincere and heartfelt. I have never seen more evidence of real sorrow exhibited on such an occasion. I was impressed with some things that were said there about this Confederate major-general as a United States Senator. I heard a distinguished Senator, who was a gallant Federal general during the war, and a member of the Military Committee of the Senate, say this of Senator WALTHALL:

He said he had served on the Military Committee with him for twelve years; that on that committee there were many questions affecting the rights of people growing out of service in the Union Army during the war, and that he could say on that committee, after those twelve years of service, that—

In his treatment of all such matters, no stranger, coming as a casual observer, could have discovered on which side of the great war he had ranged himself.

That is a good deal to say of a man by one who was on the other side from him both in politics and in the war, that in his official capacity here, in the treatment of the questions growing out of that struggle, in twelve years' service nobody could ever have detected on which side of that question he fought, so far as his action as a member of that committee was concerned.

I heard another distinguished Republican Senator say of him:

He was the first man to teach me that a Confederate soldier who had won, by his chivalrous daring, his way from the rank of lieutenant to that of major-general, and who had led in a hundred battles under a flag which I hated and against one which I loved, could be as loyal and faithful to a reunited Republic and to its flag as if there had never been a division among us.

That Senator did not know what sort of stuff Confederate soldiers were made of. While Senator WALTHALL was the first to teach it to him, it was a fact well known to all who had observed the course of the Confederates after they laid down their arms. If there are any doubting Thomases still, I point to the record of those Confederates who have participated in the late war. Gen. Joe Wheeler showed them how a man who fought against the flag as a Confederate could not only fight for it, but fight for it as bravely and effectively as any soldier ever fought.

I do not know, Mr. Speaker, that I could better exemplify Senator WALTHALL's estimation of the Confederate soldier, of whom he was of the highest type, than by reading a description he himself gave of his comrades, as he knew them, in a speech made by him at the opening of Chickamauga Park, where he was called upon to preside over a meeting and introduced by General Fullerton, a Federal general, who, in introducing him, said:

The gentleman who will preside at this meeting to-night needs no introduction. You all know him, you all love him. He is known alike to the soldiers of both armies. I have merely to mention his name—Gen. E. C. WALTHALL, of Mississippi.

I now read you a portion of the address delivered by General WALTHALL on that occasion:

LADIES AND FELLOW-SOLDIERS: To be chosen to preside over an assembly like this is a proud distinction, for which I am profoundly grateful to those by whom it was bestowed. My selection for such a duty involves the flattering implication that I am deemed worthy to represent the soldier of the South and all he stands for in history, and it is for this I prize the honor most. If, indeed, I be his fit and proper type, then, for the moment, the privilege is mine to symbolize courage, constancy, and devotion in war, self-respecting dignity in defeat, and in peace the same fidelity to this Government the Southern soldier bore to that for whose permanent establishment he fought four years in vain.

The story of the fiery struggle tells what he did and how he suffered for his duty, as he saw it, while the strife was raging; and the sequel shows that when the conflict ceased the name and fame he won in battle were never tarnished by any breach of a paroled soldier's pledge of peace.

For the teachings of the sages of his section, which had the sanction of his own approval, he faced his Northern brother on a hundred fields of blood. He raised his hand against him because he had been taught it was his duty to battle for the rights and institutions of his State. A sentiment he had inherited, ingrained in his nature, sustained him through the fierce, long struggle in which he was destined to be beaten.

After the lapse of thirty years since his banners went down, for him and in his name, it is my pride and pleasure to greet his former foe, whom he joins in doing honor to our reunited country's flag. At this the first formal meeting between you and him, had under the auspices of your Government and his, he salutes you as the victors, and best bears witness to your prowess by pointing to the record of his own. There could be no occasion so appropriate for him without humility or assumption, hypocrisy, or pretension, but in a spirit of fraternity and equality, in token of his sincerity, to reach out his open hand to you.

In him there is no trace remaining of the bitterness and failure of defeat; and if there were, the proofs, in which this national park abounds, that his name and deeds have been fairly dealt with would be enough to dispel it all forever. He will vie with you in supporting and defending the Government which, in perpetuating the achievements of American arms, has done justice with an even hand to the armies of the North and South alike.

After the dawn of peace he wrestled with a harder fate than yours. Desolation, destruction, and waste of war, the rule of the bayonet, radical changes in the laws of citizenship, chiefly affecting the Southern States, and the great problem of the races, on whose solution so much for him depended, were some of the stern realities which confronted him at home to try his pride and manhood and to test his spirit of independence and his powers of self-restraint. To such burdens as were his to bear you happily were strangers, and in congratulating you on this exemption he would have you know he bore them as became a foe who had stood four years before your guns.

Upon the bounty of the Government he had forfeited his claims, and against the consequences of his own action he uttered no complaint. There were no pensions for his disabled comrades or the dependent families of those who freely gave their lives for the cause they had espoused. The Government could provide no soldiers' home for such as he—no beautiful national cemetery, tastefully arranged and scrupulously cared for, where a grateful nation guards the graves of those who fell in its defense. He begrudges you no benefit which the Government has bestowed on you and yours. You, as its defenders, earned its gratitude and favor, while he who fought against you incurred the penalties of failure, which he becomingly accepted.

Promptly he betook himself, without repining, to the earnest work of rehabilitation and restoration. He has built up the waste places in his section, has been the friend of order, and has upheld the law. In matters religious, social, political, and material he has been a busy factor and a power for good. He has been the champion of progress and improvement, and has won worthily all the highest honors his people had the power to confer. He feels that his record as a citizen in peace is a fit complement to that he made as a soldier in war, and he is content.

True as yourselves to the Union now, he yet dearly loves the sunny land he lives in, tenderly cherishes the memories and traditions of the South, and is proud of her history and the achievements of her noble men and women. His tattered banner and his sword have been laid away forever, but his army record will always be his pride and Lee his ideal of a soldier and a man. Such he is, and such he must ever be, and as such he would meet you and cordially would greet you as his friends and fellow-countrymen, with whom he has a common interest in the greatness and glory of our common country.

Mr. Speaker, this statement, couched in such beautiful language, more truly describes the heroism, patriotism, conduct, and aspirations of the great body of Confederate soldiers after the war than anything I have seen, and I want it to go in the RECORD along with the tributes paid his memory this day. I think of all the positions of honor and trust he ever held, he took most pride in his record as a Confederate soldier.

I first met General WALTHALL personally at the home of the late Justice Lamar, at Oxford, Miss., when I was a law student in the University of Mississippi under the tutelage of Mr. Lamar. I met him there frequently during my school days, and after I began the practice we often met there during the term of the Federal court.

He was a man of great personal magnetism and soon made me one of his warm friends and great admirers. At that time he was at the zenith of his successful career as a lawyer; he was one of the leading lawyers at the bar in our State, where, in my judgment, there then resided some as good lawyers as this country ever produced. I am sure I have never seen anywhere the superiors of some of the lawyers we had in Mississippi at that time.

He was the general attorney of the Mississippi Central Railroad, now a part of the great Illinois Central system, and had as many cases of his own selection as he would take outside of his railroad practice. He was a wonderfully successful practitioner; he was not only a thoroughly posted and well-equipped lawyer, but in the law, as in everything else, he exhibited that excellent judgment and good common sense, coupled with a thorough knowledge of human nature and the motives that actuate men.

He did what very few lawyers in our State have done. While in the vigor of his manhood he accumulated a very good fortune, as fortunes go in Mississippi. It was a competency for himself and those dependent on him, and for his own purposes, I think, it was all he desired.

He was one of the best poised men in the conduct of his business, as well as about other things, I have ever known. His only business was the law until he came to the Senate. He made his money as a lawyer, and he invested it where there was the least possibility of his losing it or its giving trouble to him or those who were to come after him.

He was a very liberal man, but I never saw him squander a dollar in my life, and I never saw him fail to expend one where it was the proper thing to do. In his purchases he always bought the best, not because he was extravagant, but he wanted the best and thought it was economy to have it.

He gave bountifully of his income. His charities were altogether unostentatious, and no one will ever know the extent of them. I never knew a call made on him for any proper object that did not meet with a generous response. He always seemed to consider that worthy but unfortunate Confederate soldiers had special claims on him, and they never appealed to him for help, financial or otherwise, without meeting a hearty response.

He was not given to talking of his deeds of charity or friendship, but a very intimate acquaintance and association with him for the last twelve years gave me an opportunity to know much on this subject. After the retreat of Hood's army from Nashville he was never a strong man physically, and for many years had been a very delicate man, so much so he had to exercise great care and self-denial to protect his health.

I have never known a man of more perfect control over himself and all his habits. He ate and drank and did what he knew would best agree with him except when the doing of something became a matter of duty, then he was not as careful as he should have been. It is generally believed by those in the best position to know that his death was hastened by his leaving his sick bed to go to the Senate to perform a duty he felt he owed to the memory of his late colleague, Senator George.

He and I came to Washington and began our Congressional lives together. During the twelve years he was here our associations were always intimate and cordial. I enjoyed not only his friendship, but, I believe, as much of his confidence as he ever gave anyone. I know he had mine in an unbounded degree.

The better you knew him, the more you liked to confide in him. I never knew a man who seemed to have more unerring judgment or was a better adviser about all of the concerns of life; his advice was always honest; he had the keenest perception of right and the most delicate sense of honor.

It is easy to understand how much I have missed him since his death. As to how well he fulfilled his mission as a Senator, I refer to the testimony given by his associates in that body and to his high and influential positions on committees of the Senate, the universal respect entertained for him by every member of the Senate, and the admiration and love felt for him by most of that body, and to the further fact that his constituents believed in him to the extent of asking and insisting on having his services rather than his having to ask for their suffrages.

He had none of the tricks of the demagogue or the scheming, pettifogging politician; he hated shams and false pretenses of every kind and especially those by which some men seek to obtain public office.

I do not know that I can better illustrate from the standpoint at which I look at things to-day his wise and conservative statesmanship than by reference to one of the last conversations I ever had with him before the delirium of the disease with which he died dethroned his reason.

We were just about declaring war against Spain; he was violently opposed to the war, and insisted that this Government should look out for the interest of its own citizens and settle such disputes as it might have with Spain by diplomatic negotiations, if possible. I shall never forget how earnest he was in his opposition to the war, and with what forebodings he looked on its inauguration.

Mr. Speaker, my judgment is that if more of our statesmen could have looked with his accurate foresight into the future, we might have been spared not only many valuable lives and much of treasure, but many conditions that threaten us with untold complications and difficulties in the future.

I wish to say a word about his beautiful and happy home life. All who ever visited his home were bound to be impressed not only with his gracious and generous hospitality, but with the happiness of all his surroundings. I have never known a couple more devoted and better satisfied with each other than he and his noble wife.

Mrs. Walthall was Miss Mary Leckey Jones, from Mecklenburg County, Va. She was one of the great belles of Virginia before her marriage, and was as attractive and lovable in all the traits that go to make a charming and admirable woman and good wife as she was beautiful in her face and character.

She idolized her husband; would endure any sort of inconvenience and hardship to be near him, and was so much wrapt up in him that when his life went out the light of her life departed and she only survived him a few months. She was as much my friend as her husband, and I will never cease to miss her kind and motherly sympathy. He was a loving and indulgent father, and, though his only daughter was one of adoption, he always resented any insinuation that one must love his or her own offspring better than one who came into their household and lives by adoption.

Mr. Speaker, I think he was the highest type of a gentleman I ever knew; and I doubt if anyone else ever knew a man who better filled the full measure of all that is implied in the term "gentleman." The knightly, chivalrous, high-toned, honorable EDWARD C. WALTHALL is gone from among us. We took his remains to Holly Springs, there to rest in the soil over which his childish footsteps strayed. We buried him in the springtime, when the flowers seemed to be all in bloom; and I do not remember ever to have seen so many and such beautiful floral offerings coming as tokens of love and appreciation from those who loved and honored him.

The people were gathered there from all parts of the State, and all the people from Holly Springs without regard to race or condition turned out to do honor to his memory, but the most pathetic scene of all to me was the column of old gray-haired Confederate veterans, some with empty sleeves, some on crutches, who marched in that procession to the cemetery and stood around his grave with uncovered heads, giving unmistakable evidences of their grief for their old commander and their much loved and honored comrade.

Mr. Speaker, this is my poor tribute to my dead friend. I know I have spoken without the preparation the occasion deserved, but I have spoken from my heart.

Mr. SPALDING. Mr. Speaker, my first knowledge of Senator WALTHALL was in the midst of booming cannon, shrieking shell, and the wicked whiz and whirr of rifle balls. The acquaintance thus begun did not ripen into a real and intimate friendship at that time, but served to win my respect for the ability, skill, and courage of that undaunted general commanding the advance guard of Hood's army, which was forcing a crossing over the Tennessee River at a point not far from Florence, Ala.

That officer in command was General WALTHALL. The troops on the Federal side were the fourth division of cavalry of the Army of the Cumberland, commanded by myself.

General Sherman had swung his army free from his base of supply at Atlanta, Ga., and had started on his memorable march to the sea.

The authorities of Richmond had replaced General Johnston by the appointment of General Hood for the purpose of invading Tennessee, Kentucky, and Ohio, hoping thereby to compel Sherman to change his plans and follow Hood. Sherman, with his army, continued moving southward. Hood took the opposite direction and from Florence, Ala., penetrated as far north as Nashville, Tenn.

Both armies in that Nashville campaign were composed of veterans skillfully officered, and the rank and file of either army were as brave as the "Old Guard" of Napoleon that went down to their death at Waterloo.

The battles and marches between Florence, Ala., and Nashville were many and very severe, in all of which General WALTHALL was a power. He had risen from the rank of lieutenant of a company to that of a major-general, beloved by his men, whom he cared for with the devotion and affection of a father.

The battle of Nashville, fought on the 15th and 16th days of December, 1864, compelled General Hood and his brave and decimated army to retreat over the route which it had advanced upon a few months before.

Illy fed, badly clothed, broken, and disheartened, but with rare courage, the remnant of that army crossed the Tennessee about the same place over which it had passed some few weeks before. Prior to this campaign General WALTHALL was a perfect specimen of physical manhood, tall, graceful, and in perfect health; but the exposure of that campaign on frozen ground covered with snow was enough to wreck the strongest constitution. He never recovered from the effects of that most disastrous winter campaign.

It is said of him that after peace was declared he, with others in Mississippi, devoted their time and ability to binding up the wounds of his suffering people. As an advocate of peace, whose mission was to soothe and ameliorate the condition of his people, General WALTHALL was ever foremost; much has been accomplished by him to bring about a better understanding between the North and South and reunite in everlasting peace our beloved country.

General WALTHALL's long and faithful service in the Senate of the United States, his rare qualities of mind and heart, made him one of the leading statesmen on the Democratic side. I know of no more fitting tribute to his character than a few lines that were written of General Jackson by a cadet at the Military Institute in 1855:

There was something in his very mode of life so accurate, steady, void of care or strife, that fills my heart with love for him who bears his honors meekly and who wears the laurels of a hero.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I wish to insert in the forefront of my remarks a letter from a Confederate soldier who served under General WALTHALL. It will express better than anything from my lips can the love and devotion of the soldiers who followed him:

L. M. Garrett, Carthage, Miss.

The death of a near and dear relative would not have pained me more than I was pained by the announcement of the death of General WALTHALL. George at once wired me the sad news, and I am free to confess that I was compelled to "play the woman with my eyes." I should like to pay a tribute to the memory of the lamented hero. I should like to wield the pen of a Phillips and portray his character, and tell, as it ought to be told, the story of the shining virtues which clustered around WALTHALL, whose spotless character afforded an appropriate setting for such flawless jewels.

I would, in my clumsy way, sketch him as I saw him at Chickamauga on a Saturday morning, astride his little gray steed, and surveying the captured Yankee cannon from whose black mounds the smoke of battle still issued in unbroken wreaths. I would picture him as he appeared on the retreat from Nashville, when at the head of his ragged and hungry followers he threw himself like a wounded lion between the victorious and exultant Federals and their contemplated prey; when his cannon sternly told the advancing foe that further pursuit of the fleeing army would be hazardous, while the same stern sound conveyed to the shattered Southern legions the glad assurance that WALTHALL covered the retreat, and like Ney at the termination of the Moscow campaign, he would be the last to cross the bridge which led the way to comparative safety. I should be glad to write of him as the peerless Southern gentleman, the true Mississippian, the profound statesman that he was. But alas, my powers are too limited for such a task, and I seek the aid of a mightier pen. And this is the purpose of this letter, for I want you, Maury Garrett, to tell of the life, character, and services of our WALTHALL.

GEO. R. EDWARDS.

Mr. Speaker, I know of but one instance in all history where a numerous and free people have emerged from a gigantic struggle, revolutionary in the enormity of the defeat of its cause and the destruction of the political, social, and industrial institutions which depended upon that cause, and have yet made for themselves no scapegoat, have rendered no leader in person or in reputation, have proudly borne their own blame, if blame there were, conscious that no man or set of men could have led them anywhere if they had not wanted to go.

This instance was furnished by the Southern people of the United States upon and since their emergence from the battle wreck and social wreck of the war ending at Appomattox. Since that day they have, on every fitting occasion and in every proper way, heaped honors upon the heads of those who led them, not to success and prosperity, as they hoped, but to such defeat, disaster, and gloom as would have meant despair to any other people.

Few even of the Southern States can furnish instances of loyalty on the part of the people to their public men equal to that exhibited by the State of Mississippi throughout her history wherever she has found men worthy of trust.

General EDWARD CARY WALTHALL was no exception to the rule. It has not been long since he not only declined to be a candidate for a place in the United States Senate, but literally begged his people to permit him to throw off the burdens of public duty and retire to private life. He was in wretched health, unable to undergo the fatigue and hardships of a campaign, and in his own opinion physically unequal to an adequate attention to the duties of his office.

The people of Mississippi excused him from the campaign, but conscripted him into the Senate.

The people did not know it at the time, but all know now, that his life would have been longer if he had had his will. He knew it then. He died a martyr, as he lived a willing slave, to his sense of duty. The people, who had witnessed his heroism and constancy in war, his love for them in peace, his devotion, not concealed, but veiled by the dignity and courtesy of his character, would not tolerate the spectacle of a hand less skilled at the helm so long as his hand could but touch it.

Every people, Mr. Speaker, in every age has had its ideal of true manliness. The ideal is the expression in popular thought of that which all in their better moments would like to be. One-tenth of mankind may mold themselves in original casts—nine-tenths mold themselves by conscious or unconscious imitation of that which they love and revere as personified in others, either living or dead; this is the excusable sense in which men are and always will be hero-worshippers. He who is not in some highest sense a hero-worshipper is either a genius, of whom there are few, or a self-worshipper, of whom there are too many.

The ideal of a people is, of course, reached by very few; it is reasonably approximated by many; it is striven for by nearly all, who are made better and nobler by the striving; it is rendered ridiculous in its overassertion or its unseasonable emphasis by some others; sometimes rendered hateful by those false at heart to what they outwardly assume.

The ideal of the Italian is perfect art—the very word which formerly meant manliness in Italy now means art in Italian—the ideal of the French, military glory; of the English, unaffected honesty of deed and speech—its misunderstood consummation sometimes mere bluntness and boorishness. The ideal of the Southerner, before the war absolutely and now predominantly, is that character which we express by the word "gentleman." The injunction of the father to the son was: "Be a gentleman." The prayer of the mother was that her boy might, "first of all, be a gentleman." If she held up in former times George Washington, in the latter times Robert E. Lee, as the first of Americans and a fit pattern for the molding of all Americans, and therefore of her own children, it was primarily because each in his day was "the first gentleman of his day."

The word must be understood, not in the English sense as a man of gentle blood, but in the Southern sense as a man of lionlike manliness in deed, of womanlike gentleness in manner; of charitable consideration for all, and of liberality in all things.

The gentleman combined perfect and unfailing courtesy toward all women and all worthy men with perfect and unfailing courage, whether in private quarrel or in public strife.

He might be rich or he might be poor—Southerners neither cared nor asked. Happier for himself if the former were his condition, but "a gentleman still," as the phrase went, whatever his financial condition, and therefore entitled to the unquestioning respect, confidence, and consideration of all men and to the love and devotion of any good woman. He might be well born, or born of obscure parents. That question, unlike the other, might be asked, but the answer made no difference if only the father were honest and not a coward and the mother were pure.

The ideal gentleman was always honest; spoke the truth; faced his enemy; fought him if necessary, never quarreled with him nor talked about him; rode well; shot well; used chaste and correct English; insulted no man—wore no insult from any; was studiously kind to his inferiors, especially to his slaves; cordially hospitable to his equals; courteous to his superiors, if he acknowledged any; he scorned a demagogue, but loved his people, and held it mean to prefer any class or individual interest, most of all his own, to that of the masses of his countrymen.

He must be ready at any time, when needful, to lay his life down, not only for his own honor's sake, but, more promptly yet, for his country's, his State's, or his community's sake, and that, too, regardless of the dictates of his own private judgment as to the wisdom or unwisdom of the quarrel. It was his duty to try to guide his people in what he considered the right path; but if he failed, it was mean and selfish not to follow them and, if need be, die with them. He was sometimes accused of being an aristocrat; but if so, he belonged to that aristocracy which holds itself servant to the maxim noblesse oblige.

In his private relations he was perfect in courtesy to all; he exacted perfect courtesy from all, to himself and to those dependent upon him.

This was the ideal.

It is needless to say that many abused it; some with sincere purpose, but lacking depth of understanding or feeling, indulged in a superficial mannerism of "gentlemanliness," which constituted a sort of social Quixotism, making themselves ridiculous, but not infrequently at the same time lovable in their Quixotism to all good men. Some, social hypocrites, without the heart of the gentleman, nor his power of self-control, like all selfish imitators who would obtain respect under false pretenses, became hateful to all right-thinking men, often bullies. Calling themselves "Southern gentlemen," it is not strange that they sometimes brought the phrase into disrepute and subjected it to sneers.

I have heard one of the most acutely intelligent, though not one of the broadest, men of this country use the phrase "Southern gentlemen" in debate sneeringly. Had he enjoyed an intimate social acquaintance with the type, he could no more have sneered when he used that phrase than he could have sneered at the manhood whose holiest aspiration it aimed to express.

It is also needless to say, Mr. Speaker, that with an ideal so high and so exalted as this which I have described, but a small percentage of men of any race, in any section of country, or at any time of the world's history, in any state of human evolution thus far reached, could succeed in fully attaining to it and in living it.

And yet Gen. E. C. WALTHALL, the man to whose memory we pay tribute to-day, attained to its full measure and lived it—lived its constant, not its fitful, impersonation.

There were some adventitious aids which might round out the pictured ideal, but which were not necessary to the make-up of the gentleman. Not every gentleman could be born physically strong, or graceful, or handsome in face and lithe of figure. Not every gentleman could be eloquent of speech, wise in council, and decisive in execution.

Nature denied these advantages to many.

She denied none of them to General WALTHALL. I have heard old soldiers say that mortal eye never saw sight better fitted for the modeling of an old Greek sculptor, whose business it was to model god-like men, than WALTHALL as a young officer of the Confederacy reviewing the men on dress parade with his young and beautiful wife by his side, her horsemanship rivaling his own, which was superb; or WALTHALL, magnificent in the glow and inspiration of battle, amidst its smoke and shock.

He was in war, serving where rude shocks leave little room for the courtesies of life; in his family; at the bar; on the stump; at the board, where the filled wingglass invites carelessness of speech and action; among his friends; among his political opponents—I will not say among his enemies, for I do not know that he ever had any—not only always a self-contained, courteous, intelligent, broad-minded, truth-loving, brave, loyal, charitable, and patriotic gentleman, but he so lived that he deserved to have inscribed on his tombstone the epitaph, "Prince of gentlemen."

As pure in thought, as modest in carriage, as high in personal aim as the noblest Knight of the Round Table, he was, as the good bishop of Mississippi said of him, "the lover of one woman, counting it cowardly to be untrue." Pure in heart, he was clean in speech. Those who were not like him in this felt the restraint of his presence. It was not because they were rudely interrupted or impolitely treated, either, but because even a fool could not fail to see, after one experience, that the two things did not go together—WALTHALL and impurity.

Yet he was not a Puritan; far from it. He hated the puritanical type, if, indeed, he hated anything. He was simply a gentleman, with the lack of assumption and the absence of pretense and of cant, which characterizes one.

As he lived, we all knew he could have died.

Mr. Speaker, the ideal death of the ideal gentleman was that of Sir Philip Sidney, when, directing the water brought for him to be passed by his own parched lips to the poor gasping soldier at his side, he said:

He hath greater need of it than I.

There was a death, Mr. Speaker, where neither rank nor condition nor wealth nor poverty counted, but courage and courtesy literally "to the death;" nothing beyond one's self but only self-control, self-sacrifice, utter unselfishness before God and with man. WALTHALL could have died that death as gracefully and as unassumingly as Sir Philip himself.

An ideal death of self-devotion and sturdy adherence to conviction was that of old Hugh Latimer, when, observing his fellow-victim to writhe in the flames and to cry out in his agony, he exclaimed:

Never mind, Master Ridley, play the man, and we shall this day kindle such a fire in England as shall never be extinguished.

There is not an old soldier in Mississippi, among the few left, who followed WALTHALL as lieutenant, as colonel, as brigadier, or as major-general (followed him, I say—not fought under his orders) who does not know that WALTHALL could have died this death, too, and would have done it rather than recant the simplest conviction or turn back upon a loved cause. As my colleague—[Mr. FOX] has so well said, quoting WALTHALL's own language: "He never sought a hard place for glory, nor a soft one for comfort." As my colleague, Mr. ALLEN, has told you, these were the words he uttered when General Hood asked him to cover the rear of the shattered army on its retreat from Nashville. He simply did his duty as time and circumstance brought duty.

Do you still ask why Mississippians almost worshipped him? If you do, you exhibit an ignorance of "the higher things of this life."

At his funeral there was no wailing, no noisy exhibition of grief; of flowers, and love, and tear-dimmed eyes there was an abundance. In speaking for myself I think I speak for others when I say that the eyes were not dimmed so much because the stainless gentleman was gone. There had been nothing to regret in his death, as there had been nothing to regret in his life.

It was because we knew how far short the rest of us had fallen from the life which he lived—the life of the pure, gentle, lion-hearted, Southern gentleman, provincial perhaps, but noble always. It was because he was almost the last of a long line of Mississippians of historic type and fame. The old historic ideal about which the Southern life revolved and which had furnished the link of connection between the several stages of the evolutionary development of its civilization is, they say, losing its molding force.

They say something better will take its place. I do not believe it. I do not believe anything better is, or ever was, or can be. It has lost its force with this generation in a measure, though not altogether. The transition stage from an old to a new industrial life has partially destroyed that, as it has destroyed many other sweet flowers, which will, however, spring afresh to bloom anew among the beauties of the new order of things, fertilized by the ashes of the old.

But I believe our people will recur to it, simply because it will be, in the new life, the survival of the fittest out of the old.

It has been said that "An honest man is the noblest work of God." It is a half truth. There is something nobler than the merely honest man, because inclusive of it. It is an honest man, who adds to his honesty, courtesy, unself-assuming courage, charity, purity, unselfishness of thought and conduct, devotion of self and class to his people's weal; in a word, a gentleman.

This is the ideal in the homestead yet, though in the mart it has been overgrown with the weeds of money getting. Above all it is safely enshrined in the hearts of good women, whence it will come, as things enshrined there must come, in their children's lives to enrich all society. Call it what you will, Mr. Speaker, God grant that we as a people may never be without it. In the meantime the scythe of death has been busy with Mississippians—Davis, Lamar, George, WALTHALL—all gone! What wonder if we are tempted to exclaim—

O! my country's wintry state,
What second spring shall renovate,
What genial sun shall bid arise,
The buried warlike and the wise?

Mr. HENRY of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, rarely has it fallen to the lot of any State to lose by death two Senators in one session of Congress. And such Senators! Men who stood out from their fellows with God's impress upon them, each representing the highest type of his class, yet differing from each other in many respects.

The State of Mississippi, this session, mourns the loss of Senators George and WALTHALL. "Their like we ne'er shall see again." "Par nobile fratrum."

But I come now to talk of EDWARD CARY WALTHALL, at the time of his death the senior Senator from Mississippi, who died in this city on the 21st day of April, 1898. For some time he had been in feeble health, but despite the advice of his friends and physicians he refused to leave his post of duty.

His last appearance in the Senate was to deliver an eulogy on the life and character of his late colleague, Senator George. The effort prostrated him. Though advised not to attempt it, he felt it was his duty, which to him was paramount to any personal consideration.

The announcement of his death was received with genuine and heartfelt sorrow, not only in his own State, where he was universally beloved, but throughout the country at large, by which he was recognized as one of the most distinguished men in the august body of which he was a member.

He was a true friend, a wise counselor, and a safe leader. His life was a busy one; but few men attained more of success. He was not ambitious in the common acceptance of the term. It seemed his ambition to do right, to do his duty as he saw it; and possessing the courage of his convictions, he did it fearlessly and conscientiously.

Honors came to him unsought, and he wore them with grace and dignity. An uncompromising Democrat, he adhered at all times to the tenets of his party, as his votes will attest. Nothing could allure him to sacrifice his principles.

Succeeding the illustrious Lamar in the Senate of the United States, to which he was three times elected, his career reflected credit upon his ability and honor upon his constituency.

Rarely joining in debates, his views on all public questions were pronounced, and his influence marked to an extent his own people will never know, but which was quietly used in their interest, often the recipients learning of it through others, never from him.

Of superb mental and moral endowments, he quietly, modestly, and apparently without effort assumed his place in the front rank, and maintained it there with that innate dignity for which he was so remarkable.

He was appointed to the Senate in 1885, upon the resignation of Senator Lamar, and elected for the unexpired term by the legislature of his State in 1886; was reelected in 1888, and again in 1892. His term would have expired in 1901.

Born in Richmond, Va., in 1831, he proved himself a worthy son of that glorious old Commonwealth. Removing to Mississippi in 1859, his parents located at Holly Springs, where he received an academic education. There, early in life, he was imbued with those manly principles of independence which marked his after career.

So distinctive was his bearing that it did seem God had set His stamp upon him, and at all times, under all the vicissitudes of fortune, he stood forth from among his fellows, and "all did proclaim him a man."

Studying law, he was admitted to the bar in 1852. When hostilities commenced between the States, he was serving his second term as district attorney. This office he resigned and entered the Confederate army as a lieutenant in the Fifteenth Mississippi Regiment—of glorious memory—of which he shortly became lieutenant-colonel. In the ill-fated battle of Fishing Creek, in Kentucky, Lieutenant-Colonel WALTHALL commanded this regiment, exhibiting there the soldierly qualities for which he became so distinguished throughout the war.

In 1862 he raised and became colonel of the Twenty-ninth Mississippi Regiment, which he led through the Kentucky campaign under General Bragg. In December of that year he was promoted to the rank of brigadier-general, and two years later to that of major-general. His gallant conduct in every action during the campaign under Generals Bragg, Johnston, and Hood in Kentucky, Georgia, and Tennessee is a conspicuous part of the history of those perilous times, and stamps him as a soldier of the highest type.

When in the winter of 1864 the grand and devoted battalions of the Confederates were broken and shattered and in retreat from Nashville, General Hood, recognizing the seriousness of the situation, ordered General Forrest to organize a rear guard to cover his retreat, consisting of his cavalry and eight skeleton brigades of infantry, and told him to select a major-general to command the infantry; without hesitation General Forrest asked for Major-General WALTHALL.

When this command was tendered to him General Hood expressed regret at the arduous and dangerous duty to which he was about to be assigned. WALTHALL replied in words that savored of the days of chivalry, and so characteristic of the man, "Make your order, General Hood. I never sought a hard place for glory nor a soft place for comfort."

And during that long and weary retreat in the dead of winter, day and night, until the Confederate army had recrossed the Tennessee River, faithfully, doggedly, did he do his duty. Always with the rear guard—the post of danger—with no relief for many days and nights, he hung in front of the advancing enemy, meeting charge with charge, and disputing every foot of ground. For his devotion he received the thanks of Generals Hood and Forrest in their official reports.

Well do I remember him in those memorable days of war! With a splendid physique, magnificent in his bearing, warm of heart, as gentle in his manners as a woman, yet the very personification of chivalry, he filled a unique place in the hearts of Confederate soldiers. He always led his command into action, and when on the charge, in the storm of battle, he looked "a very god of war."

He surrendered his command at Greensboro, N. C., and returned to his home, where he resumed the practice of his profession. By dint of energy and ability he achieved for himself distinction and a competency.

Throughout the horrible era of reconstruction, to which his State was subjected, he was true to his people, never "bending the pregnant hinges of the knee," as did some men in those dark and troublous days.

But now he has gone to his reward, to "give an account of the deeds done in the body," and methinks that in that celestial host who welcomed him on the other side there was no purer nor knightlier spirit than that of WALTHALL.

His sword is rust, his body is dust,
His soul is with the saints, I trust.

He sleeps in the beautiful burial ground at Holly Springs, in the State of his adoption, where tender and loving hands will with each recurring spring bring flowers to deck his grave. To them his memory will ever be as a sweet incense, and his career an inspiration to his people.

"Requiescat in pace."

Mr. FOX. Mr. Speaker, it is well for mankind, and I believe is a part of the divine plan for elevating, developing, and saving the human race, that in every age there are raised up men preeminent among their fellows for noble virtues and great achievements. They are examples for all. They inspire all with noble aspirations, high endeavor, lofty patriotism, and unselfish devotion to duty. It is impossible to know them without believing in them, and it is impossible to believe in them without emulating them and becoming better men and better citizens. Such a man was E. C. WALTHALL. Such men, considering them as examples to others, illustrate, and I might say demonstrate, the fundamental doctrine of the true Christian, whose simple faith is that he will be made better and better and finally saved by believing in and following the only Perfect Man.

The reflex action of WALTHALL's life and character on those who knew him and understood him was wonderful. It was impossible to know him without loving him, and those who knew him best loved him best. His character, his conduct, his sentiments, all tended to uplift, to refine, and to ennoble those who believed in him and followed him. Those who emulated him were incapable of meanness. His example always inspired others with purity of thought, self-sacrifice, and loyalty to State, family, and friends. He had the loftiest ideals and lived up to them. The embodiment of courage and honor, he never turned his back on friend or foe. The highest sense of honor is often referred to as feeling a stain like a wound, but WALTHALL's honor never felt a stain. It was as stainless and pure as the virtue of any virgin, and he always valued it above wealth, position, friendship, reputation, life itself.

He always obeyed implicitly, in smallest as well as matters of greatest import, in public as well as private matters, the dictates of his own conscience. He never tried to fool or mislead himself in believing to be right that which he instinctively knew to be wrong. In this respect his character is best described by a word he was fond of applying to any friend in whom he had faith. He was always "perpendicular." In all his mental processes he was as conscientious as in questions of right and wrong. He had an intellectual conscience. He never tried to deceive his own strong intellect by any sort of sophistry or false reasoning. He never sought to reach any other conclusion than that which would be sanctioned by his own judgment, unbiased by any other consideration except a desire to arrive at the truth.

He was true to himself, and although exceedingly sensitive to criticism, valued his own self-respect more highly than the respect of others, and if he had been himself conscious of doing a wrong, although he alone knew it, it would have pained him as much as if the whole world knew it. His conscience had, therefore, never been perverted or distorted; but in all the years it had grown stronger and stronger until it had become well-nigh what every man's conscience is intended to be, an infallible, God-given sense of right. When he knew the facts, he never had to reason or think on a question of right and wrong, but had that unerring, indefinable sense which is sometimes called instinct, but which is the very essence of conscience.

So generally was this recognized that he was frequently the arbiter of differences between men, and no man who knew him hesitated to commit his honor into his keeping. Friends were constantly consulting him on questions of honor, and his advice was always implicitly followed. He had the greatest charity for the faults of others, and always preferred others to himself; but he would brook no infringement on the known personal rights of himself or his friends; and there was no personal sacrifice he would not make to maintain either. I have never known a man who had more disinterested, unselfish devotion to his friends. His attachment for them amounted to a burning love, and they in return loved him. He listened to no slander against them. He never lost an opportunity of aiding them, and he was so unselfish that he never told a friend what he did for him lest it might appear that he was keeping books against him and expected him to pay the debt.

Detesting sentimentality, he was full of sentiment. He loved his country. He loved his State better than he did his life; and there was nothing except his wife that he loved better than the old town of Grenada, where he lived; and never was a man so loved by his community as was he by the people of Grenada. It was because they knew him better than anybody else; they idolized him. "The General," as he was called with so much affection, was always their hero, and never went on the streets without an ovation. To them he was the greatest man; and they were right in their estimate of him because they knew him. At home among his intimates he never forgot his courtly manners, yet the humblest laborer never hesitated to approach him; without any appearance of patronizing them he was always kind to them.

The elegant manners that so marked his conduct in the presence of woman were not the accomplishments of a courtier or the studied grace of gallantry, but rather the natural and unaffected expression of a deep, sincere, and pure reverence for woman; and woman always recognized the high tribute paid her, and in return crowned him as her beau ideal of a noble manhood. I know of no greater tribute to his high character than the devotion of his noble wife, a woman of unusual refinement and intelligence. She shared with him all the hardships, privations, and dangers of the march and the bivouac, and for four long years was at every battlefield to receive her hero in victory or defeat, living or dead. One hardly knows which most to admire—the man who could win the love of such a woman and always be worthy of it, or the woman who could endure such hardships and self-sacrifices for him, and never doubt that he was worthy of it.

So great was her love for him that even death could not separate them long, and she soon joined him on the other shore.

Such was the private character of this great man as I knew him and loved him. Such were the splendid virtues that drew to him, as with hooks of steel, thousands of loyal friends who always delighted to honor him, and who would resent any attack on him. Among these friends the term "Walthallian" became the highest expression of chivalric honor and lofty courage, and to-day there is no Masonry or mystic tie that binds its devotees in closer union than does the memory of WALTHALL unite his personal friends, who always delighted not only to honor him, but all those he loved.

In public life he was no less admirable.

As a lawyer, he had no superior at the bar in Mississippi, either in knowledge of the law or in careful preparation and skillful management of his case. He was painstaking and cautious and always knew his own position and that of his antagonist to the smallest detail, and when the time for action came no man could be more aggressive. In the courtroom, although treating his opponent with a courtesy that commanded respect and even admiration, yet he always forced the fighting and put his opponent on the defensive. His position at the bar was so eminent that he received a letter from a distinguished author, who was at the time preparing a biography of leading lawyers, requesting a sketch of his life as the leading lawyer of Mississippi. With his characteristic modesty and self-denial, he replied that he was not entitled to such a distinguished honor, that it belonged to his friend, Judge Wiley P. Harris, who was then living.

He never sought political honors. He was once appointed and three times elected United States Senator without being a candidate. The last time he was elected he had written a public letter peremptorily declining to be a candidate. It was then that Senator Lamar wrote to a friend: "Mississippi ought not to tolerate for a moment the idea of acquiescing in the retirement of Senator WALTHALL. Of all the splendid men that she has ever presented to the nation, WALTHALL is the one beyond all competitors in moral purity, strength of mind, heroism of soul, and commanding influence among men."

Mississippi so far sympathized with this sentiment that without any concert of action, yet with a unanimity unparalleled in political history, they met at the primaries and cast their ballots for E. C. WALTHALL.

While he recognized the right of all to aspire to public position and always aided his friends to gratify a laudable ambition by honorable methods, he believed that public office was only a post of honor when conferred by the people, to whom it belonged, on a worthy citizen as a reward of merit and an expression of confidence in ability and integrity. He revolted at the idea that office should be bestowed either for the personal or political aggrandizement of the appointing power or as a reward for the personal services of the appointee. He did not believe office was a commodity to be bought and sold or traded for. He was no more capable of entering a combination to control public office than of committing grand larceny. When he entered a political caucus, personal advantage was never sought and never desired. The only object was the public good and the selection of those who were regarded as the most suitable men.

The illustrious career of General WALTHALL in the United States Senate is history. He was essentially a conservative. Such a character as I have described could not be otherwise. He believed in the ideals of the fathers who wrote the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence. He repudiated the idea that these great masterpieces were mere swaddling clothes made for an infant republic, to be cast off now when it has grown to be a giant among nations, which a new school of statesmen say is henceforth to be guided by what they are pleased to call "manifest destiny."

On the contrary, he believed that the great principles of the Constitution were immortal and imposed limitations on all the coordinate branches of Government—limitations which were and are absolutely necessary to restrain the greed and power of those in authority and to preserve the liberties and rights of the people. He held as a sacred and fundamental principle that all government should be by the consent of the governed. He believed that the framers of the Constitution were both wise and patriotic; that they meant what they said and said what they meant.

He was in the highest and best sense of the word democratic, believing in the fullest individual liberty of the citizen consistent with good government and the rights of others; in perfect freedom of conscience and perfect protection to life, liberty, and property; that every citizen, however humble, was a sovereign and entitled to the equal protection of the law. Such a man could never favor a radical departure from original principles, could never favor a doubtful or dangerous experiment, could never tolerate class legislation. As a Senator he brought all his splendid ability, all his intellectual and moral conscientiousness, all his conservatism, all his devotion to constitutional liberty, all his personal attachment to his State and her citizens, all his love for the rights of men, to the service of his people and of the Union.

Such a man was easily a leader, whose counsel and advice were eagerly sought, and whose accurate reasoning and unerring judgment were usually followed by his associates. He had not been long in the Senate before he was made chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs and a member of the Finance Committee and of the steering committee of his party. The eulogies of his colleagues in the Senate, Republican and Democratic, are the best testimonials to his ability, his wisdom, his probity, and patriotism as one of the leaders in that great forum.

In my judgment, great as he was as a lawyer and statesman, he was greater as a soldier. Entering the Confederate Army as a civilian, without military training or experience, promoted step by step from second lieutenant to major-general, his career, for daring, skillful maneuver, self-sacrifice, strategy, and glorious achievement, was unsurpassed in all the annals of that great struggle. Gen. Joseph E. Johnston, who knew him so well, said, "If the war had lasted two years longer, General WALTHALL would have risen to the command of all the Confederate armies."

In battle he always led, and never followed his command. He was the foremost in the charge and the hindmost in retreat. He would order no man, not even the humblest private, to encounter danger into which he would not lead, and would jeopardize his own life rather than that of a subordinate. As an illustration, I give an incident of the battle of Fishing Creek, as related by William Preston Johnston in the life of Albert Sidney Johnston. He says:

General Thomas's troops were encamped on either side of the road, with a wood in their front from one-fourth to one-half mile through. In front of the wood were fields about 300 yards across, and beyond this a low ridge parallel with the wood. The Confederates promptly crossed the wood and fields and found a force in the edge of the wood in their front. This consisted of the Fourth Kentucky and Tenth Indiana regiments. General Crittenden had warned them in the council of war of the danger of firing into their friends, especially as many of the Southern troops wore blue uniforms, and to avoid this risk they had adopted as a password, "Kentucky."

The morning was dark and misty, and nothing could be seen of the opposing force except a line of armed men. The skirmishers reported to WALTHALL that this was Battle's command. WALTHALL made his troops lie down behind a slight elevation, and, going forward to some high ground, hailed the troops in his front, "What troops are those?" The answer was, "Kentucky." He called again, "Who are you?" And the answer came as before, "Kentucky." He then went back and got his colors, and, returning, once more asked the same question and received the same answer. He then unfurled his flag, and immediately the Federal line opened upon him with a volley. He turned to order forward his regiment and found that Lieutenant Harrington, who had followed him without his knowledge, was lying dead beside him, pierced by more than twenty balls. The flag was riddled and the staff cut, but Colonel WALTHALL was untouched. It was this incident that led to the belief that the password was betrayed to the enemy by the guide; but the answer coming from the Fourth Kentucky was the natural and proper one.

WALTHALL was in command of the famous Fifteenth Mississippi Regiment, noted as among the most gallant in the service. One of the survivors of this regiment has told me, in explanation of this incident, that when WALTHALL, failing to get any response to his question except "Kentucky," went back to his command and cried, "Give me the flag, and I will find out who they are," Lieutenant Harrington begged him for the privilege of going in his stead, pleading with him that his life was too valuable to sacrifice, but WALTHALL, with his characteristic magnanimity, replied that the danger was so great that he would allow no man to incur it, but would go himself. Without WALTHALL's knowledge Harrington followed, with the result as stated.

As allusion has been made by others to the selection of WALTHALL to cover Hood's retreat from Nashville, I hope I may be pardoned for giving the exact history of that memorable event as related by an eyewitness, Maj. D. W. Saunders, a member of WALTHALL's staff and now a distinguished lawyer of Louisville, Ky. He writes:

On the morning of the 20th of December, 1864, General Hood sent a member of his staff to General WALTHALL, who had established his headquarters at the residence of Nimrod Porter, near Columbia, with the request that he should call at army headquarters immediately. General WALTHALL at once rode to army headquarters, and the writer accompanied him. On the pike, as WALTHALL approached army headquarters, he met General Hood on his horse, in company with Dr. Darby, who was the medical director of the army. Hood said to WALTHALL substantially as follows:

"Things are in a bad condition. I have resolved to reorganize the rear guard. Forrest says he can not keep the enemy off us any longer without a strong infantry support, but says he can do it with the help of 3,000 infantry with you to command them. You can select any troops in the army. It is a post of great honor, but one of such great peril that I will not impose it on you unless you are willing to take it; and you had better take troops that can be relied upon, for you may have to cut your way out to get to me after the main army gets out. The army must be saved, come what may; and, if necessary, your command must be sacrificed to accomplish it."

WALTHALL, in reply, said: "General, I have never asked for a hard place for glory nor a soft place for comfort, but take my chances as they come. Give me the order for the troops and I will do my best. Being the youngest major-general in the army, I believe, my seniors may complain that the place was not given to them, but that is a matter between you and them." And Hood said: "Forrest wants you, and I want you." General Forrest rode up during the conversation and said: "Now we will keep them back." And Hood gave verbal orders for WALTHALL to take any troops he wanted.

As evidence that WALTHALL in person was in full command of the rear guard, supported by General Forrest, I quote the language of General Hood in his book, "Advance and Retreat:"

Major-General WALTHALL, one of the most able division commanders in the South, was here ordered to form a rear guard with eight picked brigades, together with Forrest's cavalry. The march was then resumed in the direction of Columbia, Stewart's corps moving in front, followed by those of Cheatham and Stevenson. The army bivouacked in line of battle near Duck River on the night of the 18th.

The following day we crossed the river and proceeded on different roads leading toward Bainbridge, on the Tennessee, harassed by the enemy. I felt confident that WALTHALL, supported on his flank by the gallant Forrest, would prove equal to any emergency which might arise. I therefore continued, although within sound of the guns of the rear guard, to march leisurely, and arrived at Bainbridge on the 26th of December.

I have said that WALTHALL had the loftiest ideals and lived up to them. His ideal of a soldier and statesman is best shown in his own "pure, chaste, classic language," of which Senator GORMAN has so truthfully said he was master. This language was used in a speech at Walthall, Miss., in support of General Hancock when a candidate for the Presidency; and when I listened to him I knew he was unconsciously delineating his own character as well as that of the distinguished man who was the subject of his eulogy. I was so much impressed with it then that I asked him to write it out and give it to me, which he did. I preserved it and give it now as a faithful portraiture of WALTHALL. He said:

My ideal of a soldier commissioned in the Army is of one who, with a liberal education, brings honor, courage, wisdom, and patriotism to the service of the Government which trained him for the duties of his calling; who stands ready at all times to meet his duty, if need be, with his life; one who glories in the victories of the field, but is so imbued with the spirit of our free Government that he never forgets that the sublimest triumphs of earth are the "peaceful triumphs of law."

My ideal of an American statesman is of one gifted by nature with a big brain and a true heart and a strong will; who has earnestly striven to master the science and philosophy of government and added to the stores of learning he has gathered from the teachings of the fathers the fruits of his own experience and careful observation; who is in sympathy with the body of the people in all their interests and their needs, but yields his convictions neither to the clamor of the multitude nor the demands of the powerful. A well-poised, incorruptible, just man, beyond the reach of flattery or fear; who looks down on timeservers and intriguers and would scorn to scheme for honors or office, but shrinks from no duty his country may impose. All this, and more, I find centered and harmoniously blended in General Hancock, a soldier who holds the law above his sword and a statesman who would draw his soldier's sword to uphold the law.

Mr. SPIGHT. Mr. Speaker, although much has already been said this evening, if I were to allow this occasion to pass without saying a word by way of tribute to the memory of Senator WALTHALL, I would feel that I were unfaithful to myself, unfaithful to the people of Mississippi, who loved him for his many noble qualities and for his devotion to their interests, and unfaithful to my dead friend, whose kindness I so often received.

As the only member of either House of this Congress who fought under him during the war, I come to-day to offer a slight testimonial to his exalted worth as a soldier and as a man. I loved him because he was lovable. I honored him because he was honorable. I trusted him because he was worthy of all trust. I knew him first as a soldier, when as a boy I followed his leadership on many a bloody field, and whether in the quiet of the camp, or on the wearisome march, or in the shock of battle he was always the same kind-hearted, chivalrous gentleman.

As gentle as a woman, or as fearless as a lion, as occasion demanded, he represented the truest type of the volunteer soldier. Sir Walter Scott makes one of his characters in "Old Mortality" say, "I never knew a soldier who was not a true-hearted man." General WALTHALL measured up to the full stature of that kind of a soldier, as every man who knew him will testify. His great, noble heart, his generous nature, his loyalty to his friends, his charity toward his foes, added to a peculiar grace of manner, won all who were brought into contact with him. You could not look into his face without feeling that you were in the presence of a gentleman. You could not touch his hand without feeling that magnetic thrill which goes out only from the heart of a friend you can trust.

When the fearful bugle blast of war was sounded in 1861, calling from their peaceful vocations the sons of America to the bloodiest war of modern times, WALTHALL, then a young lawyer, with a devotion to his people that characterized his whole life, responded at once to his country's call and was soon in the "thickest of the fight." From the position of lieutenant he rose step by step, until in the summer of 1864 the wreath and stars of a major-general adorned his collar, and no knightlier soldier ever drew blade in defense of the cause he loved.

Henry of Navarre admonished his soldiers when going into battle on a memorable occasion that if in the excitement and confusion of the strife they should lose sight of their colors, "Be your oriflamme to-day the white plume of Navarre." So could it have been said of WALTHALL. Where his gleaming blade was seen the battle raged most fiercely, and by his impetuous courage and splendid generalship he infused into his men so much of his spirit and with it so much confidence in their leader that his Mississippi command was known throughout military circles as "The fighting brigade" of the Army of Tennessee. How well they deserved it was evidenced on many a bloody field from Fishing Creek to Nashville, and hundreds of brave Mississippi boys fell under his banner and died with a consciousness of duty well done and pride that they belonged to "WALTHALL'S brigade."

I thank God that those dark days could not last; but looking back through the light of a third of a century, I can see him yet as he rode like a veritable god of war amidst the screaming of shells and the song of the death-dealing minie; and my heart swells, now, with the pride of my boyhood that I, too, bared my breast to the storm of battle beneath his eagle eye and received his commendations when the bloody work was done.

Those were history-making days, and no brighter pages will ever be written than those which record the heroic deeds and martial spirit of our citizen soldiery who for four long years struggled for supremacy—the soldier of the South upon the one side, the soldier of the North upon the other—each believing his cause to be just as God gave him to see the right.

But when the Southern flag had been furled forever and her ragged veterans had returned to desolate homes and found themselves reduced to poverty, and during the dark days of reconstruction which followed, it was then that Mississippians realized in its fullest sense how faithful a friend they had in the peerless WALTHALL. Always ready to counsel, encourage, and lead his people, and asking nothing but the simple privilege of doing his duty, it is no wonder he became the people's idol.

No man was ever more unselfish in his devotion to his beloved State or more keenly alive to her best and highest interests. No man of equal eminence was ever so modest. The politician believes that for service rendered he should receive compensation at least commensurate with his estimate of the value of his services. But WALTHALL was not a politician. His nature was too generous, his heart was too guileless, his impulses too noble to learn the tricks of the politician. He never sought office, but steadily declined to accept every offer of political preferment, asking only the happy privilege of doing all in his power as a private citizen to advance the interests of the people who honored and loved him so much.

Notwithstanding his great modesty, he was a man of broad and liberal statesmanship. Quick of apprehension, prompt in action, and always keeping in view the good to be accomplished, he was a safe leader and a trusted counselor. Sincere in his convictions, and courageous to stand by them, there was never any trouble in knowing which side of any great question he was on. He did not know how to dissemble; he scorned the arts of the demagogue, and won his way to the hearts and consciences of the people by his ingenuousness, his absolute truthfulness, and evident devotion to the right. Few men ever possessed in so marked a degree that mysterious and indefinable power which, for want of a better name, is called "personal magnetism." Men were drawn to him and made to love and trust him by the force of inherent qualities which formed an essential part of his being.

He repeatedly refused to allow himself to be nominated for governor of the State, when nomination meant election, and never would accept any office except that of district attorney, which he held when the war commenced, until his great friend, Lamar, left the Senate to accept a place in Mr. Cleveland's cabinet, when, in deference to the unanimous demand of the people of the State, he at last agreed to take Colonel Lamar's place in the United States Senate, where he remained until his death, except about one year when he was forced to retire on account of bad health. In this retirement he only illustrated anew the integrity of purpose and devotion to duty which ever characterized the man.

When he realized that his health was such that he could not be as faithful and efficient as he felt he ought to be as a public servant, he resigned, over the protest of his friends; but in spite of all denials, he was promptly reelected to the next full term, and died in this city while Congress was in session last spring.

When he came to Washington as a Senator from Mississippi, he soon won the hearts of all with whom he was associated, without regard to party political faith; and I have been told that some of his warmest friends and greatest admirers here were found amongst the ex-Federal officers and Republican members of Congress.

One of the leading characteristics of General WALTHALL which early impressed itself upon me was his utter detestation of anything like sham and his love of justice and fair play. In my own personal experience as a young officer in his command, I had illustrations of this spirit of fairness which I can never forget, and which bound my heart to him with "hooks of steel." No soldier whose cause was just ever had ground to fear that he could not successfully plead it before the justice-loving WALTHALL.

He was the friend of every soldier in his command, from the humblest private to the highest officer, and they all loved him. He was a strict disciplinarian, but so kind and just with it all that it was a pleasure to obey, and so great was their confidence in him that they would have followed him into the very "jaws of death."

By his superior commanders he was often placed in most trying positions, where nothing but coolness, courage, and consummate skill could avail; and he never disappointed the trust reposed in him. A man of wonderful resources, keen perceptions, undaunted courage, a great heart, and unsurpassed magnetic power, he was an ideal leader of men. Without previous military training, he was called suddenly from civic duties into the fiery arena of war, yet in his sphere he was the peer of the grandest soldiers of an army so full of great men.

The last year of his life was a pathetic one. Stricken by a mortal sickness, he lay dying in this city, while there stood at his bedside not only friends who loved him, but also his devoted wife, one of the noblest of a noble Southern womanhood, who had for about forty years walked by his side, his friend, his counselor, his wife, his helpmate indeed. They never had any children save an adopted daughter, and when the grave closed over the mortal body of the husband the heart of the living wife was buried there, too.

There was no more earthly sunshine for her. The music in her soul was hushed. The light had gone out of her life. "The silver cord was loosed; the golden bowl was broken," and in a short time she threw off the shackles that bound her to earth, and her pure spirit took its flight to the other shore across the river, and "under the shade of the trees" in the paradise of God she joined her loved one gone before, while side by side their bodies are sleeping beneath the sod in their beloved Mississippi, where their graves will ever be kept green by the hands of loving friends and those who come after them.

Within a period of about eight months the State of Mississippi suffered a peculiar and well-nigh irreparable loss in the death of two Senators in the Congress of the United States. Grand State that she is, how proud she was of her two great Senators, George and WALTHALL! George, the "great commoner," the friend of the people, the constitutional lawyer, the father and successful defender of the Mississippi constitution; and WALTHALL, the gallant soldier, the courtly gentleman, the incorruptible statesman, the faithful friend. Happy Mississippi! Proud Mississippi! Unfortunate Mississippi! What State of this great American Union could boast of two grander men? What State was ever so sorely afflicted in so short a time?

The old patriarch Job, when his afflictions bore heavily upon him, asked, "If a man die, shall he live again?" Jesus Christ answers, "I am the resurrection and the life." The soul of the Christian answers, "The grave is but the door that opens to a blessed immortality." The great Apostle to the Gentiles, in a glorious outburst of faith, exclaims, "Oh death, where is thy sting? Oh grave, where is thy victory?" Looking at the noble lives of these two great sons of Mississippi, and remembering their reverence for and faith in the "Man of Galilee," we have confidence that beyond the "dark river," in the home of the blessed, these faithful friends have met and clasped hands forever.

It is notable that the last speech made by General WALTHALL in the United States Senate was his memorial tribute to his dead colleague, and we recall with pleasure, now, his beautiful eulogy upon the Christian character of the departed statesman. Yes, "There is life beyond the river," but this is not all. Such men as George and WALTHALL, "Though lost to sight, to memory dear," will continue to live in the hearts of their countrymen so long as true worth, exalted patriotism, and wise statesmanship are revered on earth.

A sad and beautiful coincidence is noted in the close of the lives of these great Mississippians. Each had been blessed through long years with the companionship of his first and only love. General George saw his noble and devoted wife depart, and in a few weeks followed after her. General WALTHALL was blessed the more in having his with him when his summons came, but she could not tarry, and soon joined him.

Mississippi has had many distinguished sons about whom her warmest affections clustered, but she never had one more faithful and true, nor one more implicitly trusted, nor one more universally loved than the warm-hearted, generous, unspotted soldier statesman, EDWARD CAREY WALTHALL; and on one of the brightest pages of her history his name will be recorded as the synonym of exalted patriotism, true manhood, unswerving integrity, and unselfish devotion to duty.

When he died, every man who knew him felt that he had lost a friend over whose grave it was manly to drop a tear.

I shall not see his like again.

Mr. BOUTELLE of Maine. Mr. Speaker, I can not claim to have had an intimate acquaintanceship with Senator WALTHALL, but I have been in Congress during his entire service, and on numerous occasions, both public and social, it has been my fortune to meet him in such a way as to strongly impress me with his excellent qualities and the humble characteristics of the man. His public life, of course, is well known and has been delineated here in such tender and appreciative language by those who have known him long and well that it will hardly be expected that I should go further than simply to express my kindly feelings toward him in all the relations in which I have been brought in contact with him during my public life. I wish to attest my great appreciation of the manliness of the man, of his sturdy devotion to what he believed to be his duty, to the fearless expression of his convictions, and especially to the habits of tenderness in his social life, where I have been brought in contact with him under circumstances that have caused me to entertain the highest degree of respect for him.

Mr. Speaker, I felt a sense of personal loss when Senator WALTHALL was taken from us. His dignity of character, his geniality, his manliness, his candor, and his uniform courtesy of manner were always winning and attractive to those who knew him; and most attractive to those who knew him best.

I served with him on one occasion on the Board of Visitors to the Naval Academy at Annapolis, in which, during a week of pleasant experiences, I was in daily and hourly association with him, not only in the performance of the official duties assigned to us on the board, but in the lighter and more pleasing social duties of the occasion; and I can think of no man with whom I have been brought in contact since my official duties began in Congress, and no period of my association with any man or any family which I can recall with more pleasure than that period when I was associated with Senator WALTHALL and his charming wife and daughter in the ten days spent with them at the Naval Academy.

He was filled with kindness, as with bright thoughts; an entertaining conversationalist; a strong and earnest man, whose convictions were always expressed without offense, and yet a man of powerful ability in the expression of them. He was always the center of interest in the social circles he frequented; full of reminiscences, graphic in his statements, and always interesting, entertaining, and charming in what he had to say; while through it all there was running constantly a geniality of mind, a kindness of heart, a bonhomie of good nature, that seemed to well up toward his fellow-men and distinguished him wherever he might be found and in whatever society with which he intermingled.

Mr. Speaker, I simply come here to-day with these broken and imperfect words to lay my tribute of consideration and respect on the grave of a strong, earnest, and good man, an able statesman, and a kind, sympathetic, and deeply lamented friend.

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Speaker, with unerring and deadly aim the insatiate archer Death has fired his fatal arrows at the heart of Mississippi during the past few years; and following in rapid succession Jefferson Davis, L. Q. C. Lamar, James Z. George, and EDWARD C. WALTHALL have fallen victims to the dread enemy of mankind. The last two have paid the great debt of nature since I became a member of Congress. Both were members of the United States Senate, and both were distinguished for their ability and devotion to the interests of their State and their country, in peace as well as in war.

They are no more; and to-day the House puts aside the ordinary course of its business to pay a tribute to the memory of one of these who was respected, loved, and admired during his life, and who was sincerely mourned by the people of his State at his death. It was my good fortune and pleasure to meet and to know General WALTHALL early after I became a member of Congress. His courteous manner, his consideration, and the easy approach to him at all times soon won my respect, and the longer I knew him the more I admired and loved him. Others from his own State have delineated his character and life more fully and completely than I can undertake to do; but I desire to render this simple tribute of my remembrance and friendship to his memory.

Born in the State of Virginia, in early boyhood he became a resident of Mississippi, where he lived, whose people he served in many capacities, and whose interests and people he loved. He rests to-day peacefully in the soil of his adopted State after his life's labors had been faithfully and well performed. A lawyer by profession, he, soon after he became a member of the bar, was intrusted with high official position, which he resigned to enter the army of the Confederacy.

From the beginning of his public career down to the time of his death there was no office in the gift of his people that they would not have bestowed upon him, and the offices that he accepted and filled were given, in most cases, without his seeking them. And the records of the Senate show the remarkable fact that he was a member of that body, resigned on account of his health, entertaining a high sense of public duty that he should not hold the office when his health would not permit him to discharge its duties, and at the same time he had already been elected by the State of Mississippi to fill the full term, which he entered upon and served after his health had been restored.

As a soldier of the Confederate army none was braver, none was truer, and none won and retained the love of his followers and the confidence of his officers more than did General WALTHALL. First being elected lieutenant, then lieutenant-colonel, then colonel, after which he was appointed brigadier-general, then major-general, and but for his modesty and refusal to be preferred over a friend he would have been appointed a lieutenant-general in the Confederate army.

It would be impossible here to detail the many campaigns in which he was engaged or the many battles in which he took conspicuous part, but wherever courage, skill, and heroic daring were needed to make the charge or to defend and protect the Confederate forces upon the retreat, General WALTHALL was ever present, and his presence and bravery were inspiration to his men. His firmness, his courage and patience at all times, met and answered the demands of the occasion. With 1,500 men at Lookout Mountain he held at bay 10,000 of General Hooker's division with such determination that it was characterized by General Thomas as "stubborn" and by General Bragg as "desperate."

Again, on the next day, at Missionary Ridge, with the remainder of his troops he protected the Confederate forces in retreat, and held his position until ordered away; and in this fight, although wounded, he did not leave the field, but remained to encourage his men. Again, in the retreat from the disaster at Nashville, where his services were in demand by General Forrest, the manner in which he conducted the retreat, the courage he displayed, and the firmness he exhibited have become a part of the history of that memorable campaign, and reflect honor and glory upon his name as a soldier. He was a typical representative of the Southern gentleman and of the old South. It was but natural that such a man should be a leader in the armies of the South.

I trust it may not be amiss on this occasion and at this time, when we speak in eulogy of one of the illustrious dead Confederate generals, who died a member of the United States Senate, after our country has become reunited and one, to say that the history of the civil conflict will demonstrate that influences of some sort operated fundamentally for the side of the Confederacy in every prominent event of the war, and this was especially true in the campaigns in Tennessee and Kentucky, in which General WALTHALL was a conspicuous figure. It is a marvelous fact that it required enormous sacrifices by 20,000,000 people to defeat the efforts of 8,000,000 people; that it required 3,000,000 soldiers to subdue 800,000 soldiers.

If we descend into detail, history will show that a naval fleet and 15,000 troops were required to advance against a weak fort, manned by less than 1,000 men, at Fort Henry; 35,000 men, with naval cooperation, to overcome 12,000 at Donelson; 60,000 to secure a victory over 40,000 at Pittsburg Landing; 120,000 to force the retreat of 65,000 at Corinth; 100,000 repelled by 80,000 in the first peninsula campaign against Richmond; 70,000, with a powerful naval force, to inspire the campaign which lasted nine months against 40,000 at Vicksburg; 90,000 to barely withstand the assault of 70,000 at Gettysburg; 115,000 sustaining a frightful repulse by 60,000 at Fredericksburg; 100,000 attacked and defeated by 50,000 at Chancellorsville; 85,000 held in check ten days at Antietam; 43,000 retaining the field uncertainly against 38,000 at Stone River; 70,000 defeated at Chickamauga by and beleaguered by 70,000 at Chattanooga; 100,000 to press back 50,000, increased at last to 70,000, from Chattanooga to Atlanta, a distance of 100 miles; 50,000 to defeat the investing line at Nashville, and finally 120,000 to overcome 60,000, with exhaustion, after a struggle of a year in Virginia.

(NOTE.—These statements are taken from Battles and Leaders of the Civil War, page 31.)

I do not mean by this to draw any invidious comparison between the individual Northern soldier and the Southern soldier. What, then, is the explanation of these facts showing that superior numbers were generally essential to Union victories and the success of Union operations? While much was due to the character of the contest, for revolution is calculated to inspire and aid desperate actions, and wars of sentiment are generally marked by unusual energy, still history must record there was something else which made the Southern soldier what he was.

I believe that the character of the leaders of the Southern armies, their generals, such as the man we mourn to-day, in a great measure made the soldiers, their neighbors and friends, almost irresistible. We are told that the style of orders and proclamations issued by the Southern generals showed that they relied on the passionate enthusiasm of their soldiers, and that in that way they tried to stimulate it. They recognized the fact that the odds must be generally against them, and that they must find some means to overcome the effect of that fact upon the spirits of the soldiers, and they thus set an example of courage, chivalry, and daring.

But there was still another influence to be found in the personal differences between the sections—a difference due chiefly to the customs of the South. For all popular movements, the Southern leader was then, and is now, followed with implicit confidence, which does not mean humility, by any means, but which produces subordination. It was, as I have said, because men like General WALTHALL were the leaders and officers in the Confederate army that they were enabled to achieve victories and perform deeds of daring which have immortalized the people of the South, and demonstrated that in that unfortunate war they were capable of achieving, as soldiers, victories and enduring disasters and defeat in such a way as has attracted the admiration and attention of the whole world.

But there was another influence. It was the influence of the Southern women, who, in agony of heart, girded the saber upon their loved ones and bade them go. A typical representative of the old South, a typical representative of the Southern leader, General WALTHALL himself thus spoke of the Southern soldier:

Deeds of heroism in the Southern army were of such common occurrence that to mention one would be to involve the misleading implication that it was exceptional. Hundreds of these could be enumerated, any one of which would make the actor's name immortal, if it stood alone. In our army the situation was peculiar, and the tests and strains severe, and the men who failed to meet them were the exceptions. Our condition and surroundings, the great stake which was at issue, and the odds we fought against bred heroes by the thousand in all branches of the military service. Some, of course, became more noted than others, but in their most conspicuous acts of daring they had a host of rivals whose name would fill this book.

My most interesting "reminiscence" of the war relates to the Southern soldier, not as an individual, but as a type, representing the body of the Southern troops. It is connected with that stage of the struggle after Vicksburg had fallen and Gettysburg was lost, and especially after Hood's Tennessee campaign had ended in disaster, and all reasonable ground for hope was gone. It was then that qualities were developed by the soldier in the South never before or since observed, in like degree, in any other soldier known to history.

If he had not made all sacrifices cheerfully, endured all hardships uncomplainingly, and staked his life freely for the cause he had espoused, so long as the hope of success remained, he would have belied his nature and disappointed the world. All this was expected of him by those who knew him. No less would have comported with his instincts, his training, or his teachings and example of the great men of his section, whose services in peace or war had laid the foundations of this country's greatness and glory.

But when hope had fled and the chances for the establishment of separate Southern independence amounted to no more than the vaguest possibility, that the Southern soldier, even in that dark hour, stood by his colors and his cause as faithfully, endured his growing hardships as uncomplainingly, bore himself as proudly, and faced death as fearlessly as when he believed that success would crown his efforts and reward his sufferings, presents a phase of constancy and devotion and of genuine chivalric sentiment which no other historic character so strikingly illustrates.

The men he stands for in history fought as well to save Hood's broken column after all had been lost at Nashville as they had done at Shiloh, when victory, as they believed, would establish the Southern Confederacy. They struggled as desperately in those "last days" of Lee's army—days of hopelessness and gloom—as they had ever done in the time of that great leader's proudest triumphs. At Bentonville, when it was not doubted that Richmond, in a few weeks, if not before the battle ended, would be in the hands of the Federals, they met the enemy as bravely and as cheerfully as they had done at Manassas or Murfreesboro.

In all this I see something unequalled and unrivaled in the history of war in any age—something that wins the admiration and wins the homage of mankind. Whatever it is, and whatever else it shows, it proves at least sincerity of motive, continuity of purpose, self-sacrificing adherence to a cherished sentiment, and settled conviction which defied despair; and it is to men of such attributes, moved by such incentives and capable of such deeds, that the South, under changed conditions, owes her position of honor and equality in the Union to-day.

This tribute to the Southern soldier by this gallant Confederate general, whose life we to-day memorialize, is a true representation of his character, of his fortitude, and of his struggles and faithfulness, and is worthy to be preserved here.

When the war was over, this ideal gentleman and soldier returned to his home in Mississippi, and by his example stimulated his people to new life and new energy to meet and overcome the new conditions that surrounded them; and in civil life, into which he again entered, he was the guiding spirit of his people, and by his example and precept aided and guided them in rebuilding their waste homes and restoring their State to good government. After his devotion to their interests, when they needed a successor to the illustrious and beloved Lamar, they unhesitatingly turned to General WALTHALL, and, without any seeking upon his part, elected him to represent the State of Mississippi in the Senate of the United States.

Fortunate, indeed, has been the South in presenting, since the civil war, as its representatives in that great body of the American Congress such men as WALTHALL, Lamar, George, Gordon, Colquitt, and others like them, who had been, and were still, leaders of the Southern people. It was by their presence in that body and by their daily association and contact with the Senators from the other sections that the prejudices of our Northern friends were at last allayed and broken down. It was the qualities of such men and the character they displayed in that body that gave to the present senior Senator from Massachusetts, Mr. HOAR, the occasion and the reason for saying, some years ago, with reference to the Southern gentleman, the following:

I know, too, when I say these things, I am saying them of my countrymen. They have some qualities which I can not even presume to claim in an equal degree for the people among whom I myself dwell. They have an aptness for command which makes the Southern gentleman, wherever he goes, not only a peer, but a prince. They have a love of home; they have, the best of them and the most of them, inherited from the great race from which they came the sense of duty and the instinct of honor as no other people on the face of the earth.

Such is, indeed, the true type of the Southern gentleman, as portrayed by Senator HOAR, and no one filled the full measure of this type better than did General WALTHALL.

In the Senate of the United States, by his manly bearing, by his courtesy, by his chivalrous conduct, by his considerate regard at all times of the rights of others, and by his attainments of intellect, he inspired not only respect and admiration, but won the esteem and love of his associates in that body; so that when he had performed his work, when his life was ended, there was not a man who had known him as a member of the Senate, or one who had been blessed with his acquaintance and friendship in Congress, but deeply mourned his loss.

Just two weeks before he died he made his last appearance in the Senate to deliver an eulogy upon Senator George, who was his late colleague. Though physically unable to perform this, which he deemed to be his duty, he nevertheless did so. Two weeks from that day, on the 21st day of April, 1897, his true heart ceased to beat, and he laid down life's labors forever. After the impressive ceremonies in the Senate, the committee, of which I was a member from the House, attended his remains to their last resting place, at Holly Springs, in Mississippi. From every section of the State came the people of Mississippi to pay their last respects at this great and loved man's grave.

The governor and the officers of the State, the professors in the colleges, the lawyers, merchants, and the farmers all came to join with those of his neighbors and friends at Holly Springs in tenderly consigning his body to the tomb. The eloquent Bishop Thompson, of the Episcopal Church of Mississippi, came and delivered the funeral oration. He spoke of the pure life, the high character, and the unselfish devotion of the man whom they came to bury. A most impressive scene was the Walthall Camp of Confederate Veterans, who came in a body to attend the funeral, and who brought bouquets and wreaths of flowers to place upon the tomb.

The coffin rested first in the church, covered and surrounded with these flowers—not artificial or hothouse flowers, but flowers grown in the soil and in the air and sunshine of Mississippi, deposited by the hands of these old veterans, who had followed him to victory in battle and stubbornly resisted the enemy on retreat—and as we bore the coffin to the grave each one, with a wreath of flowers in his hands, marched beside the hearse that contained all that was mortal of their former commander and friend; and when the coffin was lowered to its last resting place, they tenderly and lovingly placed the flowers upon his grave. We left him buried in the soil of the State that he had served and loved so long, and there will he rest—

Till the sun grows cold,
And the stars are old,
And the leaves of the judgment book unfold—

when, unless the teachings of religion are false, will be found written on the leaves of the judgment book, in living characters, the virtues and deeds of this great and good man preserved as evidences of his worth, and which will entitle him, when the judgment is entered by that Infallible Judge, who judges all right, to eternal life, peace, and happiness forevermore.

The life, the name, and the memory of General WALTHALL is a precious tradition to be preserved amid the records of the Congress of the nation. It can but be an inspiration to the youth of this country. The characteristics that made him great and loved can never die. They live after him. Yes, indeed—

These shall resist the empire of decay,
When time is over and worlds have passed away.

The memory of such a man will always be cherished as long as virtue is admired. Such principles were not born to die. The mortal may depart; that which made him great was immortal; it was the soul, and it does not die.

Cold in the dust the perished heart may lie,
But that which warmed it once can not die.

Mr. McLAIN. Mr. Speaker, when by resolution of this honorable body this day was set apart to offer tribute of respect to the life, character, and services of Senator WALTHALL and the Hon. W. F. LOVE, it was my purpose to prepare only a eulogy on my lifelong friend, Mr. LOVE, leaving the tributes of respect to the memory of General WALTHALL to the many members of this House who knew him thoroughly and intimately. Such an acquaintance it was not my good fortune to share.

Upon reflection, I have decided within the last day to offer a few words expressive of my estimate and appreciation of this illustrious Mississippian. Being a Mississippian, in common with him, I feel a sincere and genuine desire to offer a few humble words of praise to his memory. Though his life, character, and services have been so truthfully painted to-day by his lifelong friends, and also heretofore by his associates in the Senate, that I deem it superfluous for me to say anything, yet I arise to pay my sincere respects to this great and matchless man.

Mr. Speaker—

His life was gentle, and the elements
So mix'd in him, that Nature might stand up
And say to all the world, "This was a man!"

He impressed me as being one of the most remarkable men, in many respects, in our State. He was by nature and cultivation a grand, knightly, and masterly character. In many respects he overtopped all. He treated everything he touched with a master's hand. In his long, useful, and checkered career he proved this. In all departments of life that he was called to fill he stood at the head of his class. As a citizen, soldier, and statesman he proved this preeminently. In all these spheres he shone forth as a star of the first magnitude.

In brain power Mississippi may have produced a few men stronger than he. In fact, I am rather persuaded that she did; but in estimating a man's weight and worth to society and country we must view him from all points. No one man is great in all departments. While in actual brain power he did not, in my opinion, equal or excel a few Mississippians I have in my mind, yet I assert with absolute confidence that he was deeper rooted in the affections of his people than any man who has been upon the stage of action in Mississippi in the last generation—should I say within her history, I do not think I could be accused of extravagance. Mississippi delighted to honor him. She showered her richest gifts upon him, and with her wreaths of honor she was always proud to crown him, with or without his consent. The truth of this is known to all Mississippians. I shall not, therefore, here relate the facts of this seemingly extravagant assertion, but such is a fact. How did he gain this wonderful hold upon her? By God's lavish gifts.

He was magnetic in its broadest sense. He was pleasing and exquisite in his bearing and manners. He was chivalrous, courteous, and knightly. His great, manly, and tall physique was a silent witness to courage. In his presence you instinctively felt and saw that you were in the presence of truth, purity, and greatness, and that indefinable something, that was pleasing and sublime, flowed out upon you, emphasizing the fact that you were in the presence of no ordinary man.

Pure, chaste, and noble thought had been chiseled upon his intellectual and most lovable face. But this was not all. While God had given him a graceful, manly form, and a ponderous intellect, he had builded for himself a great character. It gave him great worth and showed him off at his best. Again, he was kind, generous, and had a just and keen conception of the rights of others. He scattered the seeds of kindness wherever he went. He was so pure, gentle, and kind to all that friends grew and multiplied around him. It has been beautifully said that "kindness is the real law of life, the link that connects earth with heaven. Would you live in the remembrances of others after you have passed away, write your name upon the tablets of their hearts by acts of kindness, love, and mercy."

General WALTHALL, along with his many other virtues, did this all through his long and useful career, and he lives in the remembrances and hearts of all Mississippians, and all others with whom he came in contact. I find that here, at this national capital, he was beloved and honored as in Mississippi, resulting chiefly from these great and pronounced characteristics and virtues. Among his colleagues in the Senate, I am told, he was estimated and regarded as the soul of truth and honor. By these adornments, coupled with his great intellectual ability, his influence was vast, second to none in the Senate.

His home is in the hearts of his people, and his memory is tenderly cherished by them. As cumulative evidence of this fact, at this very moment there is a movement among them to erect a monument to his memory. It will be built, and built by the free, spontaneous gifts of his people. They deem it eminently fitting that the love they bear to him and to his transcendent name and achievements should be thus honored.

Mr. Speaker, this distinguished subject has a great history. He was great as a citizen, lawyer, soldier, and statesman. The history and beauties of each of these spheres so occupied by him have been so beautifully and truthfully related by his life-long friends in this House and the Senate that I refrain from detaining the House further, and content myself with these few general remarks on his life, character, and services.

In his death Mississippi has lost one of her purest and best men. His life was "Like the day, more beautiful in the evening; like the summer, aglow with promise, and like the autumn, rich with the golden sheaves, where good works and deeds have ripened in the field."

Mr. MEYER of Louisiana. Mr. Speaker, the States of Mississippi and Louisiana lie side by side. We are neighbors in every sense, and therefore I feel impelled to utter briefly the sympathy felt by us of Louisiana for the people of Mississippi in the loss of one of our truest, bravest, and most eminent sons.

I am aware that this may seem a strong statement. Mississippi has been singularly fertile in producing men able in public affairs. She had from early days a strong bar. Her jurists, her soldiers, and her statesmen will always lend luster to our history. We easily recall the great names of Prentiss, Poindexter, Walker, Sharkey, Quitman, Albert G. Brown, and, most illustrious of all, Jefferson Davis.

Coming down to a still later period, that of our own times, we find as worthy successors in posts of trust L. Q. C. Lamar, James Z. George, and EDWARD CARY WALTHALL. Mississippi may well be proud of such a galaxy.

Lamar, George, and WALTHALL were with us but the other day. We feel as though we were still listening to their voices and their patriotic counsel and gathering hope and inspiration from their presence. They have passed away all too soon.

Such is the natural thought of grief, but we must consider that, in the most painful and trying period of Southern history, they were here to lead us, and their great work was well and fitly done. They may now rest from their labors in peace, followed by our affection, veneration, and gratitude.

Mr. Speaker, the story of Senator WALTHALL's career has been told by faithful and loving eulogists. Born in Virginia's capital and historic city, he went as a mere boy with his father to Mississippi, where he received his education and then was called to the bar, the profession of his choice, in 1852. His rise was steady, crowded as that bar was by men of talent and legal acquirements.

Both then and in the years following the civil war he was a highly successful lawyer. He may be said to have realized in this, his chosen vocation, the full measure of his professional aspirations.

On this portrait of his career, as of any other, there is not a blemish or a stain.

But WALTHALL was much more than a sound, successful, strong lawyer. He was about 30 years of age when the war began and involved our land in four years of desolating conflict. The young lawyer was quick to take up arms for his State and section. He had enjoyed no military training; he was no professional soldier, and probably, measuring himself severely, deemed it best to begin at the foot of the ladder. He was made a second lieutenant, but his capacity for duty as an officer, his industry, zeal, and high soldierly qualities soon carried him through the various grades until in December, 1862, he was promoted to be a brigadier-general. In June, 1864, he was raised to the rank of major-general of the Confederate army.

This rise was not due to favor or influence. He never intrigued for anything. He won his spurs fairly, by solid, enduring merit, and by the faithful performance of duty. He rose to high rank in an army of brave men and skillful, tried, heroic officers, in such a host as has never been excelled in the story of human achievement, virtue, and endurance.

Fighting against terrible odds, imperfectly armed and equipped, ill fed, having no reinforcements to draw upon, fighting long months a losing battle, we can now hardly realize the constancy and inflexible courage it required in the commander, the strain upon the officers; but everyone who knew or who served with General WALTHALL in those dark days bears witness to his wonderful heroism and his knightly qualities.

It was during this period that I met him first—I a young officer, he with commanding position, yet his affability won me at once; and his kind consideration for all who came in his contact drew everyone to him. Inspiring veneration and respect, of attractive personal appearance, he presented the ideal cavalier "sans peur et sans reproche."

He was a man among men. Those who knew him personally and the strength of his personal character knew also there would be—there could be—no duty that he would not perform, whatever might be the personal risk or sacrifice; whatever man could do in onset or to cover retreat in case of disaster he would be sure to do. He was a hero. He has been judged by heroes, and so the verdict will stand forever. His monument is the history of the western army of the Southern Confederacy.

When that unfortunate war closed in conquest, ruin, and humiliation for the South, General WALTHALL returned to his work as a lawyer. He was no politician. He had cherished no political ambitions. None of the old politicians were permitted in that hour of passion to resume official trusts. Not even moderate men like Lamar and WALTHALL saw the road open to public distinction, though the tastes and qualifications of the first lay mainly in that direction.

But, Mr. Speaker, there is a place of duty somewhere for every man; and men like these were the natural counselors and leaders of the people, even in private life. Lamar was the first to come to the Federal Congress. His great career, his influence for good, we all know. It is not so well known, however, that the friend on whom he most leaned, the friend whose counsel he most valued, and whose constant sympathy was almost a necessity of his life, was EDWARD C. WALTHALL. Their communion on all questions of state and public duty was close and constant.

The death of one, the first called, ended this communion; but in the lives of the two it was perfect. Some of those who well knew both would say that it might be difficult to determine which owed the most to the other. The forte of the one was a wise philosophy; the other, WALTHALL, was a man of logic, but also preeminently a man of action. But so close was their friendship and so kindred all their thoughts that the influence of WAL-

THALL was felt in Congress and public affairs long before Mississippi sent him to the United States Senate.

I shall not dwell upon General WALTHALL's career in the Senate. He spoke rarely and aimed at no display, and apparently employed no special efforts to influence his associates. He led a quiet and simple life, such as Senators from the South led in the old days, even when their thoughts and utterances were molding the destinies of the Republic. But WALTHALL was not an idle man. He neglected no public duty. He wasted no time in dissipation or the pursuit of pleasure. He was a practical, laborious Senator. He studied all the public questions that came up, and on these he formed his opinions quietly and firmly. Everyone knew where to find him. Thoughtful, observant, studious and upright, courteous, yet frank and truthful, when he did speak he spoke with power.

It is doubtful whether any Senator has ever commanded more thoroughly the respect of friend and foe than General WALTHALL. He did not go around seeking to make friends; he had no such art; but such was his perfect rectitude, his love of truth, and his courtesy that when he passed from the Senate to his great reward, there was not one there who did not feel that he who had died was worthy to have been a senator of Rome when Rome survived.

Mississippi loved and honored her noble son, and in this she honored herself. Never once was her pride and confidence in him withdrawn or even weakened. WALTHALL could not but know and prize this wealth of trust and affection from his own people. He would not have surrendered it for any earthly honor. But there was something he cared for even more than to be the honored servant of that gallant State. To speak the truth, to avow and defend the right, to follow the line of duty, were more to him than any public honor. There came a time in the history of Mississippi when there was a demand for what is known as the subtreasury plan of the Farmers' Alliance. It was a vain delusion, born of the distress and suffering of the agricultural classes.

Sympathizing profoundly with the sufferings of their people, and recognizing the good motives of the advocates of this plan, both WALTHALL and George promptly declared their opposition to it. Such a step might have cost them their seats in the Senate and, what is far more important, the confidence of their constituents; but they did not hesitate for an instant. The good sense and the good feeling of this people rallied to the wise, brave counsel of the two Senators. But while WALTHALL was deeply gratified at this change, his friends knew that if it were necessary he was ready to quit the Senate rather than dishonor and repudiate his convictions. He loved Mississippi much indeed, but he loved honor more.

There has been no epoch in the history of mankind when public trusts were more difficult, when to serve the State required higher ability and higher personal qualities, than in the thirty years that followed the civil war, and especially from the public men of the South. They had to face a tempest of passion and a bitter prejudice that often brought a feeling to their hearts akin to despair.

To plead the cause of a weak and conquered people; to conciliate without sacrificing honor and duty; to be frank and yet not offensive; to lift up and regain the liberties of a trampled, hated, distrusted section; to make apparent to all the good faith and patriotism of their constituents without resorting to unmanly recantations or fulsome protestations; to be patient and yet strong under the most trying provocation; to know what to yield and when to be firm; to hope on and fight on to restore the material prosperity and political future of their constituents—these, and far more than I can describe, were their difficult tasks. How tersely does Kipling portray some of its burdens:

Take up the White Man's burden—
In patience to abide,
To veil the threat of terror
And check the show of pride;
By open speech and simple,
An hundred times made plain,
To seek another's profit
And work another's gain.

Take up the White Man's burden!
Have done with childish days—
The lightly-proffered laurel,
The easy ungrudged praise;
Come now, to search your manhood
Through all the thankless years,
Cold, edged with dear-bought wisdom,
The judgment of your peers.

In all the great work the wisdom, thoughtfulness and unselfish patriotism, and rare equipoise of an heroic man like WALTHALL was an invaluable aid to Mississippi and the entire South.

That grand, knightly figure has gone from our view. I mean the earthly part, the casket which contained the jewel, but we can see it still in the mind's eye—the proud, yet dignified and affable presence, the inborn grace, the winning smile, the courteous mien, the kindly frank tone, the countenance in which never lurked an ignoble thought.

In this feverish, fretful struggle of life, with so much in its daily strife and contention that is sordid, saddening, and repulsive, it is refreshing to turn aside and study the lineaments of one who was an unselfish patriot, an heroic soldier, a wise statesman, a devoted husband, a true friend, a gentleman of the South, in whom every better element of our nature seemed blended with an exquisite proportion that defies imitation. Such was EDWARD CARY WALTHALL.

Cold in the dust the perished heart may lie,
But that which warmed it once can never die.

Mr. McLAIN. Mr. Speaker, we have assembled, in obedience to a resolution of this body, to express our appreciation of the life and services of the Hon. W. F. LOVE. As a citizen of his native State, and successor to him in this honorable body, I esteem it a privilege to offer a tribute of respect to his memory.

This time-honored custom of Congress, in setting a day apart to pay tribute of respect to a deceased member, has a chaste and pathetic significance. It is sweet and hallowing in its tendencies, though an eloquent reminder of the certainty of death. On these occasions the fragrant flowers of friendship gather around us, filling our souls with the purest of thoughts. Yes, it softens our characters, touching every chord of the heart with its hallowed remembrances.

Tender thoughts come trooping upon us, calling up the fondest memories of life, and throw open the door of the heart to the entrance of the richest flow of thought. To feel conscious that after death we shall be pleasantly remembered robs the grave of some of its terrors. God implanted this desire in the human breast to spur us on to noble efforts, reaping as a reward an honored name.

I dare say, Mr. Speaker, no State in the Union has suffered so greatly by death in the Fifty-fifth Congress as the State of Mississippi, having lost one-third of her delegation on the floor of Congress. First, the matchless George; next, the peerless WALTHALL; and lastly, the noble and promising W. F. LOVE.

Pain would we delay our coming fate, but when the heaven-born gale doth blow, we must embark.

I will briefly relate the chief features in the life of the Hon. W. F. LOVE. In performing this duty it affords me pleasure to say I knew him intimately and thoroughly. He was my neighbor and my friend. I shall paint him as he was, or, at least, as he appeared to me. At the very threshold of this undertaking I feel somewhat embarrassed. I feel and know that many features of his splendid character and the many gems that crowned his daily walks are not known to you as to me, his stay with you being too brief for it to fully develop and impress you with all of its power and true worth.

I shall not detain the House with an extended biographical sketch of his life. He was born in 1850, in the county of Amite—the county that he served so long with such marked ability. On the evening of the 16th of October, 1898, at his home in Gloster, Miss., after a long and continuous attack of typhoid fever, "God's finger touched him, and he slept." He was born and raised on a farm near Liberty, Miss. His environments were such as to compel him to engage in all the labor and drudgery of a farm life until he reached his full manhood. In this school of toil was doubtless the seeding place of that grand success that crowned his after life.

It was here that he became so thoroughly in touch with the toiling masses and acquired such great sympathy for them. In this field of toil he advanced patiently and deliberately. He did not become discouraged from these surroundings, but bravely pressed on with fortitude and courage, and soon took deep root in the community where he lived; and in the grand sweep of things his honors came thick, fast, and continuous. In this school of toil his educational advantages were limited, though he managed to acquire a fair education. Having passed through such a curriculum, he entered upon politics. His entrance into this new field was sudden, and not of any premeditated seeking or preparation.

In 1876 and for some time prior he was an active member of the Grange, a farmers' organization. His friends soon discovered that in him lay great worth. They recognized and honored his sterling qualities by electing him in 1877 to the legislature of his native State, a position that he held continuously, barring one term, until he entered the Halls of Congress. During his legislative career additional honors were showered upon him by an admiring constituency by his being elected in 1890 as a delegate to the constitutional convention of the State.

He was ambitious, but it was of a high and worthy character. His political life was marked by wonderful energy, purity of character, and rapid progress—rising as he did from the humble walks of life to the highest honors in the gift of his people. He was a strong debater, and had few superiors as a stump speaker. In his political and private life he carefully cultivated those virtues which so gracefully adorn the character of a Christian gentleman. Excellency of character, a pure and clean life, together with a sunny disposition, marked conspicuously his whole career. Yes, he was honest, sober, industrious, and kind-hearted. His cheery disposition gave him friends wherever he went.

He had the ear and confidence of his people, and justly so, for he had a perfect code of morals and fully realized that the essence of every achievement is energy. By these adornments he grew, year by year, stronger and stronger, gradually winning the hearts and praise of his fellow-citizens. So honestly, so faithfully, and with such true fidelity did he serve his people that he became a tower of strength with them. So thoroughly was he schooled in the principles of morality, and so closely did he walk with his God, that he was steeled against the enticing whispers of the serpent of temptation that so frequently clusters around and destroys so many of our public men. In his long public career—he it said to his honor—he lived a sober, pure, and virtuous life, and a man thus crowned is the "finest fruit earth holds up to its Maker."

Soon after entering political life he married Miss Julia Raiford, of Liberty, Miss., who, with her beautiful and intellectual daughter, survives him. It is permissible in me to allude to him as a father and husband, or, as I might term it, as I saw him in his home circle. "Here is the heart's garden. Its sunshine and flowers are here." Truly, I can say of him he planted and cultivated love, peace, and happiness in his home. But how could it be otherwise with a man who nourished virtue and fostered and sustained the commandments of his God?

He was faithful to the trusts confided to him by the people. I feel sure that the members of this House who were nearest to him will bear testimony to this. A more faithful and painstaking Representative the Sixth Congressional district of the State of Mississippi never had. Could he have lived, he surely would have developed into one of your strongest and most useful men. He was not a star, nor a genius; but he was industrious, painstaking, and energetic, and these qualities often win where genius fails.

In religious belief he was a Baptist. He loved his church. He freely contributed to it his time and money. He served his church faithfully, but all good men were his brethren. He moved and acted upon a broad plane, feeling that all good men were Christians.

Having lived an honored, useful, and God-fearing life, commanding the utmost respect from all, a grand success was his reward.

He had just won the coveted prize of his life. He was flushed with hope and full of confidence. But this noble and beautiful life, all aglow with promise, was stricken in the noon of its supreme happiness and usefulness. He died rich in honors, at peace with his God, and with good will to all men.

I contribute these humble words of praise to his memory, and place them as a garland of friendship upon his grave.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Speaker, it is true of most of the children of men that the memory of them fades at the close of their day, even as the brief afterglow vanishes from the sunset sky. Their names and the dates upon which they enter and leave the world may be cut in marble. That world has room for no ampler page.

We devote this hour to writing in the annals of his country something of the life and work of WILLIAM FRANKLIN LOVE, of Mississippi, whose valuable and conspicuous public service began with his manhood and ended at his bier.

Very much that was most worthy in his life, as in all lives, must be lost. But if his known ambition to perform high public tasks, his constant aim to point worthy and inspiring models, his high ideals of public service, are taken as utterances of his solicitude for the political and social welfare of the people whom he served, we shall, if only partially, still the better understand the man.

It is true that I had not the advantage of a long personal acquaintance with Mr. LOVE, yet I knew him long and well enough to enable me in some degree to appreciate his sterling worth. When he entered the Fifty-fourth Congress, he was assigned to one of the committees on which I had the honor to serve. I early observed the conscientious devotion of his energies to the tasks before him, his integrity of mind, his high purpose, his habit of seeking foundation fact, and invoking right reason for his conclusions. He seemed always disposed to test both political and moral questions by the higher law of effect. Indeed, he soon impressed me as at once the embodiment and exemplar of a code of lofty moral and civic conduct. In matters to be determined by the right and the wrong, the just and the doubtful elements, he might well remind one of the line of South. "Such grand exemplars as make their own abilities the sole measure of what is fit or unfit."

Kindness and sympathy were as manifest in his intercourse as stern regard for duty and robust sense of justice—the former made him approachable and interested in his fellow-men, the latter unyielding and swift in pursuit of the right.

By inquiry into his record in the State of Mississippi I was glad to find my estimate of the man confirmed. It had been long entertained by the people whom he had served.

At home he seemed to have risen above all factional differences and local strife, and stood preeminently the man in whom public confidence centered. Local disputes left his standing unaffected "as the rock that lifts its head above the troubled waters and remains unshaken by the causes that agitate them." For eighteen years he had been in one or the other branch of the State legislature, discharging there and elsewhere the most responsible and delicate trusts, the popular approval being manifested by again and always reimposing public trusts—the same or greater.

So long and satisfactory public service for a discriminating constituency is the result of neither chance nor favor, but of sterling qualities of mind and of spirit—tireless effort to ascertain the right and courage to do it whenever duty requires action. I learned enough of Mr. LOVE to see that such was the secret of his success. Even the doubting must see a saving grace in the choice of public servants when men of his mold, full of honor and experience and of known purpose, are retained and transferred to wider fields of action, as he was to the halls of national legislation.

The loss of a man so worthy from public or private life means much. That in Mr. LOVE which at once challenged our admiration was his exalted character—it was his fortress and best equipment. Here, if time permitted, we could not dwell too long. Character such as his must give us our worthy representative men and make up the sum of our national security and progress. Unless it predominates our public concerns, nothing remains on which to base a hope for the future; controlled by its influence, the future will be secure; without it, arsenals and guns are no guarantee of long national life.

Had length of days been given Mr. LOVE, he would, by reason of his rectitude, of perfect integrity of purpose, of unswerving adherence to lines dictated by an enlightened conscience, of industry in mastering detail, and zeal for accomplishing that which he conceived the public good required, have retained and enlarged the esteem of his constituency, and this House, slow perhaps to perceive but ever ready to recognize and to utilize true worth, would, upon fuller opportunity, have accorded him honors fitting his great merit. But length of days was not for him.

The Lord of Life so orbited his sun,
That evening's shadows fell just when his noontide shone
On widened fields. With new tasks scarce begun,
He heard the whisper—"Rest, your work is done."

[Mr. CATCHINGS addressed the House. See Appendix.]

Mr. BOTKIN. Mr. Speaker, I desire a moment in which to offer a brief but sincere tribute to the memory of one whose untimely death has closed an earnest and successful career.

Among the compensating features of Congressional life are the new and valued friendships formed. From the drudgery of committee and department work and from the noisy strife of House debate one finds restful relief in association with the many earnest and manly members of this body from the different parts of our country.

One of the first and rarest spirits with whom I had the honor and pleasure to become acquainted upon my entrance into Congress two years ago was the Hon. W. F. LOVE. Early in our acquaintance we had occasion to enjoy a somewhat extended trip together. It was such a journey as furnished an opportunity for a complete unbending from the strain of official duties and as might have led a man less self-contained into some degree of social excess. But the man we mourn to-day constantly maintained the same genial, self-poised, orderly conduct so usual with him in his home life.

From that time to the close of the second session our acquaintance became more and more intimate, even ripening into a friendship at once warm and enduring. I had learned to trust and love the man, and the news of his death filled me with a sense of deep and personal loss.

Mr. LOVE gave earnest and conscientious attention to all the duties imposed upon him by membership in this body. Always at his post, and ever alert for opportunities in department, in committee, and in this Chamber to serve his constituents and his country, few men attain to so high a measure of usefulness in so brief a period of time.

The deceased was a Christian gentleman, demonstrating that even in the public service one may be a good man in the highest sense. In his life at the capital of the nation, with its abounding distractions and temptations, he exemplified the religion of Jesus, whose servant he was.

It is my pleasure to say that the average standard of morals in the American Congress is much higher than I had been led to suppose. The lives and characters of such men as W. F. LOVE very materially elevate this general average and augment the sum of integrity, of sincerity, and of worth.

A devoted husband, a kind father, a sincere friend, an upright citizen, a useful public servant, a manly man, has gone from us. May we emulate his example and may Heaven's blessings rest upon his family.

Mr. FOX. Mr. Speaker, I think I am fortunate in having known WILLIAM FRANKLIN LOVE. He is dead, but his influence still lives. No higher tribute can be paid to his memory than to say that everyone was better for having known him. I knew him well, and in all the relations of life I have never known a man who met and discharged every duty, public and private, more courageously and conscientiously. He shirked no duty or responsibility.

The modest biography in the Congressional Directory tells an eloquent story of a life of honor, industry, and usefulness. He was elected to the legislature of his State when just old enough to be eligible. He continued to be a member of that political body for eighteen years—ten years in the house and eight in the senate. While in the senate he filled the responsible and important position of chairman of the committee on finance. He was also a member of the constitutional convention of the State of Mississippi in 1890, and took a prominent part in the deliberations of that memorable body, which was composed of the foremost men in Mississippi, men who brought all their brains and patriotism to the solution of the greatest political problem that ever confronted any body of statesmen.

Mr. LOVE brought to the service of his country as a Congressman all his long experience and training as a legislator, which enabled him at once to take a prominent position in this body. It was a wise selection when the Speaker concluded to appoint Mr. LOVE as a member of the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads. He at once addressed himself conscientiously and industriously to the arduous work of that great committee, and his well-trained business ability enabled him to take a conspicuous place in that work.

No man ever was or could be more conscientious in the discharge of his public duties. His idea was that his people had employed him to represent them, and that it was his duty to remain in his seat from noon, when the House of Representatives met, until it adjourned, watching carefully and intelligently all the proceedings in the House. Although a new member, he was always alert, and thought that his own responsibility to the country was as great as that of any other member; and he was right.

No man was more loyal or true in all personal relations of life, especially to his family or to his friends. He was fortunate and happy in having a loving and an accomplished wife and a brilliant and charming daughter, to whom he was devoted and for whom he lived; and they in return gave all their purest and best affections to lighten the burdens of his laborious life. And, Mr. Speaker, he was worthy of it; and that is the highest tribute that can be paid any man.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I was so unfortunate as not to have enjoyed the acquaintance of my late colleague, WILLIAM FRANKLIN LOVE, until after he came to Washington in consequence of his election as a member of the Fifty-fifth Congress. This was not owing to the fact of any lack of prominence on the part of Mr. LOVE in the public affairs of the State of Mississippi. It was owing to the fact that I myself was but little acquainted with the public men of my State, except those with whom I had been brought into association by my election and service here as a member of Congress.

Mr. LOVE, on the other hand, had long been one of the most influential factors in public life at home. He was barely of age when he became a member of the Mississippi legislature. In that capacity he spent ten years of exceptional usefulness and exceptional popularity, when he became a State senator and impressed himself upon the legislation of the State for eight years more.

When the people of Mississippi, confronted by unprecedented conditions, seeking a solution of a seemingly insoluble problem, under the leadership of "The Great Commoner," J. Z. George, had determined to hold a constitutional convention, they determined that it should be composed of the wisest and best of Mississippi's sons, and Mr. LOVE was elected by his section of the State as one of the members of that great convention. It was a great convention, because it succeeded in a most difficult work, and succeeded in such a way as that the result achieved could be defended in the face of the world as fair and honest and intelligent and just. Mr. LOVE was one of the most useful and industrious of the members of that convention.

I knew him, however, as a member of Congress, where I was thrown with him very constantly. I sought his advice very frequently, and found his counsel always valuable, because he possessed that tact which enables a public man while standing firmly to his own convictions and working steadily for their enactment into legislation to do so without wounding the feelings or rousing the prejudices of those who entertain different opinions.

He was elected to the Fifty-fifth Congress as a Democrat, serving most creditably his first term. Notwithstanding the lack of opportunity for prominence or for usefulness which accompanies the position of a new member, it soon became evident to all of us that Mr. LOVE was peculiarly useful in that special work which fell to the charge of his committee, and which, therefore, especially attracted his attention as a member. We could follow him safely on all questions brought into the House from his committee. He had been renominated by his people without opposition and with a unanimity of sentiment seldom equaled, and his election to the Fifty-sixth Congress was prevented only by the fact that his untimely death intervened between his nomination and the date of the general election.

He was suave, urbane, polite, of an evenness of temper which I scarcely ever knew excelled. He was at the same time pronounced in his convictions, scarcely ever hesitating about a vote or the position which he owed it to himself and his constituents to take, never wavering after he had formed a determination. He was industrious to an extent beyond most men.

He was conscientious in his attention to the details of his duties as a Representative on the floor, in the committee room, and in attention to his correspondence. A man of most remarkably regular habits, his Congressional life went on like clockwork, with a regular time for each character of duty. When the House opened, he sat as if chained to his seat until the House adjourned. I regret that I did not know better the private side of his life. But even my scant acquaintance with it was enough to teach me that his domestic relations were of the happiest kind.

The affection of the members of his family for him, their confidence in him, was evident to the most casual observer. He lived, as Southern men in public life generally do, so that at the end of twenty-five years of public service he was no wealthier than when he began. There was no opportunity to make money legitimately in the field of work which he had chosen. He therefore made none. While his constituents and his people will regret the fact that he died poor, they will be proud of it as a demonstration of his integrity and will remember it to his credit and to the credit of his descendants.

Mr. HENRY of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I rise to say a few words in commemoration of my friend and colleague the Hon. W. F. LOVE, late Representative of the Sixth district of Mississippi in this the Fifty-fifth Congress.

Knowing him as I did, and admiring him for his many noble traits of character, I feel that I can truly say of him that he was in every way worthy of the confidence of his people and of the respect of his fellow-members.

Quietly and unostentatiously he pursued the even tenor of his way, hearkening only to the voice of duty as he understood it. He may have had faults, but had more of virtues. He was my friend, and I prefer to remember the latter.

It seems but a short time since at the end of the last session of this Congress I bade him farewell in the fullness of health. With a consciousness of duty well performed he hastened to his family and constituency to receive the well-earned plaudit of "Well done, good and faithful servant."

Appreciating his devoted service here, his district, without opposition, renominated him to the Fifty-sixth Congress.

Life was but opening to him; he seemed strong and vigorous, and his friends predicted for him a long and useful career in that field to which they had sent him as their representative. But, alas! "Man proposes, but God disposes."

On the 8th day of October, 1898, at his home in Gloster, Amite County, Miss., after a brief struggle with disease, Death claimed him "for his own."

During his short career in Congress he had won the respect and confidence of his fellow-members, and I dare say no one of them heard of his untimely death without genuine and unfeigned sorrow.

As a member of the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads he was painstaking, vigilant, and laborious, bringing to his work intelligence, earnestness, and ability. On the floor of the House, in discussing the bill offered by the committee as a representative of the minority, he won the admiration even of those opposed to him by his thorough familiarity with the questions involved; and to his incessant labor and lucid presentations, more than to any other, is the country indebted for the defeat of the bill.

His dignified bearing, his earnestness, and his devotion at all times demanded the attention of the House. He put on foot measures, which have since matured, of great consequence to his district, bringing to the hitherto neglected Gulf coast and other points that relief they had long prayed for in vain.

His high moral character, his gentle deportment, his close attention to duty were characteristics of his service. I have never yet heard a single member make a remark derogatory of him, but have often heard from his late associates the highest expressions of regard.

To me, who perhaps knew Mr. LOVE better than any of our delegation, his death was inexpressibly sad. Our lines had somewhat fallen together. In 1878 we served together in the legislature of Mississippi in the lower house, and again in 1890, Mr. LOVE then being in the senate. In November, 1890, we served again together in the constitutional convention. In those days he brought to his duty the same devotion which marked his career as a member of this body.

When he was elected to this Congress he was chairman of the finance committee of the State senate. His record as such attests his fidelity.

We entered this Congress together; how little did I think then that I would be called upon to perform this sad duty. He was my friend for many years and I can pay him no higher tribute than to say that during those years he was true to every trust, and never betrayed a friend nor lowered his crest to an enemy. His word was his bond, his integrity was unquestionable, his worth beyond measure.

He leaves a wife and daughter, to whom he was devoted, who, in the years that are to come, will long "for the touch of a vanished hand and the sound of a voice that is still." May the good God shield and protect them.

No truer man sleeps beneath Mississippi soil. Peace to his ashes.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. Speaker, I have known Mr. LOVE for some years. I knew him as a member of the legislature and a member of the State senate of Mississippi, not intimately at all, but I knew the esteem and high regard that his colleagues in both of those bodies had for him. He had taken the high stand for industry, honesty, and faithful service in those bodies of which his short service here gave so much promise. I watched his career with some interest.

I saw him elected to the Fifty-fifth Congress. When he came here, as my colleague has just said, with all the embarrassment that surrounds the average new member, he took his assignments on committees, went to work, and by his industry, his close attention to the duties of his position, he was fast winning his way to a place of great usefulness and prominence in this House.

He seemed from the very first to have the correct idea as to how to make himself a useful member of this House and a useful servant of his people. He did not want anything to go on here without his knowing something about it, and by close application and diligent inquiry, meeting and working with his committees and understanding all they did by close attention to the business assigned to him, and then attending regularly the sessions of the House and being in his seat and keeping up with what is going on, he was very fast familiarizing himself with the methods of legislation here. Very few new members who come to this House gave more promise of usefulness than did Mr. LOVE.

After his service in the first two sessions of the Fifty-fifth Congress I was invited to his home town. Just a few days before he was taken sick I spent a day there, almost all of which was spent in his company. I met a very large concourse of people. I learned in his association with them, in his apparent thorough knowledge of them, and their great respect for him, something of the hold he had upon the affections and confidence of his constituency.

There was a large meeting in the town of Gloucester, where he was living when he died, and where he died, and I was very much impressed with the thorough and cordial relations existing between Mr. LOVE and those people with whom he lived. As has been said, he had been renominated without opposition, and would have been elected almost as unanimously if he had lived. It was bad for the State, it was bad for the people, that a man who gave promise of a useful career, who had scarcely reached the meridian of life, should be taken off as he was.

I left him in good spirits, in apparently good health, enjoying all the happiness that belongs to a man of his happy domestic relations and the thorough confidence of his neighbors and constituents. A few days after I left him I noticed in the newspapers an account of his serious illness. This continued for some time, and then, a little more than a month from the time he and I were together, he passed over the river. We all mourn him.

Mr. Speaker, I did not enjoy an intimate acquaintance with Mr. LOVE before he came here; but when I came to know him well we became good friends, and I came to be very fond of him. I had come to appreciate his worth and had come to know of the many sterling qualities he possessed, and I will always be of those who loved him and who will ever cherish pleasant memories of him.

I recognize that in his death this House sustained a great loss, our delegation one of its most promising and useful members, and the State of Mississippi one of its best citizens and one of its most trusted and useful public servants. His family and friends have sustained an irreparable loss, for he was a true, faithful, and affectionate husband, a loving and tender father, and a friend who could be trusted under any and all circumstances. As there are others to speak, I will not detain the House longer.

Mr. SPIGHT. Mr. Speaker, these memorial occasions, of which there have already been several during this short session of Congress, remind us that "death is no respecter of persons;" that he puts his sickle into the council halls of the nation as well as into the homes of the private citizen. They should also remind us that "it is not all of life to live, nor all of death to die."

If the life here is right, then death is not oblivion and forgetfulness, but is only a change in the form and duration of existence; a putting off of mortality and a putting on of immortality; an exchange of a state of being full of perplexity and sorrow and suffering for one full of perfect peace, happiness, and rest. For the Christian who has built upon "the firm foundation," death has no terrors. Such an one might well wish, for the sake of loved ones left behind, that his days on earth might be prolonged, but is nevertheless ready to say, "Thy will be done."

Of a man of this character, I come to say a word to-day.

I shall leave to others an outline of his life, and shall speak briefly of my personal acquaintance with him, and the impressions his character made upon me.

I first knew WILLIAM F. LOVE in 1878 when he and I were members of the Mississippi legislature. I learned then to appreciate his noble qualities, and to know something of the principles which animated and characterized his whole life.

He did not possess the too often fatal gift of brilliancy, but instead nature had endowed him with sound judgment, an honest heart, fixed purposes, and zeal in the performance of every duty. Of these qualities the most useful men are made. Mr. LOVE was faithful to every trust, public and private, and all his actions were prompted by a determination to do right, and a desire for that which would accomplish the greatest good.

Above all things else, he was a Christian gentleman, who carried his religion into his business, and no enterprise which was in conflict with the divine law and an enlightened conscience could secure his approval; and no matter what the allurements, he had the courage to say "No" to every wrong. In his death there was a loss to his country and to his friends, but more than all a loss to his family, who loved and appreciated him as no others could; but the God whom he trusted will care for and bless them.

Happy the man who, when his life-work is ended, can lie down to rest in the consciousness of duty well done, and in his last moments say, with Job, "I know that my Redeemer liveth."

Mr. LOVE's work on earth is ended, but he did not live in vain. I do not agree to the literal sense of that couplet:

The evil that men do lives after them;
The good is oft' interred with their bones.

But rather with that other familiar sentiment:

Lives of great men all remind us
We can make our lives sublime,
And departing, leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of time.

The world is better for Mr. LOVE's having lived in it, and his good deeds and elevating influences can not be lost, but will continue to bear fruit to the glory of God and the good of mankind long after his body has crumbled into its native dust. It was not said in vain—

Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord * * * that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. Speaker, as a new member of the Fifty-fifth Congress, I became acquainted with Hon. WILLIAM FRANKLIN LOVE, whose death came in the very midst of his strength and usefulness. I had most favorable opportunities to observe the methods and to study the character of this most conscientious public servant, for we were both members of the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads, sat side by side at the table of that important committee, and often served on the same subcommittee, and now, when, in accordance with the long-established and appropriate custom, we, his fellow-members, meet to do honor to the memory of our deceased friend and pay tribute to his worth as a man and as a legislator, I shall enter upon no extended eulogy, for there are many others more able than I waiting to do that, but shall content myself with recording what I observed to be his most marked characteristic as a servant of his people and a member of this great body.

An ever-present and most imperious sense of duty Mr. LOVE exhibited on every occasion. In the obscure and little-appreciated labor of the subcommittee he was always present; he scanned and thoroughly mastered the scope of every bill submitted, and while exhibiting liberality and common sense in considering every proposition, he yet was inflexibly firm when his mind was made up. In full committee, where all subcommittee work must be reviewed, he was active, alert, inquisitive, and most useful; and when antagonism arose, and the clash of debate followed, Mr. LOVE showed himself to be a man of wide information and an advocate of great force and persuasiveness. It did not take a prophet to see that, had our friend been spared, he would have attained great distinction. The true door to distinction in this body, as I observe, is the mastery of the details of the various subjects of legislation.

The strong men we see around us in this House, who are shaping things, every one of them, show the mastery of details which proves the possession of that very laboriousness and devotion to duty which was so prominent a characteristic of the subject of this tribute. It is bound to bring prominence; and with him prominence would have brought the increased and ever-increasing esteem of his fellow-citizens—for he was also a man of un-mixed integrity, a gentle and lovable companion, a pure-minded, brave, and Christian gentleman.

[Mr. GRIGGS addressed the House. See Appendix.]

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. Speaker, in conclusion I desire to make a request that a number of gentlemen who had intended to speak, some of whom have been deterred from doing so by the lateness of the hour and others by not being well enough to be here to-day—that all persons desiring to print remarks on Mr. LOVE and Senator WALTHALL be permitted to print them in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the permission will be granted. The Chair hears no objection.

In obedience to a vote of the House already taken, the Chair declares, as a further mark of respect to Senator WALTHALL and Mr. LOVE, a member of this House, the House now stands adjourned until Monday at 11 o'clock a. m.

And accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 54 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, Mr. BABCOCK, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to which was referred House bill 12062, reported in lieu thereof, as a substitute, a bill (H. R. 12184) to distinctively designate parcels of land in the District of Columbia for the purposes of assessment and taxation, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2301); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS INTRODUCED.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

Mr. BABCOCK reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia a bill (H. R. 12184) to distinctively designate parcels of land in the District of Columbia for the purposes of assessment and taxation—to the House Calendar.

By Mr. BRADLEY: A resolution (House Res. No. 419) to prevent manufacture of United States Government uniforms in sweat shops—to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota: A memorial for the legislature of the State of Minnesota, against selling lands on the Indian reservations in that State until after January 1, 1902—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. DAVIS: A bill (H. R. 12185) for the relief of John McGovern—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. GIBSON: A bill (H. R. 12186) to correct the military record of John W. Robinson—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 12187) granting a pension to Lewis Perkins—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ROBBINS: A bill (H. R. 12188) to increase the pension of Mrs. Sarah R. Williams—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SPRAGUE: A resolution (House Res. No. 415) that the Clerk of the House pay to Ambrose E. Pratt balance due him as clerk of the late Hon. John Simpkins, member of Congress—to the Committee on Accounts.

By Mr. ODELL: A resolution (House Res. No. 416) that the Clerk of the House is authorized to pay Alfred Lewis and others, wood carriers—to the Committee on Accounts.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By Mr. ACHESON: Petitions of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Burgettstown, Pa.; Post 286, Grand Army of the Republic, Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of Westminster Church, and Young People's Society of the United Brethren Church, all of Burgettstown, Pa.; Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Perryopolis; Pleasant View Christian Endeavor Society; Presbyterian Church of Pigeon Creek; United Presbyterian Church of West Alexandria; Cumberland Presbyterian Church of West Finley; United Brethren, Methodist Episcopal, and Presbyterian churches of Claysville, Pa., in favor of the passage of the Ellis bill—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. CAPRON: Protest of the Rhode Island Woman's Suffrage Association against the disfranchisement of the female citizens of Hawaii—to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. CLARKE of New Hampshire: Petition of fourth-class postmasters of Grafton County, N. H., for the passage of House bills Nos. 4930 and 4931—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, petitions of the Woman's Christian Temperance unions of North Stratford and Franklin, N. H., to prohibit the transmission by mail or interstate commerce of pictures or descriptions of prize fights—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petitions of the Woman's Christian Temperance unions of North Stratford and Franklin, N. H., in favor of the passage of the Ellis bill and to continue the present liquor laws of Alaska, etc.—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

Also, petitions of the Woman's Christian Temperance unions of Franklin and North Stratford, N. H., to forbid interstate gambling by telegraph or telephone—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. CODDING: Petitions of the Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union of East Smithfield, and Gustin Post, No. 154, Grand Army of the Republic, of Troy, Pa., favoring the passage of the Ellis bill—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. ELLIS: Petition of 33 citizens of Baker City, Oreg., favoring a bill to retire civil-service employees—to the Committee on Reform in the Civil Service.

By Mr. GRIFFITH: Protest of Garland Mills Company, of Greensburg, Ind., against the tariff rates of transportation proposed by trunk-line railroads, etc.—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. GROUT: Petition of William H. Burbank, of Barnet, Vt., and 18 other fourth-class postmasters of Caledonia and Orange counties, Vt., urging the passage of House bills Nos. 4930 and 4931, relating to the compensation of fourth-class postmasters—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, protest of A. G. Artell and 51 citizens of Warren, Vt., against the seating of Brigham H. Roberts as a Representative from Utah—to the Committee on Elections No. 1.

By Mr. HITT: Resolution of the Society for Ethical Culture, of Chicago, Ill., in favor of conceding to the Philippine Islands the right of self-government—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. HOWARD of Georgia: Petition of citizens of Athens, Ga., for restoration of the appropriation to the Southern Railway Company for fast mail—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, resolutions of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church South against the seating of Brigham H. Roberts as a Representative from Utah—to the Committee on Elections No. 1.

By Mr. HULL: Resolutions of the Runnells Conference of the Des Moines, Iowa, District of the Beorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, against the seating of B. H. Roberts as a Representative from Utah—to the Committee on Elections No. 1.

By Mr. KETCHAM: Petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of Clinton Corners, N. Y., in favor of the Ellis bill and to maintain prohibition in Alaska and Indian Territory—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. LACEY: Petition of George A. Gates and other citizens of Grinnell, Iowa, for woman suffrage in the Hawaiian Islands—to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. LITTAUER: Protest of C. O. Thatcher and other citizens of the Twenty-second Congressional district of New York, against the seating of Representative-elect B. H. Roberts, of Utah—to the Committee on Elections No. 1.

By Mr. McDOWELL: Petition of the Ministerial Association of Canal Dover and New Philadelphia, Ohio, against the seating of B. H. Roberts as a Representative from Utah—to the Committee on Elections No. 1.

By Mr. NORTON of Ohio: Protests of the Woman's Home Missionary societies of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Tiffin, Marion, Fostoria, and Fremont, Ohio; Baptist Society of Sandusky, Ohio; Ladies' Society of Perkins Methodist Church, of Sandusky; Presbyterian Church and Methodist Episcopal Church societies of Crestline; Oak Grove Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, of Clyde; Antrim Township Sunday School Convention, of Wyandot; H. C. Lyman, of Bucyrus, and A. G. Lane, of Fremont, Ohio, protesting against the seating of Representative-elect B. H. Roberts, of Utah—to the Committee on Elections No. 1.

By Mr. PRINCE: Petition of L. A. Ferry, M. D., and 28 citizens of Geneseo, Ill., urging the enactment of the Brosius bill to prevent the adulteration of food—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana: Petition of letter carriers and citizens of Fort Wayne, Ind., favoring the passage of a bill to equalize the pay of letter carriers—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. SHATTUC: Resolutions of the Evangelical Alliance of Cincinnati, Ohio, against the seating of Representative-elect B. H. Roberts, of Utah—to the Committee on Elections No. 1.

Also, petition of the Evangelical Alliance of Cincinnati, Ohio, for the passage of the Hepburn bill prohibiting the transmission by mail or interstate commerce of pictures and descriptions of prize fights—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota: Resolutions of the St. Paul Typographical Union, No. 30, in favor of the restoration of wages in the Government Printing Office to 50 cents per hour—to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. WANGER: Petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Doylestown, Pa., to prohibit the sale of liquor in Government buildings, etc.—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

SENATE.

MONDAY, February 27, 1899.

The Senate met at 11 o'clock a. m.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D.

On motion of Mr. HALE, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of Saturday last was dispensed with.

MEMORIAL ADDRESSES ON THE LATE REPRESENTATIVE DINGLEY.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, I wish to give notice that on Wednesday at 5 o'clock I shall ask the Senate to consider resolutions relating to the death of my late distinguished colleague in the House, Governor DINGLEY.

Mr. COCKRELL. On what day?

Mr. HALE. On Wednesday. I put the hour at 5, making it as late as possible, so that it will not interfere with the very pressing business of the Senate.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a letter from the Secretary of the Navy submitting an estimate of appropriation for inclusion in the naval appropriation bill, required by the Bureau of Steam Engineering, under the title "Civil establishment," for one chief clerk for the department of steam engineering at the navy-yard, Boston, Mass., $1,300; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

He also laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a letter from the Supervising Architect requesting an increase in the appropriation for rental of quarters at Chicago, Ill., for the year ending March 28, 1900, from $18,845.23 to $19,535.20 in order to provide additional space for the internal-revenue service; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

He also laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a letter from the Director of the Mint calling attention to the estimate formerly submitted by him for "Freight on bullion and coin, mints and assay offices" for the current fiscal year, $45,000, and stating that under present conditions it is found that it will require $10,000 additional to his first estimate, or $55,000, to complete that service for the remainder of the fiscal year; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

He also laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a letter from the Secretary of War submitting estimates of appropriations for the service of the Ordnance Department for the fiscal year 1900; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

He also laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of War, inclosing a memorandum from the Quartermaster-General showing the cases in which compensation in excess of $150 per month is paid by that Department, indicating an aggregate annual expenditure of $110,000, and recommending that the act of Congress approved June 7, 1898, suspending the operations of certain laws relating to the War Department be continued suspended until March 1, 1900; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

LISTS OF JUDGMENTS AND CLAIMS ALLOWED.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Attorney-General, transmitting, in response to a resolution of the 25th instant, a list of all judgments in favor of claimants in Indian depredation cases rendered by the Court of Claims since the date of the last appropriation for the payment of such judgments, July 7, 1899, etc.; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

BARGE, DOCK, ELEVATOR AND RAILWAY COMPANY.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the annual report of the Georgetown Barge, Dock, Elevator and Railway Company of the District of Columbia for the year ended December 31, 1898; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia, and ordered to be printed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills:

A bill (S. 4748) for the relief of Charles K. Kirby and Edinger Bros. & Jacobi;

A bill (S. 5450) to attach Claiborne County, Miss., to the western division of the southern judicial district of Mississippi; and

A bill (S. 5513) to amend an act entitled "An act authorizing the Arkansas Northwestern Railway Company to construct and operate a railway through the Indian Territory, and for other purposes," and extending the time for constructing and operating the said railway for two years from the 5th day of April, 1899.

The message also announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 7093) granting an increase of pension to William R. Warden; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message further transmitted to the Senate resolutions of the House upon the deaths and as tributes to the memory of Hon. E. C. WALTHALL, late a Senator from the State of Mississippi, and of Hon. W. F. LOVE, late a Representative from the State of Mississippi.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President:

A bill (S. 1154) granting a pension to George Hughes; and

A bill (S. 1776) to increase the pension of Mrs. Letitia Tyler Sample.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT presented a petition of the legislature of South Dakota, praying for the enactment of a free-homestead law; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATE OF SOUTH DAKOTA, DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Pierre, February 20, 1899.

To the honorable President of the United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.

SIR: I have the honor to inclose you herewith copy of house joint resolution as passed by the legislature of the State of South Dakota, relating to the passage of a free-homestead law.

Very respectfully, yours,

WILLIAM H. RODDLE,
Secretary of State.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
State of South Dakota, Secretary's Office:

I, William H. Roddle, secretary of state of the State of South Dakota, do hereby certify that the attached instrument of writing is a true and correct copy of a joint resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States for the passage of a free-homestead law as the same appears on file in this office, and of the whole thereof.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State of South Dakota, at Pierre, this 23d day of February, 1899.

WM. H. RODDLE, Secretary of State.
By PHILIP LAWRENCE, Assistant.

A joint resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States for the passage of the free-homestead law.

Be it resolved by the house of representatives (the senate concurring), The legislature of the State of South Dakota respectfully and earnestly petition and memorialize the Congress of the United States to enact a law granting to all settlers, under the homestead laws of the United States, upon the public lands, acquired by treaty or agreement from any of the Indian tribes, who have or shall hereafter reside upon the same in good faith for the period required by existing law, a patent for the same, upon the payment to the local land officers of the usual and customary fees, and without any other charge or payment whatsoever.

We believe the proposed legislation to be wise, just, and equitable, not only to the settlers, the sections immediately interested, but also to the nation at large. It is the concurrent judgment of the several political parties as expressed in their last national platforms. No good or sufficient reason has been shown why the pronounced policy of the Government for more than a generation should be reversed and an excessive hardship and burden imposed upon the later settlers.

The greater portion of our national domain was purchased at varying prices by the General Government, and the lands made largely subject to the homestead law. Great States and Territories were speedily peopled and marvelously developed under its munificent influence and inspiration. A policy that added so extensively to the development of so vast a region should not be abandoned without substantial reasons. The result, both in population and in the accumulation of such vast wealth in the regions benefited, is a constant source of strength and revenue to the whole nation.

The settlers upon these lands are entitled to the same consideration that the Government has shown to all its other settlers upon the public domain. There is no just reason why the law should place a mortgage upon these particular lands sufficient to reimburse the Government for its outlay in extinguishing the Indian title. If this is the correct and just policy, then the original homestead law can not be justified, for the Government was compelled to pay, more or less, for all its public domain.

Neither can the existing law be justified upon the ground that the relinquishment of the payment of the price required by the settlers would involve a loss to the Government. As an investor in land, considered solely for the immediate money return, the nation has always been a loser. In the year 1890 it lacked upward of $120,000,000 of being reimbursed for its outlays on the public lands and their management and disposition.

The Indians are the wards of the Government. It can not renounce its obligations toward them. It is unjust to transpose this duty by law and fix it largely upon the unfortunate settler, and compel him to pay for that which he heretofore been taken from the general Treasury. The settler, without payment for the land, is called upon to bear unnatural burdens and to assume unusual responsibilities.

The most desirable lands on these reservations were selected and awarded to the Indians under their allotments.

The settlers, in most cases, were obliged to take undesirable tracts, and are compelled to mingle with this foreign and largely helpless race. Local conditions in many of these new localities are crude and all the machinery of the community must be put into operation. The settlers are forced largely to assume the responsibility in behalf of the Government as its civilizing agents.

It is incumbent upon them to organize the local governments and bear practically all its burdens.

The lands allotted to the Indians are made absolutely exempt from taxation for a period of twenty-five years. The Indians, by act of the Government, are admitted to full citizenship, and they exercise this right without sharing practically any responsibility whatever. Highways are to be laid out, bridges constructed, schoolhouses erected, the schools maintained; outlays for county buildings have to be made, courts maintained, and court and county offices paid, with all the necessary adjuncts of a proper and safely regulated community. To bear these responsibilities in behalf of the Indians, who are alone the especial wards of the Government, would be far more than sufficient to compensate the United States for the free gift of the lands.

These responsibilities must necessarily be assumed by the settler if the Indian is to be made a safe and reliable citizen of the community and State. Some consideration should be shown by the Government to the hardy pioneers who have and now are undergoing great privations in the developing and upbuilding of the newer regions and cooperating and aiding in the solution of the Indian problem. The free gift of a homestead is but a pittance in return for the service that is directly rendered by the settlers to the General Government.

That the secretary of state is authorized and directed to transmit a copy of this resolution to the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States and to the President of the Senate.

And your memorialists will ever pray.

Indorsed:

A. G. SOMERS, Speaker of the House.

Attest:

WILLIS C. BOWER, Chief Clerk.

JOHN T. KEAN, President of the Senate.

Attest:

J. H. SCRIVEN, Secretary of the Senate.

I hereby certify that the within joint resolution originated in the house of representatives, and was known in the house files as house joint resolution No. 6.

WILLIS C. BOWER, Chief Clerk.

STATE OF SOUTH DAKOTA, Office Secretary of State, ss:

Filed February 16, 1899, at 5 o'clock p. m.

WM. H. RODDLE, Secretary of State,
By PHILIP LAWRENCE, Assistant.

The VICE-PRESIDENT presented a petition of the legislature of the Territory of Oklahoma, praying for the enactment of legislation to permit taxation, by the local government, of Indian allotments; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. MITCHELL presented a petition of the Humane Society of Beloit, Wis., praying for the passage of the bill (S. 1532) for the prohibition of vivisection in the public schools of the District of Columbia and in all the States and Territories; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented a petition of Local Union No. 287, Cigar Makers' International Union, of Marinette, Wis., and of Teamsters' Protective Union, No. 7058, American Federation of Labor, of Kenosha, Wis., praying for the passage of the eight-hour bill; which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented petitions of the congregations of the Gram Methodist Episcopal Church, of Marinette, the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Sparta, and the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Madison; of the Epworth League Convention of Milwaukee, and of William J. Corr, of Horicon, all in the State of Wisconsin, praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the sale of liquor in canteens of the Army and Navy and of Soldiers' Homes, and in immigrant stations and Government buildings; which were referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. GALLINGER presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Wilton, N. H., praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the transmission by mail or interstate commerce of pictures or descriptions of prize fights; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Wilton, N. H., praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit interstate gambling by telegraph, telephone, or otherwise; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Wilton, N. H., praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the sale of liquor in canteens of the Army and Navy and of Soldiers' Homes, and in immigrant stations and Government buildings; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. KENNEY presented a memorial of the Retail Liquor Dealers' Association of Wilmington, Del., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation placing additional restrictions on the retail liquor dealer having distilled liquors in jugs, bottles, etc.; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. McMILLAN presented a petition of Flat Rock Grange, No. 636, Patrons of Husbandry, of Flat Rock, Mich., praying for the passage of the pure-food bill; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. CARTER. I present a petition of the legislature of Montana, praying for the enactment of legislation to prevent Indians resident upon reservations in that State from leaving their reservations; which I ask may be read.

There being no objection the petition was read, as follows:

Joint memorial No. 1.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Whereas, owing to the fact that the Indians resident upon reservations within the State of Montana are allowed to and do habitually make a practice of leaving their reservations in large numbers and roaming over the country, and in and through settled and cultivated portions of the State, to the terror and annoyance of the people of Montana and to the wholesale and useless destruction of the game of the State, such Indians are a continual menace to the peace of the people of Montana and the preservation of the game of the State, and commit numerous depredations and violations of law and disturbances of families and communities, and uselessly slaughter and destroy every year great quantities of game; and

Whereas it is impracticable and often impossible for the civil authorities of Montana to prevent or punish such acts by such Indians and an attempt so to do would be attended by great and unjustifiable cost and expense: Therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, your memorialists, the legislative assembly of the State of Montana, respectfully represent that we ask the Congress of the United States to enact proper and effective legislation to prevent all of such acts by Indians in the State of Montana and to make it unlawful for Indians resident upon reservations in the State of Montana to ever at any time or for any purpose leave or be found off of their reservations, and to enact such measures as will stringently enforce such legislation. It is by us

Further resolved, That the secretary of state of Montana be, and he is hereby, ordered to furnish a copy of this memorial to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

A. E. SPRIGGS, President of the Senate.
HENRY C. STIFF, Speaker of the House.

Approved February 11, 1899, at 10.45 o'clock a. m.
ROBT. B. SMITH, Governor.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, State of Montana, ss:

I, T. S. HOGAN, secretary of state of the State of Montana, do hereby certify that the above is, with the exception of corrections in orthography and punctuation and insertion of omissions of substitute words in brackets, a true and correct copy of an act entitled "Joint memorial No. 1," enacted by the sixth session of the legislative assembly of the State of Montana and approved by Robert B. Smith, governor of said State, on the 11th day of February, 1899.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of said State.

Done at the city of Helena, the capital of said State, this 15th day of February, A. D. 1899.

[SEAL.] T. S. HOGAN, Secretary of State.

Mr. CARTER. I move that the petition lie on the table for the time being, for consideration in connection with the pending Army bill.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL. I present a petition of the legislature of Missouri, praying that an appropriation of $10,000 be made to the county of Dallas, in that State, for the erection of a bridge over the Niangua River at the point where it intersects the mail route; which I ask may be read and referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

There being no objection, the petition was read, and referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, as follows:

Whereas the United States mail route from Buffalo, in Dallas County, to Phillipsburg, in Laclede County, Mo., is intercepted by the Niangua River at a point on said United States mail route in sections 20 and 23, of township 34, range 19, Dallas County, Mo.; and

Whereas the stream at the point of intersection with the said mail route is a rapid and dangerous stream when swollen by rains, so as to obstruct the passage of United States mail for several days at a time; and

Whereas Buffalo is a distributing office for eight other offices, a great many persons are deprived from receiving their mail a large portion of the time: Therefore, be it

Resolved by the house of representatives (the senate concurring therein). That our Senators are hereby instructed and our Representatives in Congress requested to use all reasonable means in their representative capacity to secure an appropriation of $10,000 to the county of Dallas, in the State of Missouri, for the purpose of erecting a bridge over the said Niangua River at the point where the said stream intersects the mail route, as designated in the foregoing preamble.

That the secretary of state is hereby instructed to transmit to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress copies of this resolution.

Reported to the secretary of state February 11, 1899.

H. A. NEWMAN, Chief Clerk.

STATE OF MISSOURI, ss:

I, Alexander A. Lesueur, secretary of state of the State of Missouri, hereby certify that the foregoing is a full, true, and complete copy of a joint and concurrent resolution of the general assembly of the State of Missouri, as appears by comparing the same with the original roll of said resolution now on file, as the law directs, in this office.

In testimony whereof I hereunto set my hand and affix the great seal of the State of Missouri. Done at office in the city of Jefferson this 20th day of February, A. D. 1899.

[SEAL.]

A. A. LESUEUR, Secretary of State.

Mr. ALLEN presented a petition of the Humane Society of Chadron, Nebr., praying for the passage of Senate bill No. 1552, for the prohibition of vivisection in the public schools of the District of Columbia; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented the petitions of G. W. Perkins, president of the Cigar Makers' International Union of America, of Chicago, Ill.; of J. A. Cable, national secretary and treasurer of the Coopers' International Union of America, of Kansas City, Kans., and of the executive board of the United Hatters of North America, praying for the passage of the eight-hour bill; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. FAIRBANKS presented the petitions of William H. Holleman and 205 other citizens of Harrisville, Ind., praying for the establishment of postal savings banks depositories; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

He also presented the petitions of C. W. Kautz and 27 other citizens of Elkhart County, of D. D. Shoemaker and 65 other citizens of South Bend, of Louis Kirkwood and 63 other citizens of Fremont, and of T. Cope and 89 other citizens of Danville, all in the State of Indiana, praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the sale of liquor in canteens of the Army and Navy and of Soldiers' Homes, and in immigrant stations and Government buildings; which were referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. SEWELL presented a memorial of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of New Jersey, remonstrating against the seating of polygamists in the Congress of the United States; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a memorial of the congregation of the Baptist Church of Haddonfield, N. J., remonstrating against any appropriation being made for the maintenance of sectarian schools; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of the congregation of the First Baptist Church of Camden, N. J., praying that Congress reopen the question of the contract-school system and the whole subject of Indian education; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of the congregation of the Freehold Methodist Episcopal Church, of New Jersey, praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the sale of liquor in canteens of the Army and Navy and of Soldiers' Homes, and in immigrant stations and Government buildings; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. NELSON presented a petition of the legislature of Minnesota, praying that an appropriation be made for the construction of certain dams to prevent the overflowing of the farming lands in the Red River Valley; which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Concurrent resolution.

Whereas the legislature of Minnesota is in receipt of a memorial and concurrent resolution passed by the legislature of North Dakota urging the building of certain dams recommended by Government engineers to prevent overflowing of the farming lands in the Red River Valley: Be it

Resolved by the senate (the house concurring). That the Congress of the United States is earnestly and urgently requested to make the necessary appropriations in its river and harbor bill to have made a complete and proper survey necessary to the formulating of plans and specifications and determining the approximate expense of constructing such dams as are mentioned in the foregoing reports, and that the proper department be instructed to proceed with the work at as early a date as possible and report to Congress.

LYNDON A. SMITH,

President of the Senate.

A. N. DARE,

Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Mr. CULLOM presented a petition of the Society of Ethical Culture of Chicago, Ill., praying that the rights of self-government be conceded to the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented the petition of Barnhardt Bros. & Spindler, of Chicago, Ill., praying for the enactment of legislation to increase American shipping; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a memorial of Local Union No. 157, Cigar Makers' International Union, of Belvidere, Ill., remonstrating against the annexation of the Philippine Islands; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented the petition of Dr. Charles Davidson, treasurer of the West Side Hospital, of Chicago, Ill., praying for the enactment of legislation to authorize the employment of trained nurses in the Army; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented petitions of the faculty of the University of Illinois, Chicago; of the department of health of Chicago; of the State Grange of Illinois, Patrons of Husbandry, of Magnolia; of the Retail Merchants' Association of Peoria, and of the faculty of the University of Chicago, all in the State of Illinois, praying for the passage of the pure-food bill; which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented petitions of the Illinois Canning Company, of Hoopston; of the Glucose Sugar Refining Company, of Chicago; of the Sparks Milling Company, of Alton, and of the J. C. Grant Chemical Company, of Chicago, all in the State of Illinois, praying for the enactment of legislation providing more efficient quarantine regulations; which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented petitions of the Trades and Labor Assembly of Moline; of the American Federation of Labor, of Champaign; of the Trades and Labor Assembly of Quincy; of the congregation of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Chicago Heights; of Typographical Union No. 230, of Danville; of Local Lodge No. 2, Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers, of Kewanee; of G. W. Perkins, president of the Cigar Makers' International Union of America, of Chicago; of Local Union No. 47, Cigar Makers' International Union, of Quincy; of Progress Lodge, No. 10, Amalgamated Association of Iron, Tin, and Steel Workers, of Pullman; of Lodge No. 195, Brotherhood of Boiler Makers and Iron Ship Builders, of Kewanee; of Local Union No. 416, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, of Chicago; of the Twelfth Ward Labor Club, of Chicago; of Local Lodge No. 24, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, of Galesburg; of John B. Lennon, general secretary of the Journeymen Tailors' Union of America, of Bloomington; of the Trades Council of the American Federation of Labor, of Elgin; of the congregation of the Prospect Street Congregational Church, of Elgin; of B. K. Shadley, of Galesburg, all in the State of Illinois; of the Granite Cutters' National Union, of Baltimore, Md.; of the Journeymen Bakers and Confectioners' International Union, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; of the Brotherhood of Boiler Makers and Iron Ship Builders, of Kansas City, Kans., of the executive board of the United Hatters of North America, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and of the Coopers' International Union, of Kansas City, Kans., praying for the passage of the eight-hour bill; which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented petitions of John Crawford, of Manhattan; of R. R. Gordon and M. O. Gordon, of Biggsville; of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Hillsboro; of J. A. Easby, of Aurora; of J. W. Craig, of Jacksonville; of Rev. Watson Thatcher, of Chicago; of David D. Thompson, assistant editor of the Northwestern Christian Advocate, of Chicago; of Thomas H. Hanna, pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church of Monmouth; of George W. York, editor of the American Bee Journal, of Chicago; of T. W. Smith, of Pawnee; of A. H. Beat, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Hillsboro, and of sundry citizens, all in the State of Illinois, praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the sale of liquor in canteens of the Army and Navy and of Soldiers' Homes, and in immigrant stations and Government buildings; which were referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented the memorial of J. Milheanning, of Chicago, Ill., remonstrating against the seating of B. A. Roberts, Congressman-elect from Utah, and praying for the maintenance of the prohibition law in the Territory of Alaska and also for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the sale of liquor in canteens of the Army and Navy and of Soldiers' Homes, and in immigrant stations and Government buildings; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. SIMON presented a petition of the legislature of Oregon, praying that the Second Oregon Regiment be the first to be mustered out from the Volunteer Army; which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Senate joint resolution No. 13.

Whereas it has been stated that the United States Government intends to muster out the volunteer regiments in the field at Manila at an early date; and

Whereas the Second Oregon Regiment was the first to land in that country, and was the first regiment to start in the great expedition which left San Francisco on the 25th day of May last, and has been continuously in the Philippine Islands, performing service during that period; and

Whereas a large number of the men in said regiment have lucrative positions being held open for them; also dependent fathers and mothers who need their assistance at home, and a great many more who are in the midst of their school years, which they should be allowed to resume; and

Whereas these young men should be returned to their homes to take up their civil positions as soon as compatible with public interest, assist in the care of their parents, and continue their school work where they laid it down; and

Whereas it is not the desire nor the intention of this regiment to demand that they be mustered out, nor do they desire to be relieved from duty before the Government has decided to reduce the Volunteer Army, still as they were the first to land in the Philippine Islands it is proper and right that they should be mustered out in the same order in which they came into active service—that is to say, the first to arrive should be the first ordered home: Therefore, be it

Resolved by the senate (the house concurring). That we earnestly recommend to our delegation in Congress that they use every honorable means that this object may be accomplished; and be it further

Resolved. That the honorable Secretary of War be requested to cooperate in the wishes of the people of the State of Oregon so far as relates to this matter, and that the secretary of state is hereby requested to furnish each member of our delegation in Congress and the Secretary of War with copies of this resolution.

Adopted by the senate February 17, 1899.

T. C. TAYLOR, President of the Senate.

Concurred in by the house February 17, 1899.

E. V. CARTER, Speaker of the House.

Senate joint resolution No. 13.

B. L. MOORHEAD, Chief Clerk.

Filed February 18, 1899.

F. I. DUNBAR, Secretary of State.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, STATE OF OREGON,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE,
Salem, Oreg., February 21, 1899.

I, F. I. Dunbar, do hereby certify that I am the secretary of state of the State of Oregon and custodian of the seal of said State; that the foregoing transcript of senate joint resolution No. 13 has been by me compared with the original copy of the said resolution now on file in this office, and that it is a true and correct transcript thereof and the whole of said original resolution as appears on file in my office and custody.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed hereto the seal of the State of Oregon. Done at the capitol, at Salem, Oreg., this 21st day of February, A. D. 1899.

[SEAL.]

F. I. DUNBAR, Secretary of State.

Mr. SIMON presented a petition of the legislature of Oregon, praying for a modification of the alien law debarring foreigners from taking up mining claims or working them in the province of British Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House concurrent resolution No. 15.

Whereas the Parliament of British Columbia has recently passed an alien act debarring foreigners from taking up mining claims or working them in said province, to the great detriment of citizens of the United States: Be it

Resolved by the house (the senate concurring). That our Senators and Representatives in Congress are hereby instructed and requested to use every honorable effort to procure the modification of such law of British Columbia.

Adopted by the house February 9, 1899.

E. V. CARTER, Speaker of the House.

Concurred in by the senate February 17, 1899.

T. C. TAYLOR, President of the Senate.

House concurrent resolution No. 15.

A. C. JENNINGS, Chief Clerk.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, State of Oregon:

Received February 18, 1899, 10.15 a. m.

Filed 4.25 p. m., February 18, 1899.

F. I. DUNBAR, Secretary of State.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, STATE OF OREGON,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE,
Salem, Oreg., February 21, 1899.

I, F. I. Dunbar, do hereby certify that I am the secretary of state of the State of Oregon and custodian of the seal of said State; that the foregoing transcript of house concurrent resolution No. 15 has been by me compared with the original copy of the said resolution now on file in this office, and that it is a true and correct transcript thereof and the whole of said original resolution as appears on file in my office and custody.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed hereto the seal of the State of Oregon. Done at the capitol, at Salem, Oreg., this 21st day of February, A. D. 1899.

[SEAL.]

F. I. DUNBAR, Secretary of State.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I present a petition of the legislature of South Dakota, praying for the adoption of an amendment to the interstate-commerce law authorizing and empowering the Interstate Commerce Commission to fix reasonable and just rates on all interstate freight and passenger traffic, etc., which I ask may be read and referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

There being no objection, the petition was read and referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce, as follows:

A joint resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States to amend the law, known as the interstate-commerce act, authorizing and empowering the commission to fix reasonable and just rates on all interstate freight and passenger traffic; also for the proper enforcement and carrying out their orders and decisions therefor.

Be it resolved by the senate (the house of representatives concurring). That the legislature of the State of South Dakota respectfully and earnestly petition and memorialize the Congress of the United States to enact legislation amending the law, known as the interstate-commerce act, authorizing and empowering the commission to fix reasonable and just rates for the transportation of passengers and property on all interstate traffic; and also adequate and well-defined procedure for the proper enforcement and carrying into effect their decision and orders therefor issued in the premises. We believe the commission should be given adequate power to determine and fix rates within the purview of the law, and that their orders made therein should have the utmost conclusiveness consistent with the nature of their powers. This enlargement of the statute is imperatively needed to give the law efficiency and effectiveness, so that the object, purposes, and benefits originally designed by the legislation may be fully secured to the people. The commission not being clothed with the power to enforce its own orders, these should at least have that finality, together with their findings and record, that the courts could carry out and enforce the same, unless upon appeal thereto injustice or error in law or fact was disclosed.

The necessity for such legislation, we believe, is urgent, and is demanded by the highest considerations of every public interest in behalf of the producing as well as the consuming classes of our population. Every interest of our people is largely dependent upon the problem of transportation, and of its wise and just solution. No other legislation, we believe, would so speedily secure the desired result, or be so effective in promoting in a large degree the prosperity and well-being of the nation. The enormous powers possessed by those great corporations and the great public agencies they subserve, affecting practically the marketable value of all products of whatever character and the values and interests of every locality and individual, make it of the highest importance to every interest of the people and of the nation that all legitimate, efficient, and ample authority be exercised to hold the great agencies within the strictest, broadest, and most ample governmental control, that they may in the highest degree serve the purposes of their creation, and with exact justice to them and to the whole people. That the secretary of state is authorized and directed to transmit a copy of this resolution to the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States and to the President of the Senate. And your memorialists will ever pray.

A. G. SOMERS, Speaker of the House.

Attest:
WILLIS C. BOWER, Chief Clerk.

JOHN T. KEAN, President of the Senate.

Attest:
J. H. SCRIVEN, Secretary of the Senate.

STATE OF SOUTH DAKOTA,
Office Secretary of State, ss:

Filed February 7, 1899, at 2:35 o'clock p. m.

WILLIAM H. RODDLE, Secretary of State.

By PHILIP LAWRENCE, Assistant.

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE, PIERRE, S. DAK.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
State of South Dakota, Secretary's Office:

I, William H. Roddle, secretary of state of the State of South Dakota, do hereby certify that the attached instrument of writing is a true and correct copy of a joint resolution relating to the interstate-commerce act as the same appears on file in this office, and of the whole thereof.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State of South Dakota, at Pierre, this 10th day of February, 1899.

[SEAL.] WILLIAM H. RODDLE,
Secretary of State.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I present a petition of the legislature of South Dakota, praying for the enactment of legislation providing for the paying of taxes on Indian allotments; which I ask may be read and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

There being no objection, the petition was read, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, as follows:

A joint resolution memorializing Congress for the payment of taxes on Indian allotments.

Whereas the Congress of the United States has enacted a law by which Indians are permitted to take homestead allotments of lands, which shall be free from taxation for a period of twenty-five years; and

Whereas the Indians so taking lands in severalty become full citizens, having the right to vote at all elections and by their votes to lay the burden of taxes which they do not help to bear; and

Whereas this action of Congress has reduced the amount of taxable property in certain counties and districts in this State to such an extent that other property holders in those counties and districts are severely burdened by taxation, and the administration of justice greatly embarrassed: Therefore, be it

Resolved by the senate (the house of representatives concurring). That the legislature of South Dakota hereby petition and memorialize the Congress of the United States to enact a law for the payment by the United States of the taxes thus remitted, the taxes so to be paid to be fixed by the county commissioners of the county in which such lands are situated, subject to the approval of the State board of equalization; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of the memorial be forthwith transmitted by the president of the senate to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

A. G. SOMERS, Speaker of the House.

Attest:
WILLIS C. BOWER, Chief Clerk.

JOHN T. KEAN, President of the Senate.

Attest:
J. H. SCRIVEN, Secretary of the Senate.

STATE OF SOUTH DAKOTA,
Office of the Secretary of State, ss:

Filed February 7, 1899, at 2:35 o'clock p. m.

WILLIAM H. RODDLE, Secretary of State.

By PHILIP LAWRENCE, Assistant.

OFFICE OF SECRETARY OF STATE, PIERRE, S. DAK.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
State of South Dakota, Secretary's Office:

I, William H. Roddle, secretary of state of the State of South Dakota, do hereby certify that the attached instrument of writing is a true and correct copy of a joint resolution memorializing Congress for the payment of taxes in Indian allotments as the same appears on file in this office, and of the whole thereof.

In testimony whereof I hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State of South Dakota, at Pierre, this 10th day of February, 1899.

[SEAL.] WILLIAM H. RODDLE, Secretary of State.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I present a petition of the legislature of South Dakota, praying for the establishment of a safe, convenient, and beneficial plan for systematic saving through postal savings banks, which I ask may be read and referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

There being no objection, the petition was read, and referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, as follows:

A joint resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States for the enactment of a law providing a safe, convenient, and beneficial plan for systematic saving through postal savings banks.

Be it resolved by the house of representatives (the senate concurring). That the legislature of the State of South Dakota respectfully and earnestly petition and memorialize the Congress of the United States to enact a postal savings bank system, and provide for its conduct, control, and management.

We believe such a system would demonstrate its utility and prove a great benefit to the people at large as well as to the Government itself. Its creation and management by the Post-Office Department would not involve a large expenditure, and the completeness and security of its present management could be made available to reach every section of the country and every class of our population.

The pledge of the Government to repay investments would inspire confidence in the depositor and make it available especially for small savings. It would encourage economy, promote thrift and industry, attach a large element in closer and more interested sympathy with the National Government, and make available, we believe, a large sum for the use of the Treasury at a low and fair rate of interest.

The adoption and carrying out of the system by other governments has demonstrated its utility, and has proved not only to be of the highest service and benefit to the people, but to the State.

Such a system would be safe and economical, would be highly beneficial to all classes of our population, and would encourage systematic saving by the people.

That the secretary of state is authorized and directed to transmit a copy of this resolution to the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States and to the President of the Senate.

And your memorialists will ever pray.

A. G. SOMERS, Speaker of the House.

Attest:
WILLIS C. BOWER, Chief Clerk.

JOHN T. KEAN, President of the Senate.

Attest:
J. H. SCRIVEN, Secretary of the Senate.

STATE OF SOUTH DAKOTA,
Office Secretary of State, ss:

Filed February 7, 1899, at 2:35 o'clock p. m.

WM. H. RODDLE, Secretary of State.

By PHILIP LAWRENCE, Assistant.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
State of South Dakota, Secretary's Office:

I, William H. Roddle, secretary of state of the State of South Dakota, do hereby certify that the attached instrument of writing is a true and correct copy of a joint resolution relating to postal savings banks as the same appears of record in this office, and of the whole thereof.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State of South Dakota, at Pierre, this 10th day of February, 1899.

[SEAL.] WILLIAM H. RODDLE, Secretary of State.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, I wish to say in this connection that these three joint resolutions indicate that the legislature of South Dakota is not in harmony with the national Republican party, although the legislature apparently and nominally have a very large Republican majority.

They ask, in the first place, for an amendment of the interstate-commerce law by which the Interstate Commerce Commissioners shall have full power to regulate rates for carrying passengers and freight, with full power to enforce the law and impose penalties, etc., giving the Interstate Commerce Commission absolute control over the railroads of the country.

As everyone knows who knows anything about the standing of the Republican party nationally, this is Populistic doctrine and absolutely opposed to the position of the Republican party upon this subject. It is socialism in opposition to imperialism and plutocracy, which is the doctrine of the Republican party nationally to-day.

The second resolution presented to Congress by the legislature of South Dakota asks for a system of savings banks. This resolution was passed by a legislature having a very large majority apparently, nominally, of Republicans, and yet it adopts the Populist doctrine of national postal savings banks in contradistinction to the doctrine of the Republican party, which is opposed to postal savings banks.

The republic of Hawaii, lately absorbed into this country after this country had ceased to care for the republican principles upon which it was founded, had a system of postal savings banks, but the bill brought in by a Republican commission who went down there to confer upon those people the benefits of a foreign government reports in favor of repealing the law and reimbursing the depositors, and that bill is pending before this body. Repeated efforts have met with sturdy, united Republican opposition in this body and in the other against the system of postal savings banks, and yet the legislature of South Dakota insists upon the adoption of a system of postal savings banks throughout the United States.

While it would apparently seem that the State of South Dakota had come in line again with the old party, these resolutions clearly show that the people of South Dakota are preparing almost unanimously to leave the Republican party on every principle upon which it is now founded. In fact, the Republicans of South Dakota, if the legislature represent the sentiment of the State, are about to go back to the principles of the Republican party that existed before the campaign of 1896, and thus cease to support the national policy of that party.

The third resolution asks Congress to impose taxes upon Indian allotments, which are exempt from taxation for twenty-five years. That bill has passed this Senate twice, but a Republican House of Representatives refuses to enact it because the Republican party nationally are opposed to any relief which could be given to the people who have acquired homesteads upon the unoccupied lands in the West.

The original doctrine of the Republican party was free homes. It was planted upon that platform in 1860, when it won its great victories; but after the campaign of 1896 it abandoned that position and is now the opponent of free homes, the opponent of relief to the people who occupied the prairies and who conquered the wilderness. To-day the Republican party is opposed to free homes and to an income tax and is in favor of laying all the burdens upon the people, upon consumption, upon the individual, and allowing the wealth of the country to escape the burdens of government.

It has seemed to me that these three remarkable resolutions passed by a Republican legislature were an indication of the drift of the Republican sentiment in the West, which, I believe, in the next campaign will most certainly condemn the policy of expansion, the policy of imperialism, the policy of plutocracy, which has become the national policy of the Republican party.

KRUPP ARMOR.

Mr. HALE. I present a communication from Captain O'Neil, Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance, Navy Department, transmitting a memorandum concerning Krupp armor. I move that the communication and accompanying memorandum be printed as a document.

The motion was agreed to.

FEDERAL COURTS.

Mr. HOAR. I present a communication from Edmund Wetmore, of New York City, on behalf of the American Bar Association, relative to the bill (S. 5584) in relation to the courts of the United States. I move that the communication be printed as a document.

The motion was agreed to.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. CULLOM submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11266) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 3, 4, 10, 12, 23, 28, and 29.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 11, 14, 15, 19, 20, 25, 26, 27, and 31, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 12, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter stricken out by said amendment insert the following: "total amount for salaries, $338,340;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 13, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter stricken out and inserted by said amendment insert the following: "$26,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 16, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: On page 13, line 7 of the bill, strike out the words "may in his discretion" and insert in lieu thereof the word "shall;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 17, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out the matter inserted by said amendment, and on page 13, lines 9 and 10 of the bill, strike out the words "adulterated or otherwise;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 21, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Strike out the matter inserted by said amendment, and on page 16, line 13 of the bill strike out the period and the word "The," and insert in lieu thereof the following: ", and the," and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 22, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: On page 16, line 22 of the bill, after the word "advisable," insert the following: ", $12,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 24, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: On page 17, line 11 of the bill, strike out the word "fifteen" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twelve;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 30, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment insert "$1,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

S. M. CULLOM,

R. F. PETTIGREW,

Managers on the part of the Senate.

J. W. WADSWORTH,

V. WARNER,

JOHN S. WILLIAMS,

Managers on the part of the House.

The report was agreed to.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. ALLISON. I submit the report of the conferees on the Indian appropriation bill and ask for its consideration.

Mr. CHANDLER. I ask the Senator from Iowa to wait until morning business is concluded.

Mr. ALLISON. This is morning business.

Mr. CHANDLER. I know it is; but I have waited here quite a while for an opportunity to present some routine business.

Mr. ALLISON. I will yield to the Senator for morning business, though I may say that I regard a conference report on an appropriation bill, which requires consideration in the other House and enrollment, as about the most important business that can be considered by the Senate.

Mr. CHANDLER. It is not only morning business and very important, but it has precedence over everything else. I will wait until the conference report is disposed of.

Mr. ALLISON submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11217) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 1, 6, 8, 15, 26, 28, 29, 42, 43, 50, 59, 60, 65, 66, and 67.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 2, 3, 4, 5, 9, 10, 11, 13, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 23, 24, 25, 27, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 41, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 62, 63, and 64, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 7, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following:

"The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to cause an investigation by an Indian inspector and a special Indian agent of the alleged cutting of green timber under contracts for cutting 'dead and down,' on the Chippewa ceded and diminished reservations in the State of Minnesota, and also whether the present plan of estimating and examining timber on said lands and the sale thereof is the best that can be devised for protection of the interests of said Indians; and also, in his discretion, to suspend the further estimating, appraising, examining, and cutting of timber and the sale of the same, and also suspend the sale of the lands in said reservation."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 12, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out, in line 2 of said amendment, the word "shall" and insert in lieu thereof the following: "may, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 14, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out, in line 2 of said amendment, the word "shall" and insert in lieu thereof the following: "may, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 22, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Add, after the word "dollars," at the end of the amended paragraph, the following: ", to be available until expended;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 31, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following:

"That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized, in his discretion, to grant rights of way for the construction and maintenance of dams, ditches, and canals on or through the Uintah Indian Reservation in Utah, for the purpose of diverting and appropriating the waters of the streams in said reservation for useful purposes: Provided, That all such grants shall be subject at all times to the paramount rights of the Indians on said reservation to so much of said waters as may have been appropriated, or may hereafter be appropriated or needed by them for agricultural and domestic purposes; and it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Interior to prescribe such rules and regulations as he may deem necessary to secure to the Indians the quantity of water needed for their present and prospective wants, and to otherwise protect the rights and interests of the Indians and the Indian service."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 34, and agree to the same with amendments as follows: In line 2 of said amendment strike out the word "forty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "thirty;" and in the last line of said amendment strike out the word "fifty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "forty-five;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 35, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following:

"For the erection of suitable buildings, and for fencing, water supply, means of locomotion, and other things necessary to properly establish and conduct an agency at Leech Lake, Minnesota, $15,000, to be immediately available."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 37, and agree to the same with amendments as follows: Strike out lines 1 to 4, inclusive, of said amendment, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"That the provision in the Indian appropriation act approved July 1, 1898, relating to a water supply for irrigation purposes, to be used on a portion of the reservation of the Southern Utes in Colorado, is hereby continued in force for and during the fiscal year 1900, and is hereby amended so as to read as follows: Insert after the word 'upon,' in line 18 of said amendment, the word 'the;' and insert after the word 'land,' in line 19 of said amendment, the words 'to be;' and transfer said amendment and insert the same on page 43 of the bill, immediately preceding line 14 on said page."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 39, and agree to the same with amendments as follows: Strike out, in line 1 of said amendment, the word "and," and insert in lieu thereof "a," and add, after the word "Alaska," in line 19, page 49, of the bill, the following: ", and of which amount the sum of $25,000 shall be used for the erection of a girls' dormitory, kitchen, dining room, and hospital, and for necessary repairs and improvements, for the Fort Lewis Indian School, Colorado, to be immediately available;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 40, and agree to the same with amendments as follows: In line 8 of said amendment, strike out the word "twenty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "fifteen," and in line 11, after the word "schools," insert the following: ", this being the final appropriation for sectarian schools;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 51, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out the matter inserted by said amendment, and strike out, on page 49 of the bill, in lines 22 and 23, the words "for general repairs and improvements, $2,000," and insert in lieu thereof the following: "for erection of additional buildings, and for general repairs and improvements, $0,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 52, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$3,550;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 61, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Insert, after the word "Interior," in line 3 of said amendment, the words "in his discretion;" and the Senate agree to the same.

W. B. ALLISON,

GEORGE C. PERKINS,

F. M. COCKRELL,

Managers on the part of the Senate.

J. S. SHERMAN,

CHARLES CURTIS,

Managers on the part of the House.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the report of the committee of conference.

Mr. MANTLE. I wish to ask the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations what disposition was made of the amendment relating to the Northern Cheyenne Indian Reservation?

Mr. ALLISON. The Senate conferees recommend that the Senate recede from that amendment. The House conferees would not agree to placing any of these treaties upon this appropriation bill. I will say to the Senator from Montana that the chairman of the House Committee on Indian Affairs gave reasonable assurance that that matter would be disposed of in the House before final adjournment. He recognizes the fact that the treaty ought to be ratified, but the House conferees were not willing to ratify it on the appropriation bill.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I notice that the report is a disagreement to the Senate amendment ratifying the agreement between the Lower Brule and Rosebud Indians in South Dakota. This is an agreement between two Indian tribes. There was a long-continued controversy resulting in a compromise made by General Brooke in 1889 when the Sioux treaty was made. The Lower Brule Indians were promised lands in severalty upon the Rosebud Reservation when they signed the treaty of 1889, but instead of giving them lands in severalty, as General Brooke had promised, the Administration took them by force and moved them to a locality about 60 miles distant.

Thirty-two of those Indians died while living in tents during the following winter after their removal. Finally, by an act of Congress, as an amendment upon an appropriation bill, they were permitted to go back to the Rosebud Reservation and take lands in severalty. Over half of the entire tribe did return to their old homes, where they had houses and cultivated land.

This agreement was a ratification of an understanding afterwards arrived at between the two tribes, the Rosebud Indians and the Lower Brules, for they are kindred people, which adjusted all their difficulties, gave them a good title to the lands on the Rosebud Reservation, and ceded to the Government a like number of acres of land on the reservation which had been reserved for the Lower Brule Indians, but never accepted by them.

The status of those Indians without the ratification of this agreement is uncertain, and there is great unrest and uneasiness among them because of its not being ratified by the Government. The Senate passed a separate bill some weeks ago ratifying the agreement, but as the other House had not acted upon it we placed it upon this bill. I very much regret to see that it is not concurred in and thereby will not become a law.

Mr. SHOUP. I desire to inquire of the chairman of the committee if the Senate amendment ratifying the agreement with the Fort Hall Indians has also been stricken from the bill?

Mr. ALLISON. The three treaty agreements placed upon the bill by the Senate have all been receded from; that is, the conferees on the part of the Senate ask the Senate to recede from them, the House conferees refusing to agree to the ratification of any of them on this appropriation bill.

The report was agreed to.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. WARREN, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6616) to remove the charge of desertion against John Phelon, deceased, reported it without amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7092) for the relief of George Gregg, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the amendment submitted by himself February 25, 1899, proposing to appropriate $360,000 toward the construction of a military post at or near the town of Sheridan, Wyo., on lands now owned by the United States, etc., intended to be proposed to the sundry civil appropriation bill, reported favorably thereon, and moved that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and printed; which was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON, from the Committee on Appropriations, to whom was referred the amendment submitted by Mr. FORAKER February 18, 1899, authorizing the Commissioner of the General Land Office to examine cases, and, if satisfactory, to thereupon issue a certificate to any soldier, sailor, his widow, or minor children, or to his assignee, certifying to the right in such soldier, sailor, his widow, or minor children, or his assignee, to make such additional homestead entry and have patent issued to him on the location of said certified claim, intended to be proposed to the sundry civil appropriation bill, asked to be discharged from its further consideration, and that it be referred to the Committee on Public Lands, which was agreed to.

Mr. SHOUP, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7632) to remove charge of desertion from the military record of Robert Flower, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. CHANDLER, from the Committee on Privileges and Elections, reported an amendment proposing to pay $3,000 to Martha E. Bowden and Zenobia Porter, the heirs of Lemuel J. Bowden, formerly a Senator from the State of Virginia, intended to be proposed to the general deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

He also, from the same committee, reported an amendment proposing to pay $2,500 to Lafayette Grover, the amount expended by him in defending his title to a seat in the Senate from the State of Oregon, intended to be proposed to the general deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. MITCHELL, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 3190) granting an honorable discharge to John H. Smith, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. PASCO, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 2419) for the relief of Frank Dunn, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. RAWLINS, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 4894) to pay certain judgments against John C. Bates and Jonathan A. Yeckley, captain and first lieutenant in the United States Army, for acts done by them under orders of their superior officers, reported it without amendment.

MICHAEL BAKER.

Mr. PLATT of New York. I move that the Committee on Military Affairs be discharged from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 3388) to remove the charge of desertion from the record of Michael Baker, and that it be referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. PLATT of New York subsequently, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 3388) to remove the charge of desertion from the record of Michael Baker, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

COMMERCIAL RELATIONS.

Mr. LODGE, from the Committee on Printing, to whom was referred the following concurrent resolution from the House of Representatives, reported it without amendment; and it was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring). That the Public Printer be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to print for distribution by the Department of State 5,000 copies of Commercial Relations, 1898, and (in separate form) 10,000 copies of the Review of the World's Commerce, etc., being part of said Commercial Relations.

STATISTICAL ABSTRACT OF THE UNITED STATES.

Mr. LODGE, from the Committee on Printing, to whom was referred the following concurrent resolution from the House of Representatives, reported it without amendment; and it was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring). That there be printed 12,000 additional copies of the Statistical Abstract of the United States for the year 1898, prepared by the Bureau of Statistics, Treasury Department, 3,000 copies for the Senate, 6,000 for the House of Representatives, and 3,000 for the Bureau of Statistics, Treasury Department.

REPORT ON PRODUCTION OF GOLD AND SILVER.

Mr. LODGE, from the Committee on Printing, to whom was referred the following concurrent resolution from the House of Representatives, reported it without amendment:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring). That there be printed and bound in cloth, for the use of the Director of the Mint, 3,000 extra copies of the Report on the Production of Gold and Silver for the Calendar Year 1897.

The Senate, by unanimous consent, proceeded to consider the concurrent resolution.

Mr. COCKRELL. I should like to ask the Senator from Massachusetts why copies are provided only for the Director of the Mint?

Mr. LODGE. These additional copies are for the Director of the Mint. It is a House resolution.

Mr. COCKRELL. I can not help it. That does not make it perfect.

Mr. LODGE. We have already had our usual number. This is simply to give the Director of the Mint some extra copies for further distribution.

Mr. COCKRELL. The copies for the use of the Senate have already been authorized?

Mr. LODGE. They have already been authorized. These are additional copies.

The concurrent resolution was agreed to.

ORPHA W. REYNOLDS.

Mr. GALLINGER. I am directed by the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 5591) granting an increase of pension to Orpha W. Reynolds, to report it favorably, without amendment. I call the attention of the senior Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN] to this matter.

Mr. MORGAN. I ask that the bill may be put upon its passage.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Orpha W. Reynolds, widow of Robert W. Reynolds, late captain in the First Iowa Cavalry (independent regiment), and to pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ANNIE B. GOODRICH.

Mr. PRITCHARD. I am directed by the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 4905) to increase the pension of Annie B. Goodrich, widow of Robert W. Reynolds, late captain in the First Iowa Cavalry (independent regiment), and to pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

Mr. TURLEY. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill.

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The amendment of the Committee on Pensions was, in line 7, before the word "dollars," to strike out "twenty-five" and insert "fifteen;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, directed to increase the pension of Annie B. Goodrich, widow of Amos B. Goodrich, who served as a second lieutenant in Company A, Twentieth Massachusetts Volunteers, in the war of the rebellion, and that she be paid a pension of $15 a month.

Mr. COCKRELL. Is that the amount provided by law?

Mr. PRITCHARD. It is the amount which the husband of the widow would have been entitled to as a lieutenant.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WESTERN JUDICIAL DISTRICT OF TEXAS.

Mr. CHILTON. I am instructed by the Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5497) to provide for terms of the circuit and district courts of the western judicial district of the State of Texas to be held at the city of Laredo, and for other purposes, to report it favorably. It is very important that the bill should be passed, and I ask unanimous consent for its consideration at this time. It will take but a moment.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. McMILLAN introduced a bill (S. 5582) to authorize the Maryland Suburban Railway Company, of Maryland, to extend its line of road into and within the District of Columbia; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. ALLEN introduced a bill (S. 5583) to incorporate the National White Cross of America, and for other purposes; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. HOAR. I ask leave to introduce a bill for reference to the Committee on the Judiciary. The bill relates to a very important subject, the reconstruction of the district and circuit courts of the United States, and their relation to each other. It has been drawn by a committee of the American Bar Association, who had the matter before them for nearly a year. I wish to invite the attention of members of the Senate to the bill during the recess.

The bill (S. 5584) in relation to the courts of the United States was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. HOAR. I move that a letter relative to the subject, from the chairman of the committee of the American Bar Association, be printed as a document.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. GEAR introduced a bill (S. 5585) to pay Samuel Lee for services in Forty-seventh Congress; which was read twice by its title, and, with an accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

Mr. BACON introduced a bill (S. 5586) to create the northwestern division of the northern district of Georgia for judicial purposes, and to fix the time and place for holding court therein; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. FRYE introduced a joint resolution (S. R. 258) to authorize the appointment of Robert H. Dunlap a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. CHANDLER. I submit an amendment intended to be proposed to the naval appropriation bill, which I ask may be read and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

The proposed amendment was read, and referred to the Committee on Appropriations, as follows:

Amendment intended to be proposed by Mr. CHANDLER to the Navy appropriation bill (H. R. 12122).

Amend the last section by adding at the end of line 3, page 50, the following: "Provided also, That the President is authorized to appoint, by selection and promotion, two vice-admirals of the Navy, who shall not be placed upon the retired list until eight years after the passage of this act, except upon their own application; and whenever either of such offices shall be vacated, by death or otherwise, the office shall cease to exist."

Mr. SIMON submitted an amendment providing in the increase of the Navy that one, and not more than one, of the protected cruisers shall be built on or near the coast of the Pacific Ocean or in the waters connecting therewith, intended to be proposed by him to the naval appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. McMILLAN submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $5,000 to enable the Secretary of the Navy to erect at some suitable place in Arlington Cemetery a monument to Charles Vernon Gridley, late captain, United States Navy, commander of the flagship Olympia in the Asiatic Squadron in the battle of Manila Bay, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the naval appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. TILLMAN submitted an amendment appropriating $4,000,000 for the erection of suitable buildings and the purchase of suitable machinery and other material necessary for the establishment and maintenance of a plant for furnishing armor plate for the use of the Navy, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the naval appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. FRYE submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $350,000 for the construction of a repair steamer and for spare cable, intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. DANIEL submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $5,000 to pay the legal representatives of the late James Crooks and William Crooks, citizens of the United States and of Canada, the same being the value of a vessel called the Lord Nelson, illegally seized by Lieutenant Woolsey, of the United States Navy, on Lake Ontario, June 5, 1812, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. PERKINS submitted an amendment authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to pay, out of the appropriation to the Union Iron Works, of San Francisco, Cal., $3,680.31, being the amount expended by that company over and above the sum received by it for certain armor furnished for the United States steamship Wisconsin, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the naval appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. FAIRBANKS submitted an amendment authorizing the President, upon the application of the governor of any State having seacoast line or bordering on the Great Lakes, to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to furnish to one well-established military school in that State, desiring to afford its cadets instruction in elementary seamanship, one fully equipped man-of-war's cutter for every twenty cadets in actual attendance, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the naval appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

VIVISECTION IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

On motion of Mr. GALLINGER, it was Ordered, That 2,000 copies of Senate Document No. 75, Fifty-fifth Congress, third session, being a statement of Dr. Albert Leffingwell, of New York, containing a critical examination of various objections to Senate bill No. 1083 and other papers and facts relating to the subject of vivisection, be printed for the use of the Senate.

USE OF ROTUNDA OF CAPITOL.

Mr. McMILLAN submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Rules, and ordered to be printed:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring). That the use of the Rotunda and adjacent rooms be granted to the ladies of the George Washington Memorial Association on the first Saturday in May, to hold a colonial reception and bazaar, the object being to raise a fund to aid in the erection of an administration building for a national university at Washington, D. C.

AWARDS OF THE WORLD'S COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION.

Mr. MASON submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Printing, and ordered to be printed:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring). That there be printed 10,000 copies of the Report of the Jury of Awards of the World's Columbian Exposition, held in Chicago in 1893, for the use of Congress, to be divided, 6,000 for the House and 4,000 for the Senate.

ELIZABETH V. LITZENBERG.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I wish to enter a motion to reconsider the vote of the Senate on the passage of the bill (H. R. 4838) granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth V. Litzenberg, and I move that the Secretary be directed to request the House of Representatives to return the bill to the Senate. The bill was returned by the President on Saturday last, in compliance with a resolution of the Senate. I am informed that the enrolled bill is not susceptible of amendment in that form, and it is necessary to recall the original engrossed bill from the House in order to make a few necessary corrections by way of amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The motion to reconsider will be entered. The Senator from New Hampshire moves that the House of Representatives be requested to return the bill to the Senate.

The motion was agreed to.

MEMORIAL ADDRESSES ON THE LATE REPRESENTATIVE LOVE.

Mr. MONEY. Mr. President, I wish to give notice that on next Thursday, at some hour when the regular business will permit, I shall ask the Senate to lay aside its usual business in order that Senators may pay their tribute of respect to the memory of WILLIAM FRANKLIN LOVE, late a Representative from the State of Mississippi in the Congress of the United States.

EXTENSION OF ANTI-CONTRACT LABOR LAWS TO HAWAII.

Mr. FAIRBANKS. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 11247) to extend the anti-contract labor laws of the United States to Hawaii.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. President, I think I must object. We are through with the regular morning business, I believe?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Morning business is not yet completed; but the Senator from Indiana [Mr. FAIRBANKS] asks unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill named by him.

Mr. HAWLEY. Is it the immigration bill?

Mr. FAIRBANKS. The request is for unanimous consent to consider the bill for the extension of the anti-contract labor laws to Hawaii.

Mr. STEWART. I should like to inquire, before I either assent or dissent to the request of the Senator, if the bill proposes to extend the customs and internal revenue laws over Hawaii? I think they ought to go together.

Mr. FAIRBANKS. There is no purpose in the bill to extend any laws over Hawaii except the immigration, the contract-labor laws, and the Chinese-exclusion acts.

Mr. STEWART. I think they all ought to go together.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill named by the Senator from Indiana [Mr. FAIRBANKS]?

Mr. HAWLEY. I must object. I am instructed to press at the earliest possible moment the consideration of the Army bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made.

Mr. FAIRBANKS. Then I wish to give notice that I will move to take up the bill to extend the anti-contract labor laws of the United States to Hawaii immediately after disposition is made of the Army bill.

Mr. ALLISON. Not to displace appropriation bills, I trust.

Mr. FAIRBANKS. No.

Mr. STEWART. I will also give notice that if the bill of the Senator from Indiana is taken up, I will offer as an amendment the House bill to extend the customs and internal-revenue laws over Hawaii.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Do I understand the Senator from Indiana simply gives notice of his intention to call up that bill?

Mr. FAIRBANKS. That is all.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Indiana has given notice of his intention to move to take up the bill hereafter.

Mr. PETTIGREW. That is one of the most important matters before the Senate, and I hope a short time will be given to its consideration. I also hope the Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART] will not press his motion, because if he does so it will result in a debate which will last until after the 4th of March.

The bill moved by the Senator from Indiana ought to pass, because there have been 10,000 contract laborers imported into Hawaii since our flag went up there, and some 50 Europeans have been imprisoned because they refused to labor, and they are subject to be whipped and punished like slaves upon the plantations there. They have been imprisoned and made to work on the streets under the flag of the United States.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President, I desire to concur in the remarks of the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW].

HOUSE BILL REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. 7093) granting an increase of pension to William R. Warden was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. RROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11868) to provide for the acquiring of rights of way by railroad companies through Indian reservations, Indian lands, and Indian allotments, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House insists upon its amendment to the joint resolution (S. R. 189) to promote the relocation of certain tracks of the City and Suburban Railway Company of the District of Columbia disagreed to by the Senate, agrees to the conference asked for by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. BABCOCK, Mr. CURTIS of Iowa, and Mr. RICHARDSON managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message further announced that the House had passed a joint resolution (H. Res. 339) authorizing the President to appoint Osborne W. Deignan a naval cadet at Annapolis, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills, and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President:

A bill (S. 5427) granting to the Clearwater Short Line Railway Company a right of way through the Nez Perces Indian lands in Idaho;

A bill (S. 5514) to amend an act entitled, "An act to grant the right of way through the Indian Territory to the Denison, Bonham and New Orleans Railway Company for the purpose of constructing a railway, and for other purposes," approved March 28, 1898, and to vest in the Denison, Bonham and Gulf Railway Company all the rights and privileges and franchises therein granted to said first-named company;

A bill (H. R. 321) for the relief of the Berdan Firearms Manufacturing Company;

A bill (H. R. 1136) for the punishment of seduction in the District of Columbia;

A bill (H. R. 1800) to reimburse George W. McKinsey, postmaster at Kokomo, Ind., for money paid out by him as said postmaster;

A bill (H. R. 3261) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of George L. Plummer;

A bill (H. R. 3297) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of William Henry Woodward;

A bill (H. R. 5323) granting a pension to Patrick O'Shea;

A bill (H. R. 5740) to remove the charge of desertion against William Britton;

A bill (H. R. 6248) to provide for the disposition of assessment certificates of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 6930) for the relief of and to correct record of Jacob Covert;

A bill (H. R. 7860) to amend an act entitled "An act for the relief of Brig. Gen. John R. Brooke, United States Army," approved March 30, 1894;

A bill (H. R. 8739) to authorize a resurvey of certain lands in Cheyenne County, in the State of Nebraska, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 9281) authorizing the construction of three bridges across the Conecuh River, a navigable stream, in Escambia County, Ala.;

A bill (H. R. 11023) to regulate the height of buildings in the District of Columbia;

A bill (H. R. 11024) to authorize the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to remove dangerous or unsafe buildings and parts thereof, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 11570) to cause the removal of weeds from lands in the city of Washington, D. C., and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 11677) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Monongahela River at Morgantown, in the State of West Virginia;

A bill (H. R. 11733) to prevent the sale of intoxicating liquors on Sunday in the District of Columbia; and

A bill (H. R. 11771) to amend section 1 of an act to provide for the entry of lands in Greer County, Okla., to give preference right to settlers, and for other purposes.

OSBORNE W. DEIGNAN.

Mr. GEAR. I ask that the joint resolution just received from the House of Representatives be taken up and acted on. It is the same as the joint resolution which passed the Senate, but the House preferred to pass its own joint resolution.

The joint resolution (H. Res. 339) authorizing the President of the United States to appoint Osborne W. Deignan a naval cadet at Annapolis was read the first time by its title and the second time at length.

There being no objection, the joint resolution was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had on the 25th instant approved and signed the following acts:

An act (S. 4630) granting an increase of pension to Chauncey A. Bradley;

An act (S. 4690) for the relief of certain homestead settlers in Florida;

An act (S. 4775) granting a pension to Flora Stanton Kalk;

An act (S. 4808) authorizing the President to appoint additional cadets at large at the United States Naval Academy;

An act (S. 4854) granting a pension to Isom Gibson;

An act (S. 4982) granting an increase of pension to Amanda T. Jumper; and

An act (S. 5533) to permit volunteer regiments to retain their colors.

RIGHTS OF WAY THROUGH INDIAN LANDS.

Mr. PETTIGREW submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill (H. R. 11668) to provide for the acquiring of rights of way by railroad companies through Indian reservations, Indian lands, and Indian allotments, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, 7, 9, 10, 11, and 12, and agree to the same.

That the Senate recede from its amendment numbered 13.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 3, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: After the word "heard," in line 4, strike out the words: "Provided further, That when a right of way has been heretofore or shall hereafter be granted, no parallel right of way within 10 miles on either side shall be granted by the Secretary of the Interior unless in his opinion the public interest will be promoted thereby," and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Provided further, That where a railroad has heretofore been constructed, or is in actual course of construction, no parallel right of way within 10 miles on either side shall be granted by the Secretary of the Interior unless, in his opinion, public interest will be promoted thereby;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 8, and agree to the same with amendments as follows:

In lieu of the words "President of the United States," in line 10, insert the words "Secretary of the Interior." In lieu of the words "pay double," in line 29, insert the word "deposit." In lieu of the word "into," in line 30, insert the words "with the;" and the Senate agree to the same.

O. H. PLATT,
R. F. PETTIGREW,
Managers on the part of the Senate.
CHARLES CURTIS,
JOHN F. LACEY,
Managers on the part of the House.

The report was agreed to.

REORGANIZATION OF THE ARMY.

Mr. HAWLEY. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of what is known as the Army bill.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 5578) for increasing the efficiency of the Army of the United States, and for other purposes.

Mr. BATE. Mr. President, I feel more than ordinary responsibility with corresponding embarrassment in discussing the pending bill. It is, perhaps, the most important measure we have had before this Congress, and perhaps none more important has been presented to any Congress in recent years. I regard it as another step in the direction of a change in the theory and form of our Government. It is in keeping with that step which was accomplished some eight or ten months since when we annexed Hawaii by resolution instead of by the usual and constitutional mode of treaty, in open violation of the Monroe doctrine, and established a new mode of procedure in beginning the acquisition of territory beyond the North American continent, and encouraging territorial conquest beyond the seas—a policy hitherto unknown in the history of this Government.

A bill has been presented here for the purpose of raising a regular army of 100,000 men in a time of peace. It is certainly anomalous in that respect, and to some extent it has shocked the public sentiment, although it follows immediately upon the heels of a war which has been sharp and quick, but of successful termination. We really should have perfect peace in the land, Mr. President, if we have not, and our efforts should be to reduce the Army of our country instead of enlarging it.

It is known that a year ago we only had an army of 25,000 men, just previous to the war with Spain, when two regiments of artillery were authorized to be organized, which made 27,000, and that increase was made for a special purpose. That purpose was to man the guns and have the forts upon our seacoasts defended. Only two regiments, however, were called for as the necessary additional force for that purpose. That was about a year ago. Now it turns out that a bill has been introduced which calls for fifteen or twenty thousand men for that same home purpose, when we thought at the time we gave the authorization that two regiments would be amply sufficient. The head of the Army then—only a year ago—said that number would be sufficient. The same head of the Army, however, in his recent testimony before the Committee on Military Affairs has exceeded vastly that number, and has asked for something like 20,000 men for the same purpose.

He has multiplied the number of points for constructing defenses on the oceans and the Gulf from about 32 to 144. This militarism, Mr. President, seems to be growing rapidly, and to a degree which is alarming to the plain honest people and taxpayers of this country. Now, in time of peace, a bill for reorganizing the Army, known as the Hull bill, has come from the other end of this Capitol and was considered by the Committee on Military Affairs, resulting in such difference of opinion as to fail of a favorable report. The opposition was of such a character as to constrain the bringing before the Senate a new bill reorganizing the Army and asking that it be 100,000 strong, and we have that bill before us now for consideration, and it is sought to have it passed hurriedly, when the near close of this session of Congress forbids that calm and close consideration which a bill of its nature and importance requires.

I object to the bill, Mr. President, for various reasons. In the first place, the proposed increase of the Army is too large; I think it more than twice as large as the necessities of the country require. It calls for 100,000 regular troops, a part of them mis-called volunteers. It is a force to be kept in existence for nearly two and a half years, virtually making it not only a regular, but in reality a standing army, although a clause in the bill says that at the end of two years and four months a part of the force, so-called volunteers, shall be mustered out. We all know how difficult it will be to reduce it when once organized and under arms. Besides, the very terms of existing laws and regulations in putting the so-called volunteers in the service are the same as those prescribed for regulars, except that part of the bill which applies to Cubans and others similarly situated, who may be enlisted at the discretion of the President. No, Mr. President, the term "volunteers" is misused, for not one of them can aid in choosing or electing a single one of their officers; neither can the governor of any State appoint one of the officers, but the President alone can appoint them, as he does in the Regular Army. The so-called volunteers and regulars are enlisted in the same way, and when in the service treated just alike and are amenable to the same laws and regulations, the only practical difference being the length of service—the regular enlists for three years, and the so-called volunteers two years and four months. This, then, becoming a regular army, will, I fear, become a standing army by law, as it will be in fact.

Mr. President, I look upon this proposition as one for a standing army, and that standing army could be used as the powers that be may require, at home or abroad, to threaten the liberties of the people.

I object to this bill for various reasons. I object to it, as I have said, because of the number of troops it calls for. I object to it because it makes them regular troops and casts aside the volunteers. I object to it because it makes invidious distinctions between the volunteers and regular troops in favor of the regular troops, and to that extent sets aside the volunteers and that which would otherwise be their rights. I object to it again, sir, because I think it may be an entering wedge which would ultimately result in changing the laws and the Constitution under which we live, and which will to some extent subvert the theory of our Government and make us rely almost entirely upon the Regular Army for protection and not upon the consent of the people in their own sovereign right for the government of this country.

Believing that the passage of this bill will contribute to revolutionize the principle upon which our Federal Union rests; that it will familiarize our people with a principle of force and power not compatible with a government responsible to the people; that it will accustom the Federal authorities to rely on the strength and discipline of the Army rather than on the consent of the people; that taxation already bears too heavily on the energies of the people to further burden them with the enormous cost which this bill will compel, and that as the main object of this bill seems to be to raise and send an army to fight the Filipinos, and as I believe that conciliation and kindness will go farther and sooner effect their reconciliation to our guidance than would an army, I can not give my vote to a bill which threatens such consequences as this course would entail upon our country.

This bill calls for 100,000 men, and we all agree that an army of 100,000 men is what is aimed at by the framers of the bill and by the committee which has reported it for the consideration of the Senate, yet the word "maximum," in alluding to the number of troops to be enlisted, occurs nowhere in the bill save in its last sentence, and then it is used incidentally, while the word "minimum" occurs in relation to nearly all the numbers of troops, armaments, and departments. While I know there is no intention of deceiving as to the number being greater than the 100,000, yet the verbiage used may give it an elasticity which we do not see.

I am not the only person who can not reconcile the provisions of this bill with the promises made on this floor. I find in the Evening Star of Saturday the "merits of the measure" discussed by "one of the officers who has had a leading part to perform in arranging the compromise measure." He says that "under this authorization the Army may be carried forward from 62,000 to 75,000 in total strength." The extract is short, and I will read it to show that this bill is not so plain that the wayfaring man, though a fool, can not err therein, but is so drawn that the officer who had a hand in its construction says it can be stretched to 75,000 men:

MERITS OF THE MEASURE.

One of the officers who has had a leading part to perform in arranging the compromise measure to-day said:

"This is a better bill than the Army really expected to have for many years. Instead of providing for 950 appointments to first and second lieutenants, as the Hull bill did, it provides for only 135 second lieutenancies.

"It gives the infantry a permanent organization on the three-battalion basis to make it conform to modern ideas, so that this arm does not go back to the hybrid organization of two skeleton and two unmanned companies and two battalions of four companies each, as the infantry stood last spring.

"The minimum strength of each company and troop will be 65 men and each battery of artillery 80 men, yet there is a flexible provision by which the strength can be increased at will in case of emergency without seeking additional legislation, and under this authorization the Army may be carried forward from 62,000 to 75,000 in total strength. The bill also gives 3 majors to each regiment, instead of 2 as at present. This will enable the Department to promote to majorities a number of most deserving veteran captains who could not be benefited otherwise in the usual course of promotions."

Where is the "flexible provision," of which this officer is so certain that the Army can be increased to 75,000 in total strength? Is the flexible provision to be found in line 7 of section 15, where for the first and only time we have the words "maximum authorized strength?" But the bill nowhere else mentions maximum, and repeals all laws or parts of laws which conflict with the provisions of this act. So, whether or not this bill is amendatory to the standing army law and repeals its maximum strength, may present a question of doubtful solution.

It is the uncertainties which hedge this bill, as well as to what it does as to what it does not authorize, that give me reluctance to support it. I find the officer of the Army who claims to have had a hand in the construction asserting that it carries 75,000 men, yet I find its provisions limiting the Army to 65,000. So there is nothing certain, nothing fixed, nothing concluded, except that the President is provided with an Army of 100,000, and Congress adjourns leaving him a free hand to convert the "present exigencies" into war of rebellion, 10,000 miles away. However much confidence we may have in the President, it is a bad precedent.

The Senate is asked to believe that this force of 65,000 can not be used for "any improper purpose." The size of the Army is no guaranty against use for improper purposes; our little Army was no protection in the past against its improper use. And the Senate is asked to believe that this bill promises no heavy burdens upon the people. I must ask the Senator "to tell that to the marines!" I can not say what burden it will inflict, nor can any other Senator until after the deficiency bills of all kinds are passed. It is not prudent to attempt to measure a rattlesnake until his head is off, and even then accuracy requires calculation.

That the burdens of the present year, already running high into the hundreds of millions and necessitating one bond sale of $200,000,000 and threatening now an issue of untold hundreds of millions of Treasury certificates, will fall eventually on the people no man will venture to deny. If the honor of the country demands the sacrifices and burdens which the Army bill must carry, if that honor requires war, unrelenting war, on the Filipinos, I would vote for this bill, as I have already voted for every measure involving much money, without stopping to inquire as to how many men or how much money.

It is the honor of the country alone that justifies any people in resorting to war. Material advantages or disadvantages are subjects for diplomatic adjustment, to be paid for in hard cash, to which they naturally belong. But the honor of the country stands upon a plane so lofty that only the lives and blood of its people can effectually satisfy its high and noble demands. The conquest of the Filipinos can not involve the honor of the United States. The treaty of peace reduced the question to one of bargain and sale, and this country is to pay $20,000,000 to Spain for the Filipinos and islands, and if Spain can not deliver the goods, the bargain and sale ought to be declared off.

But I would not drag the honor of my country into that trade. I would hold what we already possess and say to Spain the $20,000,000 awaits her delivery of a good title with warranty. If she can not complete the sale, and this country has to effect it by force, the $20,000,000 should be charged to expenses incident to a perfect title. "Present exigencies" are not recognized in the Constitution of the United States as a reason for organizing an army. The "exigencies" ought to be defined in plain terms.

If this country can not declare war against the Filipinos without recognizing their existence as a nation, if the President can not by proclamation declare them in rebellion because the authority of the United States awaits the action of Spain in ratifying the peace treaty, then "the present exigencies" ought to await the final outcome of the treaty of peace, when our authority would rightly exist in the islands, and those who may oppose that authority could be rightfully proceeded against if they then refused all advances to peace and rightful government. But they are not Americans now, whatever they may become after Spain ratifies the treaty.

But in any probable event an army of 100,000 men is beyond all reasonable requirement. And if such an army is necessary its construction should be mainly on the volunteer forces of the States; 65,000 volunteers and 35,000 regulars, if those figures are to be the divisions of the two armies, would be more in harmony with our system of government and all the precedents of our history. Never before did the Congress give precedence to the Regular Army and subordinate the volunteer service.

This bill confines the 35,000 to infantry, and their field officers are confined to the Regular Army, or to persons who served as officers of volunteers in the war with Spain, and to be appointed by the President. No more citizen soldiers need apply. There will be no place for such gallant men as those who commanded regiments in the Union and Confederate armies. The brigadier-generals of volunteers are to be from the Regular Army.

This bill is the passing of the volunteer and creation of a Regular Army, in which the volunteer is a mere temporary adjunct for two years and four months, and marks the beginning of imperialism by statutory enactment.

Mr. President, one of the reasons why I hesitate about this—and I think it a very pertinent one—is that the President has not defined his policy. There has been no publication made of the extent of the war, if such exist. There has been no publication made by the President over his signature that he needs and wants these troops for the purpose of carrying out a well-defined policy. Such a declaration has always been made by every President who has called for troops heretofore. Mr. Lincoln did so even in the civil war, and every President thus far who has called for troops has called for them in a formal way, giving his reasons for the call. This is not a call by the President of the United States. Where or when has any such proclamation ever been issued by him?

Nor has he ever said that he needed 100,000 men. To whom has he said it, and for what purpose has he told us he needs them? He has not done so. For that reason I think, sir, we should oppose a bill that calls for that number of troops, a number so enormous, compared with what we have had heretofore when no war existed, and an enlargement of the Regular Army.

We should be cautious as to how we proceed in matters of this kind. A regular army, a standing army, has been the cause of the downfall of every republic, and we should stand upon the threshold and view it with caution and with fear. The President has not, then, defined a policy; he has not called for troops; he has asked for no 100,000 troops nor for an army of that size to maintain the honor of the flag in any other country or here at home. Why are they wanted? Are we not at peace? Where is any war?

Sir, the recent war with Spain was quickly and sharply fought and soon over. It has been terminated in the most gallant manner. It is true we were fighting against a power of only 17,000,000 people, with no money to back her and a divided sentiment at home touching the war, with only a few modern-built guns and ships to compete with us; and we pushed her to the wall sharply and quickly. But protocols and peace commissions have since intervened and we have no war now. Instead of war, what did we hear within the last few weeks? The President himself in the City of Brotherly Love, near this national capital, made a speech in which he was glorifying the peace that prevailed in the land, and his words found a joyous refrain all over this country. It was a jubilee of peace. No one thought of any further war; no one dreamed then that there would be 100,000 troops called for for any purpose.

Again, we find the President in our Southland, at Atlanta, the place of many battles fought in our never-to-be-forgotten fratricidal strife, uttering the same kind of sentiments—peace, peace all over the land—and paeans went up and found their echoes from the Pacific to the Atlantic. Here, now, before those joyous acclamations of peace have ceased and their echoes died away—yes, before the ink is dry upon your treaty of peace—you are calling for a hundred thousand troops to force, I suppose, a peace. What a travesty! For what purpose are they called? Commissioners were appointed, went to Paris, and labored for two months. They wrestled and struggled, diplomatizing with the question, as they presented the situation, and at last came to terms.

Their terms of peace were ratified. Under the situation our commissioners had it all their own way. I am one of the Senators, Mr. President, who voted against the ratification of that treaty; and I do not think I have given any vote that I have reason to be prouder of since I have been a member of this Senate than that, especially since we see the results which have come upon us. If we had not ratified that treaty, some terms or some relations, I doubt not, could have been established between the Filipinos and the Americans that would have been conciliatory and agreeable, and we would not now have this call for a hundred thousand men to disturb the peace and quiet of the country.

We would not have sick soldiers sweltering and dying in that tropical climate. Neither would we be hurrying troops over in transports at a cost of millions to meet what is called "an exigency." Therefore, from my standpoint, it is a misfortune that the treaty was ratified and not held up until there was something more definite agreed upon and until such proper relations as would have prevented present embarrassments, were established between the Philippines and the United States.

Are we in serious trouble there now? Why do we want all of these troops if we are not? It is believed by those who are well informed that we have as many there as are needed, with volunteers returned and regulars now on hand to substitute for them. In Porto Rico it is known and conceded that a regiment or two at most are all that are required. In Cuba, what? Only a few thousand at the most. If you take the testimony of those generals who have been there, and who were before the committee, you will see that we need but a few thousand American soldiers at the most. We need only to man the forts, with a few battalions in reserve at each fort. We should remember that the Cubans, including Spaniards, are disarmed, and that our forces there have repeating rifles and rapid-fire guns, and that one man is worth a hundred unarmed Cubans. Then for the present, or in the near future, we will have an organized constabulary force of itself equal to the demand. I think, Mr. President, that less than half the number that are called for in this bill will serve the purposes for which it is said an army is desired. A few thousand in Cuba, as shown; comparatively none in Porto Rico, and but a regiment in the Sandwich Islands, with the Philippines already sufficiently provided for the present situation—for what do we want a large army? We are told that thousands are needed at home for coast defenses. Mr. President, that is a matter which I think is much exaggerated. When we look into it there seem to be thirty-two points on the coast already manned and equipped, and they have proved sufficient thus far. These defenses are already provided for. But we are told that we need 144, or 112 more than we now have. This I do not credit, and it should, and I have no doubt will, be looked into and the whole scheme or system remodeled.

The Indians are virtually out of the way. Sitting Bull is dead and the Sioux subdued and scattered, Geronimo in prison, the Apaches scattered and gone, so we need but few soldiers on our frontier. Indeed, we now have no frontier. We want no excessive troops. Want none to overawe the people; none to go into States without the request of the governor or legislature. Those of us who live below Mason and Dixon line, those of us who after the war saw regiment after regiment mustered around us in the South, know what it is to be under the military. We know what it is to have a government of that kind. And when we see an effort to increase the Army in time of peace, it excites grave apprehensions.

Mr. President, as to the condition of things in Manila, which is alleged by the advocates of this bill as a reason for its passage, we are hardly well informed. It has been amusing to some of us to see, whenever a vote is to be taken in this Senate upon any question involving that country at all, or upon the question involving the treaty of peace, just before the vote some sensational publication purporting to come from there, perhaps for the purpose of influencing votes in the Senate, has almost invariably been seen in large headlines of an attractive character in the Administration press. Such has been the case. They do not, however, I believe, come as a general thing from those who are in authority. I beg leave in this connection to read a line from a man in authority, General Otis. What does he say as to the situation there, and does that show we need 100,000 troops or need any more troops than we have there now? There was received yesterday at the War Department the following dispatch:

ADJUTANT-GENERAL, Washington:

Condition of affairs quiet. Progressing favorably. Anxiety need not be felt in regard to the situation here. Will send small body of troops to Cebu, where the Navy took possession.

OTIS.

The general in command says, "Anxiety need not be felt in regard to the situation here." That does not indicate to my mind that there is any great necessity because of the situation there, for 100,000 troops. We are in trouble there to some extent, it is true, but my idea is (whether I am correct or not I do not know) that we ought to make a stand and hold our own where we are, and that Commissioner Denby and those who go with him should go under flags of truce to those people and explain to them the true situation, and make honorable terms with Aguinaldo and his insurgent followers.

Let them have interviews with those people. Denby is familiar with them, their language, their prejudices, etc., as he has been long in a representative capacity in the Orient. Let him go there, make a report, and let us see whether or not we have to prepare for serious trouble. I am one of those who do not want the islands to belong to this country. I object to their coming in as a part of our Republic. These are a different class of people, with a different language, different religion, with different ideas of life, different in every respect. I do not want to see them annexed to or become a part of this country.

Therefore, how will we get out of this? We are in trouble. It is embarrassing, I admit, but then, sir, is it not best for us to present to them some terms of conciliation? Let Denby and the commission go forward and see what can be done before you call out 100,000 troops. Not only that, but let us send the Bible and the Cross in advance of gating guns, to show a Christian spirit, by which we can bring about a reconciliation and save the honor of our country without shooting to death for "humanity's" sake those half-civilized human beings who have been so long oppressed by Spain, and who, inspired by our presence, had a hope of that liberty for which they had so long struggled, and now see their cup of joy dashed to pieces by the hand that lifted it to their lips. Away with such expansion! Such Christianity!

About a year ago two regiments of artillery were all that was regarded necessary to man the coast defenses in addition to those already manned and equipped. Now it is multiplied to 20,000. There is something awkward about all this. Are the times so out of joint that the military dominates the civil authority? I stand here in defense of what I believe to be the rights of the liberty-loving people and taxpaying people of this country. I believe that the civil ought to dominate the military power with us, and if it does not the Republic is gone.

A hundred thousand men means something. They represent a power, including forts, docks, arsenals, etc., that could absolutely awe the country, for they would have all the arms. I believe, sir, it would be dangerous to the liberty of the people. We have heretofore had some respect for the Constitution and its guaranteed rights. But what would an ambitious leader with 100,000 soldiers trained to obey him do when opportunity offered for him to snatch the reins of power? After the Revolutionary war we had no standing army. After the war of 1812 we had but 6,000, and after the close of the Mexican war we had only about 10,000, until the commencement of our interstate struggle.

In all these wars the militia and volunteers constituted the right arm of our military strength.

The ready disbanding of regular troops after each of our wars shows the apprehension of our yeomanry from a standing army and that they regarded it inconsistent with republican government and a menace to individual liberty and self-government. The idea of 100,000 soldiers being called for at once would have appalled our fathers, as it ought to appall their children.

To vote to increase the Regular Army of the United States to the maximum or minimum of this bill is to sanction and approve all that was most objectionable in the treaty of peace, against the ratification of which I voted. For the Congress to increase the Regular Army after concluding peace with Spain will be the revocation of that pledge to the country contained in that provision of the law which, when war was declared, provided:

That at the end of any war in which the United States may become involved the Army shall be reduced to a peace basis by the transfer in the same arm of the service or absorption by promotion or honorable discharge, under such regulations as the Secretary of War may establish, of supernumerary commissioned officers and the honorable discharge or transfer of supernumerary enlisted men; and nothing contained in this act shall be construed as authorizing a permanent increase of the commissioned or enlisted force of the Regular Army beyond that now provided by the law in force prior to the passage of this act, except as to the increase of 25 majors provided for in section 1 hereof.

The Senator from Connecticut recognized that pledge when, in introducing the report on his original bill, he said: "Therefore, it will then be the imperative duty of the President to reduce the Army to 27,000 men."

But now we find that instead of 27,000 this bill brings it up to thirty-eight thousand and some hundred, conceded; but when you look at it and take into consideration the 1,100 who belong to the bands, and others named, you will see it comes within a fraction of 40,000 instead of 25,000 or 27,000. I am against that increase. That makes a permanent increase to the Regular Army, and this bill is for the establishment of a permanent as well as a regular army, and the volunteer is not known in it.

And why not? That 27,000 is the "peace basis" of our Army.

Are we not at peace? The ink will hardly be dry on the signatures to the ratification of peace before, under this bill, the President will be directed to prepare for war. War against whom or for what purpose? The answer to that question condemns every vote for the ratification of the treaty of peace with Spain, and consistency, it would seem, compels every Senator who voted against ratification to vote against this bill.

It was the expression of the honest conviction of this country, which pledged its faith in the declaration of war, that the acquisition of territory from Spain was no part of the purpose of this country. We did not then dream of expansion; no view of imperialism then disturbed the country; but the high, the noble, and the sole enthusiasm of all our people was to make the people of Cuba free and independent. Now, at the conclusion of peace, the Administration demands a regular army of 100,000 to hold that which conquest has gained.

The many who were impatient a year ago to drive Spain out of Cuba had no expectation or purpose that the pledge against the acquisition of territory would be abandoned and the war for the liberation of Cuba converted into a war for the conquest of the Filipino people. If that is not to be the sequel of this increase of the Regular Army, what other reason exists for this bill? There is no justification for a standing army of 100,000 men within the United States. The law-observing and the law-abiding people of the States do not require 100,000 regulars to keep them in order. Porto Rico, which did not rebel against Spain, has settled down to her fate in peace and quiet, and there does not come a rumor of disturbance from that island. We have compelled the Cuban army to disband and surrender their arms, preparatory to their pacification.

In Cuba "The right of the people to keep and bear arms"—a right secured to our people by the Federal Constitution—is denied; and the persuasion of $3,000,000 is added to the threat of a large United States army on the island as a preliminary to the peace, freedom, and independence of that people. And now the friends of the Administration demand a standing army nearly four times the size of our "peace basis" to hold what the President, in his recent speech in Boston, designated as the "far-reaching consequences" of the act of those who voted to declare war for the liberation of Cuba. The "new and grave problems" which the President feared might follow the inauguration of the war for the freedom of Cuba now take the form and shape of an imposing army on the very threshold of peace.

The Czar of Russia has recently invited the nations of the world to a congress, to deliberate on the disarmament of those immense armies which are depleting and exhausting the resources of every people. The President has accepted that invitation, and his ambassadors will enter that congress of peace with an army four times as large as our "peace basis" as our earnest pledge of peaceful purpose.

That overture to peace and prosperity of peoples all over the world finds this country, heretofore exempt from the burdens of immense armaments, just entering upon the policy from which the Czar of Russia is seeking to escape. But the President says it is "the evolution of events which no man could control which has brought those problems upon us." What problems? Is this bill for a standing army of 100,000 men to be the initial of the problem to hold Cuba? Is it to be the conclusion of the problem in the Philippines, where, with sword in hand, we teach peace and prosperity by the sovereign grace of a conquering nation?

A standing army has ever been an object of aversion to the people of this country. So long as it was small and was kept on police duty over the Indians it was tolerated, but as a Regular Army never was it esteemed as an army that could exist among the people of this country for the purpose of overawing them. Our wars have all been fought by the volunteers—the people of the States—ever ready to spring at any enemy and never yet unable to defeat any foe.

From the Revolution, when the standing armies of England were twice compelled to unconditional surrender; from New Orleans, where the Western volunteer drove back the triumphant regulars which Wellington had led in Spain; from Mexico, where the volunteers planted the country's flag on the hall of the Montezumas and dictated indemnity for the past and security for the future, the volunteer has ever been the arm of defense and offense for this country. But in this bill the word volunteer—the citizen soldier, the cheap defense of the nation, the ever-ready and unconquerable defense of the country—is relegated out of the Army, and the regular soldier is given the place of honor and made the sole defender of the country; and as this bill leads to that proposition, I oppose it upon that ground, if no other.

The people have not entirely forgot the feat of the standing Army in Chicago a few years since. That experience they do not want repeated, and they are unwilling to provide the means by which the State's duty shall be quickly and speedily assumed by the Federal Government.

A large standing army, the crowning act of imperialism, is a temptation to the use of power which is incompatible with a government by the people. And to create a large standing army at the very moment of reestablishing peace, and proclaiming to the nations of the world that we are at peace, but deem it necessary to augment our Army four times the recognized "peace footing," is a contradiction between profession and acts which is not calculated to commend our system of government to any people.

To use the standing army to effect the subjugation of the Philippines is the total subversion of the principle upon which our system of popular government rests. The right to conquer other people may be recognized as an attribute of every sovereign nation, but the duty of abstaining from the exercise of that right is not less incumbent upon a people which holds that consent alone confers just powers on the government.

I do not controvert the right of this country to conquer and hold any possession of our enemy. That is a right of war which may be properly used by any nation. But when it comes to governing the people our principles of government deny the right to impose our system on any unwilling people. Hence to organize and equip a standing army in time of peace for the sole purpose of waging a war of conquest upon the Filipinos, with whom we were practically if not actually allied in the contest with Spain, is a contradiction of the spirit of our institutions, however much it may be within the letter of international law.

I have taken pains to look into the history of the troubles that were brought about in the Philippine Islands in the book relating thereto, which has been published by the Senate. It gives a history of the movements of Aguinaldo.

How far United States Consuls Williams, Wildman, and Pratt committed the United States to an alliance with Aguinaldo by the many interviews and conferences which took place between those officers beginning April 23, prior to the battle of Manila, is now to be ascertained by the papers published with the treaty.

United States Consul Pratt arranged the interview between Aguinaldo and Commodore Dewey in Hongkong. His Report No. 213 (on page 341 of Document No. 63, paragraph 1), embodies a telegram from Consul Pratt to Secretary Day that "General Aguinaldo gone at my instance [to] Hongkong [to] arrange with Dewey cooperation [with] insurgents [at] Manila." That report reveals the fact that at the instance of "Mr. H. W. Bray, an English gentleman of high standing," Aguinaldo, "the leader of the Philippine insurgents," had come "incognito" to Singapore, and that on account of his "great prestige with the insurgents" Mr. Pratt "determined at once to see him, and at my [his] request a secret interview was accordingly arranged for the following morning, Sunday, the 24th instant [April]."

While Pratt says he explained to Aguinaldo that he had no authority to speak for the Government, it is not difficult to understand that Aguinaldo may have formed a contrary conviction when he realized that the United States consul desired, and had arranged for, an interview with Commodore Dewey at Hongkong, and was shown the commander's reply, "Tell Aguinaldo come soon as possible." And when that interview took place it was followed by a paper in the Singapore Free Press, May 4, 1898 (see page 349), which designated the "scene" as "a secret political arrangement by which Gen. Emilio Aguinaldo y Farni, the supreme head of the revolutionary movement in the Philippines, has entered into direct relations with Admiral Dewey, commander of the American squadron in China waters, while that officer was still at Hongkong."

Next in the course of these advances on the part of the United States consul was that "serenade and speeches, with addresses," which are reported on pages 351, 352, and 353, from the Straits Times of June 9, and which were disavowed by Secretary Day in dispatch No. 78 (page 354), and by dispatch No. 87 (pages 356, 357), all of which Secretary Day regarded "in a light which causes apprehension, lest your action may have laid the ground of future misunderstanding and complications."

If the Secretary of State anticipated future complications from the actions of Consul Pratt upon his own reports, who can say that Aguinaldo was not more misled and induced to believe that his "direct cooperation" with Admiral Dewey was but the initiative of that further cooperation of independence?

The fact that Secretary Day discovered discrepancies of an important character in the conflicting dispatches of Mr. Pratt as to whether it was Aguinaldo who sought Pratt or Pratt who sought Aguinaldo (page 357) suggests that Aguinaldo may have been even more unfortunate in his understanding of the American consul, and regarded his disavowal of authority to speak for the United States Government as a mere diplomatic disavowal intended to be disregarded by Aguinaldo (page 429).

On page 429 of this document there is published "Brief notes by Señor Aguinaldo," in which he says of those interviews that "it was agreed that Señor Aguinaldo and other revolutionary chiefs, in cooperation with the American squadron, should return to take up arms against the Spanish Government in the Philippines, the sole and most laudable desire of the Washington Government being to concede to the Philippine people absolute independence as soon as the victory against the Spanish arms should be obtained. By virtue of this agreement Señor Aguinaldo proceeded by the first steamer," etc. (See also page 431.)

It is contended that no assurance of independence under an American protectorate was ever given to Aguinaldo, and in the conflict of assertions it is not possible to decide. But the fact known to the world and apparent in Aguinaldo's proclamations on pages 431, 432, 433, 434, 435, 436, 437, 438, 439, and 440 of this document, that the American authorities at Manila neither protested nor prevented the actual setting up of a Filipino government, is something which goes far to sustain the claim of Aguinaldo that his confidence was not misplaced in "the great American nation, which struggled first for its independence and afterwards for the abolition of slavery, and is now actually struggling for the independence of Cuba" (page 440).

The tenor of those interviews between Aguinaldo and the American authorities, his recognition as commander in chief of the insurrectionary forces in the Philippines, the practical cooperation in military movements around Manila, the correspondence with General Anderson—all, when taken in connection with the fact that not once was the purpose and intention of the United States Government openly and frankly disclosed to the insurgent leaders, have placed the United States in a most unfavorable light with the Filipinos.

All that most probably resulted from the fact that the Administration had no policy to disclose, but was waiting for "something to turn up" which would enable the formation of a plan and policy as to the new acquisitions in the Orient. However that may be, the fact exists that just at the moment of making peace with Spain the United States finds itself involved with a rebellion among the Filipinos because of the provisions of the treaty of peace which transferred 10,000,000 people over whom Spain had lost all legal power, and whose sale and transfer for $20,000,000 are repugnant to every sentiment of freedom and independence.

This Army bill is intended and designed to make good that bargain and sale of 10,000,000 people against their will. It is designed to conquer their consent—and to govern them according to Anglo-Saxon civilization and against Malay ideas modified by Spanish methods. "Can the Ethiopian change his skin or the leopard his spots," and the Malay adapt himself to the principles of the common law and adjust his ideas to the demands of Magna Charta or the Constitution and laws of the United States, of which he has not the least conception and no capacity to learn? Of self-government and home rule as understood and practiced in this country the Malay has no idea. The army to be organized ought to have a kindergarten attachment in order to begin its educational work at the very lowest strata of naked Malayism.

It is now seventy years since Lord Brougham electrified England with the declaration:

Let the soldier be abroad if you will, he can do nothing in this age. There is another personage—a personage less imposing in the eyes of some, perhaps insignificant. The schoolmaster is abroad, and I trust to him, armed with his primer, against the soldier in full military array.

That is the kind of army that the United States ought to organize and send to the Philippine Islands. Moral suasion and not military force.

I desire to say that it is an undisputed fact that the consul made arrangements there for Aguinaldo not only to meet but to go and consult with the then commodore, but now admiral in command, Dewey. Not only that, but he gave facilities as an officer of the United States Government, and Aguinaldo got a dispatch, which is shown here also, from Dewey himself, telling him to "Come along at once." He did so. He went there. He united his military forces with Dewey's. He gave him assistance not only in advice, but in battle, and when the battle was fought his forces were around there to give assistance and did give assistance.

So it seems that those who were our allies a short time ago, upon our own invitation, are being shot to death by our people for the sake of "humanity." That is the situation. You may talk about it as you please. That is the truth; that is the situation now. As I said, I believe our armies ought to hold what we have. They must not submit to dishonor in any respect. At all hazards we must maintain the honor of our country and our flag, but it is proper under the circumstances, it seems to me, that the commissioners of peace should go, as I said, with the Bible and the cross, and not with Hotchkiss and Gatling guns, in their hands, and in a Christian spirit inform these deluded and liberty-seeking Filipinos that we have announced to the world, by statute, that we were not seeking conquests, and a kindly effort should be made for the purpose of reconciliation. Then let us stop this trouble; let us stop the Regular Army of a hundred thousand, the end of which we will never see and never know.

It is said that the "evolution of events" beyond our control has put us in possession of the Philippine Islands. It would be more proper to say that our victory had put Spain out of possession, and that, by virtue of our victory, the people of the Philippine Islands, like those of Cuba, had become a free and independent nation; that for the purpose of their protection in the enjoyment of that freedom and independence the United States would stand guard around the archipelago and warn off all other nations.

That in return for their freedom and independence acquired by our Army and Navy we would acquire by treaty and negotiation with the rightful authorities of that people all possible benefits of trade and commerce as well as a proper indemnity for all expenses; and having thus set that youthful nation on its feet the United States would retire without loss of means or prestige, carrying the grateful acknowledgments of that people of our supreme love for righteousness in government untarnished by a denial of the great underlying principle of our own system of government.

There is no doubt that the results of the war have created very serious embarrassments for this country. But I can not understand how a large standing army is to effect any solution of those embarrassments. The arts, appliances, and practices of peace will sooner solve every embarrassment than is possible under the rigid rule of war which a standing army only knows.

Once convince the people of the late Spanish possessions that the habit and hateful rule of Spain is abolished forever and that their welfare, prosperity, and happiness rest with themselves; that a government of their own making, with its foundations laid in justice to every individual is their right, and that the United States will protect them against the world in its enjoyment, and then this country will be able to see how the embarrassments will dissolve and peace assure its blessings and distribute its rewards.

The embarrassments which a large standing army can dissipate and scatter will come again and again—like the fabled crop of armed men springing from the earth—to defend their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor, as our example has taught them and will teach, I hope, generations yet unborn, to resist any and every power which attempts to impose its government upon them by force and violence. "Conquest's crimson wing" but "mocks the air with idle state" and fans no popular government. With a large standing army the Filipinos may be easily overrun and scattered, but no standing army can exercise those ministrations of kindness which turn injured enemies into lasting friends nor lay down those lines of compromise and adjustment along which every government must be drawn which can develop the resources of any country.

Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, when before the Committee on Military Affairs of the Senate, gave some admirable examples of how the peaceful way dissipates embarrassments. With "an ample supply of rations" and "a good medical staff," and with the knowledge on the part of the people of Holguin "that he had money to buy and pay for what he wanted and to pay the wages of all whom he might employ," he had little difficulty in pacifying Holguin.

By following "ways of pleasantness and paths of peace" he brought about friendship with the people. His "ways of pleasantness" were to clean up the district, to put men to work on the public roads, to reestablish the telegraph lines, to reestablish courts of justice and municipal governments. And his "paths of peace" were good roads and a widespread intercourse of his officers and men with the people, and to assure them that "we were among them to help them and not to harm them"—to pay for all we took and to account for every dollar we spent. Efficiency backed by honesty and supported by kindly intercourse will go further to remove embarrassment than an army with banners.

Expansion by conquest and imperialism by force need and require a standing army, but peace and prosperity are the only rightful means to progress and happiness to which a republican government ought ever to appeal. The new policy of force sought to be ingrafted on our late success in the war with Spain involves consequences to the people of this country which ought to be considered when discussing the organization and equipment of a large standing army at the moment when we announce to the world the reestablishment of peace.

The people of this country are already handicapped with an annual outlay of $150,000,000 for pensions to soldiers of other wars. To that it is now proposed to add the enormous expenditures of the costliest army in the world. Our soldiers are better paid, our officers better provided, our transportation is more costly, our commissariat beyond all comparison with that of any other army, and every incidental expense exceeds in cost the same items in any other army.

The expenses of the German army have been set down at $130,000,000; that of France at $161,000,000; that of Russia at $160,000,000; that of Italy at $87,000,000; that of Austria at $57,000,000; and this bill will entail an increased charge, which no authority has yet fixed, but which has been estimated at $150,000,000.

A little more, about $100,000,000 a year, will be the cost we will have to pay for the establishment of this Army; nay, it will be more than $100,000,000 a year. For the two years and four months we know that it will not be less than $250,000,000. That enormous charge will come at a time when the chairman of the Appropriations Committee at the other end of this Capitol has fixed an annual deficit of $170,000,000.

That deficit alone will require a tax, from other than present resources, of $2 per head of population; and all expenses of this Administration have been estimated by Mr. Atkinson at $8 per head, and the superadded cost of imperialism that distinguished statisticians set down at $3 per head of population. Without intending to guarantee the accuracy of these figures and estimates, I can affirm, without the fear of successful contradiction, that one of two alternatives must follow the passage of this bill—either there must be a large increase of taxes or there will be another sale of bonds. Either alternative brings increase in the expense of living to the people of this country without any present or prospective advantage at all commensurate with the hardships which the policy of this Administration will have brought upon our people.

All that the undefined and unknown policy of the Administration can offer to the people in return for the increased burden of additional taxation is that in the future, I hope the far distant future, the "open door" of China promises enormous benefits to that people who stand nearest and are most ready to rush in and grab everything in sight. To that state of preparedness the Philippine Islands offer this country the best opportunity of position in the future plunder and robbery of China. Thus, in order to be prepared and ready to grab a part of China we must have a standing army which shall conquer and hold, if not plunder, the Philippine Islands.

According to the imperialists, this country emerged from the war with Spain in some undescribed and indescribable condition never before dreamed of by any statesman and which is as surprising to its people as it is astounding to other nations. In some way, not explained by the latter-day patriots, this country has taken on a new character and become a new power among the nations. It is no longer the great American nation, teaching by its example, but something more—a controlling and directing nation to all the world, not by the force of its peaceful policy, but by the fire of the guns of its Navy. I consent to no such doctrine that might makes right, and I can not vote for an army greatly beyond all possible exigencies in order that mere power shall dictate a policy among other nations more hurtful than helpful to our people.

Every example of history warns us against the insidious power which underlies a large standing army and an unknown and undefined policy in a distant quarter of the world. The people demand to know what is to be done with this large standing army, and as yet they have not been informed.

We are told by the author of The Decline and Fall that when Augustus Caesar

Framed the artful system of imperial authority, his moderation was inspired by his fears. He wished to deceive the people by an image of civil liberty and the armies by an image of civil government. The names and forms of the ancient administration were preserved by him with anxious care. The usual number of consuls, praetors, and tribunes were annually invested with their respective signs of office and continued to discharge some of their least important functions—that Augustus was sensible that mankind is greatly governed by names and that the Senate and people would submit to slavery provided that they were respectfully assured that they enjoyed their ancient freedom; and that under that pleasing fancy he erected an absolute monarchy disguised by the forms of a commonwealth; that the masters of the Roman world envied their throne with darkness, concealed their purpose, policy, and intentions, and safe behind the legions, humbly professed themselves the accountable ministers of the people, with whom was vested the future policy of the new empire, and whose supreme decrees would be enforced; that "the face of the court corresponded with the forms of the administration," and while scrupulously observing the "constitutional fictions," he yet possessed the full measure of regal power. But that as imperialism became more fully established, the forms and shams were dispensed with, and, adds Gibbon, "the fine theory of a republic insensibly vanished."

I impute nothing to the President, for I have the highest personal regard for him; but, in the language of the great orator, Mr. Clay, when opposing an army bill, I say, "I hope not to be misunderstood. I am far from intimating that General Jackson cherishes any designs inimical to the liberties of the country. I believe his intentions to be pure and patriotic. I thank God that he would not, but I thank Him still more that he could not if he would, overthrow the liberties of the Republic. But precedents, if bad, are fraught with the most dangerous consequences."

So it is in this instance, Mr. President. We have confidence in President McKinley, but who ever heard before of a President of the United States at the head of our Government having a discretionary power equal to that granted to him in this bill? It is unknown in the history of this country. However much faith we may have in him, however much we may rely upon his good judgment, upon his patriotism, yet it is an example which should not be furnished. It will open the doors for the future, for we know not who may be his successors, and when some successor having different aspirations shall come, proximately or remotely, with an Army of 100,000 at his back, no one can tell what will become of the liberties of this country.

See, now, how the military forces are employed. We see them here in this city; we see them everywhere in the land, and there is no denying the fact that "militarism" is becoming popularized. One of the fears we have is that the military will in the end take possession of the country, and I want to avoid it. This is one of the changes to be looked to and guarded against. So far as my vote and voice can be given I object that 100,000 men shall in time of peace be put at the discretion of any President in this Republic. That would be traveling along the very pathway that has led to the destruction of every republic known in the history of the world. It is a dangerous precedent, as Mr. Clay has said, and it should be avoided.

If Henry Clay could thus deplore the creation of a standing army to be commanded by Andrew Jackson, with all the grandeur of his past life, I may be pardoned for not yielding my consent to a like demand from any President so long as the Congress does not know with certainty the lines of policy he proposes to follow in the disposition of this large force—whether or not it is wanted to prosecute a war against the Filipinos.

What policy has the President defined? Has he announced that the Filipinos are enemies? Has he announced that we need this force to go there and conquer them and hold that country? Has he announced that he needs such a tremendous force at home or for service elsewhere? No, sir; no such enunciation has come from the President as yet. No one knows what the policy may be. Will it be to subdue and permanently hold those Asiatic islands; and if so, in what form shall the holding be? These uncertainties are embarrassing to me. The truth is we are building up a large regular standing army, dangerous to the Republic.

With Mr. Clay, I beg the Senate to beware how you give sanction to military subordination. As to the danger of military men and large standing armies, we should "remember that Greece had her Alexander, Rome her Caesar, England her Cromwell, France her Bonaparte, and if we would escape the rock on which they split, we must avoid their errors."

Necessity is the plea of tyrants and the creed of slaves. This country will not be driven to accept necessity as a reason for the retention of the Philippine Islands. No man contemplates their return to Spain, still less their sale or barter to any other nation, and yet their forcible retention by this country is not our only alternative. The destiny or fate of that people, the President said in Boston, rested with the Congress of the United States. If so, there need be no large standing army to help the Congress to a rightful conclusion.

The solution by Congress of that problem may require information derived through peaceful inquiry rather than that obtained through the cavalry scouts of an invading army. That information can not be obtained by the President's commission, headed by Denby, following in the rear of General Otis's army, and so long as that army marches on the enemy the commission dare not take the advance.

Our duty is first to exhaust all efforts at a peaceful solution—to seek peace rather than war. But the bill, on the other hand, is to make "a solitude and call it peace"—to enable General Otis to announce that "order reigns" in Manila—of the same kind which the French brought to Warsaw.

An American army can win no laurels in the Philippine Islands—victory over a shirtless enemy with bows and arrows, or even over those other natives armed with the captured guns of the Spaniards, will bring no great renown to the successors of the soldiers that stormed or defended the heights of Gettysburg or immortalized Chickamauga—in that tropical group where the deadly climate inflicts more losses than the enemy and disease is more fatal than fighting. Neither national glory nor national wealth is to be attained by military success in those distant and disease-ridden islands. While, on the other hand, both may be won by a magnanimous treatment of a weak and defeated foe. But to that most agreeable end a large standing army will contribute nothing.

If this country is at peace with all nations, I would have the Senate certify that fact to all the world by defeating a bill to organize and equip the largest standing army ever proposed in this country's history when war was not flagrant. If this country is still at war, I would have the Senate ascertain by what branch of the Government that war was declared or recognized—with what nation or people this country is now involved in war. If rebellion exists anywhere, I would have the Senate ascertain against what authority, and how that authority was established without the knowledge of the Senate.

It is still an open and debatable question whether the Constitution extends itself proprio vigore over the recognized Territories of the United States or must be extended by act of Congress. But I have never heard it urged that the Constitution followed the Army and Navy around the world, settling down over the lines of offense, and making citizens out of prisoners of war. I do not regard the President, as Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy, as capable of exercising the jus coronæ of England's Queen and acquiring dominions and peoples by the movements of armies and fleets.

I deny that authority to any President. I oppose the abdication of the constitutional power and duty of the Congress to declare war and of the Senate to unite with the Executive in re-establishing peace by giving a free hand to the President to recognize the existence of war in the Philippine Islands and to prosecute the same against a people with whom the Congress has not declared war. If constructively, the Filipinos being subjects of Spain, we are at war with them by virtue of the declaration of war against Spain, so also constructively we made peace with them when we made peace with Spain.

They are in a position for peace. No man can tell whether they are citizens of the United States and whether, if they are citizens, they can be rebels; or if they are not citizens, who can tell that they are not? That question is not yet in a state of solution. In my humble judgment we should defer all these matters until there is a certainty, until there is an established fact, and until we know that there is a well-defined line of policy upon the part of the Administration.

Instead, therefore, of a large standing army to prosecute a war without a declaration of war, the wiser policy would be to try the efficacy of peaceful advances and, if possible, ascertain whether there will be any necessity for a large standing army. It is indeed deplorable that a collision occurred around Manila after our splendid naval victory, but due consideration should be given to that unfortunate people. The victims of two hundred years of tyranny and oppression by Spain, it is not surprising that they mistrusted the continued presence of our Navy, the growing strength of our Army, the hurrying forward of reinforcements as soon as peace with Spain became apparent. "The smallest worm will turn, being trodden on."

The instinct of self-preservation, the prospect of further subjugation by an unknown people and an alien race, prompted that excitable people to acts of violence and wrong which have been properly avenged and punished. Before further acts of war and further destruction of life and property widen the deplorable breach it is possible that overtures of peace may render further war unnecessary and abate altogether any justification of a large standing army.

I am aware that by the terms of law the Army as it now is must be reduced, but I am also aware that such reduction was the intention and declaration and provision of this Congress. That reduction does not take the Executive authority unawares. It was deliberately provided for, because it was not the purpose to continue the standing Army on any other than a "peace footing" after peace with Spain was declared.

The afterthought of conquest is diametrically opposed to the original intention and declaration of Congress. Hence it is that afterthought that calls for a great standing army. But peace is the proper afterthought of war, and every effort ought to be exhausted to secure peace before complicating the difficulties with a large standing army.

I desire the peace, freedom, and independence of the Philippine Islands, and I do not want their subjugation, colonization, or annexation to this country.

And, Mr. President, upon the point in regard to whether they are citizens of the United States or not, we are involved in a large expenditure of $20,000,000. Why could we not have postponed action upon the treaty, as I think we ought to have done and as I, with some others, voted to do? Why could we not have postponed it until this matter involving $20,000,000 was settled and until this question of treatment of the islanders, which has brought us so much trouble, had been settled? It could have been done; but we hurried along, it seems, by some impulse of revolution, some impassioned feeling, such as governs men when war is in the air, and I fear we went into it without that due consideration its magnitude required.

Mr. President, the $20,000,000 has not been paid. It will be paid, of course, under existing conditions. It is part of our contract, and it will be paid unless something to justify its nonpayment should turn up to prevent it in the near future.

A mistake was made, as I think, as to the purchase of those islands for $20,000,000 of the people's money, tax ridden, as they are, when we really do not need or want them, and when they will inevitably be an incubus upon us. Living across the sea, at a distance of 7,000 miles, with Asiatic surroundings, a different race of people, speaking a different language, holding a different religion, ignorant, superstitious, and many of them semibarbarous, strangers to our political institutions, and unfamiliar with Anglo-Saxon tastes and ways, it can not be expected of them to assimilate with us in any essential way.

Furthermore, one of the chief objections is, that to have them under our protection and care will almost of necessity involve us in constant broils with foreign powers. Believing that the troubles liable to be entailed upon us because of the embarrassment resulting from the treaty of peace with Spain, I feel assured that my vote against said treaty was the proper one. To have delayed and secured an amendment to it would have relieved existing troubles.

Now, Mr. President, I have no criticism to make upon any member of the Military Committee of which I am a member; we differ about both the necessity and propriety of this bill. I oppose it openly for the reasons given, and believe that the organization of an army of 100,000 soldiers, in time of peace, is dangerous to any republic, and, if not an evil in itself, is a bad and dangerous precedent. It may not alarm some Senators, but it alarms me, and it will alarm the liberty-loving citizens and taxpayers, when they come to know its probable effect—when they come to see and feel it.

I say, therefore, without casting the slightest reflection, by imputation or otherwise, against any member of our committee, I beg to differ with them, and do so regretfully, but openly and frankly. What matters it if I stand alone on that great committee in opposition to its views, if I am right? And I believe I am, and that the near future will demonstrate it.

Again, I object to the bill because of the invidious distinction it makes against the volunteers in favor of the regular soldier, practically giving the regulars all the offices. Is it to be understood that henceforth the services of volunteers will be dispensed with in defense of the honor and interests of our country or to maintain the glory and grandeur which they have won for it?

Mr. President, I have no criticism on the regulars. The officers of our Regular Army are a source of pride to us, as they should be. Independent of their gallant fighting whenever occasion has offered, their personal bearing, graced with an esprit du corps, gives them a distinct characteristic as the representatives of the military spirit of our country, and we are proud of them as a class. But we look not with less favor on the patriotic, self-sacrificing, courageous volunteers who have fought for us so many battles and won so many victories and crowned our country with such unperishable honors. I further object to this bill for denying unto the volunteer the same official opportunities given to regular. It seems to forget his patriotism and valor that won for us our liberties. It seems to also forget his courage and devotion to the country in the war of 1812-1815, which brightened the page of history with the battles of Tippecanoe and the Thames and redeemed the great Northwest. It seems forgetful, too, of Talladega and Emucfau, and that brilliant victory at New Orleans that made immortal the 8th day of January. These battles and victories were won by volunteers. Ought the volunteer to be overlooked or set aside while the Black Fort at Monterey and the blood-stained heights of Buena Vista belong to history? or while the "Round bald hill-top" of Cerro Gordo, the old lava beds of Contreras and Churubusco, the plain of Molino del Rey, and the White Castle, sitting like a crown on the brow of old Chapultepec as it overlooks the halls of the Montezumas, live in the memory of this and future generations, when it is history that volunteers were the chief actors on those bloody fields?

Let us see for a moment the fruits of the patriotism and valor of those volunteers; see the thousand miles of coast on the Pacific that they brought unto us, with rivers and harbors, mountains and plains—aye, with the golden apples of California passed into our Treasury on waiters of silver from Nevada. Behold all this and rebuke if you will, even by implication, with silence and invidious distinction, as does this bill, that volunteer system under which they won for us so many victories and brought unto us a renown unsurpassed.

Mr. KENNEY. Mr. President, I desire to send to the desk and have read for the information of the Senate some amendments that I shall propose to the pending bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CHILTON in the chair). The amendments will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Amendments intended to be proposed by Mr. KENNEY to the bill (H. R. 11022) for the reorganization of the Army of the United States, and for other purposes, viz:

On page 1, in line 11, after the word "corps," insert the following "a veterinary corps."

On page 2, in line 12, strike out the words "two veterinarians."

On page 3 strike out all after the word "privates," in line 7, down to and including the word "regulations," in line 19.

On page 7, at the end of section 7, add the following:

"SEC. — That the veterinary corps shall consist of a chief veterinary officer, with the rank, pay, and allowances of a colonel, United States Army; 10 veterinarians, each with the rank, pay, and allowances of a first lieutenant of cavalry; and 20 veterinarians, each with the rank, pay, and allowances of a second lieutenant of cavalry."

"The original vacancies in the force created by this section may be filled by selections from veterinarians who have served in the armies of the United States in the war with Spain or from civil life: Provided, That no person shall be appointed a lieutenant in this corps until he shall have passed a satisfactory examination as to his physical, moral, and professional qualifications before a board to be appointed by the Secretary of War, of which board the chief veterinary officer shall be one, whose proceedings and findings shall first be approved by the Secretary of War.

"All rules and regulations governing the veterinary corps shall be made by the Secretary of War, and the chief veterinary officer shall report directly to that officer."

Mr. KENNEY. Mr. President, I shall trespass upon the time of the Senate as briefly as possible in an endeavor to explain some of the reasons why, in my judgment, the amendments which have just been read should be incorporated into the bill now pending in the Senate.

In any reorganization of the Army of the United States there is no question of more importance to its efficiency and welfare than a properly established veterinary corps. In and out of the Army for many years there have been men who have appreciated the value and necessity of a veterinary corps in our Army, and on more than one occasion bills looking to that end have been formulated and presented to Congress, but none have ever been enacted into law.

Most of the European nations have as a part of their military establishment well-organized veterinary corps.

The English army has a principal veterinary surgeon with the rank of colonel, a first-class veterinary surgeon attached to each army corps, a first-class veterinary surgeon attached to the inspector-general of the line of communication, with subordinate grades of veterinary surgeons and veterinary surgeons on probation.

The French army has 5 first-class principal veterinary surgeons with the rank of colonel, 10 second-class principal veterinary surgeons with the rank of lieutenant-colonel and major, 123 first veterinary surgeons with the rank of captain, 233 second veterinary surgeons with the rank of first lieutenant, 91 assistant veterinary surgeons with the rank of sublieutenant.

The German army has an inspector-general of the military veterinary medical service with the rank of colonel of cavalry, to each army corps a veterinary inspector, to each regiment a staff veterinary surgeon, and to every squadron, battery, or train battalion a first or second class veterinary surgeon, all commissioned officers.

In the Italian army there is an inspector-general of military veterinary medicine with the rank of colonel, 1 veterinarian with rank of colonel and 1 with rank of lieutenant with inspector-general's office at headquarters of the army; 2 with rank of lieutenant-colonel and 10 with that of major to the 12 army corps as inspectors of public animals; 24 with rank of captain and 48 with rank of lieutenant to the 24 regiments of cavalry; 12 with rank of captain and 24 with rank of lieutenant to the 12 regiments of artillery; 12 with rank of captain and 36 with rank of lieutenant to the battalions of the train; 3 with rank of lieutenant to engineer corps; 1 rank of captain to military school; 1 rank of captain, 2 rank of lieutenant, to cavalry school.

If veterinary service is so important in foreign armies, it should not be less valuable in the Army of the United States. If the humane sentiment in the countries mentioned sanctions such an elaborate organization to provide proper care and treatment for animals, should not the United States take an equally advanced position in this respect? In my judgment it should, and no better or more fitting time could be found than now.

The efficiency of an army in the field does and must depend upon the health and strength of its force, and the health and strength of the troop and battery animals are as much to be desired as that of the men. To be certain of the efficiency of army animals is most important.

Of first importance in this regard is that animals purchased for army service should be inspected, before acceptance, by men who are in every way competent to inspect, and the graduate professional veterinarian is the one who alone can and does fill this requirement. Next is the proper care of the health of these animals after they have become the property of the Government, and again there is but one who can be charged with this responsibility—the veterinarian. Not alone are we to be benefited by the incorporation of this corps into our Army because of what it will do in the selection and care of animals necessary to its organization, but as well will this corps be most valuable in the inspection of flesh food for our troops. It is the veterinarian who, by reason of his education and experience, is best able to pass upon the fitness of animal food for our Army.

I venture the assertion that had we had a properly and well organized veterinary corps during the late war with Spain upon which had rested the responsibility for the selection and care of army animals and inspection of meat for our soldiers, many thousands of dollars would have been saved to the Government and the deplorable condition now existing in the War Department would never have been. The necessity for such a corps does to me seem apparent when the value of army animals is taken into consideration. The following figures show the number and cost of army animals to the Government for the periods named:

	Peace period, from July 1, 1897, to March 31, 1898 (nine months).			War period, from April 1, 1898, to August 31, 1898 (five months).
	Number.	Total cost.	Average cost.	Number.	Total cost.	Average cost.
Cavalry horses.....	608	$84,274.50	$139.15	10,743	$1,078,813.82	$100.42
Artillery horses.....	118	16,200.00	137.79	2,551	333,897.11	130.85
Draft horses.....	30	5,776.50	192.55	1,137	142,561.75	125.38
Riding horses.....	1	123.75	123.75	*2,115	164,330.00	77.70
Bell horses.....				32	11,505.00	49.84
Pack horses.....				40	1,200.00	30.00
Draft mules.....	215	21,400.48	99.54	17,515	1,927,008.40	110.05
Pack mules.....	38	2,771.00	72.93	2,667	221,774.00	83.15
Total.....	1,079	130,672.83		38,800	3,871,600.08

* Includes 1,500 little horses for Cuban service.

From this statement it will be seen that during the period of five months, viz, from April 1 to September 1, 1898, the cost to the Government for horses and mules for all branches of the service was little short of $1,000,000.

The following extract from the report of the legislative committee of the American Veterinary Medical Association I desire to read:

The proper selection and care of the horses, mules, and other animals in the cavalry, artillery, and transportation service and of those taken to be slaughtered for subsistence is a very important consideration, and upon it must depend to a large extent the efficiency and success of the Army.

Horses should be selected with a view to proper size and conformation for the service in which they are to be used; they should be free from lameness and other forms of unsoundness, the mares should not be pregnant, and all animals should be specially examined for contagious diseases. These points can only be determined by a competent veterinarian. They would be passed upon most carefully by an official with rank and responsibility who would be held to a proper accountability for the condition of the animals.

When horses and mules in the service are injured or become lame, it is important that they should be skillfully treated. If contagious diseases, such as glanders, break out, the proper measures should be at once taken to prevent the spread of the contagion and to stamp it out. Such measures can be intelligently formulated and enforced by expert veterinarians only.

The provision in the bill for two veterinarians with the rank of second lieutenant mounted for each cavalry regiment makes the position of such veterinarians more agreeable, and will have a tendency to secure better men and to give them some standing and authority. But it should be understood that this does not provide an adequate veterinary service. It leaves the artillery, the transportation service, the inspection of public animals, and the military schools without military veterinarians. It also fails to provide veterinary advice for the War Department or the headquarters of the Army. Surely there should be at least one veterinarian of greater ability and experience than can be obtained for the pay of a second lieutenant, who can advise as to the medicines, instruments, regulations, and orders to be issued to the veterinarians in the several regiments. There should be some one with the most expert knowledge to see that the regulations are carried out and that contagious diseases are properly guarded against and suppressed. The experience of the past summer should be sufficient demonstration of this fact.

In 1890 Dr. R. S. Huidekoper, late chief medical director, First Army Corps, of Philadelphia, Pa., in an address before the students of the veterinary department of the University of Pennsylvania on this subject said:

In the Middle Ages we find frequent mention of veterinarians attached to the bodies of troops who bristled at the heels of all the kings and great nobles of Europe. First in Italy and Spain, and later in France and Germany, the necessity of expert care of war horses was recognized, and we find mention of military veterinarians who were held in much esteem. Under the first Republic in France Lafosse, who had formerly been veterinarian at the court of the King, was appointed inspector-general of the horses in the cavalry. In the first year after the foundation of the Alfort Veterinary School officers from the armies of Austria, Prussia, and Denmark were enrolled among its students.

In 1760, A. D., each cavalry regiment of the French army furnished one student to the school, and in 1774 the French Government established twenty free scholarships for students who would agree to enter the army after finishing their studies. Later the number was raised to forty. While the veterinary schools in France are in charge of the department of agriculture, the department of war takes an active interest in them, and the army secures about one-half of the graduates each year. The end of the last century and the beginning of the present one saw veterinary schools established in all the countries of Europe, either directly by the government or with government aid, except in England, where the schools have always been private enterprises.

In the more peaceful countries, like Switzerland and Denmark, the schools are attached to the departments of agriculture, but receive support from the departments of war, and furnish in return veterinarians to the army. In France and Prussia the schools have been in turn under the direction of the minister of war and of agriculture. In Prussia the army controls over nine-tenths of all the students. Many of these enlist, and after carrying the musket for one year, are sent to the Berlin school in uniform and under pay, where they receive their education at the expense of the Government. For each six months at the school the soldier has to serve one year as a veterinarian in the army, so with the three and a half years required at this school, the service is seven years. If a student fails in one half-year examination, and has to take an extra six months' instruction, he is called on to serve his eighth year in the army before he can retire to the more profitable civil offices and private practice.

In Austria the veterinary school was founded at Vienna by Maria Theresa and completed by the Emperor Joseph II, essentially as a military institution, which it is to-day, under the direction of the department of war. The discipline is strictly military, and the destination of the greater percentage of the students is the army. In Russia and Italy the veterinary schools are classed more closely with the general educational institutions, but both have a majority of military students. In the former country the same system of free education for future military service that exists in Prussia is in vogue. It is only within the last half century that the army veterinarians of Europe have been commissioned officers.

In Prussia the veterinarians enter the army as noncommissioned officers, and after two years receive the commission of lieutenant; but it must be remembered that the army surgeon in the same country only became a commissioned officer in 1845. In all other civilized countries except the United States the veterinarian enters as a lieutenant and may be promoted to the rank of colonel. In France the veterinarians became officers, with a definitely organized corps, in 1843. During the several years previous to this the loss of horses in the French army was from 80 to 85 per 1,000; in 1845 it fell to 77 per 1,000. In 1852 the service was improved by increase of pay, pension, and retirement, securing better veterinarians, and the annual loss fell to 67 per 1,000. In 1860 considerably increased pay again attracted better men, and the loss fell to 23 per 1,000.

Dr. Schwartzkopff, in speaking of the present Army veterinarians, says:

If we now review the professional position of the veterinary surgeon we find that he has but little support in regard to his duties and privileges. Very little is said about it in the Army regulations and cavalry tactics, and this with open cautiousness. This puts the veterinary surgeon in a doubtful place and his position is dependent by favor or disfavor of his commanding officer and his special orders in regard to veterinary matters. No office or veterinary hospital is given him; he is compelled to go to the different stables for the treatment of the sick animals.

The gathering together and carrying of implements from one stable to another in special cases causes trouble and delay, and much treatment must be omitted by want of proper medicine, instruments, and any arrangement for certain diseases. The veterinary surgeon gets but little willing assistance from the farrier and shoeing smith, who logically should be his subordinates. But he has no authority over them, his instructions are carelessly executed, and his orders in the treatment and shoeing of horses often changed by others in authority, who measure their competence to indulge in the practice of scientific medicine among horses by virtue of their rank, which the veterinary surgeon does not possess.

Now, the responsibility of the troop commander over his horses under treatment of a veterinary surgeon is a great drawback, as it prevents the latter from using his judgment and energies in critical cases, for it is almost certain that a difference of opinion may exist, and all exact knowledge and practice gained by years of studying in colleges and universities goes to naught by reason of prejudice and superstition. But cavalry tactics require of officers that they shall be able to treat all ordinary cases of injury and disease in horses. This is exactly the point in view one hundred years ago, but to-day is an absurdity. The only competent authority to treat disease in horses is the veterinary surgeon, and he alone should be responsible for the proper medical treatment.

But the general rules of the hygienic care of horses in their natural condition, the knowledge of hippology, should be well known to every cavalry officer. To be a good horseman is a necessary qualification of a cavalry officer, and gives him a wide field of studies, as hippology contains: The history of the horse, the history of the art of breeding, training, saddling, riding; also the sanitary care and economy of the horses in regard to the principles and practice of stabling, feeding, watering, grooming, and finally the knowledge of the exterior conformation of the horse on a general anatomical basis, with the view of proper judgment for the purchase of horses to the different branches of the service. But quite separate from modern hippology is veterinary medicine and surgery; that is absolutely a medical science of vast extent.

It is a deplorable fact that the United States is far behind European nations in the matter of veterinary surgery. It is the only Government in the world that does not make its Army veterinarians commissioned officers. This defect must be apparent to every man who has the slightest understanding of military matters. Contract veterinarians who have no official authority are as helpless as can be in the enforcement of orders.

It has been said to me that the young officers of the Army oppose the provision covered by these amendments, for the reason they do not want to be ranked by horse doctors. Mr. President, does not every well-informed person know that to-day the brightest and most exclusive young men of the country are veterinarians; and that the classes in veterinary surgery of the great universities and colleges of this country have among their numbers young men of the very highest classes in the land? The tramp horse doctor of half a century ago and the veterinarian of to-day are no more akin than are the doctors of medicine of to-day and the barber bloodletters of centuries ago.

I know of no calling or profession more to be honored and encouraged than that which labors for the care, relief, and improvement of our domestic animals.

No dishonor can attach to anyone by contact or association with such men. The fact is, the Army will be the better when they are a part thereof.

The present system can not but bring to the service men of inferior abilities, and while there are many men in the service of much fitness, yet a veterinarian of high class can not seek Government service where his authority can be questioned by the men in the ranks.

Now, therefore, Mr. President, I hope that the amendments just read will be adopted, for the reason that if reorganization of the Army is to be had, no more advanced step can be taken than one which will engraft on our Army service a veterinary corps. I hold that the expense of the corps will be paid and money saved by its adoption.

The losses to our Government during the last war in horses by reason of a lack of proper medical care would support for years a veterinary corps as provided in these amendments.

In this connection, Mr. President, I desire to submit, and ask to have printed as a part of my remarks, without reading it, a letter from Dr. Leonard Pearson, the dean of the department of veterinary medicine of the University of Pennsylvania.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The letter referred to will be printed, in the absence of objection.

The letter referred to is as follows:

UNIVERSITY OF PENNSYLVANIA,
DEPARTMENT OF VETERINARY MEDICINE,
Philadelphia, February 15, 1899.

DEAR SIR: One of the provisions of the Army reorganization bill that has recently been passed by the House of Representatives gives veterinarians in cavalry regiments the rank of second lieutenant.

The office of veterinarian in the United States Army has always been without rank, dignity, authority, or adequate compensation. The position has therefore been of a most humiliating description and one that an educated and self-respecting man could not long endure.

All of the leading civilized nations, including England, Germany, France, Italy, Russia, and Spain, have competent army veterinary departments, and their army veterinarians have commissioned rank or position corresponding thereto. In England the chief veterinarian ranks as colonel; in Russia, as general.

There are now in this country numerous veterinary schools—some independent, some connected with universities, such as Harvard, Cornell, Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Iowa—that prepare veterinarians for the work of their profession as thoroughly as physicians are prepared.

The veterinary profession is now recognized as of importance and dignity, and it is evident that veterinarians must have a good education and full scientific equipment to meet the new and enlarged demands of their calling. There can be no doubt that a properly organized army veterinary service would save several times the amount of its cost annually in the improvement of the quality of remounts and the increased term of usefulness of the army horses, provided the positions are made such as well-trained men can accept without sacrifice of self-respect.

On these grounds, may I ask you to support the provision in the Army reorganization bill that confers the rank of second lieutenant on veterinarians in cavalry regiments?

Yours, very truly,

LEONARD PEARSON, Dean.

HON. RICHARD B. KENNEY,
Senate Chamber, Washington, D. C.

Mr. KENNEY. Mr. President, I have endeavored to explain as best I could the reasons why these amendments should be ingrafted upon the bill now pending before the Senate, but whether agreed to or rejected, nevertheless, to my mind, there seems no reason why the bill now under consideration should not be enacted into law.

The permanent increase of the Army is but 10,000 men, making an Army of 38,000 men for 70,000,000 people. If 28,000 men have been found necessary for the last twenty years, certain it is that 38,000 for the future is such an increase as is justified by our increased population and territory.

In 1830 the population of the United States was 38,000,000 and we had an army of 10,000 men. In 1882 our Army was organized at 25,000 men, and at that time the country's population was 50,000,000. To-day our population is not less than 70,000,000 and the strength of the proposed standing Army is to be but 38,000 men; and in this estimate of our population I have not considered the thousands who have come to us through the annexation of Hawaii and the conquest of Porto Rico.

This bill by its very terms limits the Army to 38,000 after July 1, 1901, and there will be needed no legislation hereafter for its organization, all that being provided for in this bill. Now, Mr. President, as to the strength of the Army from now until July 1, 1901. Under the existing conditions I take it there is not a Senator on this floor who can successfully contend it is too large, unless it is to be first conceded that our arms are to be at once withdrawn from the Philippines and Cuba; a thing which, no matter how desirable a while ago, can not now for a moment be considered.

The American people have always been equal to any and every emergency, and I am confident that they will prove equal to the present one, and that out of all the trying circumstances now surrounding us the proper solution will in the end be found, and that we shall prove to ourselves and the world that every sacrifice made in all this matter has been for the betterment of mankind and his moral and political advancement.

I am not, Mr. President, one of those who, in the light of the conditions that confront us, fear harm to our institutions from this increased army. This army is, in fact, to be a volunteer army; in its personnel not unlike that which responded to the President's call in April last; Americans, men from every walk in life, men from every section of our great country. In it will march and fight, if fighting be necessary, shoulder to shoulder, men from Maine with men from Florida, Washington, and Wisconsin.

Yes, Mr. President, it will be an American army, and one to every man of whom the traditions and institutions of our country are and will be as dear as to you and I. There will be no Hessians in this army, and no men nor any power can use them against freedom and personal liberty. If there be those who have fears on this score, let them study who are to make up this army and their fears must be dispelled.

We voted the war; it was the people's war. Victory has come, and with it the consequences and responsibilities of victory. The step was taken for the emancipation of men held in bondage, men brutalized and outraged by their masters. Their emancipation has come, and with it the high moral and national obligation to us to protect and guide those emancipated until such time when they will understand, when the scales shall have dropped from their eyes and they see liberty and understand freedom as we enjoy it, and are welded other links in the great chain of free peoples which shall in the end encircle the world. For that protection and for that guidance this bill provides, and should be passed.

I agree with the distinguished Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL].—"I believe it is right in the sight of God and man"—and, like him, I am willing to take my share of the responsibility for its enactment. The President whom the people chose in 1896 asks for it—says it is necessary; and on him and his Administration must rest the responsibility for the proper exercise of the powers therein granted. The same people who chose him in 1896 will hold him and his Administration to the strictest accountability, and it is seldom that the people's verdict is error.

Mr. CHANDLER. I ask for a vote on the pending amendment.

Mr. VEST. I did not hear the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. CHANDLER. I asked for a vote upon the pending amendment.

Mr. VEST. Mr. President, I am as anxious as is the Senator from New Hampshire to dispose of the pending bill. I wish to say now that under no circumstances will I indulge in any factious opposition to the determination of its fate. I have so much respect for my colleague, and know so well how gallant and experienced a soldier he was and is, that I can not content myself with simply voting in opposition to him upon this legislation, but feel it my duty in a very few words to say why I am opposed to his views upon this matter.

Mr. President, I have tried to bring myself to the conclusion that it is my duty to vote for an increase of the Army. I have argued faithfully and earnestly with myself upon that subject, and I am compelled to say that I do not believe this war in the Philippines is for the purpose of enabling their people at any time to determine the form of their own government.

I believe as much as I believe I am now in the Senate of the United States that the Philippines are being taken as indemnity for the expenses of this war, and that they are to be held as the absolute property of this Government. I make no assertions upon my personal knowledge; I know the rules of the Senate and the duties of a Senator; if I do not know them, I never will; but I ask the friends of this bill and the advocates of expansion to state now whether the assertions in the public press, repeatedly made by newspapers, which have never agreed with me in regard to territorial expansion and have, on the contrary, assailed me most bitterly for my position, are true, that the President of the United States telegraphed to our commissioners at Paris to take nothing less than Luzon; that Porto Rico was worth only $40,000,000 and would not pay for the expenses of the war, and that it was necessary to take the Philippines in order to settle the account. Is it true or is it false?

Mr. FRYE. It is not true.

Mr. VEST. Were not dispatches to that effect sent to the commission?

Mr. FRYE. Not to that effect, even.

Mr. VEST. Was there not a dispatch sent that nothing less than Luzon must be taken?

Mr. FRYE. The instruction of the President when we started was to take Luzon.

Mr. VEST. To take Luzon; was there not a dispatch to the effect that Porto Rico was worth only $40,000,000, and would not pay the expenses of the war?

Mr. FRYE. There was not, or anything of the kind.

Mr. VEST. Was no mention made of Porto Rico in connection with indemnity?

Mr. FRYE. Not at all. The Senator will pardon me. The Senator has heard read in executive session every telegram, every cable, and every letter of instruction that passed between the President of the United States and the commissioners.

Mr. VEST. Mr. President, I make no issue as to what I heard in executive session. I stated what was published in the imperialist press of this country, and it never has been contradicted until the Senator from Maine says now that nothing was said in regard to any indemnity in connection with the island of Porto Rico. As to what occurred in executive session, it can only be settled in one way; that is, by making public to the people of the United States what those dispatches were. For the purposes of my argument, I content myself with the admission of the Senator from Maine that the President did instruct his commissioners not to take anything less than Luzon.

If that be so, then how does the President in his Boston speech say that this contingency has come upon as the act of God; that there has been no disposition to exercise the power of conquest; that the people of the United States are called upon under an overruling Providence to dispose of responsibilities placed upon them by the accident of battle. Why was nothing less than Luzon to be taken? Why was Luzon to be taken? If not as indemnity, for what? If it was not to be the property of the United States in any contingency, why did the President instruct the commissioners not to take anything less than Luzon?

His Excellency tells us now in his Boston speech that he is a mere instrument of Providence; that he can not restrain himself in discharging the duty which the fortune of war has placed upon him; that he, as the representative of this great Republic, must deny to the people of the Philippines the right to choose their own government and lead them by force, to the music of Gatling guns and the rattling of musketry, to a higher and better civilization.

Sir, I know but one parallel to this Christian philanthropy, and that is to be found in the works of Charles Dickens, when an eminent divine placed his ecclesiastical hand upon a vagrant, called Poor Joe, and said to him: "Young man, come with me, and I will do you good." "Let me alone," said Joe. "Take your hands off my shoulder." In solemn and sepulchral tones, equal to those of my friend the Senator from Montana, the Rev. Mr. Chadband replied: "Young man, I will not take my hands from your shoulder. I am a toiler and a molder, and I intend to do you good in spite of yourself." So now His Excellency puts his hands upon the Filipinos, and when they say "Hands off! Let us alone; let us follow your Declaration of Independence and govern ourselves as we please," he says "No, Filipino; I am a toiler and a molder, and I intend to lead you to a higher and a better civilization in spite of yourself," if it takes 100,000 missionaries with guns in their hands to carry out that divine and ecclesiastical intention.

Under the Constitution of the United States the power is given to Congress to make war and to furnish supplies to the Army. It becomes my duty as a member of the Senate, notwithstanding the treaty has been approved, to exercise my judgment under my oath as to whether I will vote supplies and men to carry on a war which I believe to be unconstitutional, un-Christian, in violation of the legends and traditions of this Republic, and an outrage upon humanity and upon the cause of personal and religious liberty throughout the world.

I beg pardon, or I ought to have to beg pardon, for mentioning the Constitution. It is an effete instrument. It has been relegated to the lumber room, not to be brought out except upon rare occasions, in celebrating the Fourth of July or the 22d of February. General Merritt, one of the heroes of the war, a major-general in the United States Army, is reported to have said at the New England banquet that the Constitution of the United States had been outgrown by this country and there was no longer any use to mention it.

General Shafter, another hero of the war, is reported to have said at another banquet that he would kill half the population of the Philippines in order to reduce the other half to subjection. I will not believe for an instant that a soldier meant by this that he would destroy 5,000,000 men, women, and children, but I take it that he meant that he would shoot down one-half the arms-bearing population of the Philippines in order to make the other half subservient to the will of the Government of the United States.

I have no doubt that every man who dares to vote against supplies to carry on the legitimate and logical results of the approval of this treaty will be branded with treason. The Senator from Montana was kind enough to warn us the other day, when we opposed the treaty, that we were perilously near the verge of treason. Mr. President, I had brought myself to the beatific condition of hoping that treason and the bloody shirt would no more be heard of in this Chamber.

After WHEELER had led Confederate and Union veterans side by side up that bloody hill at Santiago; after Fitzhugh Lee and Butler and Oates of Alabama had put on the Federal uniform and were marching under the United States flag; after our President had worn the Confederate button in the South and piously devoted himself to the care of Confederate cemeteries, I supposed that the bloody shirt had become a thing of the past. But we must have it again, it seems, and all those who dare to think that this war in the Philippines is not justified and that it will involve the loss of thousands of precious lives unnecessarily, that it will be a charge upon the people of this country and upon our children after us, the extent of which no man dares to compute, will be called disloyal to the country and ready again to precipitate it into civil war.

So be it, Mr. President. If this sort of accusation is pleasant to the men who make it, let them indulge themselves in the luxury. For myself I dispose of it with the single assertion that the man who says in this Chamber or out of it that I am not as much devoted as he to the honor and welfare of this country utters a willful and deliberate falsehood. If stated, it is slander; if written, it is libel. I am not actuated by any sentimental sympathy for the people of this archipelago.

I would not give the life of one American boy for any matter of sentiment in regard to any foreign people upon the face of the earth. I do not believe that this war can be stopped in years if the present policy of the Administration is pursued. I believe that thousands of men will be required in order to occupy those islands and to hold them. I believe that the policy upon which we are now entering is one of continual war and that we are deliberately preparing ourselves for war by land and sea if we now vote for the present bill and follow it up with measures which will be necessary after it is enacted.

Mr. President, does any intelligent man believe for an instant that we can enter into the maelstrom of oriental politics with the nations of the world, armed and vigilant and jealous, unless we increase our Navy enormously and also our Army? England today has 80 battle ships of the first and second class, and 591 vessels of war, auxiliary cruisers, transports, and others, besides. Are we to build a navy equal to that of England? How long will it take to do it? And how many hundreds of millions of dollars must be expended?

Are we to have an army at all like those of the Continent, standing to-day armed and ready to assail each other in order to preserve the balance of power in Europe? Germany, with her six hundred and odd thousand men upon a peace footing, and able to put 3,000,000 soldiers in the field in case of war; France, with five hundred and odd thousand in time of peace, and able to put two and a half millions in the field in time of war; Russia, with 750,000 soldiers sleeping upon the ground in November on until June, ready at any time to obey the commands of the Czar, and the Empire ready to put 3,000,000 men in the field on a few hours' notice to fight under its flag. Are we to enter into such armaments as these?

Mr. President, I know that nothing I can say will influence a single vote to prevent the inevitable conclusion that must come. Fifty-seven Senators voted for this treaty, and voted for it the day after 4,000 Filipinos had fallen before the Gatling guns of our Government. Those 57 Senators knew what it meant. They knew these Malays must be conquered, and if I had voted for the treaty and had been one of the 57 I would accept the inevitable and logical result and vote for all the men and all the money the President required in his new policy.

But we are told that we passed a resolution that settles this question and saves over the conscience of the most timid in regard to expansion. Mr. President, the McEnery resolution is dead—dead in the coordinate branch of Congress, and will never be heard of again except as a part of the parliamentary history of this struggle. If enacted it would amount to nothing. It has served its purpose. It was a mere pretext, a Bridge of Sighs upon which certain Senators could pass from one side of the expansion question to the other. It declared that the Philippines should never come in as a State; it declared that they should never be held as a colony, but it declared that the people of the United States should determine when the Filipinos were prepared for self-government. Will any Senator undertake to explain to me how that declaration is consistent with the great doctrine that all governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed?

I say it is a crime for any nation, no matter how powerful or enlightened, to impose upon any other nation or people, however poor, ignorant, or degraded, a government to which they are opposed. I say it is a crime for any people, no matter how enlightened or powerful, to deny to another, no matter how ignorant or poor or degraded, the right to choose their own government; and I say it in the name of that sublime declaration of human rights which declares that all governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed.

If this nation is to determine when another shall have the right to govern themselves, then we declare the purest absolutism that has been known in the history of the world. No tyrant ever trained his guns upon the people of a territory he wished to acquire until he had told them, "We do this for your good, and to elevate and Christianize and civilize you." George III and Lord North said to the people of the thirteen colonies, our fathers, "You are not fit for self-government. We will govern you. We will lead you out of the low and ignorant paths you are pursuing and elevate you to the high civilization of England."

Has any Senator here read that most interesting of all modern novels, Hugh Wynne, from the pen of Dr. Weir Mitchell, of Philadelphia? If he has not, let him do it, and he will see a picture of colonial times in this country that will go with him to the last of his life. He will find the aristocracy of Philadelphia sneering at Mr. Washington and his ignorant and ragged battalions. He will find the fashionable dames of that metropolis grasping their silken skirts as they passed by what they termed "some rebel woman," in order to avoid the contamination of the touch. He will find ministers of the gospel, then, as now, subservient to wealth and power and preaching allegiance to the Crown, and saying, "These poor, miserable rebels, led by Mr. Washington, of Virginia, do not know what they want, do not know what they need. We must take them and lead them to the high plane upon which we live."

Mr. President, the new system upon which we are entering is a system based upon war. In the long reign of Queen Victoria under the colonial system there have never been two consecutive years in which Great Britain was at peace with the entire world. It is a system opposed to prosperity. In the last seven years, according to statistics, the commerce of Great Britain has fallen off more than 5 per cent and ours has increased 18. For one hundred years this country has been growing in wealth, growing in prosperity, growing in all the elements of national greatness, and yet we have not had one single colony.

Great Britain has eighty-nine times as much area in her colonies as in her home country, and her 36,000,000 people rule nearly 340,000,000 in different parts of the globe, and yet the statistics show that we have outstripped her in the race for wealth and power and greatness. What do we want with the Philippines? What good can they do us? Two Senators upon this floor have visited the Philippines. Both of them voted for this treaty, and both will tell you to-day that the step we are now taking is one of disaster, almost of ruin. The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SEWELL], who spoke to us Saturday, told us with the frankness that characterizes all he says that he went to the President, and, to use his own language, he begged him for God's sake to stop, take Dewey away from Manila after destroying the Spanish fleet, and let those islands alone.

Mr. President, it is said here that this increase of troops is not to be used in the Philippines except to maintain order. Unquestionably they are not to be used in Porto Rico. I traveled recently to Florida with General Brooke, and he told me, as he will tell any Senator in this body, that the people of Porto Rico are in absolute peace and anxious to be annexed to the United States. No soldiers are needed there. They are not needed in Cuba, for my colleague told us the other day that a child could pass from one extremity of Cuba to another without molestation. They are not needed in the United States, because the Indians are absolutely helpless and beyond possibility can make no war upon this Government.

The Senator from Montana tells us that property in different places is under the protection of two or three soldiers. No more, thank God, are needed. It is the highest compliment to the people of the United States that two or three soldiers can protect hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of property, and that property be in absolute security. Where, then, do we need these soldiers? We can only need them in the Philippines, and for what purpose? To make good the title that Spain gave us by the treaty of Paris, and for which we are to pay $20,000,000. What was that title? It was title to a revolution, to bloodshed, to war. Will any Senator pretend to say here that the authorities of the United States did not know that a struggle for independence was going on in the Philippines at the time we declared war against Spain?

Consul-General Williams at Manila sent a dispatch in July, 1898, to the authorities at Washington, stating that 5,000 insurgents were then encamped in sight of Manila, and that the rebellion, as he termed it, was more powerful than ever before. In a week afterwards he telegraphed that there were 1,000 insurgents to every Spanish soldier or civilian to be found in Luzon.

Did we not know when we declared war with Spain and when the treaty was made that the Filipinos, after their fashion, were claiming independence? Are we to say to them now, "You are not capable of self-government, and although we used you in the war and armed you in order to fight for your own claim, we will now turn our guns upon you, our former allies, and answer your appeals with shot and shell?"

Mr. President, I say now what I said when I spoke for the war with Spain to achieve the independence of Cuba. When it was urged here by the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY] and others that the people of Cuba were not fit for self-government, I said then the love of liberty is not found with the great and rich and powerful; it does not dwell in palaces, but in the hovels of the poor, who have nothing else but liberty to console them in their humble walk through life. If those people were ignorant and poor and weak, so much more the duty of this great Republic, that has taught them the lesson, to assist them to arrive at self-government, no matter how poor a government they may adopt.

We were told when opposing the treaty that we were responsible for every drop of blood that should be spilled in the Philippines; that if the treaty should be confirmed, peace would at once come and not another gun be fired. The treaty has been approved, and this morning's telegram brings to us the news that the Filipinos are in arms, that more troops are required, and that Admiral Dewey has telegraphed for the Oregon for political purposes in those islands.

But I will hurry through with what little I have to say. I am told that the pending measure is a great improvement upon that originally proposed in the coordinate branch of the Government; that this is merely temporarily an increase of the Army, and that after July, 1901, the Army will be remitted back to a force of 37,000. Mr. President, that is but a comparison of the evils. It is like telling me that one ulcer is simply smaller than the other. With my convictions in regard to the purpose for which these troops are to be used, I might just as well vote for a million men as to vote for 100,000. If I believe these soldiers are to be used for a purpose not justified by the Constitution and antagonistic to the prosperity of my country, I can not, as an honest legislator or citizen, vote for a single man or a single dollar for any such purpose.

But, Mr. President, I know, if my experience in legislation is worth anything, that this Army, temporarily increased until July, 1901, will never, never, be decreased. You might as well talk about taking the right of suffrage from a people to whom it has been given. You might as well expect to limit appropriations by saying that so many thousand dollars may be expended. The Army will never be less than what we make it to-day; and when we put in simply this provision for a temporary increase, it amounts with me to the same thing as a permanent adjustment.

When we put our feet on this path of expansion, we are bound to follow the road to which it legitimately comes. We must increase the Navy, increase the Army, provide for the transportation of troops, furnish men to be slaughtered, and then pay an enormous pension roll, as the result of a useless, wicked, and, in my judgment, criminal war.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, it is needless to say that the subject now before the Senate is most interesting. It is disagreeably interesting. Taking the situation in the Philippine Islands, which has been so accurately described by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST], we find a people numbering from 7,000,000 to 10,000,000 who desire a government of their own choice. They wish to conduct affairs as they think the situation ought to be conducted. We deny them that right. That they shall have a government of their choice is antagonistic to our present view. We desire them to have a government of our choice.

True they are some 7,000 miles from us; true they are exceedingly numerous; true we engage in this effort for humanity's sake and that men may live in happiness and carry out their views in accordance with the dictates of their consciences. But the situation has changed. The dove of peace hovers over the land, and the ratification of the Spanish treaty signalizes the termination of a war; and yet to-day in the Philippines the guns of those whom we have "rescued," to quote a Presidential expression, are turned against the redeemed, and we have turned our weapons against our alleged friends.

The President of the United States sees in the action of the Filipinos a very disagreeable condition. So do we all; but we define it, perhaps, differently. We have "rescued" them, says the Chief Magistrate, and they are ungrateful. From what have they been rescued? From Spanish domination; they have been saved from the yoke of Spain; now they are to pass, sub "jugum," under another master. Is it at all remarkable that those people, who have been taught to believe that this great Republic typifies independence and manhood and advancement, expect us to be honest? Is it peculiar that they should to-day resent our interference?

Mr. President, the honesty of Senators and legislators generally is challenged because they see fit in this place of responsibility to deny the justice of American action.

I will never forget a statement made in the early days of this Republic by Fisher Ames, when he said that he knew of no spectacle more sublime than that of a powerful nation kneeling before the altar of justice and sacrificing there alike her passion and her pride.

No one, I think, who is rational, and surely we claim to come within that category, denies this Republic to solve this question vi et armis. No one, I suppose, doubts that this great nation may summon into action the intelligence and power which she commands and stamp forever from life every person who treads the soil of the Philippine Isles. Hence, it can not be a question of national degradation, it can not be a matter of subserviency to any demand of those people, if we deal with them differently and at variance with the action which we have already disclosed. Our power precludes controversy.

Mr. President, I concur that whenever a struggle takes place where the people of this Republic must encounter antagonism, there is but one issue, and that is to make honorable contention, powerful and conclusive. But I think that there is a responsibility upon the members of the Congress of the United States to tell the truth. I believe this to be paramount. I see in this contention, sir, nothing that can add to our glory. I look at her achievements. They have been on the lines of peace.

I note at this moment a great effort to stimulate the American mind and to arouse us and our children and to transmit tradition of arms and military glory. When I hesitate but a moment over the bloody leaves of history I am compelled to appreciate that if we pass into the lines and follow the examples of other nations, we will, after all, move in that circle of history which seems to have been an unfortunate heritage of humanity.

Look at our own people. When we formed this great Republic we thought we were constructing broad and deep the foundations of nationality more solid than the granite of the ages. Upon that massive foundation let the governmental edifice rest. We see our great ships encountering the foe in every clime—triumphant always. We invoke our intelligence and our greatness, and we triumph upon every sea. We have taken the navies of Spain and have subdued them to our dictation. We have eradicated these armaments from the surface of the ocean.

We have won wherever a contention of arms has occurred. And what is the result? Pause a moment and reflect upon what we said in this Chamber some months ago. We spoke of a war for humanity. We denied that we were engaged in a struggle of battle for the mere purpose of military triumph or for that splendor which comes from death, destruction, and woe.

The war has passed. We enacted in the Senate a resolution drawn by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER] who sits here now, wherein we pledged ourselves to give to that people a government of their own choice. No human being has ever been able to answer the question as to why we have not done the same in the Philippine Islands. True it is said that the difficulty is that there has been resentment there.

But why has there been resentment, Mr. President? Because we have failed to define a policy. Here is the President of the United States, for whom personally I have, in common, I believe, with all American citizens, the most earnest respect. He states to us that he is not prepared to-day to say what policy ought to be adopted toward the Philippine Islands. But, Mr. President, if there is anything in the history of the American people, if there is any faith in those glowing words which sparkle through the Declaration of Independence, and which from the day when they were uttered have sent a thrill among all the peoples who aspire to liberty, it is that there should be independent thought and freedom from interference.

Are we here to rest our aspiration upon the silly pretext that the right of international alienation existed in Spain and that therefore we are empowered to deny to a people heretofore enslaved that free government for which men have lived and died and for which we have often contended in every arena from shore to shore? In no political contest has there ever been a dissenting vote upon that proposition.

See the present situation. It is a gloomy specter to me. I can not contemplate it with anything less than shame. I cordially agree with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST] who said that he would not give the life of one American boy who had struggled in the Filipino group for the entire affair. Nor would I. I heartily accentuate the expression to which I have adverted.

We have wandered from home, we have gone across the world, almost to the end of it, if I may use that expression, and have attempted to subjugate and to bring in harmony with us and to assimilate a people who care not for us. What do they aver to-day? Their leaders declare, and have declared within the last week, that they preferred the domination of Spain to that of this country.

Oh, think of it! We have engaged in a war. We have sacrificed not many but choice specimens of our people, the nobility of our ranks. I do not speak in titled phrase, but I talk of the consciences and manhood of those who have fallen, and for what? Will any man tell me in this body to-day that he sees anything which evidences an upward tendency upon the part of the American people in the conflict now progressing in the Philippine Islands? Will he tell me that the toiling people who have suffered, who have been placed upon the block, who have been subjected to diseases and death from the tyrant's hands, will profit by our intervention under procedure such as that which we are adopting?

Mr. President, I have a more drastic view of the situation and am more positive perhaps about it than any Senators in this body, save perhaps four or five. I would, if I had the power to do it, appoint three or four men of conceded ability and whom I thought to be possessed of intelligence. I would send them to Cuba and to the Philippine Islands, and I would formulate for those peoples a government and commission them upon the ways of freedom in accordance with their necessities and their needs.

It is arrant hypocrisy to say that you do not know what is best for them. Unless the whole history of the American people has been a living lie, we know that freedom is the heritage of man. And there may be a difference in this clime and that as to the method of the exercise of liberty; there may be a question as to whether this form of government or that statute or this law is better for this man or for that; but the sensible American, deeply schooled in the walks of independence, knows what is best, and can do it.

Look at Cuba. Where is the verification of your promise? I dislike to say it, but I feel it my duty to declare that I do not believe a great many people who are in power in this country intend to verify that solemn assurance. It is my belief that there will be contention and trouble.

I concur with the distinguished Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SEWELL] in the statement that there will be war in Cuba, and that the guns of this Republic which were directed against Spain will be directed against the people of that island. How vain and visionary are the theories of men when behind it all is the grim cause of lucre!

Why shall we have twenty, thirty, forty, or fifty thousand troops in Cuba? Gomez entered the city of Havana in triumphal acclaim; the crowd signalized his presence; but he has no connection with the government of that island.

Why do you throng Cuba with your troops? Why do you fill that island with armed men? Against whom are you contending? The effete Spanish monarchy has been ejected from the island; her vessels have been sunk in the sea. Absolutely deprived of potentiality, she views her power fallen to a state which she can not to any extent remedy, alter, or avoid. Why, then, shall the soldiers of this free Republic, this Republic that promised freedom to the people of Cuba—why shall they be there with arms, with cannon and rifles, and Maxim and Gatling guns?

What does it mean, Mr. President? There is no solution of it save upon the theory that there are some people who do not intend to carry out the pledges which were registered here, and which will live when every man in this body shall have perished and been forgotten.

There is more than manhood involved in this. There is the promise of this great Republic; there is the pledge of this people, who constitute the anchor, if there is any anchor, of freedom for all time to come. Shall we perish and be forgotten? Is our existence evanescent? Are we to leave this world and to confer upon posterity but little to evidence the fact that we ever existed? Said the poet:

Happy Palmyra, in thy desert domes,
Where only date trees sigh and serpents hiss,
And thou whose pillars are the silent homes
Of the stork's brood—superb Persepolis.

Standing upon the edge of that great river of Syria is to-day nothing save desolation.

Take the story of mankind from the beginning. Are power and wealth and strength, mighty armies, and the traditions of greatness sufficient to perpetuate nationality? We know they are not. The empire that sprang from Tiber's bank faded before the barbarians of the north; and when Marius sat upon the ruins of Carthage he had something before him which has long since been hurled into oblivion.

Who considers the story of mankind and does not discover, Mr. President, that even this Republic may reverse herself? I sigh not for the individual, but I look to the future. For myself, I will soon pass away; but I think of my children and my children's children, and of the aspirations of my earliest boyhood, that this nation might stand before the world preeminent, spreading the beatific vision of freedom all over the world. Was that a chimera, an idle dream, a passing shadow, or was it an entity—something that really existed?

Let us pause a moment and reflect. It will not do for us to speak about the outrageous conduct of some barbarian in a tropical clime. What care I for him? He is a cipher in the plot of life; he contributes nothing to civilization; he amounts to less than nothing in the great cause to which you and I, sir, and all of us, are conscientiously committed.

I have felt from the beginning of this desperate alternative that this nation was upon the verge of ruin. If she were alone in her experience I might doubt it, but when I think of all that has happened in the history of mankind and of how many able and powerful men have existed, and how they have sought to raise up and secure the blessings of human emancipation, I have questioned whether we are stronger than they. When Socrates drank the fatal hemlock and saw fast approaching the end of his vitality, he uttered sentiments which must find their indorsement in every heart.

When we witness the progress which mankind has made, we can not question that peace should be our aspiration. I believe you, sir [the Vice-President in the chair], were at the great exhibition in Chicago. Looking at those beautiful buildings, pure and glorious as they were, the electric display illuminating them, you were almost translated into another age, and you were unable, perhaps, to appreciate that you even lived in your century; you commented upon the magnificent efforts of those who had called these structures into existence.

Did you go into the great repositories of national wealth and see all the evidences of peace that were summoned to that great display? Did you look at the triumphs of genius, the great and lasting triumphs that contribute to the happiness of man and make him better and stronger and truer and more able to work out his destiny? Were they not all there? Are they not better than the clash of arms? Are they not better than the contention which makes the widowed mother water with her tears the grave of her boy?

Are they not preferable to that fierce contention which leads to mastery not founded upon intellect, not based upon truth, but based upon brute force? Was there anything in the wager of battle that commended itself to the lawyer or the jurist? An accident, a chance; and yet in this generation we are summoning to our shrine and making our momentary god him who in days of crime and wrong, many an age ago, was worshiped by the savages of the earth.

Mr. President, we claim to be a Christian people; we claim that we are anxious that art and science and literature and truth shall prevail. Are we in earnest? Look in this great capital city, which bears the name of the founder of this Republic, of him who taught us our most glorious lesson and whose precepts we daily disregard, and see that great pure shaft rising against the sky, pointing upward and upward to higher things. Peaceful and beautiful, it is admired of the world, the typification of what we ought to be.

Look at your Library, that wonder of this capital, and do you not see there the victories of peace, of magnanimity, of greatness? Shall we discard them? Are we to enter upon the domain of conquest against those who are not of us; who are not worthy of us; who are incapable of understanding our institutions? Had we not better stand with our Republic and pause within this great domain and transmit unsullied to those who are to come after us the priceless heritage which we have received?

Mr. President, we claim, as I have said, to be a Christian people. Do we not know the example of Him who toiled to Calvary's hill, though He might have summoned to His side the countless legions of His Father, He perished as to His manhood's vitality that He might give us a lesson of peace and love.

I am opposed to this bill. I see no necessity for it. I love my country with as supernal devotion as any human being can love; but I wish to see her militant in the lines to which I have referred. I look with no satisfaction upon the gory field, the blood-stained hearth, the orphan, the dying patriot, the ravished home.

War may come, sir, but it must be for freedom. War may come, but it will be to defend the liberties of this people, if it ever has my concurrence; and I will never cast my vote in favor of any conflict that will have any other effect.

Mr. COCKRELL. I wish to offer a few amendments to the pending bill before we take up others.

On page 3, section 2, line 7, I move to strike out the words "a minimum of;" so as to leave a cavalry company to consist of 43 privates.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL. On page 4, section 3, line 10, after the words "consist of," I move to insert "1 captain, 1 first lieutenant, 1 second lieutenant;" so as to read:

Each battery of heavy artillery shall consist of 1 captain, 1 first lieutenant, 1 second lieutenant, 1 first sergeant, etc.

That was simply an omission in drafting the bill.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL. In the same section, on page 4, line 16, after the words "consist of," I move to insert "1 captain, 2 first lieutenants, 1 second lieutenant;" so as to read:

Each battery of field artillery shall consist of 1 captain, 2 first lieutenants, 1 second lieutenant, 1 first sergeant, etc.

Those words were also omitted by oversight.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL. On page 4, line 19, of the same section, I move to strike out the words "a minimum of;" so as to leave each battery of field artillery to consist of 51 privates, so that there shall be no question in regard to the number of privates that are to be in each company. The number may be under 51, but it can not be over 51.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL. On page 5, in section 4, line 21, before the words "48 privates," I move to strike out "a minimum of;" so that each infantry company shall consist of 48 privates. The number can not be higher than that; it may be less.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PASCO. I should like to ask the Senator if he has moved to strike out the words "a minimum of" in lines 14 and 15, on page 4, in the clause referring to batteries of heavy artillery?

Mr. COCKRELL. I have moved to strike out those words in line 21, and that amendment has been agreed to, but I did not see the words in lines 14 and 15 on the same page. In the clause relating to the composition of a battery of heavy artillery, on page 4, lines 14 and 15, I move to strike out the words "a minimum of," so that each battery shall consist of 52 privates.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL. I do not think the words "a minimum of" occur anywhere else in the bill.

Now, I wish to offer an amendment on page 7, line 17. The proviso there reads:

And provided also, That no person in civil life shall hereafter be appointed a judge-advocate, paymaster, or chaplain until he shall have passed satisfactorily such examination as to his moral, mental, and physical qualifications as may be prescribed by the President; and no such person shall be appointed who is more than 40 years of age.

I move to insert after the word "forty" the word "four," so that the age limit shall be 44 years. I ask the Secretary to read the paragraph as it will stand when amended.

The SECRETARY. As proposed to be amended the paragraph reads:

And provided also, That no person in civil life shall hereafter be appointed a judge-advocate, paymaster, or chaplain until he shall have passed satisfactorily such examination as to his moral, mental, and physical qualifications as may be prescribed by the President; and no such person shall be appointed who is more than 44 years of age.

Mr. GORMAN. I confess, Mr. President, that in the short time we have had for the consideration of this bill I have not had an opportunity to give it such examination as I would desire, but it strikes me that the proviso on page 7 would require all of the gentlemen who have been appointed judge-advocates, if there be any such, from private life in the Volunteer Army, and also paymasters and chaplains, to again pass an examination, notwithstanding they have made a record for efficiency in similar positions. The Senator from Georgia [Mr. BACON] has drawn up an additional proviso to this part of the bill, which strikes me as being necessary, although I still want information from the Senator from Missouri.

The proposed proviso is as follows:

Provided further, That in the case of an officer who has served in a similar capacity during the war with Spain said examination shall not be required, but he shall be deemed competent under the record made by him in said service.

The intention is only to put these gentlemen on an equality with Regular Army officers and give them the credit for whatever good record they may have made. I ask the Senator from Missouri if there is any objection to a provision of that character?

Mr. COCKRELL. The Senator offers this amendment:

Provided further, That in case of an officer who has served in a similar capacity during the war with Spain said examination shall not be required if he shall be deemed competent under the record made by him in said service.

So far as I am personally concerned, if that is properly worded and guarded, I have no objection to it. Now, I will propose that the amendment shall read:

Provided further, That in case of the appointment of an officer who has served in a similar capacity during the war with Spain and has demonstrated his moral, mental, and physical qualifications for the position, then such examination shall not be required.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the amendment?

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the amendment be reported.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment has not been taken down.

Mr. COCKRELL. I supposed the clerks were taking it down, or I would have written it myself.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The reporter has taken it.

Mr. COCKRELL. I dictated it slowly enough for anybody to have written it out.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The reporter will read the amendment.

The reporter read the amendment.

Mr. DANIEL. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. Will the adoption of the amendment exclude the motion to strike out the clause?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. If it is adopted, the Senator from Virginia or any other Senator may move to strike out the whole clause.

Mr. DANIEL. I prefer to strike out the whole clause and get rid of the restriction.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It is proper to amend it first.

Mr. DANIEL. I presume I can make that motion after the amendment has been amended.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. That is the situation. The question is on agreeing to the amendment as amended.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL. On page 9, in lieu of lines 16, 17, 18, and 19, down to the words "thirty-five years," which read as follows:

No person other than an officer of the Regular Army who has passed the age of 45 years shall be appointed as a field officer in said force, nor as a company or staff officer therein if he be past the age of 35 years.

I propose to insert:

No person over the age of 45 years, except officers of the Regular Army and officers or enlisted men who served in the war with Spain, shall be appointed as field officers in such emergency force, and no person over the age of 40 years shall be appointed as a company or regimental staff officer therein.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair understands that that is offered as a substitute for the amendment offered by the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. COCKRELL. I will read it again:

No person over the age of 45 years, except officers of the Regular Army and officers or enlisted men who served in the war with Spain, shall be appointed as field officers in such emergency force—

That is, in these 35 regiments—and no person over the age of 40 years shall be appointed as a company or regimental staff officer therein.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair understands that to be a substitute for the pending amendment offered by the Senator from Connecticut and the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. COCKRELL. I offer it as a substitute for all.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL].

Mr. PASCO. Let the amendment be stated at the desk.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out lines 16, 17, 18, and 19, on page 9, down to and including the word "years," and insert in lieu thereof the following:

No person over the age of 45 years, except officers of the Regular Army and officers or enlisted men who served in the war with Spain, shall be appointed as field officers in such emergency force, and no person over the age of 40 years shall be appointed as a company or regimental staff officer therein.

Mr. GORMAN. Under the amendment of the Senator from Missouri no field officer, of which I understand the highest is a colonel—

Mr. COCKRELL. Colonel, lieutenant-colonel, and major.

Mr. GORMAN. Under the provision of the Senator's amendment that would, of course, restrict the appointment of regular officers to the age at which they retire, 64, but it leaves open the age limit for all others, does it not? You could have a colonel 70 years of age if he were not an Army officer.

Mr. COCKRELL. Oh, no.

Mr. GORMAN. Let us see. I think so. Let us have it read again.

Mr. SPOONER. That is true.

Mr. GORMAN. There is no age limit whatever. In the one case the law requires an officer to retire at 64, and he would not be eligible to the position of field officer; but all others who were in the Army might come in at any age. If the Senator will look at it, I think he will see that is correct.

Mr. COCKRELL. There is no danger of the occurrence to which the Senator from Maryland referred. It is true that this does except from the age limit of 45 years the officers in the Regular Army and the officers of the Volunteer Army and nobody else. All the officers in the Regular Army are under 64 years of age. They could be assigned to duty.

It is supposed that the officers who have served in this war, if they are reappointed, would be taken from those who are physically able to perform the duties, so there is no limit upon the officers of the Regular Army or upon the officers of the Volunteer Army, because those now performing duty of some kind are presumed to be young enough to perform any duty of lieutenant-colonel or major. That is why there is no limitation put upon the age of Regular Army officers and Volunteer Army officers in being placed in this service.

Mr. BATE. I propose, on page 9, line 2, after the word "service," to insert "including the Signal Corps." That seems to have been left out.

The SECRETARY. After the word "service," in line 2, page 9, it is proposed to insert the words "including the Signal Corps;" so as to read:

That to meet the present exigencies of the military service the President is hereby authorized to maintain the Regular Army at a strength of not exceeding 65,000 enlisted men, to be distributed amongst the several branches of the service, including the Signal Corps, according to the needs of each, etc.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. COCKRELL. Let it be reported.

Mr. BATE. I spoke to the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY] about it.

The Secretary again read the amendment proposed by Mr. BATE.

Mr. GORMAN. What has become of the amendment of the Senator from Missouri?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. This seems to be interjected while the debate is going on. If any question of order is made, the Senate will return at once to the amendment of the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. GORMAN. Oh, no; I make no point.

Mr. BATE. There is no objection to this. I spoke to the chairman about it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Tennessee.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALLEN. If the Senator from Missouri will yield to me I will offer an amendment. There is so much conversation going on that I can not tell the parliamentary situation.

Mr. COCKRELL. I will yield in a moment.

Mr. BUTLER. Is there an amendment pending?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. An amendment is pending, offered by the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. COCKRELL. I modify the amendment so that it will read "as a company officer therein."

Mr. GORMAN. Let it be read.

Mr. CARTER. Let the amendment be stated.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the amendment.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out lines 16, 17, 18, and 19, on page 9, down to and including the word "years," and to insert:

No officer over the age of 45 years, except officers of the Regular Army and officers or enlisted men who served in the war with Spain, shall be appointed as field officers in such emergency force, and no person over the age of 40 years shall be appointed as a company officer therein.

Mr. THURSTON. Does that cover the volunteer force we are authorizing for two years?

Mr. COCKRELL. Yes, sir.

Mr. THURSTON. Mr. President, I am opposed to any age limit for the officers who are to be selected to command our volunteer troops and go into the field for two years' service. This country is full of men who served four years in the greatest conflict of modern times on both sides. Many of them served as very young men. To-day they have far greater military ability and experience than almost any of those who enlisted in the late war with Spain and who did not actually get to the front or see real service.

This amendment would deprive the Government of the United States of the experience of every man who fought in the war of the rebellion on either side, and it would shut out from our foreign service the very men to-day who, in my judgment, are best able to carry on and wage successful warfare. I do not wish to see that done with the consent of my vote. I sincerely trust that we will strike out all age limit, so far as it concerns the volunteer force of our Army.

Mr. President, the very man who, in my judgment, organized and secured the victory at Santiago, the brave old Confederate veteran, General WHEELER, would be shut out under a requirement of this sort. I know of thousands of men to-day who are better physically fitted to fight, better mentally fitted to fight, better fitted by experience—

Mr. SPOONER. They know better how to take care of their men.

Mr. THURSTON. And who know better how to take care of their men, as the Senator from Wisconsin says, than any young men who can be selected, even if they have had the experience of a short service in the Volunteer Army of the United States without having had any actual experience in battle. I do not care to multiply words, but it seems to me the country will wish that we avail ourselves as long as we can in perilous time of the ripe experience of men who hazarded their lives in the great conflict of 1861-65.

Mr. ALLEN. I offer an amendment which I send to the desk, to be inserted after line 19, on page 10.

Mr. COCKRELL. I hope the Senator will permit me to perfect this amendment. I want to insert the words "company or regimental staff officer;" so as to read "as a company or regimental staff officer therein," inserting the words I moved to strike out. Now let the amendment be read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment as modified will be read.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to modify the amendment so as to read:

No person over the age of 45, except officers of the Regular Army and officers or enlisted men who served in the war with Spain, shall be appointed as field officers in such emergency force, and no person over the age of 40 years shall be appointed as a company or regimental staff officer therein.

Mr. THURSTON. I move, as an amendment or substitute, to strike out all of the age limit as it refers to officers of the volunteer organization.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair would hold that the amendment is not in order, the substitute taking the place of two amendments already offered.

Mr. COCKRELL. Before the amendment is acted upon, I should like to have an opportunity to prepare it so that it will refer only to the volunteers and not to the force that is added to the Regular Army.

Mr. THURSTON. That is right.

Mr. WARREN. That is right.

Mr. COCKRELL. I withdraw the amendment, and the Senator from Nebraska can offer his amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment is withdrawn.

Mr. ALLEN. I move to insert as an amendment what I send to the desk.

The SECRETARY. After the end of line 19, page 10, section 13, it is proposed to insert:

And provided also, That any officer now in the Army who was graduated at the head of his class at the United States Military Academy and who is not now in the Corps of Engineers may be appointed to the Corps of Engineers with the same grade and date of commission that he would have if he had been appointed to the Corps of Engineers on graduation; but said commission shall not entitle an officer to any back pay or allowance.

Mr. COCKRELL. I hope the Senator will not insist upon the amendment. That is special legislation. It affects the rank of officers in the Army and we have no report from the War Department. There has been no investigation made by a committee in regard to it and I hope it will not be adopted. It may be right, and the Committee on Military Affairs may favor it in the end, but I think we should not undertake on this bill to readjust the positions of the officers in the various corps and departments of the Army.

Mr. HAWLEY. It applies to only two men, and I think it is objectionable. I do not think we should load the bill with little provisos helping individuals.

Mr. COCKRELL. I hope the amendment will not be agreed to.

Mr. ALLEN. This affects only two officers, it is true, but it affects them very meritoriously, and I hope the Senator from Missouri will withdraw any objection he may have to it.

Mr. COCKRELL. I can not withdraw it, for it is not right for such legislation as this to be put upon any general bill of any kind. I would oppose it upon any general bill. It is a matter that ought to be considered by the Committee on Military Affairs. We ought to have a statement from the War Department as to what will be the effect of it, as to how many officers will be displaced from their ranks and over the heads of how many these officers will go by virtue of such legislation.

Mr. ALLEN. I wish I was in a frame of mind to be convinced by that argument, but I am not. I call for a vote on the amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Nebraska. [Putting the question.] The yeas appear to have it.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let us have the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President—

Mr. PETTIGREW. I should like to have the amendment stated again.

The amendment was again stated.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. PROCTOR (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Florida [Mr. MALLORY]. As he has not voted, I withhold my vote.

Mr. WARREN (when his name was called). I ask unanimous consent to say that I was seeking the floor for a moment when the yeas and nays were ordered. I seemed to be unsuccessful in getting recognition from the Vice-President.

Mr. BERRY. I submit that no debate is in order, even by unanimous consent, after the roll call begins. The rule is specific. The Vice-President shall not entertain debate after the beginning of a roll call.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Arkansas object?

Mr. WARREN. I did not wish to debate the question. I merely wanted to make an explanation.

Mr. BERRY. It is out of order.

Mr. WARREN. I will vote. I vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. FAULKNER. I desire to inquire whether the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. ELKINS] has voted?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from West Virginia has not voted.

Mr. FAULKNER. I am paired with that Senator, and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. CARTER. I am paired with the senior Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY] on this vote, and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. THURSTON (after having voted in the affirmative). I should like to inquire if the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN] has voted?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. He has not.

Mr. THURSTON. I am paired with that Senator generally, and therefore withdraw my vote.

Mr. MANTLE (after having voted in the negative). I wish to ask if the Senator from Virginia [Mr. MARTIN] has voted?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. He has not voted.

Mr. MANTLE. I withdraw my vote, being paired with that Senator.

Mr. CAFFERY (after having voted in the affirmative). I desire to inquire whether the Senator from Michigan [Mr. BURROWS] has voted?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. He has not voted.

Mr. CAFFERY. Being paired with that Senator, I withdraw my vote, unless I am assured that the Senator from Michigan would vote as I do.

The result was announced—yeas 27, nays 33; as follows:

YEAS—27.

Allen,
Bacon,
Bate,
Berry,
Butler,
Clay,
Daniel,

Gorman,
Harris,
Heitfeld,
Kenney,
Lindsay,
McLaurin,
Money,

Murphy,
Pasco,
Pettigrew,
Rawlins,
Reach,
Sewell,
Smith,

Stewart,
Teller,
Turley,
Turner,
Vest,
White.

NAYS—33.

Allison,
Clark,
Cockrell,
Cullom,
Dobbs,
Fairbanks,
Forsaker,
Gallinger,
Gear,

Hanna,
Hansbrough,
Hawley,
Hoar,
Lodge,
McBride,
McEnery,
McMillan,
Mitchell,

Morgan,
Nelson,
Perkins,
Pettna,
Platt, Conn.,
Platt, N. Y.,
Pritchard,
Ross,
Shoup,

Simon,
Spencer,
Sullivan,
Warren,
Wellington,
Wilson.

NOT VOTING—30.

Aldrich,
Baker,
Burrows,
Caffery,
Cannon,
Carter,
Chandler,
Chilton,

Davis,
Elkins,
Faulkner,
Frye,
Gray,
Hale,
Jones, Ark.,
Jones, Nev.

Kyle,
Mallory,
Mantle,
Martin,
Mason,
Mills,
Penrose,
Proctor,

Quay,
Thurston,
Tillman,
Turpie,
Wetmore,
Wolcott.

So Mr. ALLEN's amendment was rejected.

Mr. COCKRELL. There is force in what the Senator from Nebraska says respecting the age limit as to volunteers. If the Senator wants to accomplish what he has intimated, it seems to me it would be a better way to strike out the entire provision from line 16, on page 9, down to and including line 2, on page 10. That would leave the President to appoint either regular officers, or any of those in the service, or civilians.

Mr. CULLOM. Without reference to age?

Mr. COCKRELL. Without reference to age. It would leave the President simply to make his own selection without regard to age.

Mr. SEWELL. The Senator has stated, I have no doubt, that this applies only to the volunteer force of 35,000 men. I agree with the Senator from Nebraska that that force could be properly officered—I mean the higher grades—by men who have seen service, even in the civil war. There are a great many men 55 years of age who would make better colonels of regiments than a young man of 40 who has not had experience. The only way to prevent embarrassment is to strike out the whole section.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. COCKRELL. I yield to the Senator from Nebraska to move an amendment.

Mr. THURSTON. I move to strike out beginning with line 16, on page 9, down to and including line 2, on page 10.

Mr. DANIEL. That is the amendment which I had given notice I would offer, provided the amendment of the Senator from Missouri was adopted. I hope that the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska may be unanimously adopted. I do not think that the President, in the first place, ought to be restricted in his selection of officers of a volunteer army. In the second place, I do not think that disfranchisement or impediment of any kind should be put upon the citizens and the citizen soldiery of this country.

It chanced that to-day the Commander in Chief of the Army, the Secretary of War, the Adjutant-General of the Army of the United States, and the general who commanded in the only battle of great importance which was fought are all men who worked themselves up to their high positions through the Volunteer Army and not through the Regular Army of the United States. The distinguished Confederate officer to whom the Senator from Nebraska so fitly referred, while indeed he had once been in the Regular Army, had for over thirty years been occupied in the pursuits of peace.

It is calculated, Mr. President, to produce a spirit of militarism rather than the natural warlike spirit of a free and brave people, to put incumbrances in the pathway of those whom the President may regard as worthy of serving the country in a position of honor and distinction. I shall vote to strike out every amendment in this bill, whether of age, examination, or what not, that might be used to prevent the entry into the military service of the United States of a reputable citizen whom the President in his discretion thought fit for the office.

Mr. CAFFERY. I ask the Senator from Virginia what is the scope or purport of his amendment? Is it to exclude from the Volunteer Army men who served in the late war and who have arrived at a certain age?

Mr. DANIEL. It is to strike out the reference to the Volunteer Army and all of those limitations.

Mr. CAFFERY. As to age?

Mr. DANIEL. As to age.

Mr. CAFFERY. That is the purport of your amendment?

Mr. DANIEL. Yes, sir; of the amendment offered by the Senator from Nebraska—the amendment of which I spoke.

Mr. CAFFERY. Mr. President, I believe that the amendment offered by the Senator from Nebraska ought to be adopted. I can see no reason why a discrimination on the ground of age should be made against men for service in our Volunteer Army who have heretofore served with distinction in the war between the States. It looks to me as an invidious distinction. Besides the example quoted by the Senator from Nebraska, anyone can call to mind hundreds of instances of men who served their country in the war between the States who are fit now to serve their country in a war against any foreign power. I will not say anything about the Filipinos, for I think that anybody can serve in a war against them.

Mr. President, there is a great deal in this spirit that stalks abroad throughout the land now in regard to the formation of standing armies, and in regard to officering those armies with men who may make the military life a calling. They are always behind a movement of this sort. They give powerful weight and influence to the passage of any bill which extols and magnifies the Army.

But, Mr. President, do we want standing armies? Do we want to inculcate this spirit of militarism in the United States? Have not heretofore our militia, our citizen soldiery, been able to cope with any foe, foreign or internal? And if they have been, what is there now to tell us that they will not be equally as able hereafter as they have been heretofore to maintain the supremacy of our institutions and the glory of our flag?

I see nothing throughout this whole bill from its inception until now but to exalt the military arm. It is the first fruits of empire and expansion. It is the fruit—that forbidden fruit—of which republics have partaken to their death and desolation. Inculcate the military spirit, assemble your standing armies, and republics go to the mythology of the past. I want no standing army. I do not believe the American people want a standing army. We want the nucleus of a force around which the citizen soldiery can assemble, to which they can look as a rallying point in time of danger; and, sir, wherever the flag of the United States is raised there you will find the American breast and the American courage ready to repel any foe that assails our country.

Mr. ALLEN. Will the Senator from Louisiana allow me to interrupt him just a moment?

Mr. CAFFERY. Certainly.

Mr. ALLEN. I desire to reserve the amendment I offered a moment ago and take it into the Senate, so that I may there offer it when the bill reaches the Senate.

Mr. WARREN. I wish to state to the Senator that I was about to move a reconsideration of the vote by which the amendment was rejected.

Mr. ALLEN. It can be done either way, I suppose, either by reserving it or by reconsidering the vote.

Mr. WARREN. I will not take the course I suggested if the Senator prefers to take the other.

Mr. ALLEN. Whatever course the Senator prefers will be satisfactory to me.

Mr. WARREN. I simply want to say, while on my feet, if I am in order, that while it may be questionable whether an amendment of that kind should go on a general bill in that it does not affect many people, yet it is a fact that it would correct what every Senator will admit was an injustice to two loyal good officers of our Army.

The circumstances are that two men who graduated, each one the first in his class at West Point, under the law and the rules were entitled to appointment in the Engineers. They graduated at a time when there was no opening in that line of service. So they were sent to other lines. This simply provides that it may be lawful to place these men in the corps to which they belonged originally and do that tardy justice.

I repeat, while it may not be the place on this bill, I dislike to see the Senate vote against a proposition of that kind, and thereby say that no injustice has been done, and that these men, having graduated first in their class, shall not have the same privileges that I will not say a few other men, but all other men, have had from time immemorial who graduated from West Point at the head of their classes.

Mr. COCKRELL. Nor do I want to see the Senate do an injustice to the Army and to other engineer officers. Now, what are the facts as stated by the Senator? We have no record here. The Senator has not the official record from the War Department.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President—

Mr. COCKRELL. Have you a report from the War Department?

Mr. WARREN. I will simply say that I took it up personally to the Adjutant-General and verified the statement I have made.

Mr. COCKRELL. Now, then, here is the statement. These two officers at the time of their graduation stood at the head of their classes, and if there had been vacancies in the Engineer Corps they would have been entitled to assignment there. There being no vacancies in that corps, they had to go to the other. Now, are they the only two men in the Army of the United States to-day who graduated at the head of their classes and did not get the positions to which they were entitled?

Mr. WARREN. I so understand it. I understand from the Adjutant-General of the Army that those are the only two instances in which West Point cadets who graduated first, not second or third, but each one at the head of his class, failed to secure recognition in the branch of the service which is supposed to be first, that is, the Engineer Corps.

Mr. COCKRELL. How many officers will they rank who are now in the Engineer Corps by virtue of this local transfer, regardless of the rights of others? I should like to have the Senator answer.

Mr. WARREN. I have not gone into that at all. They want—

Mr. COCKRELL. In other words, there has been no investigation of the injustice that may be done by this provision.

Mr. WARREN. They will rank no more than if they had gone where they belonged at the time; that is all. It is not a matter whether they overrank one man or five.

Mr. COCKRELL. These other men have been serving in the positions for years. I do not want the Senate to commit itself to passing upon this kind of a claim without an investigation by the proper committee and without an official report from the War Department. It ought not to do it in any case.

This is a subject for a private bill, and as such it can be fully considered. It is no rejection of the supposed justice of this bill for the Senate to vote the amendment down. It is simply a declaration by the Senate that it has not had this claim investigated in the way it investigates all matters coming before it for consideration. When the matter is investigated it may be unanimously agreed to by the Senate. I do not say that I would oppose it. I will look into all the facts. The Committee on Military Affairs will look into all the facts, and if they justify them they will report it to the Senate, and the Senate will pass it.

This condition has been going on for years. Why should there be haste in the matter? Is this an emergency where the provision can be forced upon this bill regardless of the question whether it is right or wrong? I appeal to Senators that that is not the way to legislate. Neither is that the way to remedy injustice, because we may do greater injustice than we remedy.

I hope the amendment will never be adopted or even reconsidered.

Mr. HAWLEY. Let me add a word or two. One of these officers went into the infantry, and I think he was on his own free will and choice transferred to the ordnance. If he goes into the engineers, he will rank five seniors. As to the other one, I do not know; but something similar will result in his case.

Mr. CAFFERY. Mr. President—

Mr. WARREN. I desire to say only a word.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Louisiana yield to the Senator from Wyoming?

Mr. CAFFERY. I suppose the Senator from Wyoming is not cognizant of the fact that I had the floor.

Mr. WARREN. I beg pardon; I did not know it.

Mr. CAFFERY. I yield to the Senator with pleasure.

Mr. WARREN. Thank you. I simply desire to call the attention of my colleague on the committee, the Senator from Missouri, to the fact that I agree with him in the main that it is a better place to legislate on some other bill than upon this; but the ranking of other officers is no argument, because the amendment simply provides that the appointing power may appoint if he sees fit. That is all there is to it. I do not see the Senator from Nebraska in the Chamber, and as he has proposed to bring it up and offer it in the Senate I will not enter the motion to reconsider.

Mr. HAWLEY. I think we ought to perfect the bill by acting upon the amendments of the committee. That has not yet been quite done, but very nearly.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. CAFFERY] is speaking to the amendment offered by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. THURSTON].

Mr. HAWLEY. If the Senator from Louisiana has the floor for a speech, I will say nothing more.

Mr. ALLEN. What is the status of the bill now?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Nebraska [Mr. THURSTON] has offered an amendment, with the assent of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL], which is the pending question.

Mr. CAFFERY. After the very learned and eloquent discourse of the friends of the bill and members of the committee who reported the bill, I have somewhat lost the thread of my own feeble discourse, but I hope to gather it up as I proceed further along. I was saying something in regard to the military spirit which appears to have absorbed our country when I was interrupted by these eloquent discourses about amendments to the bill.

Now, Mr. President, it occurs that a sentiment pervades the land that we have outgrown the Constitution. That proposition has been stated by a very high military officer. It is fit that such a declaration should come from a military source. Military men, as a general thing, care very little about constitutions. They are barriers to the vaulting ambition of successful generals. They are outside of the circuit of their movements; and, as a matter of course, any emergency in our affairs is seized upon to inform the people that we have outgrown the Constitution.

I also hear that it is time to come out from our hermitage; it is time to cease our isolation; it is time to make ourselves felt as a great nation of the world, a great world power, and the way to make ourselves felt, the way to get out of our isolation is to grab every outlying island in every sea that washes the globe. That is the only way that I know of, and that is the only way the expansionist and the imperialist knows of to get out of isolation and to outgrow the Constitution.

Five days ago there was read in this Hall the Farewell Address of the Father of his Country to the people whom he had delivered from the yoke of the British Crown. That address is replete with wisdom and it ought to be engraved in the hearts and memory and brain of our people. It ought to find a lodgment there; it ought to be nursed with care; it ought to be watered with the best inspiration of their patriotism and intellect. I will read as follows:

Europe has a set of primary interests which to us have none or a very remote relation. Hence she must be engaged in frequent controversies, the causes of which are essentially foreign to our concerns. Hence, therefore, it must be unwise in us to implicate ourselves by artificial ties in the ordinary vicissitudes of her politics or the ordinary combinations and collisions of her friendships or enmities.

Our detached and distant situation invites and enables us to pursue a different course. If we remain one people, under an efficient government, the period is not far off when we may defy material injury from external annoyance; when we may take such an attitude as will cause the neutrality we may at any time resolve upon to be scrupulously respected; when belligerent nations, under the impossibility of making acquisitions upon us, will not legally hazard the giving us provocation; when we may choose peace or war, as our interest, guided by justice, shall counsel.

Why forego the advantages of so peculiar a situation? Why quit our own to stand upon foreign ground? Why, by interweaving our destiny with that of any part of Europe—

The immortal author of this address might have said with any other part of the world, which he evidently meant—entangle our peace and prosperity in the toils of European ambition, rivalry, interest, humor, or caprice?

Mr. President, why forego the advantages of our peculiar situation? Why put ourselves on foreign soil and invite entanglements and invite combinations of the world against us; invite attack from any quarter hostile to us? Are these sentiments obsolete? Have our greatness and prosperity outgrown the wisdom of these declarations? Have the people of the United States so firm a hold and grasp upon the universe as that they can defy these admonitions? Is there danger now of stepping abroad upon foreign soil and inviting all of these disasters pointed out by the Father of his Country?

Mr. LINDSAY. With the permission of the Senator, I will ask him whether he will regard the Philippine Islands as foreign soil after the treaty of peace shall have been ratified?

Mr. CAFFERY. Oh, Mr. President, this process of "benevolent assimilation" can take in every inch of the habitable globe; but it was foreign soil, and it is now foreign soil in that its situation, its people, its climate, its productions, everything surrounding those islands is foreign to America, foreign to her institutions, foreign to her principle of liberty. They are foreign in a sense greater than that set out by the Father of his Country in his immortal address. There is not one single point of similarity or congeniality between us and any of those possessions which have been thrust into our lap by the greed of conquest.

Mr. President, there are abundant cautions in the writers of the Federalist by Hamilton as well as Madison against the dangers of a standing army. No man needs proof or argument or appeal to convince him that the peculiar institutions of our United States do not brook and can not sustain without peril standing armies.

The first bill that was introduced by the Military Committee for the reorganization of the Army provided for a standing army of 100,000 men, to be reduced at the pleasure of the President of the United States to 50,000 men. That bill met with such earnest and stubborn opposition that an amendment to it was accepted, the amendment coming from the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL]. That amendment provides for the increase of our present Regular Army some 10,000 or 12,000 men, I do not remember which.

Mr. FAULKNER. Ten thousand.

Mr. CAFFERY. Ten thousand men, and provides for an auxiliary volunteer force to swell up the aggregate to about 97,000 men, that organization to endure until April, 1901. That is objected to by the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN], whose amendment provides for an increase based upon the present organization of 25,000 men, and that whole force is to be brought down to the peace limit of the old Army, 27,000 men, to be disbanded in 1901.

Now, as between the amendment of the Senator from Missouri and that of the Senator from Maryland I have no particular choice, favoring, however, that of the Senator from Maryland, for which I shall vote. But the inquiry comes, and it will come, why is it that we need this army? For what purpose are these troops to be employed? What portion of the globe are they to be sent to? What is the foe that calls out a hundred thousand American soldiers? Is it to repel invasion of any foe powerful enough to threaten us or the country? No, sir. Is it to attack a formidable power anywhere? No, sir; it is to shoot down men half civilized and wholly poverty stricken, whom lately we had as our allies and who now are rebels.

Mr. President, what a parody on fate, what an irony of circumstance, is it that the flag which we unfurled in the Philippines as a symbol of independence and as carrying in its folds the blessings of its liberty and peace should now be the signal of war—red, horrid war—and that the people whom it is said we liberate we first commence to kill!

This is a war of paradoxes, Mr. President. We started in for humanity; we started to save the reconcentrados. They are dead, I am told. We then started to carry the flag throughout the universe, and wherever it floated there we were to establish the principles of free government; and we wind up, we stop, by shooting down with Gatling guns, Maxim guns, and all the improved apparatus of scientific murder the very men whom we set out to liberate and free! This is a condition of affairs that invites the most careful and deliberate scrutiny upon the part of the American people.

When we ask what has done this, what has provoked this, we are told that destiny has done it. When it was said that we ought to pursue toward those people the same programme and make to them the same declaration that we made to the people of Cuba, "Oh," the answer was, "we can not shirk the responsibility of taking those Filipinos out of the grasp of European robbers, and we can not leave the Filipino to himself. Destiny has done it, and duty follows destiny, and imposes upon us the obligation of Christianizing, civilizing, liberating, and then killing the Filipinos." That is the condition.

Mr. President, let us look at the facts squarely. The Spanish Cortes has not yet ratified the treaty of peace, and Premier Sagasta and the royal coterie are playing perhaps for some political advantage, or their opponents in the Cortes are doing the same thing. There is a slight halt in the proceedings, but the treaty will be ratified. Just as surely as Spain was compelled to ratify the protocol and every similar provision that the United States commissioners at Paris demanded, just so surely will she sign this treaty of peace.

We have been appalled, or attempted to be appalled, about what Spain was going to do. When the treaty of peace was pending in the Senate, it was solemnly urged by the advocates of expansion that if we did not ratify the treaty we would have Spain down upon us. Why, Mr. President, it was too absurd to fool a child, it was too insignificant to give a moment's thought to.

After the treaty is ratified and we have this white elephant, which the President of the United States does not know what to do with, which destiny told him to take and duty told him to keep, we find a condition of what is termed rebellion in the Philippines, and we have got to put it down. We must put down the rebellion; we must exterminate the Filipinos. If they continue to fight, if they manifest the same dogged courage which they are displaying now, the same endurance and obstinacy, extermination awaits them. The die is cast. We have made the fatal mistake of not applying to the Filipinos the same doctrine, of not giving them the benefit of the same declaration which we made in regard to Cuba, and we are reaping the bitter fruits of it.

The honorable Senator from Georgia [Mr. BACON] introduced, debated, and procured a vote upon a resolution; and if it had been adopted, there would not have been a gun fired in the Philippine Islands, in my humble opinion. Nearly every imperialist and expansionist voted against the Bacon resolution. There were other resolutions passed by this body which, in my opinion, were a declaration of war to the Filipinos, and, in my opinion, it was our bounden duty, it devolved upon us from the peculiar situation of affairs in the Philippines, for us to have adopted the Bacon resolution.

But no, Mr. President, they did not go the way of empire far enough to suit the modern idea. They did not in terms pledge the United States, so far as a declaration could pledge them, to give to those people independence. They did provide for a benevolent tutelage of the Filipinos, and when the period of instruction was over we did not propose to set them up in that independent attitude which appears to be the aspiration of the Filipino heart.

But instead of that we adopted a resolution which distinctly declares that the Filipino is an outlawed man; that the identity of the islands for all national purposes is obliterated; that they are waifs in the human family, owing no allegiance to Spain and not subjects of the United States, with no present condition of any kind that any people would adopt of their own accord, and with no hope for the future.

It occurs to me that the proposition contained in the declaration we adopted left these people no other recourse than servile submission or armed resistance. The alternative was forced upon them.

It may be our sorrowful duty, Mr. President, in view of the international relations that we have assumed toward those people, to exterminate them rather than that our policy of annexation should fail. That distressful and dreadful condition is upon us. If these people resist, we have heard it announced by the Senator from Montana [Mr. CARTER] that the only alternative is to shoot them to death.

So, therefore, if they continue this struggle the end of it will be the extermination of those people. And that is the liberty, that is the humanity which we propose to give! "All is quiet in Warsaw," said the Russian general. Peace—the peace of death, the peace of desolation, the peace which springs from the still, cold form of death—that is the peace and that is the liberty which, if this state of affairs continues, will be the lot of the Filipinos.

But, Mr. President, what are we getting? We are getting nothing, according to the declarations that have passed this body, but conquered territory. The people who inhabit that territory are vassals and slaves. The future of that country hangs upon the slender thread of our caprice or our interest. The present is safe; they are not citizens; we do not intend to incorporate the territory permanently; we do not intend to give them citizenship, but we do intend to do what? To prepare them for local self-government, and then to make such disposition of them as the best interests of the United States, first, will require, and, second, the interests of the poor Filipinos.

There appears to be, in my opinion, a false impression in regard to what will flow from the possession of the Philippines as affecting our fiscal relations with them. It is assumed that the United States can levy upon imports from the Philippine Islands just whatever duties the United States chooses to impose, and any exports from the United States can be likewise taxed at the ports of the Philippine Islands. It is assumed that we can hold the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands, like Mahomet's coffin, between heaven and earth, with no nationality, no citizenship known to anyone.

Are these assumptions true? Is there warrant, either of reason or of law, for them? I think not. The authority of the Supreme Court, in my opinion, is not necessary to establish the character of the Filipino. It would seem to flow from natural reasons that whenever a territory inhabited by any people is incorporated into the United States or other country, especially a people with a germ of national life, especially a people with law, literature, and religion, those people would be subjects and citizens—the terms are synonymous—of the government to which the territory that they inhabited was ceded.

Mr. ALLEN. Will the Senator from Louisiana permit me?

Mr. CAFFERY. Certainly.

Mr. ALLEN. How can we discriminate against those people in the line of taxation in the light of the decision of the Supreme Court?

Mr. CAFFERY. That is precisely what I was trying to get at. It has puzzled my mind as to how these unwarranted assumptions which I have just stated could get abroad.

I was stating, if the Senator from Nebraska remembers—he was sitting in his seat—that there was an assumption that the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands, by the annexation of their territory to the United States, did not become citizens of the United States, that the tariff laws of the United States were inoperative in the Philippine Islands, and that exports from the United States to and imports to the United States from those islands could be taxed precisely as if the Philippines were a foreign nation. I can not understand how any of these groundless assumptions could for a moment find credence anywhere.

I want to speak in relation to an industry which occupies nearly half of the capital of my State that I deem to be seriously threatened by the annexation of the Philippines. I honestly believe and am firmly convinced that every single pound of sugar, or tub of tobacco, or bundle of cigars, or package of rope that comes from the Philippine Islands into the ports of the United States comes as free as they do from Kentucky into Louisiana, or a cigar from New York into Maryland. It can not be otherwise. Is the monstrous doctrine to obtain that we have in the United States, under the Constitution of the United States, the germ of despotic power?

Have we anywhere, either in the spirit or letter of our Constitution, a single line or syllable that will allow the Congress of the United States to govern for all time to come these subjects in the Philippine Islands as so many slaves? If that be so, it is time that the people of the United States took note of the danger, of the menace to our institutions. What is to prevent this powerful Republic from overrunning the countries to the south, overrunning all the outlying districts, and holding them as thrall to the magnificent power of this Republic, governed despotically by the Congress of the United States?

First allow the President to govern under military despotism, and then when Congress gets tired of seeing the Chief Executive in the character of czar or kaiser Congress can relieve him of the burden; and instead of a government of one despot we will have a government of 90 despots in the Senate and nearly 400 in the House of Representatives. I do not know but that the Philippines would rather have the despotism of one man than the multitudinous despotism of two representative bodies.

I simply wish to refer to a case which has been quoted as sustaining the theory that the United States can impose taxes upon products from a territory that the United States has incorporated as a part of its domain; and I do not think the case bears out that position. It is the case of Cross vs. Harrison (16 Howard). I will ask to have inserted in that connection the letter of Mr. Buchanan, cited with approval by the judge delivering the opinion, Justice Wayne, and which announces and contains the true doctrine on the subject.

Mr. LINDSAY. I ask the Senator what case it is?

Mr. CAFFERY. The case of Cross vs. Harrison.

Mr. LINDSAY. In what report?

Mr. CAFFERY. Sixteenth Howard.

Mr. SULLIVAN. I should like to know what it is.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CLAY in the chair). The Senator from Louisiana asks that a part of the decision referred to by him may be placed in the RECORD without being read. Is there objection?

Mr. SULLIVAN. I object. I should like to hear what it is.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Mississippi objects.

Mr. CAFFERY. Let the Secretary read it. If it will edify the Senator from Mississippi, I shall be very glad.

Mr. SULLIVAN. I want to know what the Senator is asking to have inserted in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary proceeded to read the extract.

Mr. TELLER. I want to ask the Senator from Mississippi if he desires the whole case read, or just to know what the case is?

Mr. SULLIVAN. I wish to know exactly what it is that the Senator from Louisiana wishes to have read, and I want to hear it read.

Mr. TELLER. I hope the Senator from Mississippi will not ask to have the whole case read. It is very lengthy.

Mr. COCKRELL. Read the syllabus.

Mr. TELLER. Will not the syllabus do?

Mr. LINDSAY. It is only an extract.

Mr. CAFFERY. I have marked an extract about a page long; that is all.

Mr. SULLIVAN. I wish to know whatever it is the Senator wishes to have read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary resumed and concluded the reading of the extract, which is as follows:

The President, in his annual message, at the commencement of the next session, will recommend all these great measures to Congress in the strongest terms, and will use every effort consistent with his duty to insure their accomplishment.

In the meantime the condition of the people of California is anomalous and will require, on their part, the exercise of great prudence and discretion. By the conclusion of the treaty of peace the military government which was established over them under the laws of war, as recognized by the practice of all civilized nations, has ceased to derive its authority from this source of power. But is there for this reason no government in California? Are life, liberty, and property under the protection of no existing authorities? This would be a singular phenomenon in the face of the world, and especially among American citizens, distinguished as they are above all others for their law-abiding character.

Fortunately, they are not reduced to this sad condition. The termination of the war left an existing government, a government de facto, in full operation, and this will continue, with the presumed consent of the people, until Congress shall provide for them a Territorial government. The great law of necessity justifies this conclusion. The consent of the people is irresistibly inferred from the fact that no civilized community could possibly desire to abrogate an existing government when the alternative presented would be to place themselves in a state of anarchy, beyond the protection of all laws, and reduce them to the unhappy necessity of submitting to the dominion of the strongest.

This Government de facto will, of course, exercise no power inconsistent with the provisions of the Constitution of the United States, which is the supreme law of the land. For this reason, no import duties can be levied in California on articles the growth, produce, or manufacture of the United States, as no such duties can be imposed in any other part of our Union on the productions of California. Nor can new duties be charged in California upon such foreign productions as have already paid duties in any of our ports of entry, for the obvious reason that California is within the territory of the United States. I shall not enlarge upon this subject, however, as the Secretary of the Treasury will perform that duty.

Mr. CAFFERY. Mr. President, that decision all through bears out the position I have asserted, that the tariff laws of the United States become operative in the Territories the very moment the Territories are organized.

Mr. LINDSAY. Without expressing any opinion on the subject, I will ask the Senator if he has considered in this connection the case of Fleming vs. Page, 9 Howard, in which it was held that imports from Florida, after Florida has become a part of the United States, were to be subject to tariff duties until Congress had established revenue agencies in the new Territory; also that the same rule will apply upon the annexation or purchase of Louisiana.

Mr. CAFFERY. The Senator is in some error in regard to the Florida case, for there was an interregnum of Spanish authority. In the case of Louisiana, the delay in the delivery occurred from the fact that France had to get title from Spain before the cession could be made by France to the United States, and in the case of Florida there was an interregnum of a like character. But put the cases in the best light that the Senator from Kentucky can, and what do they amount to?

They amount to this, that if Congress allows the President of the United States to usurp civil power, and Congress does not provide the collection districts and machinery for collection, to do which it is its bounden duty, then there is no means of collection and the laws are inoperative. But you can not argue down the principle by taking from that principle the necessary machinery to put it into operation.

Even if the decision in the Florida case were correct, which it is not, according to the decision in Cross vs. Harrison, it would only amount to the fact that if Congress violated its solemn duty to organize a Territorial district and to divide the Territory into collection districts then there would be the opportunity to levy arbitrary taxes. Is that law? Are the American people going to tolerate for any length of time the usurpation of civil authority upon the part of the President of the United States? Will not public opinion force Congress to provide Territorial government and to divide the Territory into collection districts?

Mr. President, I had intended to debate this point at some length. I have a considerable number of authorities, but the hour is late. I am told that the clouds which a few months ago lowered over our political horizon are buried in the oblivion of a peaceful settlement, and I now, in accord with the harmonious feeling which pervades the body, will not take any more of the time of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Nebraska, which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. After line 15, on page 9, it is proposed to strike out all of the bill down to and including line 2, on page 10, relating to the matter of the age limit.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Nebraska.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SEWELL. On page 11, line 16, there occurs a similar provision in relation to restrictions upon age. I move that lines 15, 16, 17, down to the word "also" in line 18, be stricken out.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out, on page 11, beginning with line 15, the following:

Provided, That no person, other than an officer of the Regular Army, who has passed the age of 45 years shall be appointed an officer of volunteers: And provided, also.

Mr. SEWELL. I make the motion in order to make the text here correspond with the amendment just adopted.

Mr. COCKRELL. I move as a substitute for the words proposed to be stricken out what I send to the desk.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out lines 15, 16, and 17, down to the word "volunteers," and insert in lieu thereof the following:

Provided, That for each Regular Army officer of a staff, corps, or department who may be retained in or appointed to a higher volunteer rank in said staff, corps, or department than that actually held by him in the regular establishment there may be appointed one officer of volunteers of the lowest grade mentioned in this section for such staff, corps, or department; but no appointment shall be made which will increase the total number of officers, regular and volunteer, serving in any grade above the number authorized by this act.

Mr. COCKRELL. Then the other proviso is to remain in. Read the other proviso, so as to get the whole question before the Senate.

The Secretary read as follows:

And provided also, That all the volunteer staff officers herein authorized to be appointed or retained in the service shall be honorably discharged on July 1, 1901, or sooner if their services are no longer required.

Mr. COCKRELL. That remains in the bill.

Mr. SPOONER. That takes out the age limit altogether?

Mr. COCKRELL. Yes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey moves to strike out part of the section referred to and the Senator from Missouri moves to strike out and insert.

Mr. SEWELL. I should like to have the amendment of the Senator from Missouri stated again.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be again stated.

The Secretary again read the amendment of Mr. COCKRELL.

Mr. SEWELL. I accept that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment to strike out and insert.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GORMAN. Mr. President—

Mr. HAWLEY. I understood the Senator from Maryland to say that he would yield to me.

Mr. GORMAN. Certainly.

Mr. HAWLEY. I have two amendments that I have been waiting to offer all the afternoon. I move to add a proviso after section 15, in the words I send to the desk. I ask that the amendment be read for information.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. Add at the end of line 10, page 12, being the end of section 15, the following:

And provided further, That the President is authorized to enlist temporarily in service for absolutely necessary purposes in the Philippine Islands volunteers, officers and men, now in those islands and about to be discharged, provided their retention shall not extend beyond the time necessary to replace them by troops authorized to be maintained under the provisions of this act.

Mr. HAWLEY. I will state—

Mr. PASCO. I suggest to the Senator from Connecticut to provide that they may be retained in their present organizations. That may be very desirable.

Mr. HAWLEY. Of course that will be done. I understand one regiment has offered to accept. It will be done if it can be.

Mr. PASCO. A few words will make that clear, if the Senator will modify his amendment.

Mr. HAWLEY. I do not think that is necessary at all. The enlisting officer would be very glad to have a regiment come out.

Mr. PASCO. That is simply for the reenlistment of individuals, not in companies or regiments.

Mr. HAWLEY. They are enlisted individually, every one of them.

Mr. CHILTON. I do not understand the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. HAWLEY. I will say by organizations or individually.

Mr. PASCO. That will cover it.

Mr. CHILTON. Let the amendment be read again.

The SECRETARY. Add at the end of line 10, page 12:

And provided further, That the President is authorized to enlist temporarily in service for absolutely necessary purposes in the Philippine Islands volunteers, officers and men, now in those islands and about to be discharged, provided their retention shall not extend beyond the time necessary to replace them by troops authorized to be maintained under the provisions of this act.

Mr. COCKRELL. "And not beyond," the Senator had better put in there, as in the beginning, "the period of six months."

Mr. HAWLEY. It is limited to six months, is it not?

Mr. COCKRELL. No. And not to exceed the period of six months.

Mr. HAWLEY. I thought that was in the first line. I am not quite sure.

Mr. ALLISON. Has the amendment been agreed to?

Mr. HAWLEY. Not yet.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment to the amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. Add at the end of the amendment, "and not beyond the period of six months."

Mr. SEWELL. Mr. President—

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Connecticut has the floor.

Mr. SEWELL. I ask a question for information. Why limit it to six months? It costs $400 or $500 a man to get them to the Philippines. The limitation is two years and four months. Why should not those remain in the service if they choose to enlist for two years and four months?

Mr. HAWLEY. They will be taken for that time as a matter of course if they wish to reenlist, but high authorities have said to me that many men who will be discharged there would be perfectly willing to reenlist for a brief time again, say six months. The object of it is clear. Many volunteers will be discharged and will be rushing home before the regulars or newly enlisted men who are to take their places get there. This is just to bridge the gap of a few months. As many as choose to enlist in the new thirty-five regiments will be welcome.

Mr. COCKRELL. I was going to suggest to put in that the number who enlist for service to July 1, 1901, shall be a part of the force herein authorized.

Mr. SEWELL. That is my view of it.

Mr. HAWLEY. Very good. Let some one write that down.

Mr. PASCO. Did the Senator from Connecticut accept the suggestion I made, to insert, after "officers and men," the words "individually or by organization?"

Mr. HAWLEY. By organization or individually. I wish to have that put in.

Mr. PASCO. That is not in now. I move that the amendment be amended by inserting after "men," in the third line, "individually or by organization."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the amendment to the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. SPOONER. Let the amendment be read again.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It is accepted by the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. GORMAN. Is the Senator through?

Mr. HAWLEY. No; I am not through, quite. Has the amendment been adopted?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment is being corrected by the Senator from Missouri. The amendment will be again read.

The SECRETARY. At the end of the amendment insert the following:

Provided, That those who are enlisted for the term authorized by this act shall be counted as a part of the volunteer force herein authorized.

Mr. ALLEN. Is it the intention to retain the troops now enlisted their full term?

Mr. HAWLEY. Why, Mr. President, there is not a man in the United States who thinks it can be done, and not a man who tries to do it. They are absolutely free when the proclamation of established peace is made. But the theory is—it is known, in fact—that many men will be willing to stay a few months longer, to bridge over the time between the discharge of the old volunteer regiments and the arrival of the new regiments to take their places. It is a temporary bridge; that is all.

Mr. ALLEN. The trouble with the amendment is that it is broader than the statement of the Senator from Connecticut. It will authorize the retention in the service for their full term the troops that enlisted a year ago.

Mr. HAWLEY. Oh, no.

Mr. ALLEN. If the Secretary will read the amendment again, I will be much obliged.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment again.

The SECRETARY. The amendment as modified is as follows:

And provided further, That the President is authorized to enlist temporarily in service, for absolutely necessary purposes in the Philippine Islands, volunteers, officers and men, individually or by organization, now in those islands and about to be discharged, provided their retention shall not extend beyond the time necessary to replace them by troops authorized to be maintained under the provisions of this act, and not beyond a period of six months: Provided, That those who are enlisted for the term authorized by this act shall be counted as a part of the volunteer force herein authorized.

Mr. ALLEN. The provision to which I desire to direct attention is that those now enlisted in the service are to be counted as a part and parcel of the aggregate troops authorized by this bill, and I infer that the President, under the terms of this bill, would have a right to retain them for the full period of their enlistment—two years.

Mr. CARTER. If the Senator from Nebraska will yield a moment, I will say that I understand the effect to be that all enlisted men and officers in the Volunteer Army will, upon the issuance of the President's proclamation of peace, be entitled to a prompt discharge. This amendment contemplates the reenlistment of such of those troops of the volunteer service as may consent to remain for a brief period of time awaiting the arrival of troops to take their places.

Mr. ALLEN. I understand that quite well.

Mr. CARTER. It is likewise provided in the amendment that if any of the volunteer soldiers when discharged elect to enlist for the full term of two years and four months contemplated for enlistments of volunteers under this bill, they may have the privilege so to do, and they will be counted as a part of the maximum force authorized by the bill.

Mr. COCKRELL. I withdraw the amendment to the amendment I offered. It is not necessary. This contemplates only the organization of a temporary force not to exceed six months. That is a special provision. The President has the right to organize any number of them as a part of the 35,000, and it does not affect that. Therefore my amendment to the amendment would not be applicable.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment offered by the Senator from Connecticut as it now stands.

The SECRETARY. Add at the end of line 10, on page 12:

And provided further, That the President is authorized to enlist temporarily in the service, for absolutely necessary purposes in the Philippine Islands, volunteers, officers and men, individually or by organization, now in those islands and about to be discharged, provided their retention shall not extend beyond the time necessary to replace them by troops authorized to be maintained under the provisions of this act, and not beyond the period of six months.

Mr. ALLEN. I have no objection to that at all.

Mr. SPOONER. The word "enlistment" would be better than the word "retention."

Mr. ALLEN. I have no objection to the amendment whatever. The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HAWLEY. I offer an independent section, to be numbered 16, changing the next number, of course, to 17.

The SECRETARY. Insert as a new section:

SEC. 16. That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized to permit enlisted men of the United States Army to make allotments of their pay under such regulations as he may prescribe for the support of their families or relatives, for their own savings or for other purposes, during such time as they may be absent on distant duty or under other circumstances warranting such action.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CHILTON. I wish the attention of the Senator from Connecticut to section 15 of this proposed act. It will be remembered that the law of April 23, 1898, provided:

That the Volunteer Army shall be maintained only during the existence of war, or while war is imminent, and shall be raised and organized, as in this act provided, only after Congress has or shall have authorized the President to raise such a force or to call into the actual service of the United States the militia of the several States: Provided, That all enlistments for the Volunteer Army shall be for a term of two years, unless sooner terminated, and that all officers and men composing said army shall be discharged from the service of the United States when the purposes for which they were called into service shall have been accomplished, or on the conclusion of hostilities.

That fixed the right of the volunteers to be discharged on the conclusion of hostilities. In this bill section 15 provides:

That as soon as practicable after the approval of this act the officers and enlisted men of the Volunteer Army not herein authorized to be retained in service shall be mustered out of the military service of the United States and discharged: Provided, etc.

The balance of the section is, I think, very appropriate, but the point I wish to direct attention to is that under the language used here, that these men shall be discharged "as soon as practicable," the term of service would be enlarged. The rights of the men are to be determined by their contract made with the Government at the time of their enlistment, and the Government of the United States has no right to say that a man who enlisted for a certain time shall be held in the service as long as the President may deem practicable. Therefore, instead of the language used in the first part of the section, I have written this language, which will much better protect the rights of the enlisted men—

Mr. SEWELL. Will the Senator from Texas allow me a word?

Mr. CHILTON. Certainly.

Mr. SEWELL. The language used in that clause is to cover a case like the Philippines. Suppose the President issues the proclamation to-day, you can not discharge them to-morrow. You have got to give them transportation and you have got to get them home. The language is "as soon as practicable." It is not intended for any other purpose.

Mr. CHILTON. But that language is too broad. That language might be construed to give the President of the United States the right to hold these men for one year or two years.

Mr. HAWLEY. But he can not do it.

Mr. CHILTON. You say he can not do it, but you are enlarging the language which was used at the time of their enlistment. Now, let us follow the statute and there is no danger at all of the difficulty which the Senator from New Jersey suggests. You can not discharge these men in the twinkling of an eye; that is impossible. Hence that contingency is implied in any language that you use. But when you use language such as this, that "they shall be discharged as soon as practicable," the President of the United States might say to these men who are held down in Cuba or in parts of the United States who enlisted as volunteers, "I will not discharge a man until I get new men to take your places." That would be an act of tyranny. It would be an act of oppression. These men have made their contract with the Government of the United States. They enlisted to serve during the war, and it is but an act of tyranny to compel them to serve after the war.

Mr. SEWELL. What does the Senator propose?

Mr. CHILTON. You have no right to say to the volunteers that they shall stay in the Army. If you want to make up your Army, you have got to go out among the people and draft men, if necessary, and put them in the Army. Here is the amendment. The amendment simply repeats the law as it now stands. I propose to make the section read:

SEC. 15. That the officers and enlisted men of the Volunteer Army shall be mustered out of the military service of the United States and discharged as provided in the act of April 23, 1898.

That leaves their rights just as the statute now makes it.

Mr. FAULKNER. I ask the Senator from Texas whether he has not really enlarged the power of the President as it would exist under the pending bill. Would it not be well, if he is going to offer that as an amendment, to leave in, also, the first part of the section? Is it not a fact that it is a limitation upon the previous law—which was in the interest of the volunteers?

Mr. CHILTON. I do not think so.

Mr. FAULKNER. The volunteer is only to be discharged under the existing law when either a ratification of peace occurs or the limitation of the term of two years expires. This is a provision which enables the President at once, on the passage of this bill and before either of those contingencies, to discharge the soldiers.

Mr. CHILTON. The President has already got that power.

Mr. FAULKNER. I think so, too.

Mr. CHILTON. And he has already exercised that power.

Mr. FAULKNER. I think so, too.

Mr. CHILTON. Therefore the language does not do any good at all in that respect. The only construction that could be given to this language is that it would enlarge the President's power, and he could hold these men longer than the law contemplates. I understand that the Senator from Connecticut accepts the language.

Mr. HAWLEY. No; I do not know that I do, because the President has a right to keep them only until he shall have procured the exchange of ratifications.

Mr. CHILTON. That is right.

Mr. HAWLEY. Very well. We are willing, if it be possible, to have it done sooner than that, because they will go immediately about getting men to relieve them.

Mr. CHILTON. The President has already got that power. Here is the language I want to put in. Instead of the words "as soon as practicable," which is an indefinite clause, I propose the following language:

That the officers and enlisted men of the Volunteer Army shall be mustered out of the military service of the United States and discharged as provided in the act of April 23, 1898.

Mr. HAWLEY. The President can do that now.

Mr. COCKRELL. The Senator ought to put in the words "not herein authorized to be retained in the service," because we authorize some of these volunteers to reenlist and be retained in the service. We authorize any of the volunteers in the Regular Army who wish to stay there to remain.

Mr. CHILTON. I understood that to be covered by the proviso right at the end of the section, which is left in. Read on the top of the next page. It is covered by that language.

Mr. COCKRELL. That would not refer to those in what is called the Regular Army.

Mr. CHILTON. I am perfectly willing any language should be used there that covers the point. What I mean is that I do not want the President's authority over these men enlarged beyond the act of their enlistment.

Mr. SEWELL. Let me make a suggestion to the Senator from Texas.

Mr. CHILTON. Strike out lines 23, 24, 25, and line 1, on page 12, down to "provided."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. And insert?

Mr. COCKRELL. What do you propose to insert?

Mr. SEWELL. I call the attention of the Senator from Texas to a suggestion.

Mr. CHILTON. Excuse me.

Mr. SEWELL. Would it not answer the Senator's purpose just the same by striking out "as soon as practicable" and inserting "after the approval of this act?"

Mr. COCKRELL. Upon the approval of the act.

Mr. SEWELL. "That upon the approval of this act."

Mr. CHILTON. It is all right, if you put it that way, because that was the first language I suggested. The reason why I did not insist on that was simply because the Senator mentioned a while ago that the President might want to retain these men until the treaty of peace was proclaimed. Then he would have to discharge them at once. The language I used is, I think, the proper language to be employed.

Mr. COCKRELL. I suggest to insert "upon the approval of this act and the ratification of the peace treaty."

Mr. CHILTON. No. We merely want to let the troops be discharged according to the terms of the act under which they were enlisted, leaving the construction of that act to be determined hereafter. Let the proviso be read.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out section 15, down to and including the word "discharged," in line 1, on page 12, and to insert in lieu thereof:

SEC. 15. That the officers and enlisted men of the Volunteer Army shall be mustered out of the military service of the United States and discharged as provided in the act of April 23, 1898.

Mr. BUTLER. I should like to have the attention of the Senator from Texas for a moment.

Mr. COCKRELL. Has that amendment been agreed to?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BUTLER] has risen to speak to the amendment.

Mr. BUTLER. I call the attention of the Senator to the fact that I wish to modify his amendment as follows. I would suggest to add after the word "discharged" the words "and not later than April 23, 1898."

This would give the volunteers the benefit of being mustered out sooner than is now provided by law, if it be practicable to do it. It would guarantee that they would be mustered out at that date in any event.

Mr. CHILTON. I do not think that suggestion improves the amendment. The whole case in a nut shell is this: The President now has authority to discharge these men earlier, but my amendment simply provides that not any of them shall be kept beyond the time of their original enlistment.

Mr. SEWELL. I suggest to the Senator the striking out in section 15, line 23, the words "as soon as practicable after" and inserting the word "upon;" so as to read:

That upon the approval of this act the officers and enlisted men of the Volunteer Army, etc.

Mr. CHILTON. Why not leave their rights depend on the act under which they enlisted?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Texas [Mr. CHILTON].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GORMAN. I offer the amendment I send to the desk, to come in at the end of section 15, as now amended, being the last proviso to that section.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to insert at the end of the amendment following section 15:

And provided also, That each and every provision of this act shall continue in force until July 1, 1901, and on and after that date all the general staff, and line officers appointed to the Army under this act shall be discharged, and the numbers restored in each grade to those existing at the passage of this act, and the enlisted force of the line of the Army shall be reduced to the number as provided for by law prior to April 1, 1898, exclusive of such additions as have been or may be made under this act to the artillery, and except the cadets provided for by this act who may be appointed prior to July 1, 1901: And provided further, That no officer who has been or may be promoted under existing law or under the rules of seniority shall be disturbed in his rank.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment submitted by the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN].

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, I hope the amendment will not be adopted. I should much prefer to see an amendment, if one of this character must be provided, that will go still further and provide that on July 1, 1901, the entire Army shall fall. That would leave the deck entirely clear and leave our responsibility entirely plain. I would have no objection to that, because I believe that Congress hereafter would pass some law to provide for whatever was necessary, whether it be 62,000, 38,500, 29,000, 27,000, or even as few as 20,000 men.

I do not understand that there is now any difference of opinion as to the present necessities of the Army or to the number of men needed in the way of a temporary army. I have believed, and been very happy in the belief in the past few days, that we had at last come to some conclusion and agreement, and that it was admitted upon all sides that it would be necessary to provide, provisionally at least, for about 100,000 men; but there is perhaps no necessity for figuring upon or debating that point. It is conceded.

So, then, the whole question now comes upon the size of the standing army of the United States after a certain date. Why is it necessary for Senators, who have been supposed at least—perhaps erroneously—to be satisfied with what has been known as the compromise bill, to forestall the action of Congress hereafter? I can not even imagine. It seems to me that the next Senate and the next House of Representatives ought to have something to say regarding the Army that shall exist after 1901. So long as 38,000 or nearly 100,000 are required now, and so long as it is admitted that at least 38,000 will be required until we meet again, I do not understand why we are asked now, at this time, to legislate so far in the future and declare that after two years and four months from now we shall have but 27,000 men.

I am one of those who believe that a standing army of 27,000 is too small now or at any time hereafter. We provided away back in the seventies for an army of 25,000 men. We considered an army of that size necessary in times of peace and when the country was not nearly as large nor as powerful nor as exposed as it is now. We considered it necessary when many of our States were sparsely settled and some not at all. We have since then considered it necessary to build a very considerable system of coast defenses, which, it has been admitted, requires for artillery in the United States Army alone from 20,000 to 21,000 men and officers.

If that be true, I submit to the Senate it is not wise legislation to say that, with 21,000 men necessary upon our coast, we need but 27,000 men altogether; or, in other words, leaving only a matter of some 6,000 men for all purposes for the entire interior and frontier.

I know that there is a necessity for a standing army in the interior. I do not believe that any Senator here can successfully combat the proposition. It may be said we are to-day not in war with the Indians. You could say the same nearly one hundred years ago, but there is not a day, Mr. President, when this country is not in danger of Indian outbreaks unless proper forces are in sight at every Western Indian agency. No man can successfully maintain his position who will contradict that assertion.

I may realize it more keenly perhaps than those Senators who live in sight of the Atlantic or the Pacific Ocean. They may see the necessity of withdrawing all our forces to their coast defenses, but, Mr. President, the house in which I live is not a stone's throw from where men have been killed and scalped by Indians since I have been an inhabitant of that town. I have been called out in the night and in the day to saddle a horse, and with comrades, go after marauding bands of Indians who had stolen stock, and to rescue men who had been taken captives.

Just so long as you have a standing army, not a large one, but consisting of a sufficient number of troops near these agencies and near these savages, you stand a good chance of peace, and I believe you will have peace. But even though the old men among the Indian tribes have given up the idea that they can successfully combat the United States, there is a class of young bucks growing up who listen to the stories of their grandfathers and their fathers of the scalps that they took, of the battles they fought, and the victories they gained, and the young braves' blood is warmed for war.

In the presence of troops and the authority of the United States, backed with powder and ball, that young restless spirit is repressed, at least sufficiently to avoid anything worse than a few small raids, a little matter of the stealing of live stock, horses, etc., and we let it go at that; but when you withdraw the troops from those agencies you are bound to have warlike raids from the Indians, though they may be in amity with us to-day, and though they may be beneficiaries of the Government in drawing their rations, annuities, etc.

We are in the habit in the West of paying tribute to the East. We expect to do that. Between life insurance and fire insurance and sundry and divers other things which we have to pay from our section of the country to the coast country our purses are continually drained. We have to pay our taxes for constructing these coast defenses; we have to pay to support all of the army and fortifications expenses along the coast, and I think we have a right to insist that we shall not be crippled in the standing army of the United States beyond the point which we believe is safe for our exposed frontiers.

I do not know, Mr. President—it may be explained here—why this amendment is offered. We were proceeding in the usual way of doing business in the Senate. An appropriate committee was in charge of the bill for the reorganization of the Army, and, unfortunately, that committee was divided; I have nothing to say about that. I have no fault to find with those outside of the committee who may have considered that committee impotent to take charge of its affairs. I can say nothing about that under the circumstances.

But it seems to me that, after having taken the bill in charge, having had consultations, and having come in here with a bill which the honorable Senator, the oldest in service upon the other side of the Chamber—who has served so long upon the committee—has said was a good bill, that he considered it a good bill, before God and man, and so forth—I do not understand why they do not stand by the product of that compromise agreement. When the veteran Senator from Missouri, from the other side, makes this declaration in regard to the bill, I believe him, and when he indicates—whether he says so or not—that there has been a solemn agreement, and that the reason that we have such a bill as a compromise measure is because both sides have agreed to it, I can not understand why we are to add another codicil to it, and yet another, and I should like to know where we are going to stop and when it is to end.

Mr. ALLEN. Does the Senator from Wyoming pretend that the Senator from Missouri has the right to bind Senators who are not members of the committee?

Mr. WARREN. Not at all.

Mr. ALLEN. Have we any right of independent thought or action on this side?

Mr. WARREN. Assuredly.

Mr. ALLEN. Then why should the Senator say that we are questioning the authority of the Senator from Missouri to make the compact?

Mr. WARREN. I think the Senator mistakes my meaning. I am simply stating that inasmuch as the Committee on Military Affairs was evenly divided, inasmuch as these affairs were taken up by sundry other Senators upon both sides, inasmuch as it is reported an agreement was made, inasmuch as the result of that consideration was presented here without a dissenting voice, as I understand it, I then ask why those who are understood to be the ones in chief or the one in chief who directed this bill, which has been presented here by a Senator who was against the Hull bill, with a statement that it was a good bill before God and man—I say I want to know why those who agreed then are disagreeing now, and why the mover of the amendment first agreed and now disagrees?

Mr. ALLEN. Suppose some Senators disagree with that Senator, and do not believe before God and man that this is a good bill; we have a right to oppose it, have we not?

Mr. WARREN. Certainly. If another Senator had presented the amendment which has been read, I might have considered it differently as to its origin than I now do, coming, as it does, from the Senator who I understood, perhaps erroneously, was the controlling factor and one of the very few, I might say less than a half dozen, who prepared this compromise bill now before us.

Mr. ALLEN. So far as I am concerned, if the Senator will permit me, I do not know that there was any agreement between members of the committee. I only know it through the newspapers. If there was an agreement it was carried on very diplomatically, very secretly, and very exclusively, and nobody was permitted to know anything about it until it came in the form of this slipshod affair which is now before the Senate.

Mr. WARREN. Replying to that, I desire to say that the Senator from Nebraska had the same information that I had. I gave it my support when it was returned here because I believed it was the result of a deliberate and solemn agreement, and because the bill looked to me like a good bill; but I believe this amendment now offered makes it a bad bill. There is the difference.

If there be enough votes here to carry the amendment, I shall be satisfied, but I can not take my seat without protesting against this declaration at this time, in the face of all the appropriations which have been made for coast defenses, and in face of the fact that there has been no kind of difference in the testimony that it takes 21,000 men for the artillery alone. I can not, I say, help protesting against reducing the Army, in view of that fact, to 27,000 men, and leave the frontier, from which I have the honor to come, exposed to dangers of various kinds.

Why is this curtailment to be made now, so long in advance? Is it to be made, forsooth, by those who perhaps do not expect to be in Congress hereafter, but who propose to prejudice, and, indeed, control by this action the Senate and House of Representatives and the country hereafter? Should not everyone here, whether he expects to be a member of the next Congress or not, be willing to trust his case with that Congress?

It seems to me that the size of the Regular Army in this case can be better fixed by Congress two years from now, in view of the facts as they may then exist, than we can undertake to limit it now; and I have heard no argument to show that there is any necessity for limiting the Army to 27,000, or even 29,000, men for the future.

Mr. President, I do not wish to talk against time. If the votes are here to adopt the amendment, I want to see them regularly recorded. I shall be satisfied in recording my vote against it.

Mr. BACON obtained the floor.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. President—

Mr. BACON. I will yield to the Senator from Connecticut, if he desires.

Mr. HAWLEY. I do not think it would be unfair to yield to me, as I engaged the Presiding Officer, and am chairman of the committee.

Mr. BACON. I yield to the Senator with great pleasure.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Georgia yields to the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. HAWLEY. I shall not detain the Senate long, as the Senator speaks so seldom and so agreeably.

Mr. President, I am not satisfied altogether with this proposition. It frequently happens in this world that we do not get exactly what we want. In the first form in which this proposition came I could not concur at all. My opposition was absolute and positive. It has since gradually climbed down, as the boys would say, until it has become the one that we must, on the whole, submit to.

Mind you, there is one fundamental feature in that bill which is very satisfactory anyhow. It provides 100,000 men for the President to maintain the honor of the country and keep peace in our acquired possessions. I should have been glad to have had more. I should have been glad to have had a complete organization upon a much larger scale, to man the guns along our coast from Nova Scotia around to Puget Sound. There are seven or eight hundred of the finest guns ever made, and we have not artillerymen enough to take care of them. There is the chief defect of the bill. But the force is somewhat increased, and I think we can keep the sand out of those guns and perhaps occasionally turn one or two of them around; and next December, God willing, we will make the coast defenses what they ought to be.

Now, as to the process by which we have arrived at this conclusion, I do not know anything unusual about it. There were various conversations. There were a number of men who met half accidentally in the White House one evening and talked over certain propositions, and immediately a subcommittee of the Committee on Military Affairs, in connection with the War Office, began the draft of a new bill, and did get what we considered a very good bill indeed.

As I have said, they have not kept in enough of it to suit me, as to artillery chiefly, but the bill on the whole is wisely drawn and is pronounced by those whose experience and skill justify them in speaking as the best that has ever been drawn for the Army. It is not shorn of all of its good by any manner of means. It will answer the purpose, we can say that, and, thank Heaven, it has, I repeat, the fundamental thing—100,000 men for William McKinley to take care of this country with. In the next Congress, I am happy to say, although I am sorry to part with some men on that side, both the House and the Senate will be Republican.

Political divisions do not govern, necessarily, in such matters, but I assert that as a fact. It will take care of coast defenses and some other things exactly as they ought to be taken care of. But in the meantime we are within four days of the end of the session, and I give my assent, with not so much rejoicing as I had hoped, to the passage of this bill.

Mr. WARREN. May I ask my colleague on the committee a question before he takes his seat? I desire him to state, if he will, what would have been the minimum on July 1, 1901, under the bill which that conference of Senators directed to be brought in here, and what will be the minimum if this amendment carries. I simply wish to show the difference between the two measures—the one to which my esteemed friend the chairman of the committee first gave his approval, and the minimum under this amendment.

Mr. HAWLEY. This temporarily raises the Regular Army to 65,000, and in addition to that there are 35,000 volunteers.

Mr. WARREN. That does not answer the question as to the standing Army, the Regular Army. I understand that it has cut the Army, and if I am wrong the chairman will correct me, from about 38,500 down to 27,000 or 29,000. In other words, it is a matter of cutting off from the standing Regular Army by this amendment 11,500 men. The country ought to know it, whatever it is.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, I am glad to learn from the Senator from Wyoming that there is a codicil to this bill. Its testamentary character appeals to me. De mortuis nil nisi bonum.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. WARREN. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CULLOM (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY]. I understand that he would vote for this amendment, and therefore I will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. WARREN (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Washington [Mr. TURNER], and as he is out of the Chamber, I withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. THURSTON. Has the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN] voted?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from South Carolina has not voted.

Mr. THURSTON. I have a general pair with that Senator, and if he were present, I should vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 68, nays 0, as follows:

YEAS—68.

Allen,	Elkins,	McBride,	Platt, Conn.
Allison,	Fairbanks,	McEnery,	Platt, N. Y.
Bacon,	Faulkner,	McLaurin,	Pritchard,
Bale,	Foraker,	McMillan,	Proctor,
Berry,	Frye,	Mallory,	Rawlins,
Burrows,	Gallinger,	Maulie,	Roach,
Butler,	Gear,	Martin,	Rosa,
Caffery,	Gorman,	Mason,	Sewell,
Carter,	Hanna,	Mitchell,	Simon,
Chandler,	Hansbrough,	Money,	Smith,
Chilton,	Harris,	Morgan,	Spooner,
Clark,	Hawley,	Murphy,	Stewart,
Clay,	Heitfeld,	Nelson,	Teller,
Cockrell,	Hoar,	Pasco,	Turley,
Cullom,	Jones, Nev.	Perkins,	Vest,
Daniel,	Lindsay,	Pettigrew,	Wellington,
Deboe,	Lodge,	Pettus,	White.

NAYS—0.

NOT VOTING—22.

Aldrich,	Jones, Ark.	Shoup,	Warren,
Baker,	Kenney,	Sullivan,	Wetmore,
Cannon,	Kyle,	Thurston,	Wilson,
Davis,	Mills,	Tillman,	Woolcott.
Gray,	Penrose,	Turner,
Hale,	Quay,	Turpie,

So the amendment proposed by Mr. GORMAN was agreed to.

Mr. PROCTOR addressed the Chair.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Georgia [Mr. BACON] yielded the floor a moment since.

Mr. BACON. Mr. President, I desire to detain the Senate but a very few minutes. The adoption of this amendment offered by the Senator from Maryland very much simplifies the question as to the purposes for which this army is to be organized. It is now a clear-cut proposition that the regular standing army is estimated and fixed at 29,000 men. I understand that is the number which it will be under the amendment just adopted, and therefore the balance of 71,000 men is for an extraordinary purpose. What is that extraordinary purpose?

The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY] says he thanks God that there are 100,000 men provided for the defense of the country. I think in that he makes a misstatement. We have provided 29,000 men for the defense of the country and we have provided 71,000 for the extraordinary purposes of the time. As I shall show in a very few minutes, these 71,000 men are almost altogether for the services required by the complications in the Philippine Islands. Here, now, is the demonstration of that proposition.

Mr. President, outside of the regular force for the standing army, that which will be needed on a peace basis, we have the addition of Porto Rico, in which it may be said troops are required. I shall not repeat what has already been said here to-day to show that the demand for troops in Porto Rico is not such as would have necessitated any increase of the Army, so none need be added on that account. We have also the demand for some troops in Cuba. I will not in that instance either take up the time of the Senate to repeat what has already been said and what is conceded by all, that very few troops are needed there now.

I have the word for that, if I do not misunderstand him, of the Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR], who has just returned from Cuba, that very few are needed there now, and that in a very short time none will be needed there. It follows that no troops need be included in this bill for this purpose. If any are needed the few can be furnished from the Regular Army. So that all the extraordinary force needed, and which is provided for in this bill, is that which is called for by the Filipino complications, and as to that purpose I desire to occupy for a moment the time of the Senate. How much is that extraordinary force? Twenty-nine thousand for the Regular Army leaves 71,000 for an extraordinary purpose; that extraordinary purpose being now almost exclusively, and within a very short time will be exclusively, the purpose demanded by the annexation of the Philippine Islands. I use the expression, "annexation of the Philippine Islands," because by the ratification of the treaty these islands have been annexed. There is no longer any question of annexation. The only question in this connection is whether we can undo what has been done by the ratification of the treaty.

Mr. President, those of us who have opposed the annexation of the Philippine Islands have been largely influenced by the fact that we believed it would commit the country to a policy which involved an immense expenditure. There were other paramount reasons, but I am now discussing the matter of expense. We believed that it would involve an immense expenditure not only now, but for an indefinite time in the future; and it is proper that now, when we have a clear-cut item of that expense, we should make a note of it, that the country may know of it, in order that we may count the cost, and in order to determine, so far as this feature is concerned, the great question which is going to be presented to the people of this country—whether or not we will pursue a policy which must necessarily involve the continuance of this great expense.

Sir, what is this expense in this particular instance? One hundred thousand men, 71,000 of them by reason of the fact that we have annexed the Philippine Islands. How much is it in money? The War Department, if the published statements are correct, estimated that an establishment of 100,000 men, when it was proposed to have a regular army of that size, would cost $145,000,000 per annum. A volunteer force will cost as much.

The Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] thinks it will not cost probably over a hundred and twenty-five millions, and I propose to take the lowest figure for the purpose of arriving at the question, when we go to keep books on this question, how much is to be charged up to the fact that we have annexed the Philippine Islands. It is but the beginning. If this particular expenditure were all, it would be a different matter.

If a hundred thousand men are to cost a hundred and twenty-five millions per annum, seventy-one one-hundredths of that amount is between eighty-five and ninety million dollars per year. This bill provides for two years, so that doubling it we have at least a hundred and seventy million dollars to charge up under the provisions of this bill for the single expense attendant upon the maintenance of an army for the purpose of making good the annexation of the Philippine Islands and the subjugation of their people.

To that expenditure for the Army must be added the expense of the Navy, which we can not ascertain with similar accuracy, because it is more difficult to determine what particular part of the Navy is employed in that service and what particular portion of the total expense of the naval establishment is to be charged up to it. But I have asked some gentlemen who are upon the Naval Committee, and they think it is a fair proportion to say that one-half of the expense of the naval establishment for the next two years is properly chargeable to the service in the Philippine Islands.

The annual expense of the naval establishment will be fifty or sixty million dollars a year, and one-half of that will carry the annual expense for the Army and the Navy for the Philippine Islands to over a hundred million dollars. The annual expense will be at least a hundred and ten million dollars solely for the Army and the Navy, required solely by reason of the fact that we have annexed the Philippine Islands.

Of course, there is the original cost of $20,000,000 to be paid to Spain, but that is so insignificant in amount compared to the hundred millions a year and more to be paid out every year for many years on account of the Philippine Islands that this purchase price drops out of sight and is almost forgotten.

Mr. President, when is that to stop if this policy of holding the Philippine Islands is to be pursued? That is certainly a most serious question. I doubt not, as has been said here to-day, that it is within the power of this Government to utterly crush out the opposition in the Philippine Islands. I doubt not that it is in the power of this Government to entirely exterminate the Filipinos. But unless we do exterminate them, the temporary suppression of what we call their rebellion will not relieve us of the necessity of a continued charge of this kind for the support of the Army and the Navy, which will be sufficient to keep them in subjection.

Why, Mr. President, they are on the other side of the world. We can not withdraw from there an army with an idea that if a rebellion breaks out we can send it back, and we can not have any possible reason to hope that that population, especially after what has passed in the slaughtering of their people, will consent to a subjection to the Government of the United States. We must, so long as we hold the Philippine Islands, keep an army and a navy there sufficiently large to deal with any rebellion which may break out among 10,000,000 people. It takes more than a month to send troops there. General Lawton left on a transport with troops on the 19th day of January, and he has not arrived there yet, in spite of haste telegrams which are being sent to him along the line where he touches at different points.

So, Mr. President, we have necessarily to face this proposition. We must either stop and turn back from the course upon which we have started—we must either abandon our purpose to subjugate the Filipinos and to hold them in subjection, or we must make up our minds to an annual expenditure in the future of a hundred million dollars at least for the purpose of maintaining in the Philippine Islands the army and navy which will be necessary to keep their people in subjection.

Nor is it alone in the expenditure of vast sums of money that we must pay the cost of the Philippine Islands. In that which is more valuable than money—in human life—in the lives of our own people, must the price be paid. And, sir, there is every reason to fear that before the autumn comes there will be mourning in thousands of American homes for noble youths sent across the seas who will never return. And so long as we persist in retaining the Philippine Islands in any relation, this annual sacrifice must be made.

This extraordinary and continued expenditure of money and life is solely due to the fact that we are not at peace; that on the contrary, we are at war.

Sir, there can be no successful dispute of the proposition that but for our annexation of the Philippine Islands we would now be at peace with the world. We do not propose to annex Cuba, and we have assured the Cubans that we do not intend to subjugate them, and in consequence we have no war with Cuba. On the contrary, we have annexed the Philippines, we are proceeding to subjugate the Filipinos, and we have war with them. Therefore, this extraordinary expense of hundreds of millions of dollars, this continued sacrifice of life is due, and due only, to the annexation of the Philippine Islands. Let the American people know the fact, and let them charge it up where it belongs.

Now, Mr. President, the time is late, and while I would like to proceed with that line of thought, I can not do so in justice to the Senate.

But I desire to say one word further as to the reasons why I shall support this bill in spite of the fact that it is a bill for a hundred thousand men. I do not do so because I favor an army of 100,000 men, for the contrary is true. I am opposed to an army of a hundred thousand men. I am opposed to any large standing army. In voting for this bill I consider that I am voting for a regular army of only 29,000 men, and that I am voting to furnish the President with 71,000 men, which he and his Secretary of War say are necessary to enable the President to perform the duty imposed upon the Executive by the ratification of the treaty in the annexation of the Philippine Islands.

Now, Mr. President, I can not be accused by anybody, or be suspected by anybody, of favoring the annexation of the Philippine Islands. I can not be thought to favor anything growing out of this annexation or of anything made necessary by such annexation. I can not be considered as in any manner responsible for anything which has led to the annexation of the Philippine Islands. I can not be understood for a moment as favoring the retention of the Philippine Islands. If I had my way, before we adjourned this night I would pass a resolution saying to those people, be free! And I would do it immediately; not only because they are entitled to be free, but also mainly because of the influence which that would have upon our own people and upon the most cherished institutions and principles of our own country.

Mr. President, no one is more extreme, I admit it, on that question than I am, and therefore it is from the standpoint of one occupying that extreme position that I propose to give the reasons why I conceive it to be my duty to vote for this bill.

In the first place, I think it is proper that I should vote for so much of the bill as represents the Regular Army. We, all of us, are agreed upon that. I am not sure that the exact number which should be embraced in the Regular Army is provided for in this bill, but I will let that pass. The Senate has with unanimity fixed that number at 29,000. There can be no question as to the propriety of my voting for that part of the bill.

Now, as to the question whether holding the views I do, having occupied the position which I have done and which I still do with reference to the impolicy of the annexation of the Philippine Islands, or their retention after annexation, I should vote for the 71,000 men required for this extraordinary purpose, I think I should do so upon this principle. Whenever the country, through its constitutional methods, commits itself to measures or to policies which result in war, it matters not how much I may have been opposed to those measures or to those policies or to the resulting war, I hold that it is my duty as a legislator to furnish the Government with all the means and all the money necessary to carry on that war.

The oft-repeated expression "our country, right or wrong" has a vital principle in it, and upon that principle I stand. In this annexation of the Philippine Islands through the ratification of the treaty, and in waging war to subjugate the Filipinos, I think the country, acting through constitutional authorities, is wrong. But it is not for me to say because the country has been committed to a policy that I do not favor and have opposed, in consequence of which there is war, that I will not support the Government. If that were the case, if enough of us could properly say that we would defeat legislation providing the Army necessary to support the Government in such war, we could bring disaster upon the country by so doing. We could subject the Army already in the field to defeat and massacre.

I conceive that it is our duty as Senators to contend for those measures which we deem to be right and to oppose those measures which we deem to be wrong, to do all that we can to avert war; but when war comes through the action of constitutional authorities—as, for instance, through the making of a treaty by the President and ratification by the Senate—there is but one thing for us to do, and however much we may disapprove of the measures that led to the war, and however strongly we may have striven to prevent those measures, and however much we may be opposed to the war, we must furnish the men and the means required by the Executive for the purpose of carrying it on. Otherwise we would be in a position where the requisite majority did that which involved war and then refused to sustain him with the money and men necessary to carry it on.

Mr. President, if this were a question where it was proposed as an original act that we should send abroad an invading army, even if it was one which the majority had through constitutional measures determined upon, there might be ground for hesitation in furnishing the men and the means to accomplish the invasion; but it is a very much stronger question, a very much stronger proposition, when war is flagrant, and when we have troops upon the scene of war who must be defended or who must be left to become a sacrifice to those who are in arms against us. There are twenty-odd thousand American troops in the Philippines. They are there in obedience to orders for which they are not responsible. If the war is to continue, they must be supported or left to defeat and death.

Therefore, Mr. President, if there were nothing else which would constrain me, repeating as I do my utter abhorrence of this war, as much as I would rejoice to stop this war, believing that it is an unholy war, believing that its prosecution and the measures which brought it about constitute the greatest misfortune that ever befell the American people, believing it to be a page in our history of which Americans will not be proud, I still believe that it is my duty under the circumstances to vote for the men and for the money necessary to support our soldiers already at Manila and for the Government to carry on the war which has been determined upon through constitutional methods and which is now flagrant in the Philippine Islands.

I say, Mr. President, the war which has been determined upon, because I suppose there was no Senator so blind but that he knew when we ratified the treaty and said that we would annex those islands, when we knew that the people whom we determined to annex had for years been fighting for their independence, when we knew that these people did not admit the sovereignty of Spain, when we knew that these people denied the right of Spain to sell them or our right to buy them, I say I suppose there was no Senator so blind but what knew that war would result, unless, as many hoped, we would at the time of the annexation or immediately thereafter assure the Filipinos that we did not intend permanent annexation. Many voted for the treaty upon the faith that this would be done. I did not believe then that it would be done, and there is no reason now to believe that it will be done.

When the question of the ratification of the treaty was before the Senate the argument used was to ratify the treaty and settle the question of the permanent annexation of the Philippines afterwards; that until the treaty was ratified the power of the President was supreme; but that after the treaty should be ratified the question of the retention of the islands would be one exclusively for Congress; that the President then would have no right to decide the question, but that Congress could and would decide it. The treaty has been ratified, but where is the evidence of any intention to have Congress decide this question? An expression of intention to give freedom to the Filipinos is voted down by the Republican party. The term of this Congress is about to expire. So far from intending to give Congress an opportunity to decide the question, an extra session is to be avoided even at the price of the abandonment of pet measures of the Republican party.

But, however this may be, for the reasons given I believe it to be my duty to vote for the bill, although I am in no manner responsible for the measures which make necessary this extraordinary force for the Army.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I offer an amendment as an additional section to the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. Insert as section 17 the following:

SEC. 17. That no officer or private soldier shall be detailed to sell intoxicating drinks, as a bartender or otherwise, in any post, exchange, or canteen, nor shall any person be required or allowed to sell such liquors in any encampment or fort or on any premises used for military purposes by the United States; and the Secretary of War is hereby directed to issue such general order as may be necessary to carry the provisions of this section into full force and effect.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from North Dakota.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL. On page 8, line 8, I move to strike out the words "two from each State at large."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. PASCO. I should like to ask the effect of that amendment.

Mr. COCKRELL. It is to strike out the two cadets appointed at large.

Mr. PASCO. The purpose is to take away the appointments which are to be made under the bill by the Senate?

Mr. COCKRELL. Yes.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL. Now, at the end of line 21, page 11, I move to add:

And provided further, That the officers herein authorized shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice of the Senate.

There might be some question as to some of the officers if that proviso is not in.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PROCTOR. Mr. President, it is with great regret that I refrain from offering the amendment to this bill which I offered to the Hull bill, but some of my colleagues on the committee have urged with great force that this is an emergency, not a reorganization measure. Certainly the proceedings of to-day would indicate that it was a measure of great emergency.

I think it is a very important measure of improvement to the Army. We have the best material for an army in the world. We have the best officers, as a whole. Other nations have very excellent officers in the higher grades, but it is universally admitted that there is no school so good and no average of officers throughout the army so good as in ours. Certainly I believe that in blood and stock we have the best material for the rank and file of an army.

The amendment I proposed is no new thing. Ten years ago Colonel Mills, of the artillery, a very able officer, went through Europe under the War Department. He went as far as India, inspecting the different systems. The first sentence of his report I should like to read:

There is no such thing as a permanent staff in the English army, nor is there in any modern army of the world, except in the higher grades, save our own, if we call ours a modern army, the French being the last to give it up.

Before that, Mr. President, twenty years ago, this matter was under consideration by Congress and a joint committee was appointed. The members from the Senate were General Burnside, of Rhode Island; Senator Plumb, of Kansas; and Senator Butler, of South Carolina. Their report, Document No. 555, with the accompanying documents, occupies over 500 pages. They recommend a measure of staff detail, and they quote the opinions of over twenty general officers. I should like to read only three or four sentences.

General Doubleday says the present system of continuing the same officers in a special branch of the service is not beneficial. * * * Everything in the Army should be subordinate to the fighting element. To transfer from the line to the staff and from the staff to the line has a tendency to bind all parts of the service together and to excite the young officers to study and to emulate each other.

General Gibbon thinks that officers should be transferred from the staff to the different arms of the line, so as to serve for a term of years in each.

General Crook thinks that officers being so much stationed in cities and not with troops become fossilized, and lose sight of the wants of the troops in the field. * * * A greater freedom of detail and transfer is better.

General Reynolds says:

A better system than the present for the efficiency and harmony of the service would be to have the duties of staff departments referred to performed by officers detailed for that purpose and not to be retained on such duty for a longer time than four years for one term of staff duty.

That is the general drift of these reports.

Mr. President, I believe in a measure of this kind, and I am glad to say that my colleagues who urge me not to offer it have said that they favor some such system and will at the next session try to have it adopted. I hope they will remember their promise. I believe it would cover many of the present evils, and it would bring the different branches of the Army into harmonious relations with each other, as the Navy seems to be. I am sure it would be better for the President, and better for the Secretary, and better for the officers themselves and the service, and very much better for the country.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, furnished the Senate, in compliance with its request, a duplicate engrossed copy of the amendment of the House and a copy of the message insisting upon its amendment to the bill (S. 104) to increase the pension of Lucretia C. Waring.

The message also announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 2904) for the investigation of leprosy.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11266) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the reports of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the following bills:

A bill (S. 1968) granting an increase of pension to George W. Nevins; and

A bill (S. 2919) granting a pension to Olivia Worden, widow of the late John L. Worden, United States Navy.

The message further announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 11879) to amend an act entitled "An act to suspend the operation of certain provisions of law relating to the War Department, and for other purposes;" in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the joint resolution (H. Res. 339) authorizing the President of the United States to appoint Osborne W. Deignan a naval cadet at Annapolis; and it was thereupon signed by the Vice-President.

REORGANIZATION OF THE ARMY.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 5378) for increasing the efficiency of the Army of the United States, and for other purposes.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President, I offer an amendment, on page 9 of the bill, which I send to the desk.

The SECRETARY. In line 3, page 9, add the letter "s" at the end of the word "volunteer;" line 4, same page, strike out the word "infantry;" line 7, same page, strike out the word "thirty" and insert the word "twenty-seven;" after the word "Army," in line 9, same page, insert:

And three regiments, to be composed of men of special qualifications in horsemanship and marksmanship, to be organized as cavalry for service mounted or dismounted.

Mr. CARTER. This does not increase the number. It merely changes the form of organization.

Mr. COCKRELL. It simply authorizes the three regiments of cavalry if the President wants them.

Mr. CARTER. If the President wants them.

Mr. COCKRELL. To serve mounted or dismounted.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Montana.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CARTER. Now I call attention again to section 10, where an amendment was made at the suggestion of the Senator from Missouri.

I move to strike out, in line 9, page 8, the word "twenty" and insert the word "ten;" and after the word "large," in the same line, to insert the words "each year;" so that the President will be authorized to appoint ten cadets from the country at large to West Point each year.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment offered by the Senator from Montana will be read.

The SECRETARY. In line 9, page 8, it is proposed to strike out the word "twenty" and insert the word "ten;" and at the end of the line, after the word "large," to insert "each year;" so as to read, "and ten from the United States at large each year."

Mr. ALLEN. I think that amendment ought not to be adopted.

Mr. CARTER. I will state in explanation of the amendment that the text of the bill contemplated the appointment of 100 additional cadets to West Point every four years. On the motion of the Senator from Missouri the provision for two cadets at large from each of the States was stricken out. Now, my amendment provides that ten at large shall be appointed by the President each year, making the number of appointments in the course of four years by the President forty rather than twenty, as provided by the bill.

Mr. ALLEN. I think the bill as it is drawn is altogether out of place in this respect.

I have no objection to continuing the present law, in fact, giving the President all the necessary and proper power to keep the military school at West Point full of competent students, but I do not think we ought to increase the number of appointees now. There is no necessity for it that is apparent at this time. I do not believe we should engage in educating, at the expense of the Government, at West Point or any other military or naval school young men whose services will not be necessary in defense of the country.

Mr. President, the average boy has to earn his own living in this world. He earns his means of support, procures his own education, embarks in business for himself, meets with success or disaster, as the case may be, and when he grows old he must either depend upon what he has gained during his working days or upon the charity of his friends.

Mr. CARTER. If the Senator will permit me a moment, owing to the lateness of the hour, and for the purpose of saving any further discussion of the matter, I will withdraw the amendment.

Mr. ALLEN. Well, Mr. President, I will offer an amendment myself. I move to strike out the proviso on page 10, between lines 13 and 16, inclusive, as follows:

Provided, That Regular Army officers continued or appointed as general officers or as field or staff officers of volunteers under the provisions of this act shall not vacate their Regular Army commissions.

And I will continue the general line of my remarks where I was interrupted by the Senator from Montana [Mr. CARTER].

Mr. President, I believe in a volunteer army. I took occasion to say a few days ago that I was in favor of enough regularly educated and regularly trained men in military affairs to furnish us in case of war a competent corps of instructors. I am in favor of a reasonable standing army as a nucleus for any great army that may be raised in consequence of a war in which the Government may be engaged; but I am opposed to what is known as militarism. It is hostile to the genius and the prosperity of our country. There can not be the slightest doubt about that.

I have yet to find a man in military life, who makes a profession of arms, in favor of a reduction of the Army in any of its branches. All of them are in favor of an increase in the Army; all of them want the Army increased larger than it now is and larger than it will be increased by this bill. All seem to think that the time has come in the history of this country when it is essential for us "to shy our caster into the ring" as one of the military powers of the earth. I am opposed to any policy of that kind.

The proviso which I move to strike out shows one of the beauties of this beautiful and perfect bill. A Regular Army officer, who may be a major or colonel, or possibly something below that, can be appointed a brigadier-general in the volunteer service or a major-general in the volunteer service, and yet during the time he holds that office and enjoys its emoluments and its honors he holds the rank he previously held in the Regular Army; he holds two positions. Why not compel him to go step by step and grade by grade until he reaches the highest round of the ladder? If he is taken when a boy and educated at the expense of the Government, clothed, paid, and provided for, why should he be permitted to jump over the head of some competent civilian or some other man who has equal merit and equal aptitude for the office? He holds on to both positions at the same time. There is no argument in favor of it except the argument of favoritism.

Mr. President, it is the exercise of the mere power on the part of Congress to authorize this discrimination in favor of these Regular Army officers and against volunteers. There is no argument in support of it; no reason; no logic. They want it so, and they have got power to influence Senators and members of the other House, and they do it. They flock around these galleries and around these halls and corridors as blackbirds flock in a cornfield in October, undertaking to influence, and importuning and buttonholing Senators in favor of these measures.

Sir, you have got to depend upon the great yeomanry of this country in case of war. These gentlemen are perfectly willing to furnish the officers and men to bear the honors, the men to draw the pay, but they want the farmer boys and the boys in the factories to fill up the ranks and march under their orders. It is a discouragement to volunteers. Let it be understood among the young men of this country that, however meritorious they may be, whatever aptitude they may have for military service, they will, by the provisions of this or some other act of Congress, be deprived of reaching the highest ranks in the Army through merit, and you will find them avoiding both the volunteer and the regular service.

It is entirely proper that I should refer to a matter which has not been called out during this discussion. The volunteers now in the service of the Government enlisted for the war with Spain, and for no other purpose. Many of them are being compelled today to serve, not in the war with Spain, but in a war with those they have regarded as their friends, as their allies. I have received letter after letter from young men in the Volunteer Army who performed splendid service in action against Spain at Manila, and who have performed splendid service in the action against the Filipinos, protesting that they did not enlist to shoot down their friends, and protesting that they should not be used for that purpose; yet, Mr. President, in violation of law, in violation of the terms of their enlistment, they are being used from day to day in a war with a power with which we were friendly at the breaking out of the war with Spain.

I believe those volunteers from the States ought to be recalled as soon as possible. They are composed of a very high order of men. I know in the First Nebraska Regiment, at Manila, that bore a conspicuous and leading part in every engagement which has taken place, and I think has lost more men in action than any other one regiment, there are young men serving in the ranks who at home were capable of earning from one hundred to two hundred dollars per month—young men of a high order and ability. They ought to be recalled as speedily as possible.

Mr. President, while I have criticised this bill, and shall continue to criticise it whenever occasion offers; while I believe it to be the loosest jointed piece of legislation I have ever seen in this Chamber, I am going to vote for it. I am going to swallow the whole dose simply because to refuse to do so would be to paralyze the military arm of the United States at this critical period.

As expressing the views of an eminent gentleman regarding the present volunteers, I ask to have published, as a part of my remarks, a letter from Governor Poynter, of my State, to the President of the United States.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Nebraska? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The letter referred to is as follows:

EXECUTIVE CHAMBER,
Lincoln, Neb., February 15, 1899.

MR. PRESIDENT: Forasmuch as the treaty of peace has now been ratified upon the part of our Senate, the war with Spain is at an end so far as our Government can terminate it, and it seems certain that Spain will also ratify the treaty at no distant day.

The questions now to be determined are those of policy relative to the territory from which Spain by the treaty withdrew her armies. Under these conditions our volunteer soldiers who enlisted for the war with Spain, many of them at very great sacrifice, it seems to me should be relieved from garrison duty, for which they are now held, and as soon as possible be permitted to return to the duties of citizenship. I beg to urge upon Your Excellency the propriety of gaining from Congress the permission to recruit an army especially for this service, thereby relieving our citizen soldiery, who wish, now that the cause for which they gave their services is at an end, to return to their interrupted business. This need in no way interfere with the question of the increase and organization of the Regular Army.

The radical and irreconcilable difference of opinion which exists in regard to the necessity for the increase of the Regular Army should not be permitted to interfere with the speedy release of our volunteers, and will not interfere if the subject is divided and the matter of the Regular Army is left to be settled after such an army of occupation has been recruited and our volunteers discharged.

With high respect, yours, truly,

His Excellency WILLIAM MCKINLEY,
Washington, D. C.

W. A. POYNTER.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment submitted by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN].

Mr. HOAR. Let the amendment be read.

The SECRETARY. On page 10, section 13, line 13, it is proposed to strike out:

Provided, That Regular Army officers continued or appointed as general officers or as field or staff officers of volunteers, under the provisions of this act, shall not vacate their Regular Army commissions.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. BUTLER. I should like to inquire from some one familiar with this bill as to the necessity for section 8, and what business it has in a bill of this kind. The Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR] said this was a great emergency measure, and therefore he did not offer a provision which he thought was very necessary for the improvement of the service. I should like to know if section 8 is an emergency provision.

Mr. President, it seems to me that we should not put private legislation on a bill of this kind, especially private legislation for special favorites or pets, regardless of special merits. If we are going to do that for one person, why not do it for all the pets and friends and favorites that any or all of us may have? There are hundreds who would all like to be taken care of in such a bill and who should be if it is to be made a drag-net measure for that purpose.

Such provisions are simply put in and pass along without notice. It is not right or proper to put such a provision in this bill, regardless of the merits of the case, which goes along as a matter of course. This measure has not been discussed and is supposed to go through as a matter of course.

It may be proper for such a provision as that found in section 8 to stand in this bill, but I do not know it, and unless Senators have been told privately, no Senator knows it. I should like to know if the Chief of the Record and Pension Office of the War Department, whom it is proposed to make a brigadier-general, with such rank and pay, has rendered any great or heroic service in line of battle or otherwise which would entitle him to this promotion and pay, as such services are generally considered necessary to entitle a military officer to such promotion. When did he enlist in the Army? In what battles has he fought? What special act of heroism has he performed in the service of the Government? If there is any member of the committee who can give me that information I shall be very glad to have it.

Mr. SEWELL. I do not know that I can give the record of the service of the officer under consideration during the war, but I can give his record after the war. He is a gentleman who took charge of the Record and Pension Office and reduced its expenditures by the application of brains to business so that the Government saved, after he was there a few months, $400,000 a year. He brought order out of chaos, and to-day you can go to that Department and find in five minutes the record of every man who was in the Army, which it would have taken months to do before his appointment.

Mr. HOAR. May I ask the Senator a question before he sits down, with the permission of the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BUTLER]?

Mr. SEWELL. Certainly.

Mr. HOAR. What is the rank of this gentleman now?

Mr. SEWELL. He is a colonel. I will say to the Senator from Massachusetts that the heads of these bureaus have practically assimilated rank and pay.

Mr. HOAR. I do not question the justice of the amendment, but I want to understand the legal and constitutional effect of it. Does this amendment make this officer, who is now a colonel, a brigadier-general?

Mr. SEWELL. Practically. It does not give him any command, but it gives him the pay of a brigadier-general.

Mr. HOAR. It makes him a brigadier-general?

Mr. BUTLER. It gives him the rank as well as the pay.

Mr. HOAR. My question is—I dare say the familiarity of the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SEWELL], or some other Senator, will enable him to answer it—can we constitutionally make a man who is not now a brigadier-general a brigadier-general?

Mr. SEWELL. I suppose that has been done ever since the formation of the Government. It is the present rank pertaining to the office.

Mr. HAWLEY. The President might nominate another man under this provision. He has a right to do that.

Mr. HOAR. Does this require a new nomination, then?

Mr. SEWELL. Yes.

Mr. HAWLEY. It does.

Mr. HOAR. If it does, that answers my scruples perfectly. If the effect of this provision is to require a new nomination by the President of somebody who will then be a brigadier-general, it is all right.

Mr. SEWELL. It is entirely in the discretion of the President. Everybody in Congress who has watched this matter recognizes the great ability of this man.

Mr. HOAR. That is all right. I do not object to it. I was merely looking at the form of doing it. I suggest that if we should propose to do so and so, describing a man and what he is now doing, and saying that Mr. John Brown shall be a brigadier-general, we could not do that; but if it is understood that under this provision the President may make a nomination it is all right.

Mr. SEWELL. It merely raises the office to that dignity.

Mr. BUTLER. In effect the section declares that the person holding that position now is to be made by law a brigadier-general, otherwise the statement made by the Senator from New Jersey is of no force and effect. If the purpose is not to confer this grade upon the present head of the office, then the reasoning of the Senator from New Jersey falls to the ground. So for all practical purposes this provision has just the effect which the Senator from Massachusetts at first thought it had.

Mr. President, are we to make a brigadier-general of every man who has performed service to the Government as a clerk or the head of a bureau equal to the service that this officer has performed? Are there no other officers of the Government, no other heads of divisions, no other bureau chiefs who have performed their duties as well and as faithfully as this officer has performed his? If so, why should we not take care of all of those in this bill? Is this officer the only one in all the Government service who deserves such promotion? Does he stand out par excellence as towering head and shoulders above all the others?

If so, we ought to have his record here, so as to be able to vote intelligently and make this discrimination against all the others. If he does not so stand, then why is this provision put in this bill? In fact, this is a general bill, and such a provision has no place properly in it. Legislation of that kind should never be dragged into a bill of this nature.

I should like to ask the members of the committee if the War Department recommended the placing of that provision in this bill as the bill came from the Department? I do not know. I am not on the committee. I would like to know. Will some member of the committee inform me?

Mr. HAWLEY. Nobody came to me asking to have that provision made. Possibly a suggestion was made to some other member of the committee. I know it was not tested in the committee at all. I know, from twenty years in Congress, more or less, something of the service of that man. I know what the condition of things used to be as to the records of soldiers before Ainsworth took hold of the office. It was two or three or four weeks—nobody could tell how long—before you could get the record of a soldier applying for a pension.

Ainsworth went in there, and by his card system and his extraordinary ingenuity and his executive force made it so that you can go to that office and ask for the record of John Smith, Company A, one hundredth New York, and he will get it as easily as you go into a pigeonhole of your desk. There it is recorded. Anyone who has been a soldier in the United States can go there and after he gets to the corridor where that belongs it will not be ten seconds before his record will be in his own hands. It has produced an enormous saving. Before that there were scores of clerks engaged in the work of turning over and wearing out the old muster rolls, piled here and there.

Mr. BUTLER. Then it seems that this man is to have a promotion because there was an inefficient man in the office before he came in?

Mr. SULLIVAN. Will the Senator from North Carolina permit me? The Senator from Connecticut does not mean to say that it is necessary to have an Army officer to arrange the details of keeping in their proper place letters or records or anything of that sort.

Mr. HAWLEY. I would have the best man you can get in the country, whether an Army officer or not, but nobody begins to approach this man in that kind of work. It was a brilliant feat. That is all there is to be said about it.

Mr. BUTLER. It simply simmers down to the fact that we had, it seems, an incompetent man in this position before, and therefore the contrast is very great. This man performs his duty intelligently, but hundreds of other men in the Government service have done equally well.

Mr. HAWLEY. Never.

Mr. BUTLER. Then, is it such a case where we should pass resolutions of Congress thanking him for the wonderful services he has performed? If it is simply because he has got every paper in its place, where it ought to be and where he can find it promptly, then let us add a special provision to make Mr. Amzi Smith a brigadier-general with rank and pay, for I am sure his services to the Government under our eye each day have been as wonderful as the service of the head of a division in the War Department. It can not be that Colonel Ainsworth is the most wonderful man in the Government service.

It can not be that we have no other men who perform equal service. It is an absurdity to say that we must give a man the rank of brigadier-general because he has been efficient in sticking papers in a pigeonhole and having them filed and indexed, with a cross index, kept so that you can find them in a few minutes. There is nothing of military genius needed in that. There is no peculiar military skill required for that. Every railroad office in the United States is filled with men who perform such service. They are all over the country, in the State governments and in every one of the great industrial enterprises of this country men just as competent who are receiving small pay. They are men of equal qualifications who perform equal or greater service.

Then why is it proposed in this bill to stick high military titles and pay on men who do not do military service? This chief was never in the Army as a soldier or an officer. He never enlisted. He never served a day in the Army as a soldier in his life. He never saw the enemy of his country in battle. He has not smelt the smoke of battle from afar, as Job's war horse did. If an officer of the Government has performed such noble service as to attract the attention of Congress and the country, then let us increase his pay if necessary. Let us vote him a bounty or a pension if necessary, but why shall we give him a military title? It is not the proper thing in a republican form of Government to be giving military titles to men for performing ministerial duties.

Mr. President, I am surprised that this was put in a bill of this kind and passed in the Military Affairs Committee without question. The chairman made that statement. I am not a member of the committee. I know nothing about the reasons for its being put in here. Whoever was approached has kept his seat and has not answered my question. I would like to know whose pet he is. If there are reasons why it should be put in, the man who was approached and had the reasons furnished him has not furnished them to the Senate. It certainly can not be that he is to be made a brigadier-general for his connection with, not to say responsibility for, the Ford Theater disaster.

I do not object to promoting this man and increasing his pay if he deserves it; in fact, I stand ready to give ample pay to every officer of the Government who performs services that justifies it, but I object to this amendment on two grounds. First, it has no place in this bill, being private legislation. Next, I object to conferring military titles, even if they are entitled to more pay, upon men who perform ministerial services. It is wrong. If we do it for this officer, why not do it for all other officers holding similar positions? Mr. President, I move to strike out section 8.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from North Carolina to strike out section 8 of the bill.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, I wish to say two or three words. I shall not detain the Senate a moment. I wish to give the reasons why I shall not support this bill.

I should find it hard to think of a case where I would vote against supplies to the Army when the country was engaged in war, but this is not a bill for supplies. They have been taken care of in another measure. It is, as has been stated here, an emergency bill. It is not a bill for supplies, and it is not a bill for a proper, thorough, and complete reorganization of the Army. Indeed, the Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR], having an amendment which I believe has the approbation of nearly the whole Senate, declines to offer it, and postpones to some future day the best single suggestion, as many of us think, that has been made for that purpose. It is not, therefore, a supply bill, and it is not a permanent bill of any sort.

Now, it was said, or implied, by my honorable friend the Senator from Georgia [Mr. BACON] that the country is in war. I understand that the country will be at peace within a few weeks.

Mr. BACON. It is practically at war.

Mr. HOAR. Let me see. Perhaps within a few days it will be at peace, as I have no doubt that the treaty of peace will be ratified on both sides very soon, and that there are to be no more hostilities on the part of the authorities of Spain against this country. So in a few weeks, perhaps in a few days, we are to be at peace, so far as the existing war is concerned, and are to enter upon a civil war, if we have any. Under the new policy, with new rights, new constitutional duties, and new legal questions, somebody is to determine whether we shall make a civil war upon certain persons whom I suppose the gentlemen who oppose this bill—most or all of them—think are misguided, who are struggling for what they think are principles, and what we always thought were our principles in this country until within a few months.

Now, in regard to the policy with which that condition of things is to be encountered, the President says he declines to announce any for himself and leaves it to Congress. I suppose there can have been no more impressive, clear, distinct, and unquestionable utterance. The President not announcing a policy on his part of making war, civil war, upon those people, Congress is asked to pass a bill which, in substance, does nothing else. It does not reorganize the Army upon any permanent basis. It does not furnish supplies for the existing soldiers in the field or provide for their coming home or contemplate the continuance of war with Spain. It simply, for a short time, raises the American Army from 27,000 or thereabouts, whatever the number may be—

Mr. BACON. Twenty-nine thousand.

Mr. HOAR. For the emergency of making war upon the Filipinos—civil war. They are called Filipinos, but they are to be some sort of Americans. Whether they are citizens, whether they are rebels—what they are—is a subject of debate; but the first thing that Congress does—not supporting the President, not following the President, not adopting any policy which he recommends to us or to which he commits himself—is to raise 100,000 men for the ostensible and avowed purpose of using force upon those people and reducing them to submission.

I am not willing to make the first and only announcement of the purpose of Congress, which the President says he wants to know and means to follow, and does not in the least undertake to suggest, the raising of 75,000 new recruits for the purpose of making war upon the Filipinos, without even accompanying it by a direction to the President to send there a message of peace, by a declaration to them that we propose to respect their rights, and an attempt at least to get out of this condition by pacific methods.

There is a great temptation to amplify and dwell and enlarge on this subject. If I were to speak a half hour more the temptation would be greater at the end of that time than it is now. If I should speak an hour after that the thoughts which are in my mind would press upon me still more. Therefore, having stated my reasons so briefly, I will stop.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, last spring we authorized the President to raise an army for the purpose of carrying on a war against the Kingdom of Spain. This bill recognizes the fact that all necessity for such action has disappeared. It recognizes the fact that the men who then enlisted are soon to be discharged, because the act under which our Army was assembled provided that when hostilities should cease, when peace was restored, when the war was over, they should be discharged and returned to the ranks of civil life.

What, then, is the necessity for this bill that we are now called upon to pass? So long as the war with Spain continued, until the treaty was ratified, we had army enough under the laws passed here last year. When peace is declared and the treaty is ratified and the ratifications are exchanged, those soldiers should be discharged and the Army should assume its normal proportions as an army of peace.

What, then, I say, is the necessity for the passage of this bill? Has anyone told us? Have those who presented the measure to the Senate declared to us its purpose? Have the Administration a policy that they propose to pursue in this connection? No Senator has risen here to tell us what shall be done with the men whom we are to authorize the Administration to enlist. The concealed, the undefined purpose seems to be to fight the newly acquired citizens of this country.

The object of this bill, then, is to march 71,000 men against the people of the Philippines, whose only offense is that they desire a government of their own. To this policy, to this purpose, if the Administration have a purpose—and I doubt if they are capable of entertaining one, but if they have—against such a policy, against such a course, I enter my protest.

No vote of mine shall ever give assent to a proposition that the armies of the United States, the sons of this Republic, shall be marshaled in military array to destroy the liberties of another people. The most revolting chapter, the blackest page in American history, it seems to me, is being enacted in the passage of this bill and in sending forth our troops to oppress and destroy the hopes, the new-born liberties of millions of people in the Tropics.

What good object can be gained to our country? What advantage can the people of the United States secure by having imposed upon them the burden of hundreds of millions of dollars a year and the loss of thousands of lives that we may overcome by superior force the people of that country? Has that been pointed out? No one has pretended to show what advantage can come to us.

Therefore, Mr. President, I shall not vote for this bill. The necessity for the passage of this measure would disappear in a day if we would announce to the people of the Philippines that we will withdraw our military forces from their islands and allow them to establish and maintain a government of their own. It is the cowardly course which says we shall go forward and by superior force destroy the liberties and the lives of those people. It is the higher and the honorable course which says to them we, in our sympathy with you, will withdraw our forces and lend the moral force of our example to the maintenance of your liberties.

What, then, is presented to-night to the Senate of the United States? The proposition that we will refuse to encourage a people struggling for liberty, that we will turn back the record of a century, that we will reverse our history from the foundation of this Republic and join the robber nations of the world in an effort to destroy the liberties of people who are struggling to maintain and govern a republic founded upon the principles of our own Declaration of Independence.

Mr. President, no compromise like this for the purpose of escaping an extra session of Congress can receive my support. Last spring I joined in voting $50,000,000 to be expended by the Executive at his discretion; but to-night, watching the course of events since that time, he no longer is entitled to my confidence, and he can not have it. I believe it is the duty of Congress to remain in session, if it is possible to do so, until these events have culminated. Remain in session, Mr. President, and save the Republic from shame. Remain in session, and if possible prevent the Executive from pursuing a course toward the people of the Philippines which will blacken the name and the character of this great Republic.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

Mr. ALLEN. I renew in the Senate my amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In section 13, after line 19, insert the following:

And provided also, That any officer now in the Army who was graduated at the head of his class at the United States Military Academy and who is not now in the Corps of Engineers may be appointed to the Corps of Engineers with the same grade and date of commission that he would have if he had been appointed to the Corps of Engineers on graduation; but said commission shall not entitle an officer to any back pay or allowance.

Mr. HOAR. Was the amendment striking out the provision for the appointment at large by the President of two cadets from each State reserved?

Mr. BERRY. No; there was no reservation of that amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment submitted by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN].

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill is in the Senate and still open to amendment.

Mr. HOAR. I should like very much to have the Senate consider, though I do not want to delay the passage of the bill, the propriety of restoring the provision proposed by the committee, I understand, for the appointment of two cadets at West Point at large from each State and to have them appointed by the governors of the States.

Mr. HAWLEY. We did not have that in.

Mr. HOAR. You did not have it in, but instead of having them appointed at large by the President I would have them appointed by the governors of the States. But I shall not undertake to detain the Senate now.

Mr. SEWELL. The appointment by Senators was intended.

Mr. HOAR. I understand.

Mr. SEWELL. Any change in the present relation would destroy the harmony of the agreement.

Mr. HOAR. I do not propose to move the amendment. I want to be allowed to take one moment to express my opinion, because the subject may come up on another bill. I do not think that any considerable number of Senators desire the responsibility of recommending to the President, as Representatives now do, one cadet at large from their States. It would be an infinite discomfort to Senators. But I think if the recommendation of the governors of the States could be substituted for that of Senators it would tend very much to win favor for the Academy at West Point and would be an admirable arrangement in the future. However, as I said, I will not detain the Senate at this late hour by introducing a new subject by an amendment.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, and was read the third time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is, Shall the bill pass?

Mr. VEST and Mr. WHITE called for the yeas and nays, and they were ordered.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BACON (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. WETMORE]. I am informed, however, that if he were present he would vote "yea," and as I would vote that way, I will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. CHILTON (when his name was called). The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] is paired with the senior Senator from Texas [Mr. MILLS], my colleague, who is absent. I am paired with the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. DAVIS], who is absent. The Senator from New Hampshire and I have agreed to exchange pairs, and that leaves us both at liberty to vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. GALLINGER (when his name was called). The junior Senator from Texas [Mr. CHILTON] announced the transfer of the pair of his colleague [Mr. MILLS], who is my general pair, to the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. DAVIS], and that allows me to vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. BERRY (when the name of Mr. JONES of Arkansas was called). My colleague [Mr. JONES of Arkansas] is sick and unable to be present in the Senate. He is paired on all questions with the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE].

Mr. THURSTON (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN]. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

Mr. VEST (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH]. I transfer my pair to the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE], and I will vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. WARREN (when his name was called). I ask if the junior Senator from Washington [Mr. TURNER] has voted?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator has not voted, the Chair is informed.

Mr. WARREN. Then I withhold my vote, as I have a pair with that Senator.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. CULLOM. I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY]. I am informed that he would vote for this bill, and I will therefore vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. HARRIS. I am authorized to announce that the junior Senator from Delaware [Mr. KENNEY] is unavoidably detained from the Chamber. He is paired with the junior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE]. If the Senator from Delaware were present, he would vote "yea."

Mr. WARREN. I ask if any pair has been announced for the Senator from Colorado [Mr. WOLCOTT]?

Mr. LODGE. There has not been any announced.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is informed that no pair has been announced.

Mr. WARREN. Then, if there be no objection, I should like to pair the Senator from Colorado [Mr. WOLCOTT] with the Senator from Washington [Mr. TURNER], and vote.

Mr. CHANDLER. That is all right.

Mr. WARREN. I vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 55, nays 13; as follows:

YEAS—55.

Allen,	Frye,	McLaurin,	Proctor,
Allison,	Gallinger,	Mallory,	Rawlins,
Bacon,	Gear,	Mantle,	Roach,
Burrows,	Gorman,	Mitchell,	Ross,
Carter,	Hanna,	Money,	Sewell,
Chandler,	Hansbrough,	Morgan,	Shoup,
Clark,	Harris,	Murphy,	Simon,
Cockrell,	Hawley,	Nelson,	Smith,
Cullom,	Heitfeld,	Pasco,	Spooner,
Deboe,	Jones, Nev.	Perkins,	Stewart,
Elkins,	Lindsay,	Pettus,	Teller,
Fairbanks,	Lodge,	Platt, Conn.	Warren,
Faulkner,	McBride,	Platt, N. Y.	Wellington.
Foraker,	McEnery,	Pritchard,

NAYS—13.

Bate,	Chilton,	Martin,	White.
Berry,	Clay,	Pottigrow,
Butler,	Daniel,	Turley,
Caffery,	Hoar,	Vest,

NOT VOTING—22.

Aldrich,	Jones, Ark.	Penrose,	Turpie,
Baker,	Kenney,	Quay,	Wetmore,
Cañon,	Kyle,	Sullivan,	Wilson,
Davis,	McMillan,	Thurston,	Wolcott.
Gray,	Mason,	Tillman,
Hale,	Mills,	Turner,

So the bill was passed.

Mr. KENNEY subsequently said: I desire to state that I was unavoidably detained from the Senate when the vote on the Army bill was taken, and that had I been present I should have voted in favor of the bill.

Mr. HAWLEY. I ask unanimous consent that an order be made that the Army bill be printed.

Mr. CULLOM. As passed.

Mr. HAWLEY. As passed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. In the absence of objection, the order will be made.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 7865) to pay J. L. Stearns Lumber Company $370; and

A bill (H. R. 12184) to distinctively designate parcels of land in the District of Columbia for the purposes of assessment and taxation.

The message also communicated to the Senate the intelligence of the death of DENIS M. HURLEY, late a member of the House from the State of New York, and transmitted resolutions of the House thereon.

The message further announced that the Speaker pro tempore of the House had appointed Mr. FISCHER of New York, Mr. SHERMAN of New York, Mr. HOWE of New York, Mr. SHANNON of New York, Mr. ODELL of New York, Mr. BARTHOLOMT of Missouri, Mr. MAHON of Pennsylvania, Mr. KULP of Pennsylvania, Mr. DRIGGS of New York, Mr. BARTLETT of Georgia, and Mr. CLAYTON of Alabama as the committee on the part of the House to take charge of the funeral arrangements.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills and joint resolutions; and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President:

A bill (H. R. 123) granting a pension to William F. Bolan;

A bill (H. R. 247) granting an increase of pension to John Doebler;

A bill (H. R. 635) increasing the pension of Howard L. James;

A bill (H. R. 855) granting an increase of pension to James R. Zearing;

A bill (H. R. 2293) granting an increase of pension to Andrew J. Snowden;

A bill (H. R. 3123) granting an increase of pension to Frank S. Devol;

A bill (H. R. 3155) granting a pension to Kitty Ann Patterson;

A bill (H. R. 3806) granting an increase of pension to Elam Allen;

A bill (H. R. 4249) granting a pension to Samuel B. Koontz;

A bill (H. R. 4880) granting a pension to Jonathan Scott;

A bill (H. R. 6876) to increase the pension of George Alexander;

A bill (H. R. 6913) granting an increase of pension to Charlotte B. Cousins;

A bill (H. R. 7046) granting an increase of pension to Arba Capron;

A bill (H. R. 7657) granting an increase of pension to James E. Searl;

A bill (H. R. 8568) granting an increase of pension to Mrs. Susan Stedman;

A bill (H. R. 8578) granting an increase of pension to George W. Reisinger;

A bill (H. R. 8610) granting a pension to Minnie B. Titus;

A bill (H. R. 8749) granting a pension to James J. Marcher;

A bill (H. R. 9344) granting an increase of pension to John Begley;

A bill (H. R. 9415) granting an increase of pension to Henry Bullen;

A bill (H. R. 9455) granting an increase of pension to Richard Atkinson;

A bill (H. R. 9569) granting an increase of pension to Timothy A. Allen;

A bill (H. R. 9843) granting a pension to America Easton;

A bill (H. R. 10056) increasing the pension of James Webb;

A bill (H. R. 10285) granting an increase of pension to Mazie V. Sullivan;

A bill (H. R. 10355) granting an increase of pension to Catherine C. Goodrich;

A bill (H. R. 10385) granting a pension to George Brown;

A bill (H. R. 10417) granting a pension to James H. Nichols;

A bill (H. R. 10480) granting a pension to Nelly V. Crosby;

A bill (H. R. 10605) to increase the pension of Annie Cusack;

A bill (H. R. 10716) granting a pension to John S. Draper;

A bill (H. R. 10738) granting an increase of pension to Beeri

Servias;

A bill (H. R. 10803) granting an increase of pension to James Porter;

A bill (H. R. 10850) granting a pension to Mianda A. Sanford;

A bill (H. R. 10933) granting a pension to Sarah A. Kizer;

A bill (H. R. 11296) granting a pension to Anna M. Rowe;

A bill (H. R. 12026) to increase the pension of Thomas Crinigan;

A bill (H. R. 12033) granting a pension to Mary A. Kennedy; and

A bill (H. R. 12077) granting an increase of pension to Charles N. Smiley.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 12008) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Appropriations with amendments.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask that the formal reading of the bill may be dispensed with, and that the committee amendments may be considered as the bill is read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Iowa asks unanimous consent to dispense with the formal reading of the bill, and that the amendments of the committee be acted upon as they are reached in the reading. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. PETTUS. I think it is important, before we enter upon the consideration of this bill, as we are evidently going to have a night session, that it should be understood what other business, if any, shall be transacted to-night.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Alabama inquires of the Senator from Iowa what other business will be taken up to-night.

Mr. ALLISON. I shall have no objection to the consideration of any other business after this bill shall have been passed, but until it is disposed of I shall object to the transaction of any other business.

Mr. HOAR. I suggest to the Senator from Iowa whether it would not be well to have a brief executive session of three minutes now.

Mr. ALLISON. I hope the Senator from Massachusetts will not urge that now, unless there is some special matter of importance to be considered.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Would it not be well, I inquire of the Senator from Iowa, to have an understanding that no other business shall be transacted to-night except this bill? A good many Senators will leave the Chamber.

Mr. ALLISON. I shall not object to that, but I hope Senators will not be absent on that account, as it is important to have a full Senate.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. We ought not to take up business at the end of the consideration of this bill to-night.

Mr. ALLISON. I quite agree with the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. CHANDLER. I ask the Senator from Iowa whether, if the Senate should find itself without a quorum, he would insist upon sending for absent Senators in order to go on with the pending appropriation bill?

Mr. ALLISON. I beg pardon; the Senator from Massachusetts had attracted my attention at the moment.

Mr. CHANDLER. I will take occasion, while the Senator from Massachusetts and the Senator from Iowa are conferring, to say that I think a quorum ought to remain here and that if at any time there is not a quorum the absent Senators ought to be sent for and this bill finished to-night.

The Secretary proceeded to read the bill. The first amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the subhead "Public buildings," on page 1, after line 7, to insert:

For public building at Altoona, Pa.: For purchase of site and completion of building under present limit, $125,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SULLIVAN. I was not in the Chamber when the reading of the bill was begun. I should like to have a report of what occurred.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Unanimous consent was given to proceed with the reading of the bill, the committee amendments to be acted upon as they are reached.

Mr. SULLIVAN. Very well.

The reading of the bill was continued. The next amendment was, on page 3, after line 14, to insert:

For post-office, court-house, and custom-house at Memphis, Tenn.: For installation of clock in clock tower of said post-office, court-house, and custom-house, $3,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 3, after line 18, to insert:

For court-house and post-office at Newport News, Va.: For purchase of site and completion of building under present limit, $100,000.

Mr. ALLISON. The word "court-house" in line 19 is a mistake. It should be "custom-house." It should read "For custom-house and post-office at Newport News." I move to amend the amendment in that particular.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 4, after line 10, to insert:

For post-office at Washington, D. C.: That the act approved July 7, 1898, relating to the post-office building, Washington, D. C., is hereby amended so as to assign not exceeding one-half of the eighth floor as additional floor space for the use of the Post-Office Department and the Auditor for the Post-Office Department.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 5, line 4, to increase the appropriations for repairs and preservation of public buildings, etc., from $310,000 to $350,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Marine hospitals," on page 6, line 9, after the word "hundred," to insert "at a cost not to exceed $300;" so as to make the clause read:

Medical books and journals for the use of the Marine-Hospital Bureau may be purchased during the fiscal year 1900, at a cost not to exceed $500, and paid for from the appropriation for the Marine-Hospital Service.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Quarantine stations," on page 6, line 23, after the word "station," to insert "new pier, and new disinfecting plant;" and in line 24, before the word "thousand," to strike out "three" and insert "thirty-six;" so as to make the clause read:

For quarantine station, Gulf: For improvements to station, new pier, and new disinfecting plant, and detention quarters for crew, $93,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 7, line 23, after the word "dollars," to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That of this amount not exceeding $100 may be used for the purchase of books of reference and periodicals of a purely technical character relating to architectural subjects and required in the transaction of the business of the Office of the Supervising Architect of the Treasury.

So as to make the clause read:

Plans for public buildings: For books, photographic materials, and in duplicating plans required for all public buildings under control of the Treasury Department, $3,500: Provided, That of this amount not exceeding $100 may be used, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Light-houses, beacons, and fog signals," on page 8, after line 4, to insert:

Whitehead light and fog-signal station, Maine: For construction of a keeper's dwelling, $3,400.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 8, after line 7, to insert:

Cape Elizabeth, Me.: For constructing a light ship, with fog signal, near Cape Elizabeth, Me., $70,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 8, after line 10, to insert:

Long Island Head light station, Massachusetts: For removing the station to a new site, where it will not be exposed to injury by firing of guns in the new seacoast battery, $4,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 8, after line 14, to insert:

Pollock Rip Shoals, Massachusetts: For establishing a light-house and fog signal or light ship at a point north of the bell buoy near the broken part of Pollock Rip Shoals, at the northeastern entrance of Nantucket Shoals, Massachusetts, $80,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 8, after line 19, to insert:

Hog Island Shoal light and fog-signal station, Rhode Island: For establishing on or near Hog Island Shoal, Narragansett Bay, Rhode Island, a light and fog-signal station, to take the place of the light vessel now there, $35,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 8, after line 24, to insert:

Greens Ledge light and fog-signal station, Connecticut: For establishing a light and fog-signal station on Greens Ledge, Norwalk Harbor, Connecticut, $60,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SULLIVAN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allison,	Fairbanks,	Mantle,	Sewell,
Bacon,	Faulkner,	Mason,	Smith,
Bate,	Foraker,	Mitchell,	Spooner,
Berry,	Frye,	Murphy,	Stewart,
Butler,	Gallinger,	Nelson,	Sullivan,
Caffery,	Gear,	Pasco,	Teller,
Carter,	Gorman,	Perkins,	Thurston,
Chandler,	Hanna,	Pettigrew,	Tillman,
Chilton,	Harris,	Platt, Conn.	Turley,
Cockrell,	McBride,	Platt, N. Y.	Warren,
Cullom,	McLaurin,	Rawlins,	Wellington,
Daniel,	Mallory,	Ross,	Wolcott.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Forty-eight Senators having answered to their names, there is a quorum present.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 9, after line 2, to insert:

Norwalk Harbor lighted beacons, Connecticut: For establishing lighted beacons at Round Beach, Fitchs Point, White Rock Reef, and Grassy Hammock, Norwalk Harbor, Connecticut, $600.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 9, after line 16, to insert:

Tender for the inspector, Third light-house district: For constructing, equipping, and outfitting, complete for service, a new steam tender for buoyage, supply, and inspection in the Third light-house district, New York, $35,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 10, after line 2, to insert:

Salem Creek, New Jersey, light-house: For reestablishing and reconstructing a light-house at or near the mouth of Salem Creek, New Jersey, $4,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 10, after line 5, to insert:

Hooper Island and fog-signal station, Maryland: For completing the light and fog-signal station on the shoals of Hooper Island, east side of Chesapeake Bay, Maryland, $30,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 10, after line 9, to insert:

Bloody Point Range, South Carolina: For moving the structures of the front beacon to the side of the rear beacon and moving the front beacon of the abandoned Venus Point Range to make it the front beacon of the Bloody Point Range, $2,700.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 10, after line 14, to insert:

Depot for Sixth light-house district: For establishing a depot for the Sixth light-house district at some suitable point to be determined by the Light-House Board, $35,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, at the top of page 11, to insert:

Depot at or near Mobile, Ala.: For establishing a buoy and light-house depot at or near Mobile, Ala., $12,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 11, after line 11, to insert:

Point Arguello light and fog-signal station, California: For establishing a light and fog-signal station at or near Point Arguello, seacoast of California, $35,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 11, after line 15, to insert:

For constructing a telephone line from the light-house at Table Bluff, Cal., to connect with the general telephone system at Salmon Creek, in Humboldt County, Cal., $1,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 13, after line 3, to insert:

For constructing, under the direction of the Light-House Board, telegraph or telephone lines between Glenhaven, Mich., and South Manitou Island, Lake Michigan, $15,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Light-House Establishment," on page 12, line 20, to increase the appropriation for supplies of light-houses from $450,000 to $475,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 13, line 2, to increase the appropriation for repairs of light-houses from $600,000 to $650,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 13, line 6, to increase the number of light-house and fog-signal keepers and laborers attending other lights appropriated for from 1,350 to 1,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 13, line 12, to increase the appropriation for expenses of light vessels from $375,000 to $400,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 13, line 20, to increase the appropriation for expenses of fog signals from $120,000 to $150,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Life-Saving Service," on page 15, after line 2, to insert:

For one superintendent for the coasts of Rhode Island and Fishers Island, to be known as the Third life-saving district, $1,200.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 15, line 6, after the word "the," to strike out "coasts of Rhode Island and" and insert "coast of;" so as to make the clause read:

For one superintendent for the coast of Long Island, $1,800.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 15, after line 7, to strike out: For one assistant superintendent for the coasts of Rhode Island and Long Island, $1,300.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 16, line 9, after the word "dollars," to insert:

The Secretary of the Treasury may change the serial numbers of the several districts as may be necessary to conform to the provisions of this act.

So as to make the clause read:

For one superintendent for the life-saving and lifeboat stations on the coasts of Washington, Oregon, and California, $1,800; in all, $21,700. The Secretary of the Treasury may change the serial numbers of the several districts as may be necessary to conform to the provisions of this act.

Mr. ALLISON. I move to amend the amendment of the committee, in line 17, after the word "each," by striking out "and $3 per day for each occasion of service at other times," and after the word "employment," in line 19, to insert those words.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to amend the amendment on page 16, line 17, after the word "each," by striking out "and $3 per day for each occasion of service at other times;" and in line 19, after the word "employment," by inserting "and $3 per day for each occasion of service at other times;" so as to read:

For pay of crews of surfmen employed at the life-saving and lifeboat stations, including the old Chicago station, at the rate of $90 per month each during the period of actual employment, and $3 per day for each occasion of service at other times.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 17, line 10, after the word "including," to insert:

The donation of a Lyle gun and a complete set of beach apparatus used in connection with it to the Imperial Japanese Society for Saving Life from Shipwreck.

And in line 18, to decrease the total appropriation "for pay of crews of surfmen," etc., from $1,311,192.50 to $1,288,910.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Revenue-Cutter Service," on page 18, line 24, after the word "dollars," to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That the act of May 16, 1883, relating to anchorage of vessels in the port of New York, is hereby extended to include the waters of Kill von Kull, Newark Bay, Arthur Kill, and Raritan Bay.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 19, after line 4, to insert:

For the purpose of repairing and defraying the running expenses of the U. S. S. Thetis for a period of six months, said vessel to be used as a revenue cutter, and to perform service for the Department of the Interior in procuring reindeer and transporting them to the coast of Alaska, $30,000, and the Secretary of the Navy is hereby authorized to transfer said vessel to the Treasury Department temporarily for said purpose.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 19, after line 12, to insert:

For the construction of two revenue cutters of the first class, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, for service on the Great Lakes, $165,000; and the total cost of said revenue cutters, under a contract which is hereby authorized therefor, shall not exceed $165,000 each. Said cutters, when completed, shall take the places of the revenue cutters Algonquin and Onondaga, which were ordered to the seaboard as an exigency of the late war.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 19, after line 21, to insert:

For the construction of a revenue cutter of the first class, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, for service on the Pacific coast, $112,500; and the total cost of said revenue cutter, under a contract which is hereby authorized therefor, shall not exceed $225,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 20, after line 3, to insert:

For constructing for the customs service a suitable launch for use at and in the vicinity of Astoria, Oreg., $2,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Coast and Geodetic Survey," on page 24, after line 3, to insert:

For tidal indicator, and foundation for its support, to be erected on Alcatraz Island, San Francisco Harbor, $4,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 25, line 4, to increase the total appropriation for field expenses of the Coast and Geodetic Survey from $189,500 to $194,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SULLIVAN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allen,	Gallinger,	Mitchell,	Simon,
Allison,	Gear,	Murphy,	Smith,
Berry,	Gorman,	Nelson,	Spooner,
Carter,	Hale,	Pasco,	Sullivan,
Chandler,	Hanna,	Perkins,	Teller,
Chilton,	Hansbrough,	Pettigrew,	Thurston,
Cockrell,	Harris,	Platt, Conn.	Tillman,
Cullom,	Kennedy,	Platt, N. Y.	Warren,
Daniel,	McBride,	Pritchard,	Wellington,
Fairbanks,	McLaurin,	Rawlins,	Wolcott,
Faulkner,	Mallory,	Roach,
Foraker,	Mantle,	Ross,
Frye,	Mason,	Sewell,

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Forty-nine Senators have responded to their names. A quorum is present. The Secretary will proceed with the reading of the bill.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the head "Smithsonian Institution," on page 30, after line 14, to strike out:

Estimates shall be submitted for the fiscal year 1901, and annually thereafter, in detail, for salaries of all officers and employees paid from appropriations under the Smithsonian Institution.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 30, line 24, to increase the appropriation for expenses of the system of international exchanges between the United States and foreign countries under the direction of the Smithsonian Institution, etc., from $21,000 to $24,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 33, line 2, to increase the appropriation for continuing the preservation, exhibition, and increase of the collections from the surveying and exploring expeditions of the Government, etc., from $165,000 to $180,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 32, line 22, before the word "thousand," to strike out "seventy-five" and insert "eighty;" in line 25, after the word "appropriated," to strike out:

Five thousand dollars shall be used for continuing the entrance into the Zoological Park from Woodley Lane and opening driveway into Zoological Park from said entrance along the bank of Rock Creek, and.

On page 33, line 7, after the word "of," to strike out "a strip on the northeasterly side of said road" and insert "land;" and in line 10, after the words "Zoological Park," to insert:

And $5,000 shall be expended to grade, regulate, and curb the street on the west border of the Zoological Park from Woodley road to Cathedral avenue, as shown on the third section plans (permanent system of highways), and Cathedral avenue from Connecticut avenue to Woodley road: Provided, That the full width of the road bordering the park be donated wherever it lies within the bounds of Woodley Park.

So as to make the clause read:

National Zoological Park: For continuing the construction of roads, walks, bridges, water supply, sewerage and drainage; and for grading, planting, and otherwise improving the grounds; erecting and repairing buildings and inclosures; care, subsistence, purchase, and transportation of animals, including salaries or compensation of all necessary employees; the purchase of necessary books and periodicals, and general incidental expenses not otherwise provided for, $80,000; one half of which sum shall be paid from the revenue of the District of Columbia and the other half from the Treasury of the United States; and of the sum hereby appropriated $5,000 shall be expended in widening the Adams Mill road entrance to the Zoological Park from the corner of Eighteenth street and Columbia road, by acquiring by purchase or condemnation of land sufficient to widen the same to a width of 100 feet, and such road, so widened, shall form a park way under the control of the Zoological Park; and $5,000 shall be expended to grade, regulate, and curb the street on the west border of the Zoological Park from Woodley road to Cathedral avenue, as shown on the third section plans (permanent system of highways), and Cathedral avenue from Connecticut avenue to Woodley road: Provided, That the full width of the road bordering the park be donated wherever it lies within the bounds of Woodley Park.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was continued to the end of line 20, on page 36.

Mr. SULLIVAN. There appears to be an omission on page 36, if the reading was correct, from line 15 to line 21.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary informs the Chair that it was all read.

Mr. SULLIVAN. It was? I did not hear it, and I was looking at the bill.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the head of "Fish Commission," on page 39, before the words "(New Hampshire)," to strike out "Nassau" and insert "Nashua;" so as to make the clause read:

Nashua (N. H.) station: Superintendent, $1,500; fish-culturist, $900; two laborers, at $540 each; in all, $3,480.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 39, after line 23, to insert:

Washington State station: Superintendent, $1,500; fish-culturist, $900; two laborers, at $540 each; in all, $3,480.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the appropriation for the Edenton (N. C.) station, on page 40, line 7, after the word "dollars," to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That this appropriation shall not be available until said station shall be completed; and the unexpended balance of the appropriation of $15,000 for the establishment of a fish-cultural station in North Carolina made in the deficiency act approved July 7, 1898, is hereby made available for expenditure during the fiscal year 1900.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 42, line 23, to increase the appropriation for propagation of food fishes from $140,000 to $175,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SULLIVAN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allen,	Foraker,	Mantle,	Sewell,
Allison,	Frye,	Mitchell,	Simon,
Berry,	Gallinger,	Murphy,	Smith,
Butler,	Gear,	Nelson,	Spooner,
Carter,	Gorman,	Pasco,	Stewart,
Chandler,	Hanna,	Perkins,	Sullivan,
Chilton,	Hansbrough,	Platt, Conn.	Teller,
Cockrell,	Harris,	Platt, N. Y.	Warren,
Cullom,	Kenney,	Pritchard,	Wellington,
Daniel,	McBride,	Rawlins,	Wolcott,
Fairbanks,	McLaurin,	Ross,
Faulkner,	Mallory,

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Forty-six Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 43, line 18, to increase the appropriation for statistical inquiry, under the Fish Commission, from $5,000 to $8,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 45, after line 2, to insert:

Reimbursement of Quandt Brewing Company and others: To enable the Secretary of the Treasury, who is hereby directed and required, to pay the following parties amounts paid to the late collector of internal revenue for the Fourteenth district of New York in advance for internal revenue stamps, which stamps were never delivered to said parties, namely: To the Quandt Brewing Company, $2,343.00; to Ruscher & Co., $2,925.92; to Taylor Brewing Company, $416.25; to D. Mayer Brewing Company, $250; in all, $5,935.20.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was on page 49, line 14, to increase the number of distributors of stock under head "Custody of dies, rolls, and plates," under the Treasury Department, from two to three; and in line 15, to increase the appropriation from $8,000 to $9,200.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 54, line 21, before the word "recording," to insert "making and;" so as to make the clause read:

Lands and other property of the United States: For custody, care, protection, and expenses of sales of lands and other property of the United States, the examination of titles, making and recording of deeds, advertising, and auctioneers' fees, $400.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 54, after line 22, to insert:

Payment to the widow of late Cuban General Calixto Garcia: To pay the widow of the late Cuban General Calixto Garcia the amount forfeited in the United States circuit court for the southern district of New York as bail and paid into the Treasury, $2,500.

The next amendment was, on page 56, after line 13, to insert:

For necessary repairs and improvements to the steam heating and ventilating apparatus in the Senate wing of the Capitol, including the Supreme Court, under the supervision of the Architect of United States Capitol, $4,751.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 56, after line 18, to insert:

To provide flags for the east and west fronts of the center of the Capitol, to be hoisted daily under the direction of the Capitol police board, $100, or so much thereof as may be necessary.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 56, after line 22, to insert:

For continuing the work of cleaning and repairing works of art in the Capitol, including the repairing of frames, under the direction of the Joint Committee on the Library, $1,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 57, after line 2, to insert:

That portion of the rooms and space recently occupied by the Library of Congress in the Capitol building north of a line drawn east and west through the center of the Rotunda shall be used for such purpose as may hereafter be designated by the Senate of the United States; and that portion of such rooms and space south of said line shall be used for such purpose as may hereafter be designated by the House of Representatives.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask that the amendment may be passed over for the time being.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be passed over.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 57, line 15, to increase the appropriation for improving the Capitol Grounds from $12,000 to $16,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 57, line 23, to increase the appropriation for "Lighting the Capitol and Grounds" from $24,000 to $30,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 58, line 8, to increase the appropriation for repairs and improvements to steam fire engine house and Senate and House stables, etc., from $500 to $1,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Protection and administration of forest reserves," on page 60, line 1, after the word "dollars," to insert the following further proviso:

Provided further, That forest agents, superintendents, supervisors, and all other persons employed in connection with the administration and protection of forest reservations shall enforce the laws of the State or Territory in which said forest reservation is situated, in relation to the protection of fish and game, and shall cause the arrest of all persons violating the same.

Provided further, That any person who made actual, bona fide settlement and improvement and established residence thereon in good faith, for the purpose of acquiring a home, upon lands more valuable for agriculture than for any other purpose, within the boundaries of the Black Hills Forest Reservation, in the State of South Dakota, prior to September 19, 1898, may enter, under the provisions of the homestead law, the lands embracing his or her improvements, not to exceed 160 acres; and if the lands are so situated that the entry of a legal subdivision, according to existing law, will not embrace the improvements of such settler or claimant, he or she may make application to the surveyor-general of the State of South Dakota to have said tract surveyed at the expense of the claimant by metes and bounds and a plat made of the same and filed in the local land office, showing the land he desires to enter, not to exceed 160 acres, and thereupon he shall be allowed to enter said land, as per said plat and survey, as a homestead; and the Secretary of the Interior shall make the necessary rules and regulations to carry this act into effect: Provided, That in any case where, upon investigation by a special agent of the Interior Department and after due and proper hearing, it shall be established that an entry interfered with the general water supply, or was detrimental in any way to the public interests, or infringed upon the rights and privileges of other citizens, the Secretary of the Interior shall have authority to cause said entry to be modified or amended or in his discretion to finally cancel the same.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "For general expenses of the Geological Survey," on page 68, line 19, to increase the appropriation for topographic surveys in various portions of the United States from $200,000 to $225,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 68, line 22, to increase the appropriation for geological surveys in the various portions of the United States from $110,000 to $135,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 69, line 10, to increase the appropriation for the preparation of the report of the mineral resources of the United States from $30,000 to $40,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 70, line 3, to increase the total appropriation for the United States Geological Survey from $677,100 to $747,100.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Miscellaneous objects," on page 70, after line 23, to insert:

Patent Office: To enable the Commissioner of Patents, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, to have printed and bound at the Government Printing Office an alphabetical list or index of patentees from 1790 to 1873, inclusive, $16,000: Provided, That before this appropriation shall be available for the printing and binding of said index bona fide subscriptions for the same amounting to the sum of $10,000 shall be made; and the amount received on such subscriptions shall be covered into the Treasury.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. The chairman of the committee, I think, will agree to some amendments which I propose to the committee amendment. I will state that this is an amendment which I proposed, and I supposed at that time that the work provided for would not be done at the Government Printing Office. There is an appropriation of $16,000 in the amendment as it has been reported by the committee; but if the work is to be done at the Government Printing Office, there is no appropriation needed.

In line 24, page 70, I move to strike out the words "To enable;" on page 71, line 1, before the word "to," to insert "is authorized;" in line 4, after the word "inclusive," to strike out "$16,000;" at the end of the same line, after the word "before," to strike out "this appropriation shall be available for;" in line 7, after the word "be," to strike out "made" and insert "received by the Commissioner of Patents;" and in line 8, after the word "on," to strike out the word "such."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read the amendment as proposed to be amended.

The Secretary read as follows:

Patent Office: The Commissioner of Patents, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, is authorized to have printed and bound at the Government Printing Office an alphabetical list or index of patentees from 1790 to 1873, inclusive: Provided, That before the printing and binding of said index bona fide subscriptions for the same amounting to the sum of $10,000 shall be received by the Commissioner of Patents, and the amount received on subscriptions shall be covered into the Treasury.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I do not think it will cost the Government anything to enable the work to be done.

Mr. ALLISON. There is no objection to the modification proposed by the Senator from Connecticut.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 71, after line 9, to insert:

Purchase of land records: To enable the Secretary of the Interior to purchase from Albert Douglas, administrator of the estate of Samuel Kendrick, deceased, late of Ohio, certain original records and indexes of lands, surveys, maps, and papers pertaining to lands and locations within the Virginia military districts of Kentucky and Ohio, $15,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 71, line 21, after the word "dollars," to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That so much thereof as may be necessary shall be expended as follows: The Secretary of War shall appoint three commissioners, one from the Engineer Corps of, and one from the officers of, the Regular Army of the United States, both to act herein without additional compensation; and the third a civil engineer and member of the department of highways of the State of California, who shall be paid herein only his actual expenses.

The duties of said commission shall be to examine, determine the lengths, widths, elevations, grades, conditions, ownership, cost of construction and present values and annual cost of maintenance, rates of toll charged, annual tolls collected, and the length of season open to travel and actually traveled by the public of each the "Big Oak Flat toll road," "the Coulterville toll road," "the Wawona toll road," and the "Tioga road," all in and about the Yosemite National Park, California; and also, so far as applicable, said data with reference to new wagon road by the best attainable new route from said Yosemite Valley to a suitable point in Merced County, and of a second such in Mariposa County, and of a third such to railroad connection in Tuolumne County, and to any other practicable route, and also to a new wagon road connecting said "Tioga road" with a road traveled by wagon in Mono or Inyo County, said State, and also to a wagon road to Hetch Hetchy Valley in said park. Said commission is authorized to do all acts and things necessary to complete said purpose, and shall report to the Secretary of the Interior the results of such examination.

So as to read:

Improvement of Yosemite National Park: For the protection of the Yosemite National Park, and construction of bridges, fencing, and trails, and improvement of roads, other than toll roads, to be expended under the supervision of the Secretary of the Interior, $4,000: Provided, That so much thereof as may be necessary shall be expended as follows, etc.

Mr. ALLISON. On page 72, line 23, I move to strike out the word "a" before the word "complete."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 74, after line 11, to insert:

For central plant for hot water, with boiler, piping, covering, etc., $6,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 74, after line 13, to insert:

For renewing plumbing, tiling bathrooms and toilets in two sections of main building, $5,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 74, after line 15, to insert:

For fireproofing floors, brick partitions, piazzas, Atkins Hall, $5,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 74, line 19, to increase the appropriation for the construction of three cottage buildings for working inmates at the Government Hospital for the Insane, from $18,000 to $31,250.

The reading of the bill was continued to line 2, page 76.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair calls the attention of the Senator from Iowa to page 76, line 2. After the words "$200" in line 2, there is the phrase "in all, $35,100." That is made an entirely separate clause. There should be a comma there, and then should follow "in all, $35,100," making it one paragraph.

Mr. ALLISON. It would be better to have a semicolon there.

Mr. GALLINGER. Ought it not to be made a separate paragraph?

Mr. ALLISON. The word "in" ought to begin with a small instead of a capital "I."

Mr. GALLINGER. And made one paragraph.

Mr. ALLISON. And made one paragraph.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It ought to continue right along without separating it as a clause by itself.

Mr. ALLISON. Make it a small "i" instead of a capital "I."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That will be done.

The reading of the bill was continued. The next amendment was, on page 76, line 20, to increase the appropriation for support of the reindeer station at Port Clarence, Alaska, and for the purchase and introduction of reindeer from Siberia for domestic purposes, from $12,500 to $25,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 76, after line 20, to insert:

Des Moines River lands settlers: To pay the Des Moines River lands settlers, under the provisions of the paragraph in the sundry civil act approved July 1, 1898, under the heading "Des Moines River lands settlers," in addition to the amount already appropriated for said purposes, $150,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, the same to be in full of all claims adjusted or in process of adjustment provided for by said act, and no part of the claim shall be paid by the Secretary of the Interior until all the claims heretofore filed are examined, and all claims not presented within sixty days after the passage of this act shall be barred from consideration thereafter: Provided, That of the foregoing sum $3,500, or so much thereof as may be necessary, may be expended in making the examination provided for by said act approved July 1, 1898.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Armories and arsenals," on page 77, line 20, before the word "and," to strike out "printing" and insert "painting;" so as to make the clause read:

For general care, preservation, and improvements; for painting and care and preservation of permanent buildings; for building fences and sewers and grading grounds, $10,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 78, after line 2, to insert:

For restoring the power house, machinery, and electric plant at the Rock Island Arsenal, which were destroyed by fire on January 8, 1899, $9,851.24, to be immediately available.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 78, after line 7, to insert:

For new hospital, $19,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 78, after line 8, to insert:

For three additional turbine wheels, penstocks, shafting, and machinery at water power, $21,350.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 78, after line 11, to insert:

For powder magazine of 2,000 barrels capacity, $13,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Benicia Arsenal, Benicia, Cal.," on page 78, after line 23, to insert:

For one 30-horsepower gas or gasoline stationary engine installed, $1,800.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Frankford Arsenal, Philadelphia, Pa.," on page 79, after line 3, to insert:

For repairing wharf and stone wall on Frankford Creek and Dyke, $5,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Springfield Arsenal, Springfield, Mass.," on page 79, after line 13, to insert:

For erecting and fitting up an addition to the milling shop for use as water-closets for workmen, $2,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 82, after line 11, to strike out:

One-half of the foregoing sums under "Buildings and grounds in and around Washington" shall be paid from the revenues of the District of Columbia, and the other half from the Treasury of the United States.

Of the whole amount appropriated in the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation act for the fiscal year 1900 under the title "Public buildings and grounds" the sum of $22,410 shall be paid from the revenues of the District of Columbia and the remainder from the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. CHILTON. Let that go over. I will not ask for an explanation now. I should like to have an explanation of the amendment in the morning. Let it go over until to-morrow.

Mr. ALLISON. Does the Senator from Texas object to it?

Mr. CHILTON. Yes; I do not see any reason why the expense of the parks here in the city of Washington should not be borne in part by the government of the District of Columbia.

Mr. ALLISON. The amendment may be passed over until to-morrow.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be passed over.

Mr. ALLISON. Not only will the amendment on page 82, from line 13 to line 23, inclusive, be passed over until to-morrow, at the request of the Senator from Texas, but there are a number of amendments importing the same thing. I ask that they may all be passed over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendments will be passed over as they are reached.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment was, on page 83, line 4, to increase the appropriation for care, repair, and refurnishing of Executive Mansion from $20,000 to $36,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 84, line 9, after the word "hour," to strike out the following proviso:

Provided further. That $3,400 of the foregoing sum shall be paid from the revenues of the District of Columbia and the remainder from the Treasury of the United States.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be passed over for the present.

The next amendment was, on page 85, line 4, after the word "cents," to strike out:

One half of which sum shall be paid from the revenues of the District of Columbia and the other half from the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. GALLINGER. This amendment will also be passed over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. This amendment also will be passed over.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Engineer Department," on page 91, after line 11, to insert:

Improving Yaquina Bay, Oregon: For continuing improvement, $150,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 93, line 11, after the word "Illinois," to insert:

Fifty thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, for the completion of a levee on the west bank of the Mississippi River from the mouth of Flint Creek, in Des Moines County, Iowa, to the mouth of the Iowa River, in Louisa County, Iowa.

And in line 19, before the word "thousand," to strike out "fifteen" and insert "twenty-five;" so as to read:

For continuing improvement from the mouth of the Missouri River to St. Paul, $836,000.07: Provided. That of this amount $10,000 shall be expended for removing the sand bar in front of the steamboat landing at Quincy, in the State of Illinois; $10,000 shall be expended for dredging the channel at Quincy Bay, at Quincy, in the State of Illinois; $5,000 shall be expended for the repair and maintenance of the natural and artificial banks of the Mississippi River from Warsaw to Quincy, in the State of Illinois; $5,000 shall be expended for maintaining the harbor at Rock Island, Ill.; $50,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, for the completion of a levee on the west bank of the Mississippi River from the mouth of Flint Creek, in Des Moines County, Iowa, to the mouth of the Iowa River, in Louisa County, Iowa; $10,000 shall be expended to deepen the harbor at Davenport, Iowa, from the Government bridge to the island owned by the city of Davenport, in the Mississippi River; and $25,000 shall be expended for improving and straightening the channel at and near Clinton, Iowa.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 94, line 4, before the word "thousand," to strike out "and thirty" and insert "forty;" and in line 6, after the word "Missouri," to insert:

Forty thousand dollars shall be used for completing revetment work at New Madrid, Mo.; and $30,000 shall be used in improving the harbor and rectifying the banks at and near Helena, Ark.

So as to make the clause read:

Improving Mississippi River: For continuing improvement of Mississippi River from Head of the Passes to the mouth of the Ohio River, including salaries, clerical, office, traveling, and miscellaneous expenses of the Mississippi River Commission, $2,583,333: Provided. That of said sum $50,000 shall be used in the work of rectifying the bank at and near Greenville Harbor, in Mississippi; $40,000 shall be used in rectifying the banks at and near the city of Caruthersville, Mo.; $40,000 shall be used for completing revetment work at New Madrid, Mo.; and $30,000 shall be used in improving the harbor and rectifying the banks at and near Helena, Ark.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 94, line 15, to increase the appropriation for continuing the improvement of the Missouri River from its mouth to Sioux City, Iowa, from $200,000 to $300,000; and on page 95, line 2, after the word "dollars," to insert:

Boonville, Mo., $10,000; and upon the first reach of the river or in renewing and repairing the plant of the Missouri River Commission, $90,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 97, after line 13, to insert: Army Medical Museum and Library building: For six iron book stacks in library hall, including iron supports, stairs, and perforated gallery floors and necessary hardwood shelves, $6,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 97, line 23, after the word "dollars," to strike out:

One-half of which sum shall be paid from the revenues of the District of Columbia and the other half from the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. CHILTON. That is an amendment of the same character as those passed over on my suggestion a little while ago.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be passed over for the present.

The next amendment was, on page 98, line 3, after the word "dollars," to strike out:

One half of which sum shall be paid from the revenues of the District of Columbia and the other half from the Treasury of the United States.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be passed over.

The next amendment was, on page 99, line 18, after the word "dollars," to insert the following proviso:

Provided. That the engineer member appointed from the Corps of Engineers shall be entitled to receive compensation from the date of his appointment, in addition to his regular army pay and allowances, equal to the difference between such annual army pay and allowances and the compensation of the other two members of the commission.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 99, after line 24, to insert:

Monument to Sergt. Charles Floyd: To enable the Secretary of War, in cooperation with the Floyd Memorial Association, to cause to be erected over the remains of Sergt. Charles Floyd, a member of the Lewis and Clarke expedition, who died and was buried August 20, 1804, near the present site of Sioux City, Iowa, a fitting monument commemorative of that expedition and of the first soldier to lay down his life within the Louisiana purchase, $5,000: Provided. That the total cost and expense to the United States of erecting said monument shall not exceed $5,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "At the Western Branch at Leavenworth, Kans.," on page 103, after line 22, to insert:

For one barrack and furniture for same, $22,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 107, line 1, to increase the total appropriation for the support of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers at the Western Branch at Leavenworth, Kans., from $288,000 to $310,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "At the Danville Branch, Danville, Ill.," on page 110, line 5, after the word "for," to strike out "four additional barracks;" and in line 11, before the word "thousand," to strike out "three hundred and twenty-five" and insert "one hundred and seventy-one;" so as to make the clause read:

For headquarters, quartermaster and commissary storehouse, officers' quarters, chapel, and all other necessary buildings, and necessary apparatus, equipments, and furniture for all buildings at said branch; also for water-works, mains, and piping; for steam heating, mains, and piping; for fencing, grading, and sewers, $171,000, to be immediately available.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 110, line 14, to reduce the total appropriation for current expenses, subsistence, etc., at the Danville Branch, Danville, Ill., from $737,500 to $583,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 110, after line 14, to insert:

Hot Springs Branch, Hot Springs, S. Dak.: The Board of Managers of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers is hereby authorized to locate, establish, and construct a branch of the National Home, to be used as a sanitarium for disabled volunteer soldiers, within the limits of the town of Hot Springs, in the county of Fall River, in the State of South Dakota, to cost in all for each and every purpose connected with such erection, establishment, and construction, $100,000, and toward this object there is hereby appropriated the sum of $50,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 111, line 15, after the word "dollars," to strike out "one assistant inspector-general, $3,000," and insert "two assistant inspectors-general, at $2,000 each;" and on page 112, line 4, before the word "hundred," to strike out "forty-two thousand four" and insert "forty-four thousand four;" so as to make the clause read:

For president of the Board of Managers, $4,000; secretary of the Board of Managers, $2,000; general treasurer, who shall not be a member of the Board of Managers, $2,500; one inspector-general, $2,500; two assistant inspectors-general, at $2,000 each; clerical services for the offices of the president and general treasurer, $7,500; messenger service for president's office, $144; clerical services for managers, $2,400; agents, $2,400; for traveling expenses of the Board of Managers, their officers and employees, $10,500; for outdoor relief, $1,500; for rent, medical examinations, stationery, telegrams, and other incidental expenses, $4,000; in all, $44,444.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 112, line 5, to reduce the total appropriation for the support of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers from $3,310,044 to $3,230,544.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, at the top of page 113, to insert:

NAVY DEPARTMENT.

Pacific cable: That there shall be constructed by the United States, under the direction of the Secretary of the Navy, for military, naval, and postal purposes, a submarine telegraphic cable and connecting land lines from a Pacific port in the State of California, to be designated by the President, to the city of Honolulu, in the Hawaiian Islands.

That the Secretary of the Navy is hereby authorized, empowered, and directed to detail one or more vessels of the United States for the purpose of making surveys and taking careful necessary soundings in order to determine the most practicable route for said line of cable.

That the construction and laying of such cable or cables shall be under the general control and direction of the Secretary of the Navy, and he is hereby empowered and required, immediately after the passage of this act, to prescribe and cause to be prepared plans and specifications for the construction and laying of said line of telegraphic cable to be constructed and put in operation at the earliest practicable date.

Contracts for the construction and laying of said line of telegraphic cable, and for supplying the necessary instruments and appliances connected therewith, except such work as can be advantageously and efficiently done by the Navy Department, shall be awarded to, and executed by, the lowest responsible bidder or bidders after such notice by advertisement for sealed bids as shall be deemed reasonable and sufficient by the Secretary of the Navy: Provided, That in all advertisements for bids, and for all bids for work for, or appliances, and all contracts made for such work and material in connection with said telegraphic cable and necessary appliances, it shall be provided that the wires, cables, insulators, batteries, instruments, and all other materials shall be of the best quality, reasonably adapted in every respect for the highest efficiency.

That when such telegraphic cable is completed the operation of the same shall be under the control of the Postmaster-General, who shall have authority to receive and transmit messages in the interest of commerce and the public, other than United States Government messages, and shall establish a rate of toll therefor, not exceeding 25 cents per word between the designated port in the State of California and Honolulu in the Hawaiian Islands.

The Postmaster-General shall arrange and provide for the transmission of messages from news associations and news agencies to the newspapers of the United States, commonly known as press messages, at a rate not exceeding one-third of the above-named rates for ordinary private messages; and the sum of $500,000 is hereby appropriated toward the construction of said cable and connecting land lines, as hereinbefore provided; and the total cost of said line shall not exceed $2,500,000, to be paid for from time to time as appropriations shall be made by Congress.

Mr. ALLISON. I move to amend the amendment, on page 114, line 9, after the word "quality," by inserting "and of American manufacture and;" so as to read:

And all other materials shall be of the best quality and of American manufacture and reasonably adapted in every respect for the highest efficiency.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LODGE. I should like to ask the Senator from Iowa whether he does not think it desirable in that amendment to put in some provision as to the time within which the cables are to be laid by the contractors who make them? It seems to me it would be wise that we should require some limit of time in order to surely get the cables laid at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. ALLISON. If the Senator from Massachusetts will turn to that portion of the amendment on page 113, beginning in line 13, he will see that it reads:

That the construction and laying of such cable or cables shall be under the general control and direction of the Secretary of the Navy, and he is hereby empowered and required, immediately after the passage of this act, to prescribe and cause to be prepared plans and specifications for the construction and laying of said line of telegraphic cable, to be constructed and put in operation at the earliest practicable date.

The Secretary of the Navy makes the contract with the people who manufacture the cable. If he executes the power herein authorized, of course he will fix the earliest possible date for its completion. I do not think we can very well be more specific in the bill, as this cable may be laid within nine months, or it may take twelve or fifteen months; but the Secretary of the Navy, having all the facts and the necessary authority, will undoubtedly, under this provision, prescribe the earliest date possible for the completion of the cable. I think the provision is very well guarded.

Mr. LODGE. In the proposition which was made, the alternative proposition to this, which was to allow a company to contract under a subsidy for the entire cable, they were required to agree under heavy bonds to have the cable laid and in working order by the 1st of July, 1901, I think was the date. If they were prepared to do that, I do not see why it would not be well to require that of these other contractors.

Mr. ALLISON. The Secretary of the Navy, who will make this contract, will have all the power necessary to make that requirement of the manufacturers of the cable; and I suppose that the Government in some form, either by using one of its own ships or by hiring a ship, will lay this cable.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment of the committee as amended.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 116, after line 24, to insert:

Traveling and miscellaneous expenses: For traveling and other miscellaneous and emergency expenses authorized and approved by the Attorney-General, the provisions of the first paragraph of section 3043, Revised Statutes, to the contrary notwithstanding, $10,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "United States courts," on page 118, line 24, to increase the appropriation for payment of regular assistants to United States district attorneys, who are appointed by the Attorney-General at a fixed annual compensation, from $151,000 to $160,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 119, line 3, after the word "cases," to insert:

Including customs cases, and special assistants to the Attorney-General in special matters, and for the payment of other expenses in connection therewith, to be available until expended.

And in line 6, before the word "thousand," to strike out "sixty" and insert "seventy;" so as to make the clause read:

For payment of assistants to United States district attorneys employed by the Attorney-General to aid district attorneys in special cases, including customs cases, and special assistants to the Attorney-General in special matters, and for the payment of other expenses in connection therewith, to be available until expended, $70,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 123, line 16, after the word "bailiffs," to insert "and criers;" in line 17, before the word "in," to insert "and one crier;" and on page 123, line 8, after the word "dollars," to strike out the following proviso:

Provided, That the duties heretofore performed by criers shall hereafter be performed by the marshals, their deputies, or the bailiffs.

So as to make the clause read:

For pay of bailiffs and criers, not exceeding three bailiffs and one crier in each court, except in the southern district of New York: Provided, That all persons employed under section 715 of the Revised Statutes shall be deemed to be in actual attendance when they attend upon the order of the courts: And provided further, That no such person shall be employed during vacation; of reasonable expenses for travel and attendance of district judges directed to hold court outside of their districts, not to exceed $10 per day each, to be paid on written certificates of the judges, and such payments shall be allowed the marshal in the settlement of his accounts with the United States; expenses of judges of the circuit courts of appeals; of meals and lodgings for jurors in United States cases, and of bailiffs in attendance upon the same, when ordered by the court; and of compensation for jury commissioners, $5 per day, not exceeding three days for any one term of court, $150,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 123, after line 16, to insert: For the removal of certain circuit court records from the public building at Portsmouth, N. H., to the fireproof vaults in the public building at Concord, N. H., under the direction of the circuit court, $20.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 124, after line 14, to insert:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

Canadian Commission: The appropriation of $50,000 made by the deficiency appropriation act approved July 7, 1898, "For the expense on the part of the United States of a joint commission to be appointed for the adjustment of differences between the United States and Great Britain in respect to the Dominion of Canada, including the compensation of the commissioners representing the United States, the pay of expert service for preparation of papers, for the portion of joint expenses chargeable to the United States, for printing and all other incidental expenses, to be disbursed under the direction of the Secretary of State, to remain available during the fiscal year 1899," is hereby continued available during the fiscal year 1900, and said commission is also continued during said fiscal year.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask the Secretary to turn back to page 71, line 16, to an amendment which the committee had not prepared at that time in relation to land warrants, beginning after the clause ending at line 16.

The SECRETARY. At the end of line 16, on page 71, it is proposed to insert:

And the owners or holders of all outstanding military land warrants or parts of such warrants issued or allowed by the State of Virginia for military services performed by the officers and soldiers, seamen, or marines of the Virginia State and Continental lines in the Army or Navy of the Revolution are hereby notified and required to present and surrender them to the Secretary of the Interior within twelve months from the passage of this act for his action under the provisions of the act entitled "An act making further provision for the satisfaction of Virginia land warrants," approved August 31, 1862. And all such warrants or parts of warrants not so present and surrendered to the Secretary of the Interior shall be forever barred and invalid.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 125, after line 6, to insert:

Paris Exposition: For each and every purpose named in the paragraph in the sundry civil appropriation act approved July 1, 1898, under the heading "Paris Exposition," $850,000, of which amount not exceeding $120,000 may be used for clerk hire in the United States and in Paris, and the limit of appropriations provided for in the provisions of said paragraph shall be extended $400,000, or to $1,060,000 in all, said appropriation to be available until expended.

For the construction of necessary buildings in connection with said exposition, $250,000, to be immediately available.

For pay of jurors, $70,000, to be available until expended.

Mr. ALLISON. I move to amend the amendment on page 125, line 15, after the word "hundred," by inserting "and thirty," so as to make the amount there "$430,000," and in line 16, before the word "thousand," I move to strike out "fifty" and insert "eighty;" so as to make the total amount "$1,080,000."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 125, after line 22, to insert:

Lafayette Monument: For the purpose of aiding in defraying the cost of a pedestal, and completing in a suitable manner the work of erecting a monument in the city of Paris to General Lafayette, designed by the Lafayette Memorial Commission, as a feature of the participation of the United States in the Paris Exposition of 1900, the Secretary of the Treasury shall be, and is hereby, authorized to purchase in the market $25,000 worth of silver bullion, or so much thereof as may be necessary for the purpose herein provided for, from which there shall be coined at the mints of the United States silver dollars of the legal weight and fineness to the number of 50,000 pieces, to be known as the Lafayette dollar, struck in commemoration of the erection of a monument to General Lafayette, in the city of Paris, France, by the youth of the United States, the devices and designs upon which coins shall be prescribed by the Director of the Mint, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, and all provisions of law relative to the coinage and legal tender quality of the present silver dollars shall be applicable to the coins issued under this act, and when so coined, there is hereby appropriated from the Treasury the said fifty thousand of souvenir dollars, and the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to place the same at the disposal of the Lafayette Memorial Commission, a commission organized under the direction and authority of the Commissioner-General for the United States to the Paris Exposition of 1900.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, at the top of page 127, to insert:

Papers of the Continental Congress: For examining the papers of the Continental Congress (1774 to 1789), now in the library of the Department of State, and determining and reporting to Congress which of said papers should be published and the number of printed volumes they would make, the money to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of State, $5,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Under legislative," on page 128, line 2, to increase the appropriation for maintenance of the Botanic Garden from $5,500 to $6,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 128, after line 2, to insert:

Industrial Commission: That the limit of expenditure provided in section 4 of the act authorizing the appointment of a nonpartisan commission to collate information and to consider and recommend legislation to meet the problems presented by labor, agriculture, and capital, approved June 18, 1893, is hereby increased from $50,000 per annum to $75,000 per annum; and each member of said commission who is a Senator or member of the House of Representatives shall be allowed traveling expenses incurred in coming to or returning from any and all meetings of said commission, whether regular or called, when Congress is not in session, and said Senators and members of the House of Representatives shall also, when attending such meetings during a recess of Congress, be allowed hotel and other necessary expenses, and all such expenses heretofore incurred by the said members of said commission shall be paid by the Treasury on presentation of the usual vouchers therefor; and said commission is hereby authorized to expend from said appropriation for the purchase of reference books and periodicals an amount not to exceed $1,500; and on the termination of said commission all such books and periodicals shall be delivered by the commission to the Librarian of Congress and become a part of the Library of Congress.

Mr. ALLISON. I move to amend the amendment on page 128, line 18, by striking out the word "said" before the word "members;" so as to read:

And all such expenses heretofore incurred by the members of said commission shall be paid by the Treasury on presentation of the usual vouchers therefor.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 129, after line 2, to insert:

SENATE.

For payment to James S. Morrill, only child of Hon. Justin S. Morrill, late a Senator of the United States from the State of Vermont, $5,000, to be immediately available.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 129, after line 7, to insert:

To enable the Secretary of the Senate to pay Annie E. Maccubbin, widow of William M. Maccubbin, who was killed while in the discharge of his duties as a painter in the Capitol, October 20, 1898, $1,500, to be immediately available.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 129, after line 12, to insert:

To pay Robert G. Proctor, for compiling and indexing "Tariff acts passed by the Congress of the United States from 1789 to 1897," as authorized and directed by concurrent resolution which passed the House May 16, 1898, and the Senate May 23, 1898, $250, to be immediately available.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Public printing and binding," on page 130, line 7, after the word "rents," to insert "books of reference;" and in line 10, after the word "dollars," to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That in the expenditure of this appropriation the Public Printer may, in his discretion, pay all printers and bookbinders employed in the Government Printing Office at the rate of 50 cents per hour for time actually employed.

So as to make the clause read:

For the public printing, for the public binding, and for paper for the public printing, including the cost of printing the debates and proceedings of Congress in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, and for lithographing, mapping, and engraving for both Houses of Congress, the Supreme Court of the United States, the supreme court of the District of Columbia, the Court of Claims, the Library of Congress, the Executive Office, and the Departments, including salaries or compensation of all necessary clerks and employees, for labor (by the day, piece, or contract), and for rents, books of reference, and all the necessary materials which may be needed in the prosecution of the work, $3,467,000; Provided, That in the expenditure of this appropriation the Public Printer may, in his discretion, pay all printers and bookbinders employed in the Government Printing Office at the rate of 50 cents per hour for time actually employed; and from the said sum hereby appropriated printing and binding shall be done by the Public Printer to the amounts following, respectively, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 131, line 24, after the word "binding," to insert "in half Turkey or material not more expensive;" so as to make the clause read:

For the Smithsonian Institution, for printing labels and blanks, and for the "Bulletins" and "Proceedings" of the National Museum, the editions of which shall not be less than 3,000 copies, and binding in half Turkey or material not more expensive scientific books and pamphlets presented to and acquired by the National Museum library, $17,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 133, after line 19, to insert:

Government Printing Office building: That there be constructed, upon the land acquired by the United States in square No. 624, in the city of Washington, D. C., under the provisions of the act entitled "An act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1899, and for other purposes," approved July 1, 1898, a fire-proof building for the use of the Government Printing Office, at a total cost, including approaches, elevators, lighting, and heating apparatus, not exceeding $2,000,000.

That the building herein provided for shall be erected under the direction and supervision of the Chief of Engineers of the Army, by contract or hired labor, or both, as may be to the best interests of the United States, and upon plans and specifications to be prepared by him and approved by the Public Printer.

And the said Chief of Engineers is hereby authorized to enter into a contract or contracts for the construction of the whole or of any part of said building and for the removal of the old dwellings and other buildings now standing upon said land, subject to appropriations to be made therefor by Congress, and he shall also have the employment of all persons connected with the work; Provided, however, That the selection and appointment of a competent architect to prepare the plans and specifications for the elevations of said building shall be made by the said Chief of Engineers and the Public Printer jointly.

Toward the construction of said building and for each and every purpose connected therewith, including the cost of all professional and other personal services that the Chief of Engineers of the Army may deem necessary, and for the rent of office rooms in a locality convenient to the work, $350,000, to be immediately available. This appropriation and all appropriations which may hereafter be made for this purpose shall be expended under the direction and supervision of the said Chief of Engineers.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was concluded.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask the Senator from South Dakota to withhold his amendment for a moment. I wish to suggest an amendment to come in on page 127, and then the Senator may offer his amendment, and it may be pending. I think I shall then move that the Senate adjourn.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. ALLISON. On page 127, line 19, after the date "1898," I move to strike out "$1,200" and insert "$3,000."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 127, line 19, after the date "1898," it is proposed to strike out "$1,200" and insert "$3,000;" so as to make the clause read:

Statement of appropriations: For preparation, under the direction of the Committees on Appropriations of the Senate and House of Representatives, of the statements showing appropriations made, new offices created, offices the salaries of which have been omitted, increased, or reduced, indefinite appropriations, and contracts authorized, together with a chronological history of the regular appropriation bills passed during the third session of the Fifty-fifth Congress, as required by the act approved October 19, 1888, $2,000, to be paid to the persons designated by the chairmen of said committees to do said work.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I now offer the amendment which I have sent to the desk.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to insert, on page 77, after line 13, the following:

That all persons who may have heretofore, or may hereafter, settle upon that portion of the Great Sioux Indian Reservation which was opened up to settlement under and by virtue of the act of March 2, 1889, entitled "An act to divide a portion of the reservation of the Sioux Nation of Indians in Dakota into separate reservations and to secure the relinquishment of the Indian title to the remainder, and for other purposes." may secure patents for the lands embraced in their entry upon making the payments required in section 21 of said act of March 2, 1889, above referred to, and no other or further payment shall be required of said claimants, whether proof and payment be made after fourteen months or five years from the date of settlement upon said land.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Let the amendment be pending until to-morrow morning.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask that that amendment may go over for the present.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be printed and go over until to-morrow.

Mr. FORAKER. I offer an amendment to the pending bill, which I ask may be printed and lie over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That order will be made, in the absence of objection.

Mr. SPOONER. I offer an amendment intended to be proposed to the pending sundry civil bill, which I ask to have printed and referred to the Committee on Rules.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That order will be made, in the absence of objection.

Mr. ALLISON. I move that when the Senate adjourn to-day it be to meet to-morrow morning at 11 o'clock.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I desire to submit a conference report.

Mr. ALLISON. There was an understanding when the appropriation bill was taken up that no other business was to be transacted this evening. If the Senator desires to make the report and have it lie over, I have no objection.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I can submit the report to-morrow just as well.

Mr. COCKRELL. I hope the Senator will do that, as several Senators inquired, and that was the understanding.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. Very well.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. 7865) to pay the J. S. Stearns Lumber Company $379 was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

The bill (H. R. 12184) to distinctively designate parcels of land in the District of Columbia for the purposes of assessment and taxation was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

The bill (H. R. 11879) to amend an act entitled "An act to suspend the operation of certain provisions of law relating to the War Department, and for other purposes," was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

AMENDMENT TO NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. BUTLER submitted an amendment providing that no part of the appropriation of $2,700,000 shall be expended except in procuring armor of the best obtainable quality, at an average cost not exceeding $300 a ton of 2,240 pounds, including royalties, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the naval appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

DEATH OF REPRESENTATIVE HURLEY.

Mr. PLATT of New York. I ask the Chair to lay before the Senate the resolutions of the House of Representatives in relation to the death of Representative HURLEY.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following resolutions of the House of Representatives; which were read:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, February 27, 1899.

Resolved, That the House has heard with deep regret and profound sorrow of the death of Hon. DENIS M. HURLEY, late a Representative from the State of New York.

Resolved, That a committee of 11 members of the House, with such members of the Senate as may be joined, be appointed to attend the funeral at Brooklyn, N. Y., and that the necessary expenses attending the execution of this order be paid out of the contingent fund of the House.

Resolved, That the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House be authorized and directed to take such steps as may be necessary for properly carrying out the provisions of this resolution.

Resolved, That the Clerk of the House communicate these resolutions to the Senate and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

Resolved, That, as a further mark of respect, the House do now adjourn.

Mr. PLATT of New York. Mr. President, I offer the resolutions I send to the desk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolutions will be read. The Secretary read the resolutions, as follows:

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with deep sensibility the announcement of the death of Hon. DENIS M. HURLEY, late a Representative from the State of New York.

Resolved, That a committee of five Senators be appointed by the Presiding Officer to join the committee appointed on the part of the House of Representatives to take order for superintending the funeral of the deceased.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate these resolutions to the House of Representatives.

The resolutions were considered by unanimous consent and unanimously agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore appointed, under the second resolution, as the committee on the part of the Senate, Mr. WILSON, Mr. WELLINGTON, Mr. SMITH, Mr. HEITFELD, and Mr. PLATT of New York.

Mr. PLATT of New York. Mr. President, I offer an additional resolution, and ask for its adoption.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be read.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect to the memory of the deceased, the Senate do now adjourn.

The resolution was unanimously agreed to; and (at 9 o'clock and 35 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Tuesday, February 28, 1899, at 11 o'clock a. m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MONDAY, February 27, 1899.

The House met at 11 o'clock a. m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. HENRY N. COUDEN.

The Journal of the proceedings of Saturday last was read and approved.

RIGHT OF WAY THROUGH INDIAN RESERVATIONS.

Mr. CURTIS of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I present a conference report on the bill (H. R. 11868) to provide for the acquiring of rights of way by railroad companies through Indian reservations, Indian lands, and Indian allotments, and for other purposes. I ask unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the statement will be read instead of the conference report.

Mr. DOCKERY. I have no objection to that, but I suppose that the gentleman will ask that the conference report be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. CURTIS of Kansas. Yes.

The conference report is as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill (H. R. 11868) to provide for the acquiring of rights of way by railroad companies through Indian lands, and Indian allotments, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, 7, 9, 10, 11, and 12, and agree to the same.

That the Senate recede from its amendment numbered 13.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 3, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: After the word "heard," in line 10, strike out the words "Provided further, That when a right of way has been heretofore or shall hereafter be granted, no parallel right of way within 10 miles on either side shall be granted by the Secretary of the Interior, unless in his opinion the public interest will be promoted thereby," and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Provided further, That where a railroad has heretofore been constructed, or is in actual course of construction, no parallel right of way within 10 miles on either side shall be granted by the Secretary of the Interior, unless in his opinion public interest will be promoted thereby."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 8, and agree to the same with amendments as follows:

In lieu of the words "President of the United States," in line 3, insert the words "Secretary of the Interior."

In lieu of the words "pay double," in line 22, insert the word "deposit."

In lieu of the word "into," in line 23, insert the words "with the;" and the Senate agree to the same.

CHARLES CURTIS,
JOHN F. LACEY,
Managers on the part of the House.
R. F. PETTIGREW,
O. H. PLATT,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

Statement of the managers on the part of the House.

The managers on the part of the House of the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill, H. R. 11868, "An act for the acquiring of rights of way by railroad companies through Indian reservations, Indian lands, and Indian allotments, and for other purposes," submit the following written statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon and recommended in the accompanying conference report, namely:

On Nos. 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, 7, 9, 10, 11, 12, and 13 the House recedes from its disagreement and agrees to the amendments of the Senate.

Senate recedes from its amendment numbered 13.

Amendment numbered 1 extends the right of way to telegraph and telephone companies.

No. 2 simply adds the words "and ability." This amendment requires that in addition to the Secretary of the Interior being satisfied that the company asking for the right is in good faith, he must also be satisfied of its ability to build the road for which the right of way is asked.

No. 4 simply makes the provisions of section 2 apply to the rights of way heretofore granted, when no provisions defining the width of the rights of way are contained in the act granting the same.

Nos. 5 and 7 apply to the lands of the individual Indians and are made necessary by amendment 8, which will be explained in another part of this statement.

No. 6 requires that, in addition to the compensation for the lands taken being fixed by the Secretary of the Interior, the same shall be paid under his direction.

Nos. 9 and 10 are simply changes in the phraseology.

No. 11 requires that one-tenth of the entire line shall be constructed and put in operation in one year, and the entire line shall be completed within three years.

No. 12 provides that the time for completion shall not be extended for a period exceeding two years.

The House recedes from its disagreements to the amendment numbered 3, with an amendment. The Senate provided that in case there was objection to the granting of a right of way that the parties objecting should be afforded a full hearing, and provided that no parallel right of way within 10 miles on either side should be granted by the Secretary unless, in his opinion, the public interest would be promoted thereby. The amendment, as agreed to by the managers of the Senate and House, changes this proviso so as to apply only to roads which have heretofore been constructed or are in the actual course of construction.

No. 8 takes the responsibility of fixing the compensation for lands of individual occupants and allottees out of the hands of the Secretary and provides that if amicable settlement can not be made between the company and occupant or allottee, then the matter shall be submitted to three disinterested referees; and if the three can not agree, then two of them are authorized to make the award, and either party, being dissatisfied with the findings of the referees, shall have the right within sixty days to appeal to the United States courts. The House agrees to this amendment, with amendments requiring the referees to be appointed by the Secretary of the Interior, instead of by the President, and requiring the railroad company to deposit the amount of the award with the court, to abide the judgment thereof, instead of double the amount, as provided in the Senate amendment.

CHARLES CURTIS,
JOHN F. LACEY,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. DOCKERY. This statement is not signed by all the managers on the part of the House.

Mr. CURTIS of Kansas. No; Mr. LITTLE was called home by sickness, but he concurs in it. I move, Mr. Speaker, the adoption of the report.

The conference report was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. CURTIS of Kansas, a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the conference report was agreed to was laid on the table.

LEAVE TO PRINT.

Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana will state it.

Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana. Just before the House went into Committee of the Whole on Friday for the consideration of the Army appropriation bill, on motion of the gentleman from New York [Mr. SULZER], leave was given to such members as might participate in the debate in the committee to extend their remarks in the RECORD. I desire to inquire whether or not that leave would permit a member who, during debate in Committee of the Whole, submitted some criticisms on the address of the President recently delivered at the Home Market Club in Boston to incorporate the address of the President into his remarks in the RECORD? There was some difference of opinion about it at the time.

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not quite understand the question, the Chair not being present when the colloquy occurred.

Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana. Just before the House went into Committee of the Whole the gentleman from New York [Mr. SULZER] moved that any gentleman who should participate in the debate should have the right to extend his remarks in the RECORD. This motion carried. While in the committee I took the floor and submitted some remarks in criticism of the address of the President of the United States made at the banquet at the Home Market Club in Boston. When I concluded the question was raised as to my right, under the leave granted by the House, to incorporate the address of the President with my remarks in the RECORD. I desire now to ask whether the permission given by the House before going into Committee of the Whole is broad enough to enable me to avail myself of the privilege of incorporating this address into the remarks which I made?

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not see how he can pass upon that as a parliamentary inquiry. His individual opinion would be, perhaps, that—

Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana. Then I ask unanimous consent of the House at this time to make the incorporation.

Mr. PERKINS. I think that would solve the matter.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, this is a matter of a good deal of importance.

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not quite understand the bearing of it.

Mr. GROSVENOR. The bearing of it, Mr. Speaker, is this. It is a matter of importance, and I hope the Chair will give the House the benefit of a final decision upon the question. I am in sympathy with the view taken by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. JOHNSON]. The question is this: I address the House upon a topic, and thereupon I ask and receive unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD. It was claimed by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. PERKINS] that it must be my remarks, and no illustration of my remarks or any addition to my remarks could go in.

Mr. PERKINS. No, Mr. Speaker; that is not my position.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Very well; that is the question. Perhaps I misunderstood the gentleman from Iowa. The question is simply this: The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. JOHNSON] made a speech in which he commented upon the speech of the President at the Home Market Club in Boston, and now the question is whether, under the order allowing him to extend his remarks, he may publish in full the address of the President.

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not like to pass upon a question of this sort in answer to a parliamentary inquiry, for the reason that he would be usurping the functions of the House. The Chair thinks the difficulty may be solved by the gentleman from Indiana asking unanimous consent of the House. Gentlemen will at once perceive that the House might be entirely willing that certain documents should be printed which had been criticized; but if a general rule were undertaken to be established, then by a little criticism on a book the whole book might be printed, a thing which the House has hitherto desired to avoid, although it has not always been successful.

Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana. Very well, Mr. Speaker; I now ask unanimous consent to incorporate—

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana asks unanimous consent to print as part of his remarks the speech of the President of the United States to which allusion was made in the gentleman's remarks.

Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana. Together with a brief synopsis of the remarks of the Secretary of the Navy and the Postmaster-General, to which I also alluded in my speech.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

TAXATION OF LAND IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. BABCOCK. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill which I send to the desk.

The bill (H. R. 13184) to distinctively designate parcels of land in the District of Columbia for the purposes of assessment and taxation was read, as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That, for the purposes of facilitating assessment and taxation of real estate in the District of Columbia, the following system of designating the several parcels of land therein is hereby prescribed, and every designation given in conformity with said system shall be a sufficient description of the parcel of land to which it relates, for all purposes of assessment and collection of taxes and assessments of every kind.

Each square in the city of Washington shall bear a number or other designation that will distinguish it from every other square in said city.

Each lot or parcel of ground in each such square shall bear a number or other designation that will distinguish it from every other lot or parcel of ground in such square.

Each block in each subdivision in said District outside of the limits of the city of Washington shall bear a number that will distinguish it from every other such block.

Each lot or parcel of land in each such block shall bear a number that will distinguish it from every other lot therein.

Each piece or parcel of unsubdivided land in said District shall have a distinctive designation.

As nearly as practicable, in the judgment of the Commissioners, the numbers in each of the aforesaid squares, blocks, or parcels of land requiring to be numbered shall be in a regularly increasing numerical sequence and order, beginning with the lowest number practicable; and, in case of the lots, shall commence at the same relative location in each of the squares, blocks, or parcels of land, and be continued in the same relative order.

It shall be the duty of the said Commissioners to cause a record of the designations of the several aforesaid parcels of land to be made in accordance with the foregoing system in the office of the surveyor of said District; and said Commissioners shall cause the necessary work to be commenced immediately upon the passage of this act; and hereafter it shall be the duty of the surveyor, in giving numbers to blocks or lots of future subdivisions, to be governed by said system.

SEC. 2. That the designation given as hereinbefore prescribed to each of said lots or parcels of land, which they shall respectively bear on the records of the assessor of said District at the time said lots or parcels become subject to sale for arrears of any tax or assessment, shall be the official designation of said lots or parcels of land for the enforcement of the collection of all such arrears of general taxes and assessments for the tax year in which the said designation shall be given, and until such designation be changed pursuant to law.

SEC. 3. That hereafter, before any instrument of conveyance of land in said District shall be recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds, such instrument must bear conspicuously indorsed thereon a certificate from the office of the surveyor of said District, showing that the land so conveyed is named or numbered upon the surveyor's records, as provided in section 1 of this act; and such certificate shall be entered upon the records of the said recorder as a part of the record of the said instrument of conveyance.

SEC. 4. That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia shall cause to be made a daily transcript, and entry on the records of said assessor, of the designations of lots or parcels of land in said District appearing in instruments of conveyance received for record in the office of the recorder of deeds; and the designations of lots or parcels of land in said District transferred by probated wills; and the person or persons whom the Commissioners of said District may designate for the purpose of making such transcript shall for this purpose at all times during office hours have full access to the records of the recorder of deeds and the register of wills of said District; and the assessor shall daily furnish the surveyor with a copy of such transcript.

SEC. 5. That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill; which was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

SUSPENSION OF THE LAWS RELATING TO WAR DEPARTMENT, ETC.

Mr. GRIFFIN. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 11879) to amend an act entitled "An act to suspend the operation of certain provisions of law relating to the War Department, and for other purposes."

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That an act entitled "An act to suspend the operation of certain provisions of law relating to the War Department, and for other purposes," approved June 7, 1898, is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

"That the operation of the following provisions of law be, and is hereby, continued suspended for such further time as, in the discretion of the Secretary of War, may be found necessary, or until otherwise provided by Congress, not longer, however, than March 1, 1900, namely:

"First. The provision of the first section of the act entitled 'An act making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1899, and for other purposes,' in the following words:

"Provided, That hereafter no part of this appropriation shall be expended in the purchase for the Army of draft animals until the number on hand shall be reduced to 5,000, and thereafter shall only be expended for the purchase of a number sufficient to keep the supply up to 5,000."

"Second. The provisions of the first section of the act entitled 'An act making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1899, and for other purposes,' in the following words:

"Provided, That hereafter no part of the appropriations for the Quartermaster's Department shall be expended on printing unless the same shall be done by contract, after due notice and competition, except in such cases as the emergency will not admit of the giving notice for competition: Provided further, That after advertisement all the supplies for the use of the various departments and posts of the Army and of the branches of the Army service shall hereafter be purchased where the same can be purchased the cheapest in the markets of the United States, quality and cost of transportation and the interest of the Government considered, except that purchases may be made in open market, in the manner common among business men, when the aggregate amount required does not exceed $30, but every such purchase shall be immediately reported to the Secretary of War."

"And the words:

"Provided, That the number of horses purchased under this appropriation, added to the number on hand, shall not at any time exceed the number of enlisted men and Indian scouts in the mounted service, and that no part of this appropriation shall be paid out for horses not purchased by contract, after competition duly invited by the Quartermaster's Department, and an inspection by such department, all under the direction and authority of the Secretary of War."

"And the words:

"Provided, That no more than $1,000,000 of the sums appropriated by this act shall be paid out for the services of civilian employees in the Quartermaster's Department, including those heretofore paid out of the funds appropriated for regular supplies, incidental expenses, barracks and quarters, Army transportation, clothing, camp and garrison equipage; that no employee paid therefrom shall receive a salary more than $150 per month unless the same be specially fixed by law."

"Third. So much of the act approved March 15, 1898, entitled 'An act making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1899,' under the heading 'Ordnance Department,' as provides that not more than $85,000 of the money appropriated for the Ordnance Department in all its branches shall be applied to the payment of civilian clerks in said department."

SEC. 2. That during the time the operation of the foregoing provisions of law shall remain so suspended pursuant to this act materials required by the War Department may, in the discretion of the Secretary of War, be purchased abroad, and shall be admitted free of duty.

SEC. 3. That during the same time the Bureau of Ordnance of the War Department is authorized to purchase without advertisement such ordnance and ordnance stores as are needed for immediate use; and when such ordnance and ordnance stores are to be manufactured, then to make contracts without advertisement for such stores, to be delivered as rapidly as manufactured.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to examine this bill carefully, and will therefore ask the gentleman from Wisconsin to withhold it for the present. The bill contains so many exceptions and limitations that I think it ought to be examined before it is passed.

Mr. GRIFFIN. This bill is amendatory of an act which we passed last year—

Mr. BAILEY. I know it is, but it seems to continue that amendatory act as to all claims except for the purchase of certain animals and for certain kinds of printing. I do not think the act ought to be continued in time of peace. But I would like to examine the bill.

Mr. GRIFFIN. There is a limitation as to the time during which the suspension shall continue.

Mr. BAILEY. But the war is over and this is now a time of peace. I ask the gentleman to withdraw the bill until I can examine it.

Mr. GRIFFIN. The gentleman's position is tantamount to an objection.

Mr. BAILEY. Well, I do not want to object; but I will, of course, until I can examine the bill, unless the gentleman withdraws it. If it be a proper measure, I certainly would be very far from desiring to object.

Mr. GRIFFIN. Under the circumstances I am not at liberty to withdraw the bill.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

Some time subsequently the following took place:

Mr. GRIFFIN. Mr. Speaker, I desire now to call up again for unanimous consent the bill (H. R. 11879) to suspend the operation of certain provisions of law relating to the War Department, as the gentleman from Texas, on examination of the bill, is willing to withdraw the objection.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, on examination of the bill I find that there is a limitation of all extensions up to March 1 of next year, and it only continues the suspension of certain items which I think a necessary provision, and therefore I withdraw the objection to the consideration of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there further objection?

There being no further objection, the bill was considered.

The amendment recommended by the Committee on Military Affairs was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. GRIFFIN, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

J. S. STEARNS LUMBER COMPANY.

On motion of Mr. STEWART of Wisconsin, by unanimous consent, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 7865) to pay the J. S. Stearns Lumber Company $379; which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Treasurer of the United States be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to the J. S. Stearns Lumber Company, of Oshkosh, Ashland County, Wis., the sum of $379.63, the same being the amount of a certain judgment recovered by the United States against the said J. S. Stearns Lumber Company, it being for the value of timber cut from certain lands in section 35, township 46 north, of range 4 west, Ashland County, Wis., claimed by the United States, and which lands were subsequently determined by the Supreme Court, in the case of the Wisconsin Central Railroad Company against Forsythe, to be owned by the said railroad company, and from which the said timber was removed.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. STEWART of Wisconsin, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

CHARLES K. KIRBY AND OTHERS.

On motion of Mr. DE VRIES, by unanimous consent, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill (S. 4748) for the relief of Charles K. Kirby and Edinger Bros. & Jacobi.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to ascertain the amount of internal-revenue tax assessed or now due on brandy produced by Charles K. Kirby, under the name and style of Edinger Bros. & Jacobi and Lachman & Jacobi, at distillery No. 263, in the first collection district of California, and destroyed or lost at sea while in transit in bond from said distillery for deposit in a special bonded warehouse; and to remit in favor of the said Charles K. Kirby and Edinger Bros. & Jacobi and the said Lachman & Jacobi so much of the tax on the brandy which he shall ascertain has been so lost or destroyed, as aforesaid, as shall have been assessed against them, respectively.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. HULL. I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the further consideration of the Army appropriation bill.

Mr. RICHARDSON. There are some matters on the Speaker's table which should be disposed of, and I hope the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HULL] will withhold his motion until they can be taken up. There are some bills which should be sent to conference.

Mr. HULL. I have no objection to anything that ought to go to conference.

CITY AND SUBURBAN RAILWAY.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the joint resolution (S. R. 189) to promote the relocation of certain tracks of the City and Suburban Railway Company, of the District of Columbia.

Mr. RICHARDSON. On this bill the Senate has disagreed to the amendments of the House. I move that the House insist on its amendments and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER announced the appointment of Mr. BABCOCK, Mr. CURTIS of Iowa, and Mr. RICHARDSON as conferees on the part of the House.

ARKANSAS NORTHWESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the bill (S. 5513) to amend an act entitled "An act authorizing the Arkansas Northwestern Railway Company to construct and operate a railway through the Indian Territory, and for other purposes," and extending the time for constructing and operating the said railway for two years from the 5th day of April, 1899.

Mr. DINSMORE. The House Committee on Indian Affairs has favorably reported a bill identical in its language with this Senate bill. I ask that the Senate bill be put on its passage.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman call up the bill by direction of the committee?

Mr. DINSMORE. No, sir.

The SPEAKER. Then the request will require unanimous consent. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 8 of the act entitled "An act authorizing the Arkansas Northwestern Railway Company to construct and operate a railway through the Indian Territory, and for other purposes," enacted March 25, 1896, and in force April 5, 1896, be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

"Sec. 8. That said railway company shall build at least 100 miles of its railway within five years after the passage of this act or the rights herein granted shall be forfeited as to that portion not built. That said railway company shall construct and maintain continually all fences, roads, and highway crossings, and necessary bridges over said railway wherever said roads or highways do now or may hereafter cross said railway's right of way, or may be, by the proper authorities, laid out across the same."

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. DINSMORE, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

JUDICIAL DISTRICTS, MISSISSIPPI.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the bill (S. 5450) to attach Claiborne County, Miss., to the western division of the southern judicial district of Mississippi.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That Claiborne County, Miss., be, and it is hereby, embraced in the western division of the southern district of Mississippi, as fixed by the act of Congress describing the western division of the southern district of Mississippi, the court thereof being held at Vicksburg, Mississippi.

SEC. 2. That all process issued to and served upon parties in said county returnable to the United States court at Jackson, Miss., is hereby returnable to the next succeeding term of said court at Vicksburg, Miss., and all causes pending in the Jackson, Miss., court against citizens in said Claiborne County may, upon the order of the judge thereof, be transferred, upon motion, to said Vicksburg court.

Mr. HENDERSON. Mr. Speaker, the Judiciary Committee have instructed me to recommend that the bill be accepted by the House.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the bill will be considered.

There was no objection.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and being read the third time, was passed.

On motion of Mr. HENDERSON, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I now renew the motion that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the Army appropriation bill.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole (Mr. HOPKINS in the chair).

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will proceed with the reading of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Inspector-General's Department: For pay of officers in the Inspector-General's Department, $57,000;

For additional pay to such officers for length of service, to be paid with their current monthly pay, $11,400;
In all, $68,400.

Mr. KNOWLES. I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, in the few minutes given me under the rules of the Committee of the Whole, I desire to enter my protest against the unspeakable outrages now being perpetrated in the name of the people of the United States upon the people of the Philippine Islands. Our hitherto stainless sword, which has never been drawn except in the interests of liberty and humanity, has now been bathed in the blood of 10,000 people, whose only crime is a desire to govern themselves. What American citizen with a spark of self-respect, to say nothing of national pride or patriotism, can look upon this spectacle without hiding his head in shame?

Mr. Chairman, I have been astonished at sentiments uttered upon the floor of this House. The Philippine people are struggling in the same cause and for the self-same rights that actuated our forefathers in the Revolution. Every denunciation of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR] against Aguinaldo and his followers were simply echoes from the debates in the British Parliament against Washington and his army. British ministers denounced Washington's night attack upon Trenton in almost the same words as those used Saturday last by the gentleman from Ohio in describing the night attack upon our troops at Manila.

The debates in Parliament during the revolutionary struggle show that Pitt, who defended the right of Americans to resist oppression, was denounced by the cuckoos of George III in almost the identical terms as those used on Saturday last by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON] against the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. SIMPSON]. Why, Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman from Ohio and the gentleman from Illinois are right, we ought immediately to tear that picture of Washington on your right from its frame and replace it with the picture of George III. If their words be true, then we ought immediately to pass a law making it treason to quote the Declaration of Independence or to read the Constitution of the United States. Washington and his army fought for the right of self-government against foreign oppressors. The Filipinos are doing the same. Our forefathers declared that taxation without representation was tyranny. Filipinos say the same. Our forefathers declared that all governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed. Filipinos say the same. But gentlemen upon the other side say that is an old-fashioned document, not applicable to any people whom our robber classes desire to exploit.

Mr. Chairman, we are how doing in the Philippine Islands just what we have cursed Spain for doing for the past hundred years. Spain was always an "expansionist." She used the same soft terms and catchwords to cover up her devilry that our Republican friends are now using to excuse and palliate our aggressions upon the Filipinos. The unspeakable cruelties of Cortez and Pizarro were defended upon the ground that they were carrying the religion of Jesus Christ to the heathen. I have heard pious hypocrites defend our Philippine outrages upon the same grounds. They propose to send the gospel of the meek and lowly Jesus into that country upon cannon balls. They are going to shoot religion into them with Gatling guns. Politicians say they are going to send liberty to the Filipinos. Yes; embalmed liberty of the same variety as the beef they fed our soldiers.

Mr. Chairman, oppression always begets cruelty. We always despise the people whom we oppress. Irresponsible power inevitably leads to tyranny, robbery, and plunder. This has been the history of the world. I have as high an opinion as any man of American character as developed under free institutions and self-government, but I do not want to trust any man, however good, with irresponsible power. It is not safe to do so. France sent Maximilian to rule Mexico on the same pretext that we now desire to rule the Philippines, namely, because the Mexicans were not capable of self-government. We resisted the attempt of France to do just what we now propose to do in the Philippines. Under self-government the Mexicans have made giant strides and rapid development, although their President is a full-blooded Indian and but little white blood is found in the veins of their people. Aguinaldo and his people are in no wise inferior to Diaz and the Mexicans. Prof. Dean Worcester, who has made a special study of the Malay character, says of them:

The Filipino has developed many admirable traits. His self-restraint is remarkable; his family is well ordered; in some instances, at any rate, he shows executive ability of no mean order when called upon to attend to the administration of local affairs in the more important towns. * * * If trouble arises in our dealings with them, I believe there is far more likelihood that it will be the result of our own maladministration than that it will come from inherent and objectionable peculiarities of their character.

If that be true, those people are much more capable of self-government than are the people of some of our own great cities.

Mr. Chairman, I deprecate every drop of blood shed in the Philippine Islands. I deprecate the loss of every American soldier's life there, whether by Filipino weapon or by the burning heat of a tropical climate. I was a soldier myself and participated in every battle in which the Army of the Potomac was engaged from '62 to '65. I know the valor of the American soldier. I know he can accomplish everything but impossibilities, and I believe the conquest of the Philippine Islands is an impossibility. Ten millions of people, with courage and manhood enough to fight for their freedom, in a tropical climate unendurable to the Caucasian race, are invincible to any and all force you can send against them. You may bombard and destroy their towns, but you will never conquer them. Spain has tried it for three hundred years and only succeeded, at enormous expense of life and treasure, in occupying a few seaports under the guns of her navy.

And what will you gain if you do "conquer them by killing half of them," as General Shafter recommends? You will have the eternal hatred of the whole civilized world, just as Spain has. Are we emulous of her reputation? We might have had the lasting friendship of these people and the respect of the whole world. The Filipinos looked to our forces as their liberators from hated Spain. But they now find that they have jumped out of the frying pan into the fire.

Mr. Chairman, gentlemen talk about the "right of sovereignty" over the Philippines which we have bought of Spain. What right was that? The right of a thief to rob and plunder because the thief was stronger than the victim. That is all. And that is the only right we have bought and the only right we can exercise. Spain never had any right except the right of a robber and plunderer, and now we are to take Spain's place at the same business. Indeed, we have outdone Spain at her trade of blood, having killed about 10,000 people—men, women, and children—and burned their towns.

Mr. Chairman, I am glad the Filipinos have the courage and manhood to fight for their liberty. If it was right for our forefathers to fight for their independence, it is right for the Filipinos to do the same. The American people are not oppressors, but organized greed has the Administration by the throat, and upon them jointly must fall the odium of an outraged people.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I wish to give notice now that I shall insist strictly upon the point of order in reference to further proceedings on this bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair desires to say that under the rule, where a bill is being considered for debate and amendment under the five-minute rule, debate must apply to the amendment which is pending; and inasmuch as the gentleman from Iowa has invoked a rigid execution of the rule, the Chair will be compelled to sustain the point of order in future.

Mr. SIMPSON. I understand, Mr. Chairman, that under the rule gentlemen have the right to extend their remarks in the RECORD?

Mr. SPALDING. Only those who have participated in the general debate.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understands that that order has been made.

The Clerk will proceed with the reading of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

RETIRED OFFICERS.

For pay of officers on the retired list, and for officers who may be placed thereon during the current year, $1,272,971.21.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, as a member of the Committee on Military Affairs that prepared this bill, I desire to address myself for a few moments to the bill in its entirety. I do not desire to be bound by any individual or specific amendment, and I do not wish to say a word if I am compelled to restrict myself to a single provision of the bill.

I have heard all of the bill read, from the beginning. I know its provisions from the beginning to the end. I have been industrious, as far as I could be industrious, in the committee in its preparation. I want to make my own record in reference to it and want only two or three minutes for that purpose.

The President of the United States has announced that the policy of the Government in regard to the islands that have come into our possession and with reference to the action of our armed forces in these islands should be left to Congress. Now, as a member of this body, my policy is plain and open, and I have nothing to conceal.

When we declared war with Spain for the emancipation of the suffering Cubans, it was to free those people and that alone; and I can not see why we should shoot down yellow men on the other side of the globe, on these other islands, in the further pursuit of that same policy.

But I announce now—and hope I will be pardoned for consuming any of the time of the House—and I suppose that every member has his own conscience and his own judgment to consult in the matter—I announce that I will never vote a single solitary cent to put a bullet into a man on these islands or shoot down people who are trying to establish their own independence and their own government. Let us get our minds together and work on this question. Let us consider for an instant what is before us, and what we are doing.

What an idea it was the other day when the message came across the ocean from General Otis, a magnificent soldier—I am not criticizing him or the brave men under his command—when he announced that he had had an engagement with these islanders, armed with bows and arrows, and that he had killed and wounded 4,000 or more of these poor, naked, struggling, ignorant people, and I, Mr. Chairman, in view of that message could not, and can not now, understand that it was at all complimentary to our soldiery.

Now, one word and I am through. When this war came, a great struggle was inaugurated in the committee as to how it should be brought about. The President of the United States, when he sent the first bill from the War Department, claimed the power to declare war himself. That was voted down and we got it out of that bill. Now you have got a war. Who has declared it? I know how public sentiment is running. I know how wild we get sometimes, but I want to ask any man under his oath in this Congress, who has declared war against those people who have never done us harm, who have never fired a gun at us until we commenced it? You propose to equip your Army with a large appropriation to shoot down those people. For one, I will never vote a dollar to do it.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. COX. That is all the time I wanted.

The Clerk read as follows:

For mileage to officers and contract surgeons, when authorized by law, $500,000; Provided, That the payment and settlement of mileage accounts of officers shall be made according to distances computed over routes established and by mileage tables prepared by the Paymaster-General under the directions of the Secretary of War, and all payments made by paymasters on account of mileage previous to the passage of this act shall be settled in accordance with the mileage distances as above provided; Provided further, That actual expenses only shall be paid to officers when traveling to and from our island possessions in the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

Mr. DOCKERY. I desire to reserve a point of order against the first proviso—

Mr. HULL. There is no use in reserving it. I recognize that it is clearly subject to the point of order.

Mr. DOCKERY. I understand that, but I understand the chairman of the committee is willing in lieu of that proviso to insert the following:

Provided, That hereafter the maximum sum to be allowed and paid to any officer of the Army shall be 7 cents per mile, the distance to be computed over the shortest usually traveled route.

Mr. HULL. I would suggest to the gentleman to put in the entire law on mileage, with the word "hereafter" at the beginning of it, so that we can save publishing it all hereafter.

Mr. DOCKERY. I ask the chairman of the committee to put it in such form as will satisfy him.

Mr. HULL. Simply to put in the word "hereafter" and reenact the whole law.

Mr. DOCKERY. I ask the chairman of the committee to offer the amendment.

Mr. HULL. I offer in lieu of the provision in the bill the present statute with the word "hereafter" put in.

The CHAIRMAN. In lieu of the proviso?

Mr. DOCKERY. In lieu of the first proviso.

Mr. HULL. The first proviso goes out and that takes its place.

Mr. DOCKERY. But you retain the second proviso?

Mr. HULL. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

Mr. HULL. I want the entire law reenacted with the word "hereafter" in it, so that we shall not have to carry it in the appropriation bill every year.

Mr. BARRETT. Let the Clerk read the whole provision.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out all after the word "dollars," in line 9, page 11, to and including the word "Provided," in line 16, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

Provided, That hereafter the maximum sum to be allowed and paid to any officer of the Army shall be 7 cents per mile, distances to be computed over the shortest usually traveled routes; Provided further, That when any officer so traveling shall travel in whole or in part on any railroad on which the troops and supplies of the United States are entitled to be transported free of charge, or over any of the bond-aided Pacific railroads, or over the railroad of any railroad company which is entitled to receive only 50 per cent of the compensation earned by such company for transportation services rendered to the United States, he shall be furnished with a transportation request by the Quartermaster's Department for such travel; and the cost of the transportation so furnished shall be a charge against the officer's mileage account for such travel, to be deducted by the paymaster who pays the account, at rates paid by the general public for travel over such roads; Provided further, That officers who, by reason of the decision of the accounting officers of the Treasury, have been compelled to pay from their own means one-half of the cost of their travel fare over railroads known as 50-per-cent railroads, shall be reimbursed the same by the Pay Department, and paymasters against whom disallowances have been made by the accounting officers of the Treasury under such decision shall have the amount so disallowed passed to their credit."

Mr. HEPBURN. I should like to ask the gentleman from Missouri, whose amendment I understand this to be, if there are any of these railroads that are described in that proviso.

Mr. DOCKERY. I yield to the chairman of the committee. I was interested only in placing the maximum provision at 7 cents, and the chairman of the committee suggested the reenactment of the entire law.

Mr. HULL. If there are no such roads it does no harm. This is simply reenacting the law that has been on the statute books for some time. I am not able to say whether there are any such roads or not.

Mr. HEPBURN. I had supposed that since the enactment of that law, the status of several of the roads had been changed by their sale, and, so far as I know, there is not one that those provisions would apply to.

Mr. TAWNEY. In the absence of positive information, would it not be best to allow the provision to stand?

Mr. HEPBURN. I may be wrong about it, and I ask the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. BARRETT. I can answer the question of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HEPBURN].

Mr. HULL. I am not able to say whether there are any roads to which this provision would apply or not. If there are none, the proviso would not have any effect. If there are any left that this would apply to, then it would save the Government that amount on transportation.

Mr. BARRETT. I desire to ask the chairman of the committee a question, and then I propose to answer the question asked by the gentleman from Iowa on my left. I should like to ask the chairman why it was the committee reported this change in the law?

Mr. HULL. The amendment on mileage?

Mr. BARRETT. On mileage.

Mr. HULL. I will simply say it was because the Pay Department informs us that there is a constant contest between the Treasury Department and the Pay Department on the mileage tables, and some party, some officer of the Government, should be authorized to make up mileage on all of these roads—the nearest-traveled route—so that the officers can have their accounts adjusted.

In many cases now the paymaster will pay an officer over certain lines, it will be allowed by the Paymaster-General, the account will go to the Treasury, and they will figure it on some other line, and, making a discrepancy of some few dollars in the pay, delay settlement. That is the condition reported to us. It does not make a difference of a great deal of money, but causes a great deal of trouble in adjusting the accounts of the paymasters of the United States. Now, as I said in my opening remarks, there was a disposition on the part of the Treasury Department to ask that they might figure it. I care nothing about who figures it so that it can be adjusted in some way, so that travel tables can be prepared under which the pay officers can adjust these accounts with the officers of the Treasury and there would be no contest.

Mr. BARRETT. It is only a small matter in itself compared with other mammoth expenditures, but it only illustrates the manner in which officers have tried to get ahead of the Government; and if the gentleman from Missouri had not offered the amendment, I had it on my desk and purposed offering it myself. Now I want to answer the question of the gentleman on my left, the gentleman from Iowa, by an illustration. The Treasury Department asked the Committee on Military Affairs, through its chairman, not to change this law.

Mr. HULL. Not until after the bill had been reported.

Mr. BARRETT. I am merely stating a fact.

Mr. HULL. No, you are not.

Mr. BARRETT. I make the statement that the Auditor of the Treasury Department having this matter in charge asked the Committee on Military Affairs not to make this legislation.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I want the gentleman to be exact when he claims to state a fact, and hope he will be kind enough to state one. The Auditor of the Treasury Department came into the lunch room of the Capitol after the bill had been reported and was almost ready to be taken up and said that he ought to make these tables if anybody did. I made that statement in my opening speech the other day to the House.

Mr. BARRETT. That simply proves what I said, Mr. Chairman.

Now, take a certain case, which will illustrate this proposed change and the motive therefor. The Paymaster-General of the Army computes the distance from Jacksonville, Fla., to Tampa, Fla., over which a great many thousand officers and men traveled last year, at 240 miles. That is over a road called the Plant Line, which seems to be in favor at the War Department.

But there is another road between Jacksonville and Tampa, Fla., a through road, over which there run regular trains, sleeping cars, and all the accessories of a good road, and the distance on that road between Jacksonville and Tampa is 212 miles, a saving of 28 miles. The road that has 212 miles in length is a Government-aided road, and, under the provision just read, is obliged to carry officers for half fare—that is, the Government gets a rebate of half a fare. Now, the officers of the Government, almost without exception, put in their claims for mileage over the 240-mile road, because the Paymaster-General of the Army in making up his figures stated the route was 240 miles long, when, as a matter of fact and common knowledge, it is only 212 miles.

The Auditor of the Treasury, when this matter came to him, urged that these officers should be obliged to travel over the aided road, by which the amount would be reduced from $16.80 paid them, 240 miles at 7 cents per mile, for every ticket to $10.84, 212 miles at 7 cents, less the $4 rebate to the Government—that is to say, under the direction of the War Department every man who traveled last summer from Jacksonville to Tampa cost the Government $16.80, whereas if he had traveled according to the Treasury Department it would have cost $10.84. Now, that is a small matter; it does not amount to anything in one sense, and yet the idea of paying, through a device of the War Department, for 212 miles distance to every officer $6.03 more than it otherwise would have cost shows the necessity of putting this proviso in here, though the War Department proposed it to be changed.

Mr. HEPBURN. I asked a question and the gentleman from Massachusetts volunteered to answer it. He has not answered it yet. I think the gentleman fails to recognize the distinction between bond-aided roads and land-grant-aided roads. I do not understand, and I asked that question to know if it was true. I do not understand that roads aided by land grants are subject to the provision of this proviso—that those roads that were aided by bond issues are the Union Pacific, the Central Pacific—

Mr. SPALDING. The Northern Pacific.

Mr. HEPBURN. Not the Northern Pacific.

Mr. HULL. The Kansas Pacific.

Mr. HEPBURN. The Kansas Pacific and three or four other roads. Now, I may be wrong about it, but I would be glad to have the gentleman answer my question.

Mr. BARRETT. I will answer the question. The proviso reads that when any officer so traveling shall travel in whole or in part on any railroad on which the troops and supplies of the United States are entitled to be transported free of charge, or over any of the bond-aided Pacific railroads, or over the railroad of any railroad company which is entitled to receive only 50 per cent of the compensation earned by such company—

Mr. HEPBURN. What you are reading refers to the bond-aided railroads.

Mr. BARRETT. The Florida Central Railroad is obliged to carry officers at 50 per cent of the regular fare, but the other, a road called the Plant System, is not a land-grant road, and is not obliged to carry at half rates. Yet by the provision reported by the committee every officer who should travel on Army service between Jacksonville and Tampa would be allowed a mileage over a much longer route, and the Government would not be benefited by the $4 rebate which the other and shorter route must repay.

Mr. HEPBURN. Does the gentleman say that all the land-grant roads are subject to this provision and compelled to carry at half rates? Is that true?

Mr. BARRETT. I do not enter into that. It is all included in the terms entered into between them and the Government.

Mr. HEPBURN. That is the point of the whole controversy. The gentleman's assault upon the Department is dependent on how he answers that question. If they are required to do that, then there is something in his criticism, but if they are not required to do it, then the gentleman's statement is gratuitous and unfair.

Mr. BARRETT. I have referred to this Florida situation, which is the only one I have looked up.

Mr. HULL. The gentleman's figures show that the road from Jacksonville to Tampa does not carry them at half rate, because if it is a shorter line it would be less than half the amount; that is, there would be a greater difference between them than stated by the gentleman from Massachusetts. The law provides that it shall be figured over the nearest usually traveled route. I know Paymaster-General Stanton, who lately retired, and I do not believe there was a more conscientious, faithful officer ever served the Government; and when the gentleman from Massachusetts says that he entered into a conspiracy—for that is what it means—to swindle the Government of the United States, I say he is making a charge that is untrue, ungenerous, and unfair. He was one of the most faithful of officers.

Mr. BARRETT. Mr. Chairman, I have not charged General Stanton with conspiracy.

Mr. HULL. That is what it amounts to.

Mr. BARRETT (continuing). I have stated what can not be disputed, that, under these tables prepared by the Paymaster-General, Army officers are allowed to draw for 240 miles mileage between these two points. The Treasury Department has refused to allow it on the ground that the shortest usually traveled route is 212 miles.

Mr. STEELE. I want to ask the gentleman from Massachusetts a question.

Mr. BARRETT. Very well.

Mr. STEELE. Is it not a fact that the 240-mile route is one that is usually traveled in making connection between these two points, and that the law says, "the usually traveled route?" Army officers would not go over a little byroad because it was a shorter distance, but they would want to go the usual route where they could make connections.

Mr. BARRETT. I would like to answer the question. The law says, "the shortest usually traveled route." The short route is as much traveled as the other, but the reason given by the Army officers for preferring the longer route, to say nothing of the extra mileage, is because the longer route takes them nearer the hotel in Tampa, which is conducted by the Plant Company, and where they wish to put up while there. My friend from Iowa [Mr. HULL] says my figures are not correct, because if there was only 28 miles difference there would not be $6 difference in the ticket. He must remember that these officers are allowed 7 cents a mile, and that the ticket only costs them about 3½ cents. They get that in addition to what they pay by either route, between $6 and $7 velvet, which they put in their pocket.

Mr. STEELE. They used to be allowed sleeping-car transportation, and, in addition, something for board.

Mr. HULL. Before the law was changed they got 4 cents a mile absolutely; then they got their transportation to where they were to go and sleeping-car fare. Before that law was passed they got 10 cents a mile. Then it was reduced to 8.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Massachusetts has expired.

Mr. BARRETT. I move to strike out the last word. These statements do not affect the facts I have brought out.

Mr. STEELE. It does not show any velvet. [Laughter.]

Mr. BARRETT. It does certainly show velvet. Under the old law they were allowed their hotel expenses as well as transportation. The 7 cents here provided will cover everything of that kind. So that it is not "velvet."

Mr. SHATTUC. Many of us gentlemen here do not understand what the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. BARRETT] meant by the word "velvet." What is "velvet?"

Mr. BARRETT. Well, after the 4th of March, when I shall have plenty of leisure, I will try to teach the gentleman. [Laughter.]

Now, sir, the chairman of the committee has already conceded that the old law by which these men were required to travel by the shortest practicable route should be enforced. The object in seeking to have it abrogated was, in my judgment, to take from the accounting officers of the Treasury any supervision over these expenses; and I know for a fact that the Auditor of the Treasury Department came to the Capitol and protested against such a thing being done, basing the protest upon the experience of the Department with claims put in by Army officers for largely fictitious mileage.

Mr. HEPBURN. I should like to ask the gentleman from Massachusetts a question. He has just stated that after the 4th of March he expects to have ample leisure. Are we to understand from that remark that he regards the position of Librarian of Congress as a sinecure?

Mr. BARRETT. Mr. Chairman, I suppose now I must rise to a "personal explanation." Several times during the last few days friends of mine both in the House and Senate, meeting me in the corridor or elsewhere, have congratulated me on having been appointed to a position which they have said is worth five or six thousand dollars a year—the position of Librarian of Congress.

As a matter of fact, several months ago, before the war with Spain was concluded, I wrote a letter to my constituents declining to be a candidate for renomination for Congress on the ground that my private business interests were so large as to require my attention. I desire now to say to my friend from Iowa that the position of Librarian of Congress would have no charm for me. If I desired to be in Washington I should certainly have sought to remain here as a member of Congress. But the distinguished gentleman who has been appointed Librarian, and who seems not to have impressed his personality on my friend from Iowa, is Hon. SAMUEL J. BARROWS, a Representative in this House from another district of Massachusetts—not "your humble servant."

Mr. HEPBURN. I can only express my regret at the statement made by the gentleman from Massachusetts. [Laughter.]

The question being taken on the amendment of Mr. HULL, it was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For 400 contract surgeons, $720,000.

Mr. MITCHELL. I move to amend by inserting, after the paragraph just read, the following:

For two months' extra pay to the enlisted men who served in the Astor Battery and who have been honorably discharged therefrom, $2,534.40.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I shall raise no point of order on this amendment, because this battery stands in a peculiar position. This battery was organized by Mr. Astor, and all the expenses of its organization and equipment were paid by him. The only way it could be taken into the Army was as part of the regular force, it not having been provided for in the volunteer act. When these men were mustered out they had been to Manila and had served there. As all the other troops on their return home from Manila are to be allowed sixty days' extra pay, I can see no reason why these enlisted men should not have the same allowance.

Mr. MITCHELL. I desire to print in the RECORD, as a portion of my remarks, the following letters:

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, February 24, 1899.

SIR: The Astor Battery was presented to the United States by Mr. John Jacob Astor, and was manned by the assignment to it of three officers of the Regular Army, and by a complement of men who were enlisted in the regular service for a period of three years. These men, having been enlisted in the regular service, do not come within the rule applied to volunteer organizations from the States, and were mustered out of service without furlough; being regular soldiers, they do not come within the provisions of the act approved January 12, 1899, granting gratuity of extra pay to officers and men belonging to volunteer organizations mustered out of service.

Very respectfully,

H. C. CORBIN, Adjutant-General.

Hon. JOHN MURRAY MITCHELL,
United States House of Representatives.

WAR DEPARTMENT, PAYMASTER-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, February 24, 1899.

SIR: The following is a statement of the amount which would be necessary to pay two months' extra pay to the noncommissioned officers and privates of the Astor Battery, lately mustered out of the service:

8 sergeants, at $43.20 each.....	$345.60
6 corporals, at $36 each.....	216.00
2 musicians, at $31.20 each.....	62.40
72 privates, at $31.20 each.....	2,246.40

Total..... 2,854.40

Very respectfully,

A. B. CAREY,
Paymaster-General, United States Army.

Hon. J. M. MITCHELL,
House of Representatives.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SUBSISTENCE OF THE ARMY.

Purchase of subsistence supplies: For issue as rations to troops, civil employees when entitled thereto, hospital matrons and nurses, general prisoners of war (including Indians held by the Army as prisoners, but for whose subsistence appropriation is not otherwise made), estimated for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900, on the basis of 62,761,750 rations; for sales to officers and enlisted men of the Army; for authorized issues of canteens; of toilet articles, barbers' laundry, and tailors' materials, for use of general prisoners confined at military posts without pay or allowances, and recruits at recruiting stations; of matches for lighting public fires and lights at posts and stations and in the field; of flour used for paste in target practice; of salt and vinegar for public animals; of issues to Indians visiting military posts, and to Indians employed with the Army, without pay, as guides and scouts.

For payments for meals for recruiting parties and recruits; for hot coffee, canned beef, and baked beans for troops traveling, when it is impracticable to cook their rations; for scales, weights, measures, utensils, tools, stationery, blank books and forms, printing, advertising, commercial newspapers, use of telephone, office furniture; for temporary buildings, cellars, and other means of protecting subsistence supplies (when not provided by the Quartermaster's Department); for commissary chests complete, and for renewal of their outfits; for field desks of commissaries; for extra pay to enlisted men employed on extra duty in the Subsistence Department for periods of not less than ten days, at rates fixed by law; for compensation of civilians employed in the Subsistence Department, and for other necessary expenses incident to the purchase, care, preservation, issue, sale, and accounting for subsistence supplies for the Army; for the payment of the regulation allowances for commutation in lieu of rations to enlisted men on furlough, to ordnance sergeants on duty at ungarrisoned posts, to enlisted men stationed at places where rations in kind can not be economically issued, to enlisted men traveling on detached duty when it is impracticable to carry rations of any kind, to enlisted men selected to contest for places or prizes in department and army rifle competitions while traveling to and from places of contest; to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War, $8,700,871.00.

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word, for the purpose of making an inquiry of the chairman, and it is the last inquiry I shall make in respect to this bill. The existing law, as I understand, limits the appropriation in this paragraph to $100,000 for compensation of civilians employed in the Subsistence Department. I call attention also to the fact that in the appropriation in this bill for barracks and quarters the usual limitation upon the amount to be paid to civilian employees is stricken out. Again, in the appropriation, on page 22, for the Medical and Hospital Department, I find that the usual proviso that not exceeding $40,000 shall be expended for pay of civilian employees has been stricken out. I observe further that in the appropriation, on page 25, for manufacture, repairing, procuring, and issuing arms at the National Armory the proviso limiting the amount to be paid to civilian employees to $65,000 has been stricken out.

In all of these cases I observe that the usual restrictions to which I have referred have been stricken out. Will the gentleman please explain why this has been done?

Mr. HULL. I will state to the gentleman in a word. The committee were not able to give the exact amounts to which we ought to fix the limit. The circumstances surrounding the preparation of the bill have been unusual—

Mr. DOCKERY. I understand that.

Mr. HULL. And we thought it better to send it over to the other body in this form and let them figure out the amount and put it in, if it is possible for them to do so.

All of the amounts are necessarily considerably increased over the regular army appropriation bills heretofore. It will be largely more than for any preceding year in recent times, although the Army is being reduced gradually. But it would be impossible to get at the exact sum that would be satisfactory or needed to meet the requirements of the Government. This statement, I think, will explain why the bill is not explicit in some of these provisions and in some other particulars.

Mr. DOCKERY. Then the gentleman, as I understand, expects that there will be some limitation placed upon the amounts after the bill reaches the other body.

Mr. HULL. Yes. It is impossible, of course, the gentleman will understand, to make the bill on the lines on which we have heretofore made it. Many provisions must be made in the bill now to meet contingencies that might arise—

Mr. DOCKERY. I fully realize the embarrassment that the committee has labored under.

Mr. HULL. And of course we had to make the bill to meet the provisions as they are now existing.

Mr. DOCKERY (continuing). I know that the conditions are unusual and very difficult to deal with.

Now, let me ask the gentleman another question, and I shall not again interrupt the progress of the bill. If the so-called "compromise bill" becomes a law, would it not involve a very considerable increase in the expenditures over that provided here and a large deficiency?

Mr. HULL. There is no doubt of that.

Mr. DOCKERY. Can the gentleman give any idea as to the probable deficiency which will result if the bill passes in its present form and if Congress shall adopt the compromise measure?

Mr. HULL. I can give the gentleman an idea, but only an idea, not having the exact figures.

In the first place, Mr. Chairman, there is an increase of a number of regiments. The officers provided for in the Regular Army are the same as in the House bill, but they cut down 5 regiments of infantry; they cut out about 2 regiments of cavalry and 6 regiments of artillery. But the increase is in the regiments of infantry, from 25 to 55; in other words, there is an increase of 30 in the regiments of infantry.

Mr. DOCKERY. I did not mean to ask the gentleman to go into details, but to give in a general way the probable increase. I do not desire to delay the passage of the bill for details, but only ask an approximate estimate as to the amount of increase involved.

Mr. HULL. Oh, it will run into several millions of dollars.

Mr. DOCKERY. Twenty millions?

Mr. HULL. I think, not so much as that. There will be an increase, of course, in the number of men, and large increases practically all along the line.

Mr. DOCKERY. I withdraw the pro forma amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will proceed with the reading of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Subsistence supplies to be issued to inhabitants of the island of Cuba who are destitute and in imminent danger of perishing unless they receive the same, $100,000.

Total for Subsistence Department, $9,752,621.00.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I move to insert an amendment here. The Commissary Department has made a request that we insert in the bill the words which have been heretofore carried on appropriation bills, but which have been omitted from this bill. I ask, therefore, to insert at the bottom of page 14, after line 24, the words I send to the desk.

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Add, after line 24, the words "to be disbursed and accounted for as subsistence of the Army, and for that purpose they are constituted one fund."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Why should this amendment be adopted if it is already the law?

Mr. HULL. Because we left it out of this bill. It is the law of the last appropriation bill.

The CHAIRMAN. If there be no objection, the amendment will be considered as agreed to.

There was no objection.

The Clerk, proceeding with the reading of the bill, read as follows:

QUARTERMASTER'S DEPARTMENT.

Regular supplies: Regular supplies of the Quartermaster's Department, including their care and protection, consisting of stoves and heating apparatus required for heating offices, hospitals, barracks, and quarters, and recruiting stations; also ranges and stoves, and appliances for cooking and serving food, and repair and maintenance of such heating and cooking appliances; of fuel and lights for enlisted men, including recruits, guards, hospitals, storehouses, and offices, and for sale to officers; for post bakeries; for the necessary furniture, text-books, paper, and equipment for the post schools and libraries; for the tableware and mess furniture for kitchens and mess halls, each and all for the enlisted men, including recruits; of forage in kind for the horses, mules, and oxen of the Quartermaster's Department at the several posts and stations and with the armies in the field, and for the horses of the several regiments of cavalry, the batteries of artillery, and such companies of infantry and scouts as may be mounted, and for the authorized number of officers' horses, including bedding for the animals; of straw for soldiers' bedding, and of stationery, including blank books for the Quartermaster's Department; certificates for discharged soldiers, blank forms for the Pay and Quartermaster's Departments, and for printing department orders and reports, $7,200,000.

Mr. BARRETT. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

In previous appropriation bills for the support of the Army provision was made that contracts for supplies for the use of the departments of the Army, for the various branches of the service, should be purchased, after public advertisement, at the cheapest rates in the markets of the United States, quality and cost of transportation and the interest of the Government being considered. I observe that that provision is left out of the pending bill, and I would like to ask the gentleman from Iowa in charge of the bill why that very fair and proper provision has been omitted?

Mr. HULL. We have, as the gentleman knows, a general law now providing how the supplies shall be purchased under present conditions.

May I ask the gentleman what provision he specially refers to?

Mr. BARRETT. I am referring to the last Army appropriation bill, which provided that these supplies should be purchased in the manner that I have stated, which is inserted in the bill at the end of the paragraph providing for the expenditures of the Quartermaster-General's Department.

Mr. HULL. This matter is now governed by the general law under which we are operating at present and under which the committee prepared the present bill.

Mr. BARRETT. Now, Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman from Iowa will look on page 5 of the bill of last year he will find the proviso in it, and I should like to know why it was omitted from this bill. And in order to bring the matter before the House, I move to amend this section by adding the words which I send to the desk, which I take from last year's law.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment. Mr. BARRETT. To be added at the bottom of page 15. The Clerk read as follows:

At the end of page 15 insert the following:

"Provided, That hereafter no part of the appropriations for the Quartermaster's Department shall be expended on printing unless the same shall be done by contract, after due notice and competition, except in such cases as the emergency will not admit of the giving notice for competition: Provided further, That when practicable after advertisement all the supplies for the use of the various departments and posts of the Army and of the branches of the Army service shall hereafter be purchased where the same can be purchased the cheapest, in the markets of the United States, quality and cost of transportation and the interest of the Government considered, except that purchases may be made in open market, in the manner common among business men, when the aggregate amount required does not exceed $20, but every such purchase shall be immediately reported to the Secretary of War."

Mr. HULL. The reason for leaving that out will be very plain when I state that this morning we passed a bill further suspending the law which this amendment would reenact.

When the war commenced, we passed a bill suspending this provision in the appropriation bill for the present fiscal year. This morning we passed a bill extending that suspension for still another year after this; and to put this amendment in here would simply amend the bill we passed this morning and render it nugatory. In other words, Congress has suspended these provisions to a certain time, and this morning we passed another bill extending that suspension for another year, which would carry it beyond this fiscal year that we are now legislating for. It was left out of this appropriation bill for the reason that the statement of the War Department and the action of Congress made it an absurdity to put it in the bill.

Mr. BARRETT. I expected the gentleman from Iowa to make that reply, and I suppose it will be conclusive with the committee, but I want to say that the need to which the gentleman refers has now disappeared. The Army of the United States is not now outside of the United States, except a small portion of it in Cuba, and I have drawn this amendment so as to cover that by inserting the words "when practicable." We are not now at war with anyone. The conditions under which last year's bill was necessary have disappeared. I do not think the gentleman from Iowa will undertake to say to this committee—certainly he would not if he had in his possession the facts that I have—that the result of this suspension of these very proper restrictions upon making contracts has been to the credit of the Government or to the satisfaction of the business men of the United States.

We had a little experience in New England last summer in the way in which these contracts were awarded. The business men of New England who tried in fair and open competition to get a chance at some of these vast expenditures found that by one kind of hocus-pocus and another they were prevented from doing so. Gentlemen understand that now, when peace is declared and the ordinary rules that govern the purchase of Army supplies can be well resorted to, there is no further reason for this suspension of the law. It is impossible to understand why, now that supplies can be obtained in the ordinary way, there should be any reason for preventing the open competition of business men who desire to obtain these contracts. I say that the bogie of the war has disappeared; that there is no war; that there is no soldier of the United States who is not within our limits, except the few in Cuba, and that there is no more reason for suspending this very wise provision on account of the insurrection in the Philippines than there would have been if there had been an insurrection of the Indians in Dakota.

I think, Mr. Chairman, unless some other reason can be given than that we are in a state of war, which we are not, that it would be just as well to let the merchants and manufacturers of the United States compete on open terms for these contracts; that they should be awarded to the lowest bidders after advertisement, and that the goods and supplies should be manufactured in the United States. I ask that the amendment be carried in this bill, unless there is some better reason to be given than the statement that we are in a state of war, and that therefore the ordinary rules and restrictions which we put on those purchases must be done away with.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman's modification by putting in the words "when practicable" would not meet the case, for this reason: Our troops in Manila may need something very badly. If the words "when practicable" are inserted, it would simply mean that the Secretary of War must pass on every individual purchase, and the determination of the question, whether it was practicable or not, would be delayed until he had acted upon it. This provision is in absolute opposition to the bill unanimously passed this morning, even the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. BARRETT] not raising his voice against it, and it would render nugatory that action on all the money appropriated in this bill for the Quartermaster's Department. Take, for instance, the purchase of horses for the Philippines. They may need some very quickly to mount scouts. They would have to submit a requisition, and it would have to be passed upon here before it could be acted upon there. It seems to me that the mere statement of the effect of this amendment is sufficient to justify this committee in voting it down.

Mr. BARRETT. The gentleman from Iowa illustrates how business is generally done in this House. I was sitting in my seat—

Mr. HAY. I make the point of order that debate is exhausted.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Virginia has raised the point of order that debate on this amendment is exhausted.

Mr. BARRETT. I move to strike out the last word. I was sitting in my seat when the bill referred to was passed this morning. I could not hear what was being done. I asked a gentleman what was the nature of the bill before the House. He said he did not know anything about it, but the fact that the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. GRIFFIN] presented it was an assurance that it was all right; and knowing the gentleman from Wisconsin to be an honest and upright man, I kept silence without knowing.

In response to the statement of the chairman of the committee in charge of the bill that the rule provided for in this amendment can not be put into force, I will state that as a matter of fact 90 per cent of the money spent for supplies will be spent in the United States. 90 per cent of the manufactured articles will be manufactured in the United States, and 90 per cent will be called for and the contracts made months before they are turned over to the Government. If honesty and fair dealing alone are desired, the old provisions regarding army contracts may properly be resumed. The people in my section of country, who have had bitter experience with the way this thing has been working for the last year, and have found themselves time and time again enchained out of Government contracts on this ground of "emergency," can not understand why all these millions shall not hereafter be expended, as they have been in previous years expended, after open advertising and competitive bids.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts.

The question was taken; and the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

Incidental expenses; Postage; cost of telegrams on official business received and sent by officers of the Army; extra pay to soldiers employed on extra duty, under the direction of the Quartermaster's Department, in the erection of barracks, quarters, and storehouses, in the construction of roads, and other constant labor for periods of not less than ten days, and as clerks for post quartermasters at military posts, and for prison overseers at posts designated by the War Department for the confinement of general prisoners; for expenses of express to and from frontier posts and armies in the field, of escorts to paymasters and other disbursing officers and to trains where military escorts can not be furnished; expenses of the internment of officers killed in action or who die when on duty in the field, or at military posts or on the frontiers, or when traveling under orders, and of noncommissioned officers and soldiers; and that in all cases where they would have been lawful claims against the Government, reimbursement may be made of expenses heretofore or hereafter incurred by individuals of burial and transportation of remains of officers, including acting assistant surgeons, not to exceed what is now allowed in the cases of officers, and for the reimbursement in the cases of enlisted men of what is now allowed in their cases, may be made out of the proper funds appropriated by this act, and that the disbursing officers shall be credited with such reimbursements heretofore made; authorized office furniture; hire of laborers in the Quartermaster's Department, including the hire of interpreters, spies, or guides for the Army; compensation of clerks and other employees to the officers of the Quartermaster's Department, and incidental expenses of recruiting; for the apprehension, securing, and delivering of deserters, and the expenses incident to their pursuit, and no greater sum than $50 for each deserter shall, in the discretion of the Secretary of War, be paid to any officer or citizen for such services and expenses; for a donation of $5 to each dishonorably discharged prisoner upon his release from confinement, under court-martial sentence, involving dishonorable discharge; for the following expenditures required for the several regiments of cavalry, the batteries of light artillery, and such companies of infantry and scouts as may be mounted, the authorized number of officers' horses, and for the trains, to wit: Hire of veterinary surgeons, purchase of medicines for horses and mules, picket ropes, blacksmiths' tools and materials, horseshoes and blacksmiths' tools for the cavalry service, and for the shoeing of horses and mules, and such additional expenditures as are necessary and authorized by law in the movements and operation of the Army and at military posts, and not expressly assigned to any other department, $2,400,000.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, on page 16, line 23, I move to strike out the word "made" and insert the word "paid."

Mr. HULL. I did not catch that amendment—on page 16?

Mr. HAY. Page 16, line 23, strike out the word "made" and insert the word "paid."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Line 23, page 16, strike out the word "made" where it appears before the word "out" and insert the word "paid;" so that it shall read, "may be paid out."

Mr. HULL. That is right. That is a typographical error.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Transportation of the Army and its supplies: Transportation of the Army, including baggage of the troops when moving either by land or water, and including also the transportation of recruits and recruiting parties heretofore paid from the appropriation for "Expenses for recruiting;" of supplies to the militia furnished by the War Department; of the necessary agents and employees; of clothing, camp and garrison equipage, and other quartermaster's stores, from army depots or places of purchase or delivery to the several posts and army depots, and from those depots to the troops in the field; of horse equipments and subsistence stores from the places of purchase, and from the places of delivery under contract to such places as the circumstances of the service may require them to be sent; of ordnance, ordnance stores, and small arms from the foundries and armories to the arsenals, fortifications, frontier posts, and army depots; freights, wharfage, tolls, and forrages; the purchase and hire of draft and pack animals and harness, and the purchase and repair of wagons, carts, and drays, and of ships and other seagoing vessels and boats required for the transportation of supplies and for garrison purposes; for drayage and cartage at the several posts; hire of teamsters and other employees; extra-duty pay of enlisted men driving teams, repairing means of transportation, and employed as trainmasters, and in opening roads and building wharves; transportation of funds of the Army; the expenses of sailing public transports on the various rivers, the Gulf of Mexico, and the Atlantic and Pacific oceans; for procuring water, and introducing the same to buildings, at such posts as from their situation require it to be brought from a distance, and for the disposal of sewage and drainage, and for constructing roads and wharves; for the payment of army transportation lawfully due such land-grant railroads as have not received aid in Government bonds (to be adjusted in accordance with the decisions of the Supreme Court in cases decided under such land-grant acts), but in no case shall more than 50 per cent of full amount of service be paid: Provided, That such compensation shall be computed upon the basis of the tariff or lower special rates for like transportation performed for the public at large, and shall be accepted as in full for all demands for such service: Provided further, That in expending the money appropriated by this act a railroad company which has not received aid in bonds of the United States, and which obtained a grant of public land to aid in the construction of its railroad on condition that such railroad should be a post route and military road, subject to the use of the United States for postal, military, naval, and other Government services, and also subject to such regulations as Congress may impose restricting the charge for such Government transportation, having claims against the United States for transportation of troops and munitions of war and military supplies and property over such aided railroads, shall be paid out of the moneys appropriated by the foregoing provision only on the basis of such rate for the transportation of such troops and munitions of war and military supplies and property as the Secretary of War shall deem just and reasonable under the foregoing provision, such rate not to exceed 50 per cent of the compensation for such Government transportation as shall at the time be charged to and paid by private parties to any such company for like and similar transportation; and the amount so fixed to be paid shall be accepted as in full for all demands for such service, $17,500,000.

Mr. TODD. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment:

After the word "service," in line 3, page 21, strike out "$17,500,000" and insert "$10,000,000."

Mr. Chairman, now that the war with Spain is over, the appropriation for transportation in this bill, like that in the one last passed, is very extravagant. It will be recalled that last year we appropriated $44,000,000 for military transportation. I called attention at the time to the fact that this was three times more than could be legitimately expended.

I would thank the chairman of the committee if he will be kind enough to state to the House what amount of the $44,000,000 for transportation already appropriated during the past year has been expended.

Mr. HULL. I do not know. I understand what was necessary, but did not go into what they had done. But I will state to the gentleman that this is for transportation service on the two oceans and the Gulf, which would amount to about $3,000,000; and it would not be safe to cut this amount down below that provided.

Mr. TODD. I wish to state that the railroads have largely withdrawn the special rates, and the Joint Traffic Association have refused to continue the rate which they agreed to give us at the commencement of the war. I have in my hand a letter from the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, under date December 21, 1898, directed to the Commissary-General of the United States Army, in which the Pennsylvania Railroad Company claimed that simply because the Government did not give formally in writing an acceptance of the rates given by the Joint Traffic Association, they were not bound by those rates; and when the Government sent in its check in payment at the rates offered by the railroad, and understood as agreed to, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company refused to accept the check, saying that it was not correct, and the Administration, I am sorry to say, acquiesced in this view, and allowed them and the Joint Traffic Association rates far above what Congress supposed we were paying.

It should also be noted that not only was the rate advanced, but the advance was dated back to cover over six months' business already transacted. It will thus be seen that, excepting where large numbers of troops have been transported in a single body, the full tariff rates have been charged since June 3, 1898, soon after the opening of active hostilities.

The following is the correspondence on this subject:

PENNSYLVANIA COMPANY,
OFFICE OF AUDITOR OF PASSENGER RECEIPTS,
Pittsburg, Pa., December 21, 1898.

DEAR SIR: Referring to yours of the 10th instant, in which we are informed that, effective June 3, 1898, transportation accounts due our companies will be adjusted on the basis of 1½ cents per mile, in accordance with certain alleged authority contained in a circular issued by the Joint Traffic Association, we beg to say that your conclusions, we think, are wrong, principally for the reason that the Joint Traffic Association General Circular No. 26, to which you refer, simply fixed a minimum rate at which members of that association might transport soldiers between points under the jurisdiction of said association, and did not in any manner apply to business between any other points, and we will be glad to have for our information a copy of the communication from the Joint Traffic Association to the War Department tendering rate of 1½ cents per mile, and also a copy of the Government's acceptance of such rate, if such documents exist.

Originally there seems to have been a sort of an understanding that the Government would be willing to pay 1½ cents per mile without question on all business, but, as you must be aware, such proposition was not carried out; in fact, the transportation lines of the country were compelled to submit proposals for the transportation of troops each and every time there was a fairly large body to move, and receive comparatively little for the service. In view of the foregoing we are not authorized to accept less than regular tariff rates upon all business for which bids were not tendered and accepted covering a less rate, except in cases where our party rates apply for 10 or more passengers traveling on a solid ticket.

It is therefore requested that you cause to be prepared, in lieu of the vouchers already forwarded, proper vouchers to conform to the rates that have been furnished you, or in the event of your desiring to pursue the question further, to take up the same direct with Mr. E. A. Ford, general passenger agent of these lines.

An early reply as to your proposed further action will be appreciated, and in the meantime we will hold, subject to your orders, the vouchers which we have received from you erroneously based on 1½ cents per mile.

Yours, truly,

Col. T. E. TRUE,
Quartermaster, U. S. A., Washington, D. C.

J. P. FARLEY,
Auditor Passenger Receipts.

This letter bears the following indorsements:

[First indorsement.]

DEPOT QUARTERMASTER'S OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., December 25, 1898.

Respectfully submitted to the Quartermaster-General of the Army.
The Pennsylvania Railroad Company has advised this office that dating from May 10, 1898, that company will accept a uniform rate of 1½ cents per mile per capita for United States Government transportation over its lines, to apply on local business as well as proportions of through rates from points on foreign lines, this rate to cover transportation of one or more passengers. The Baltimore and Ohio and Chesapeake and Ohio railroad companies have advised this office that from and after December 9, 1898, they will accept a uniform rate of 1½ cents per mile for all transportation between New York, Washington, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Chicago, and intermediate stations on its lines, such rates to apply as proportions of through rates beyond the territory named.

It was proposed to the Pennsylvania Company and Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis Railway Company to make settlement of accounts for all passenger-transportation service rendered since June 3, 1898, embracing east-bound business from Chicago, St. Louis, etc., to points on the Pennsylvania Railroad system, at same rate as that charged by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, which proposition is declined in the within letter, and settlement is claimed at full regular rate, unless in parties of ten or more, when party rate will govern.

Instructions are therefore respectfully requested as to the settlement with the Pennsylvania Company at regular rates, and to the Baltimore and Ohio and Chesapeake and Ohio Railway for service previous to December 9, 1898, on the same basis.

T. E. TRUE,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Quartermaster, U. S. A., Depot Quartermaster.

[Second indorsement.]

WAR DEPARTMENT, QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, December 30, 1898.

Respectfully returned, by direction of the Quartermaster-General, to the depot quartermaster, Washington, D. C.

Paragraph 785, adopted by the Central Passenger Association at its meeting October 12, 1898, reads as follows:

"An interpretation of Joint Traffic Association general circular No. 26 having been requested by certain United States Army quartermasters, it is hereby declared by the lines of the association that the terms of said circular were never intended to apply on movements of individual soldiers, but that the 1½ cent per mile rate was intended to and does only apply to its movement of regiments, battalions, or other large detachments traveling as regular military organizations."

In view of this interpretation of circular No. 26, in the absence of any special agreement to the contrary, settlement will be made at the tariff rates charged the public less deductions on account of land grant for all individual transportation or in parties of less than ten on one transportation request.

This will not affect any of the lines that have agreed to accept the conditions recommended by Mr. Blanchard in circular No. 26.

CHAS. BIRD,
Colonel and Quartermaster, United States Volunteers.

SOME MORE FRAUDS ON THE GOVERNMENT.

I find also that inferior cars, contrary to the quality and size contracted for, were furnished the Government by the railroads, and then a double charge was made for the required service. I quote the following from one of the letters from the War Department to the Pennsylvania Railroad Company as an illustration:

SIR: I inclose herewith an account in favor of your company, in amount $337, in settlement for transportation of one car horses and one car excess baggage, transported from Arlington, Va., to Chattanooga, Tenn., in connection with movement of Fifth Regiment Maryland Volunteers; these vouchers to take the place of those for $454, which are herewith returned for cancellation.

It seems that 12 horses were transported with the regiment, which should only require the use of one car; therefore I am not authorized to pay for use of two cars.

I inclose copy of proposal of your company for the movement of the Fifth Maryland Volunteers, in which it is stated that first-class stock cars were to be provided for transportation of horses; also copy of a letter from Col. R. H. Coale, commanding the regiment, in which he states that the extra car was not furnished by his direct instructions, but was furnished by your company on account of the very inferior car originally supplied.

M. RIEBENACK, Esq.,
Auditor Passenger Receipts, Pennsylvania Railroad Company,
Philadelphia, Pa.

I find also that some railroads attempt to charge full first-class fare for troops, even when in bodies above ten, where the general public are entitled to a reduction. Here is an illustration where the certificate of the commanding officer was necessary to secure fair treatment.

DECEMBER 12, 1898.

SIR: I inclose herewith copy of transportation request No. 94497, issued by you August 13, 1898, for transportation of J. M. Trueblood, 8 recruits, and 2 recruiting officers from Lynchburg, S. C., to Columbia, S. C.

The number of passengers in this case being over ten should be settled for at party rate, which is less than the regular rate, but the rules provide that such parties should travel all on one ticket.

The railroad company claim that the tickets in this case were furnished two or three at a time, and therefore should be paid at the full tariff rate which is charged for less than ten.

Will you please inform me the reason why these men should not have traveled together on one ticket, returning this letter with your reply indorsed thereon.

Very respectfully,

T. E. TRUE,

Lieutenant-Colonel and Quartermaster, U. S. A., Depot Quartermaster.

Lieut. HENRY T. THOMPSON,

Second South Carolina Volunteers.

(Through Adjutant-General United States Army.)

[First indorsement.]

CAMP ONWARD, SAVANNAH, GA., December 20, 1898.

Respectfully returned to Lieut. Col. T. E. True, quartermaster, United States Army, with the statement that the railroad company is mistaken. I was present and saw 11 tickets purchased all at the same time, and the party of 11 persons accompanied me all the way from Lynchburg to Columbia. Respectfully submitted.

HENRY T. THOMPSON,

Lieutenant-Colonel, Second South Carolina Volunteer Infantry.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL AND QUARTERMASTER, U. S. A.

SOME OTHER EXTRAVAGANT CHARGES—$2,500 FREIGHT ON TWO CANNON.

I find that on a shipment of two cannon made October 26, 1898, $2,500 freight was charged, and in addition a charge of $185 above the contract rate. This shipment would require four large cars, or about one-eighth of a train, and the freight on these alone would four times pay for an entire train. I submit the following letter:

DEPOT QUARTERMASTER'S OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., January 4, 1899.

SIR: Inclosed herewith find duplicate bill of lading, No. 500, dated October 26, 1898, from Tampa, Fla., to Key West, for transportation of two guns, 233.340 pounds; shipment en route from Highland Beach to Fort Taylor. The bill of lading bears notation in tariff column as follows, "$2,500" for the shipment, inclusive of unloading from cars at Tampa, Fla., and delivery at Fort Taylor. I also attach correspondence from the depot quartermaster at Tampa, and E. J. Blair, first lieutenant, Third Texas Volunteers. You will note that Mr. Blair states that $185 was paid by your order for the cost of transfer of property on barge and scow to Fort Taylor.

Will you please advise, with return of all inclosures, if the rate of $2,500 noted on bill of lading does not include all charges to be paid by the United States Government for the delivery of guns at Fort Taylor?

Very respectfully,

DEPOT QUARTERMASTER, UNITED STATES ARMY,
New York.

While on this subject of railroad transportation I desire to refer to the fact that whenever I have had the honor to address Congress or to offer amendments for the protection of the public from the avarice of trusts, gentlemen on the opposite side, who are the agents and attorneys of these trusts, have endeavored by disorder, ridicule, or sneers to prevent a fair hearing; and "points of order" would be raised, it being well understood that whatever is opposed to the onward march of the trusts is subject to a "point of order." I always have considered it an honor to be opposed by such influences, and believe that he whose work here has not earned the antagonism of the opposition has not merited the approval of his conscience or the public.

An instance of this occurred when the postal appropriation bill was before us on January 20, when I moved to recommit the bill with an amendment striking out an appropriation for "rental" of postal cars of $4,204,500, which had been granted in addition to rates most extravagant. This was ruled out by the Speaker as "out of order," in clear violation of the rules of Congress and every recognized rule of parliamentary law. (See CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, January 20, 1899, pages 948-949.) In the discussion I quoted from the "Committee on 1-cent letter postage of the National Board of Trade," who in their last annual report say that "if we would only pay a fair compensation to the railroads for transportation of mails we could have 1-cent letter rates, without any deficit, whereas we now have a deficit at the 2-cent rate." The arguments and the high authorities which I quoted exasperated the railroads, and their friends, by a strict party vote, succeeded in eliminating part of my remarks from the current permanent RECORD, which I now again submit, leaving the nation to pass verdict.

The following was struck out:

"Mr. TODD. I ask unanimous consent that my amendment may be considered, and desire to call attention to what appears to me a monstrous fraud upon the people.

"As this bill now stands you are appropriating $4,204,500 in this clause for absolutely nothing! Why should we pay even a single dollar for the "rental" of cars, when the evidence from the highest authorities shows that we are already paying the railroads for transportation of mails ten times as high a rate as the express companies pay for a similar service? And when we recall the sworn evidence before investigating committees of the fraudulent "padding" of the mails by the railroads during the month when they are weighed, it will be seen that, by doubling the actual weight during special weighing days, the railroads are already receiving from the Government twenty times as high compensation as they get from express companies on the same trains.

"As statements of this nature seem incredible in a civilized country, I refer to the sworn evidence before a Senate investigating committee (Senate Document No. 177, Fifty-fourth Congress, second session, entitled 'Weighing the mails upon the Seaboard Air Line'). Extracts from this can be found on pages 2991, 2992, volume 31, of CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, part 3, March 19, 1898.

"I also again call attention to the official report of the National Board of Trade, composed of the foremost business men of the country, who, after referring to the extravagant rates which the railroads receive for transportation (see CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of yesterday, page 917), say:

Whereas the Department now pays, in addition to the above rates, an extra charge averaging $3,250 each year for the use of each special mail car, notwithstanding the fact that these cars cost only from $2,500 to $4,000 each to construct, and notwithstanding the fact that the additional cost to the railroads in using these cars over the ordinary apartment cars, which they otherwise would use, consists mainly in hauling a slightly heavier weight:

Resolved, That the National Board of Trade, without desiring to cast any reflection upon the great railroad interests of the country, believe that the above facts demonstrate that the existing law, which fixes the average rate of hauling mail matter at $40 per ton per 100 miles, requires radical modification, and they respectfully petition Congress to accurately ascertain how many times greater is the actual cost to the railroads of hauling a ton of mail matter than the cost of hauling a ton of miscellaneous freight, and then to revise the rate upon such a basis as will be equitable to both the Government and the railroads, the effect of which would be to largely decrease the deficit and bring us nearer to our desired end of securing improved service and 1-cent letter postage, believing that if the savings thereby effected are not sufficient to give us, in the near future, general 1-cent letter postage, they might warrant the immediate adoption of 1-cent local letter postage.

"Mr. Speaker, we have 730 special postal cars, for the 'rental' of which we are asked to pay this vast sum annually, which makes an average annual rental of $5,745 per car, which the National Board of Trade say cost but $2,500 to $4,000, according to size, etc., to build, while the life of a car is over ten years.

"Mr. Speaker, this appropriation is too monstrous to need further comment, and I trust my amendment may be adopted."

SHAM DISCUSSIONS.

Another method by which dishonest appropriations are often passed is by centering interest in the discussion upon supposed conditions which are contrary to fact. Thus, only recently, the honorable chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs lead the fight for extravagant and increased rates for armor for our battle ships under the pretense and assumption that the Krupp process was to be used; that it cost more; that it was better; that the process was a secret one. The lengthy debate which he succeeded in getting the House into, to the exclusion of more legitimate debate, was a sham in fact, at least.

Having secured from the Patent Office complete specifications of the Krupp (German) as well as the Harvey (American), I was able to clearly show that every one of his contentions was without foundation. The honorable gentleman from Maine (Mr. BOUTWELL), not being able to meet my facts, sought to ridicule them by referring in a sarcastic manner to the gentleman from Michigan as the "gentleman from somewhere." His remarks, owing to the confusion, I did not hear at the time or I should have replied; I now desire to thank him for his candor in admitting that the gentleman from Michigan is from "somewhere," but would suggest to him that I am not to blame because the gentleman from Maine is "nowhere." [Laughter.]

Mr. Chairman, when speaking recently in this House upon the tendency toward imperialism in our country, I referred to the fact that all of our great political parties were originally founded on patriotic principles, and quoted some statements interesting to me, of Judge Albert Williams, of Ionia, Mich., now 93 years of age, the sole surviving member of the famous "committee of sixteen," who drafted the platform of the convention where the Republican party was born and christened July 6, 1854, "under the oaks" at Jackson, Mich. I then stated I would print as an appendix to my remarks a brief history of this memorable occasion, as written by Judge Williams, being Chapter X of Fox's History of Political Parties. Being prevented from doing so at the time and having received urgent calls for it recently, I submit it herewith as a chapter in history that should be preserved and accessible to all.

I wish to call attention to the fact that this platform demanded that the rights of the people should be protected by the enactment of a general railroad law, equitable to all, also holding that the God-given rights of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness were not to be circumscribed by time, nationality, or race. I have already called attention to the fact that Judge Williams has, during the last two years, actively opposed the Republican party, his "prodigal son," as he expressed it, since "it went to St. Louis to take the gold cure."

The following is the history:

CHAPTER X.—ADVENT OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY—ITS CAUSE, WHAT IT HAS ACCOMPLISHED—EFFECT UPON THE NATION.

The advent of the Republican party upon the nation's stage was a long stride in the interest of civilization. No other one, from that identified with "the manger" to this "under the oaks," equals it in the respect indicated. That at Philadelphia, July 4, 1776, was in the interest of nationality, but that at Jackson, July 6, 1854, was in the interest of individuality. Hence the former contented itself with sundering foreign bonds, but the latter in sundering personal bonds, these being the most galling of all bonds. And, therefore, it was that the consummation of the former relieved no man from his shackles, but that the latter struck them from all. And to day, as we survey our nation, we see it, not as in its first few decades, half free and half slave, but all free and equal before God and before Government, each feeling his feet secure on the pedestal made therefor by the great Creator of all. And that—what a stride in civilization! Who can describe it? What brush paint it? What mind comprehend it? Verily, we can but look upon and wonder at it, and look and wonder still, and especially those yet alive who, so as to express it, came out of that land of bondage and passed through the Red Sea of conflict into this broad one of promise.

And what led up to it? What schooled men for it? What hastened it? Let us see. It is the nature of wrong to be ever aggressive and ever busy in its accursed work, never voluntarily yielding an advantage gained. And this was ever instinctively true of the slave power in this country, till it was finally crushed out forever. Its history proves it. Slavery, early planted in our soil, had grown with the growth and strengthened with the strength of the people. Aroused-eyed and wickedly unscrupulous and grasping, it quickly saw and promptly improved every vantage ground, till it became so strong and emboldened it seized the reins of government, fashioned public affairs, and seated liberty in a corner. As is ever true of the rise of wrongs, its whole pathway was marked with intimidation, dishonor, and crime. It gained recognition in the colonies. It secured toleration in the Constitution. It acquired vast foreign territories to be cursed by its cloven feet, some of them by purchase and others by war on a sister republic. It struck down the right of petition to Congress.

It robbed the mails of antislavery papers and letters. It prevented free speech and muzzled the press. It entered the pulpit and dictated as to how the gospel should be preached. It made it unsafe for Northern people to visit its Territories, it often brutally treating some of them and murdering still others. It caned Sumner in the Capitol of the nation. It made frequent attempts to buy or steal Cuba. It used our ships of war to return to bondage its fugitive slaves. It enacted the compromise measures of 1850, including the infamous fugitive-slave law. It compelled all great political parties to kneel at its altar and do it homage. It avowed its purpose to revive the infamous African slave trade. It secured the admission of Missouri as a slave State into the Union on the solemn compromise that no more slaves should be admitted, embracing any Territory north of latitude 36° 30'. This compromise, by the passage of the Kansas-Nebraska act, it criminally repealed May 30, 1854, and thereby opened those Territories to slavery. These aggressions constituted a long train of abuses and the excitement, pending the passage of this last act, was intense throughout the country, and the news of its passage was received with feelings too deep and solemn for utterance or clamor, strong men meeting and passing one another as though they had heard instead that the dead body of Liberty was lying in state in the national Capitol.

It was this last perfidy that filled the Northern cup of humiliation and forbearance to overflowing, the slave power then assuming to be "monarch of all." Tame submission or absolute resistance was the alternative. The freemen of Michigan, rising above all former party ties, chose the latter, for the time for decision and action had come. Therefore a call for a mass convention, to assemble at Jackson, Mich., July 6, 1854, at 1 o'clock p. m., was extensively circulated in the State and signed by more than 10,000 electors, the convention to be composed of "all our fellow-citizens, without reference to former political associations, who think the time has arrived for union at the North to protect liberty from being overthrown and dethroned," and "to take such measures as shall be thought best to concentrate the popular sentiment of this State against the aggressions of the slave power."

The time came; the convention assembled, numbering some 5,000 freemen; it was called to order at the city hall; the call was read and the convention temporarily organized by calling Judge Levi Baxter, of Hillsdale, to the chair and appointing Jeremiah Van Rensselaer, of Detroit, secretary. A committee, composed of two from each Congressional district, was appointed by the chair to select permanent officers of the convention, viz: Samuel Barstow, Wayne; C. H. Van Clee, Washtenaw; L. F. Christy, Monroe; G. W. Burchard, Hillsdale; Lovell Moore, Kent; James W. Hill, Calhoun; Henry W. Lord, Oakland, and Newell Avery, St. Clair.

The city hall being wholly inadequate to contain the convention, it adjourned to a beautiful oak grove adjacent to Jackson.

Then, on motion, a committee of sixteen, composed of four from each Congressional district, was chosen to draw up and report to the convention a platform of principles for their action, consisting of:

First district, Jacob M. Howard, Wayne; Austin Blair, Jackson; Donald McIntyre, Washtenaw, and John Hillsden, Wayne.

Second district, Charles Noble, Monroe; Alfred H. Metcalf, St. Joseph; John W. Turner, Branch, and Levi Baxter, Hillsdale.

Third district, Marsh Giddings, Kalamazoo; Erastus Hussey, Calhoun, Albert Williams, Ionia, and John McKinney, Van Buren.

Fourth district, Charles Draper, J. E. Simmonds, Z. B. Knight, each Oakland, and M. L. Higgins, Genesee.

While the committee on platform was absent, which was some considerable time, the convention was addressed by Hon. K. S. Bingham, Hon. Z. Chandler, Gen. William T. Howell, Rev. C. C. Foote, Rev. James McBride, Rev. A. St. Clair, Rev. Mr. Foster, and Lewis Clarke, the latter then being a fugitive slave, whose appearance upon the stand created great excitement. He was white as most men, had an honest, open countenance, and was said to be the original George Harris of Uncle Tom's Cabin.

The committee on platform withdrew from convention to a point some 15 or 20 rods from it in a south or southerly direction, in the same grove. The day was beautiful, and that temple of nature was then decked in all its most fascinating attire, as if in anticipation and approval of the pure and noble work then and there to be done. Mr. Howard was at once elected chairman, and soon thereafter submitted an elaborate draft of a platform, written by him. Then came suggestions of names from several members of the committee, that of "Republican" (with no prefix or suffix, as several were proposed) being finally heartily adopted.

The committee fully and keenly realized that a great and grave responsibility rested upon them and deliberated accordingly. So much time did they take therefor that several gentlemen from the convention called to learn when they would be ready to report, Hon. Mr. Chandler and Joseph Warren, editor and part owner of Detroit Tribune, being of them.

Finally, and late in the afternoon, the platform and name being agreed upon, the committee, through their chairman, Mr. Howard, made their report to the convention, he reading it with much spirit and emphasis, it being received with much enthusiasm and adopted with thunderous tone; and, verily, in the light of subsequent events, how does that platform read to-day, but as the encouraging and lofty inspiration of holy prophecy? Read it. Immediately thereafter the platform and action thereon by the convention being eminently satisfactory to the committee of sixteen, appointed at the Kalamazoo Free Democratic Mass Convention, June 21, of that year, with all due authority for such purpose, came upon the stage and, through their chairman, Hon. I. P. Christy, withdrew their organization and State ticket made at Jackson February 22 preceding, which withdrawal, it being avowedly done in the interest of this Jackson convention, was received with rapturous delight and applause.

The committee on nominations held its meeting in the court-house early in the evening, and they taking considerable time, the convention, among other things, listened to speeches made by Hon. Austin Blair, H. K. Clarke, esq., Hon. I. P. Christy, Dr. Curtis, and Mr. Steele, at which time the committee on nominations came in with its report, the convention excitedly rising to its feet to hear it, and when heard adopting it with cheers and shouts and all kinds of demonstrations of approbation, satisfaction, and joy, the ticket being as follows:

Governor, Kinsley S. Bingham, Livingstone; Lieutenant-governor, George A. Coe, Branch; secretary of state, John McKinney, Van Buren; state treasurer, Silas M. Holmes, Wayne; attorney-general, Jacob N. Howard, Wayne; auditor-general, Whitney Jones, Ingham; commissioner of land office, Seymour B. Treadwell, Jackson; superintendent of public instruction, Ira Mayhew, Monroe; member of board of education, John B. Kellogg, Allegan (to fill vacancy); Hiram M. Miller, Saginaw, Messrs. Bingham, Holmes, and Treadwell having been on the Free Democratic ticket that was withdrawn, as stated, for the same offices, respectively.

The business of the convention being thus completed, it then being well toward midnight, it adjourned without day, its action, as indicated, wholly marked out by themselves in all respects, being characterized by originality, perfect harmony, purity of motives, honorable conduct, admirable courage, devotion to the right, lofty patriotism, and hatred of all wrong, the convention thereby commending itself with such force to the electors of other States of similar views and purposes that they became an example to them, both as to platform and name, which they, in one State after another, rapidly and earnestly adopted, they all, two years later, largely under Michigan's lead, rising into a national Republican party of grand proportions as well.

But no history of the Jackson convention would be complete did it not give Joseph Warren, of Detroit, as compared with others there, superlative credit for it; he working long and vigilantly to induce it; all correspondence with Mr. Greeley being carried on by him, though only some four letters passed between them. He, as did Mr. Greeley, knew the Whig party had survived its usefulness, and should now, under some new name and organization, and united again with others, be put to some important and patriotic work again. The great opportunity had come, and wisely was it improved. And may Joseph Warren's name ever shine brightly amidst those of his immortal contemporaries.

Indeed, for the State, nation, and themselves, as well as for the highest height of civilization, they builded at Jackson on that memorable day better than they knew, and to-day the great American people are fortunately basking in the fruition of the work then and there begun, each, so to express it, his own lord and master, with none to molest or make afraid, slavery being wiped out forever and the Union saved. But of those immortal builders, assembled there "under the oaks" more than forty years ago, nearly all are now gone hence; but, nevertheless, we may rest assured that their shades will ever look down and watch over the State and nation they loved and served so well, while the great Republican party, standing strong and grand, has none to fear, unless it be God and enemies within.

PLATFORM OF REPUBLICAN PRINCIPLES AS ADOPTED AT JACKSON, MICH., JULY 6, 1854.

The committee on resolutions, through the chair, Hon. Jacob M. Howard, reported the following:

The freemen of Michigan assembled in convention in pursuance of a spontaneous call, emanating from various parts of the State, to consider upon the measures which duty demands of us as citizens of a free State to take in reference to late acts of Congress on the subject of slavery and its anticipated farther extension, do

Resolved, That the institution of slavery, except in punishment of crime, is a great moral, social, and political evil; that it was so regarded by the fathers of the Republic, the founders and best friends of the Union, by the heroes and sages of the Revolution who contemplated and intended its gradual and peaceful extinction, as an element hostile to the liberties for which they toiled; that its history in the United States, the experience of men best acquainted with its workings, the dispassionate confession of those who are interested in it; its tendency to relax the vigor of industry and enterprise inherent in the white man; the very surface of the earth where it subsists; the vices and immoralities which are its natural growth; the stringent police, often wanting in humanity and speaking to the sentiments of every generous heart, which it demands; the danger it has already wrought, and the future danger which it portends to the security of the Union and our constitutional liberties—all incontestably prove it to be such evil. Surely that institution is not to be strengthened or encouraged, against which Washington, the calmest and wisest of our nation, bore unequivocal testimony; to which Jefferson, filled with a love of liberty, exclaimed: "Can the liberties of a nation be ever thought secure when we have removed their only firm basis, a conviction in the minds of the people that their liberties are the gift of God."

Resolved, That slavery is a violation of the rights of man as man; that the law of nature, which is the law of liberty, gives to no man rights superior to those of another; that God and nature have secured to each individual the inalienable right of equality, any violation of which must be the result of superior force; and that slavery, therefore, is perpetual war upon its victims; that whether we regard the institution as first originating in captures made in war, or the subjection of the debtor as the slave of his creditor, or the forcible seizure and sale of children by their parents or subjects by their king, and whether it be viewed in this country as a "necessary evil" or otherwise, we find it to be, like imprisonment for debt, but a relic of barbarism as well as an element of weakness in the midst of the state, inviting the attack of external enemies, and ceaseless cause of internal apprehension and alarm. Such are the lessons taught us, not only by the histories of other commonwealths, but by that of our own beloved country.

Resolved, That in view of the necessity of battling for the first principles of the republican government and against the schemes of aristocracy the most revolting and oppressive with which the earth was ever cursed or more debased, we will cooperate and be known as Republicans until after the contest be determined.

Resolved, That we earnestly recommend the calling of a general convention of the free States, and such of the slave-holding States, or portions thereof, as may desire to be there represented, with a view to the adoption of other more extended and effectual measures in resistance to the encroachments of slavery; and that a committee of five persons be appointed to correspond with our friends in other States on the subject.

Resolved, That in our opinion the commercial wants require the enactment of a general railroad law, which, while it shall secure the investment and encourage the enterprise of stockholders, shall also guard and protect the rights of the public and of individuals, and that the preparation of such a measure requires the first talents of the State.

After reading this patriotic declaration of principles, is it to be wondered at that those who founded the Republican party, seeing that corporate greed had seized its control for the purpose of destroying its splendid early history, should be forced to find another political home where they could still serve the cause of human liberty?

I am reminded in this history that all great political parties have been formed by a union, or, as it is popularly called, a "fusion," of various parties or elements holding like views on great questions. The Republican party was born of "fusion" with the "Free Democratic" party born at Kalamazoo, Mich., a few months preceding. Jefferson was twice elected President on a "Democratic-Republican" ticket. Neither the Republican party in 1854 nor the Democratic-Republican party in 1796 were successful in their first campaign, but in the year 1800, in their second campaign, the Democratic-Republicans won.

In the evolution of great principles as applied to nations history repeats itself. In 1896 three great political parties formed a political union to restore Democratic-Republican principles in our Republic. A splendid battle was fought by the champions of human liberty, under the great leader William J. Bryan, against corporate greed, but we lost, as did Jefferson just a century before.

Now, we look for the bright fulfillment of the promise of the past and the completion of the cycle of the century, when, in the year 1900, liberty, truth, and justice may again be triumphant, and history shall inscribe the names of our four greatest Presidents, Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln, and Bryan! [Applause.]

Mr. MAXWELL. I move that the gentleman's time be extended five minutes.

Mr. HULL. I object.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. TODD].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk, proceeding with the reading of the bill, read as follows:

Construction and repair of hospitals: For construction and repair of hospitals at military posts already established and occupied, including the extra duty pay of enlisted men employed on the same, and including also all expenditures for construction and repairs required at the Army and Navy Hospital at Hot Springs, Ark., except quarters for the officers, $50,000.

Mr. MARSH. Mr. Chairman, I send to the desk an amendment to the last clause, which I am authorized to do by instructions from the Military Affairs Committee.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 32, page 21, strike out the word "fifty" and insert the word "seventy-five."

At the end of line 23, add the following: "Provided, That $25,000 of the foregoing amount be expended in the construction of an addition to the Army and Navy Hospital at Hot Springs, Ark., making thereby a new ward to accommodate fifty beds."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk, proceeding with the reading of the bill, read as follows:

For purchase and repair of instruments, to be issued to officers of the Corps of Engineers and to officers detailed and on duty as acting engineer officers, for use on public works and surveys, $3,000.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I send to the Clerk's desk an amendment to follow this as a separate paragraph.

The Clerk read as follows:

For pontoon trains, trenching tools, instruments, and drawing materials, $25,000; surveys and surveyor draftsmen, photographers and clerks, engineer officers on the staff of division, corps, and department commanders, $35,000.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I am authorized by the committee to offer this amendment, and it is in response to a request from the Chief of Engineers, submitted February 16 and indorsed by the Secretary of War, saying that these supplemental estimates were submitted to Congress on the 26th ultimo, and they were not before the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk, proceeding with the reading of the bill, read as follows:

Library of the United States Engineer School: For purchase and binding of professional works of recent date treating of military and civil engineering and kindred scientific subjects, $500.

Total for Engineer Department, $10,000.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, the "ten" should be stricken out in line 17 and "sixty" inserted, because we have added $50,000 to the Engineer Department.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, to come in immediately after the last paragraph on page 23, and I ask the Clerk to report the same.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The amendment was read, as follows:

Add after the last paragraph on page 23 the following:

"That the number of major-generals in the United States Army is hereby increased to four."

That the President is hereby authorized to fill the original vacancy created by this act in the grade of major-general by the appointment of a volunteer officer who held the rank of major-general of volunteers and participated in the action against the enemy at Santiago de Cuba, but who did not hold a commission in the Regular Army of the United States: Provided, That upon the death, resignation, or retirement of said major-general so appointed by the President under and by authority of this act the number of major-generals in the Army shall not exceed the number now or hereafter provided by law.

Mr. HAY rose.

Mr. HULL. I raise the point of order, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. SULZER. Before the point of order is raised, I desire to say a word. I shall be very brief, and I trust the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HULL] will listen to what I say.

The CHAIRMAN. One moment. Complaint has been made to the Chair frequently this morning that there has been so much confusion that gentlemen interested in this bill can not proceed with it. The Chair trusts that all gentlemen desiring to engage in conversation will retire to the cloakroom.

Mr. SULZER. This amendment, Mr. Chairman, simply increases the number of major-generals by one, and the place so created is intended for that grand old soldier, Gen. JOSEPH WHEELER. It is only intended as a fitting recognition of his gallant services. When he dies the office will cease to exist. It will die with him.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I made the point of order.

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Chairman, I have the floor. I hope the gentleman will not interrupt me. I hope he will not be so ungallant and so unpatriotic as to insist on the technical point of order.

Mr. HULL. But a point of order takes anybody off the floor.

Mr. SULZER. That depends on the Chairman.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I desire to state that I rose for the purpose of reserving a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. HAY] that the gentleman in charge of the bill made the point of order. This is a question which the Chair does not care to hear debate upon.

Mr. SULZER. But, Mr. Chairman, I desire to be heard for a few minutes. I hope the Chair will hear both sides before deciding the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair does not desire to hear any debate.

Mr. SULZER. Then, Mr. Chairman, I desire to debate the point of order. I have a right to do that. It is only fair that you permit me to do so. Perhaps the Chair might not decide against me after the Chair hears what I have to say.

I believe nine-tenths of the American people know that General WHEELER was the real hero at Santiago. I believe they wish to see his ambition gratified in being made a major-general in the Regular Army. General WHEELER would rather hold that office than his seat in Congress. Let us gratify his ardent wish.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair desires to say to the gentleman from New York that this amendment is clearly out of order, and the Chair has so ruled. The Clerk will read.

Mr. SULZER. Does the Chair deny me the right to be heard on the point of order?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair does. [Laughter.]

Mr. SULZER. That is characteristic of the Chair. I simply desired to make a comparison between—

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is not in order.

Mr. SULZER. I will just so soon as I can get in order.

The Clerk read as follows:

ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT.

Ordinance service: For current expenses of the ordinance service required to defray the current expenses at the arsenals; of receiving stores and issuing arms and other ordinance supplies; of police and office duties; of rents, tolls, fuel, and lights; of stationery and office furniture; of tools and instruments for use; incidental expenses of the ordinance service and those attending practical trials and tests of ordinance, small arms, and other ordinance supplies, including payment for mechanical labor in the office of the Chief of Ordinance, $225,000.

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Chairman, I offered that amendment—

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. SULZER. I move to strike out the last word. Mr. Chairman, I offered that amendment in all sincerity and in all seriousness. It is similar to the one which was offered the other day to the naval appropriation bill by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Moody] in regard to Admiral Dewey. I am glad that no Democrat then objected to making the gallant Dewey an admiral. I thought no Republican would object to making WHEELER a major-general.

Mr. HULL. I have given notice already that I would raise a point of order on all debate not affecting this bill. I know what my friend wants to say, and I am reluctant to interrupt him; but he must know that he is out of order.

Mr. SULZER. I have the floor, and I trust the gentleman will not abridge my right to say a few words for the hero of Santiago—Gen. JOSEPH WHEELER. He will get along a great deal faster with his bill if he gives me an opportunity to speak a moment. I am a member of the committee, and I know when I am out of order just as well as he does.

Mr. HULL. I must insist on my point of order against my friend, as I will against every other man who undertakes to indulge in debate which is not in order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York of course understands well—

Mr. SULZER. I think I am in order. I will try to confine myself to the provision of the bill under consideration. I think I have a right to say a few words in regard to my amendment. If you will leave me alone for a few moments, you will get along faster.

Mr. GAINES. What is the point of order?

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is that the gentleman was not confining himself to the amendment which he offered, which was to strike out the last word.

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Chairman, I was very glad, as I was saying a few moments ago, that no Democrat on our side of the House raised the point of order against the amendment making Admiral Dewey a full-fledged American admiral. He deserved it, and I think he ought to get it. So I think Gen. JOSEPH WHEELER should be made a major-general in the Regular Army. He deserves it.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York—

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Chairman, I desire now—

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York will please obey the rules of the committee.

Mr. SULZER. I am endeavoring to do that. I will get along all right if you will not interrupt me.

A MEMBER. You are pretty unsuccessful.

Mr. SULZER. But how can I obey the rules when the gentleman from Iowa gets up every moment and tries to take me off my feet and the Chair is doing all he possibly can to help the gentleman from Iowa? [Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York is out of order.

Mr. SULZER. I regret that anyone here should object to making General WHEELER a major-general. No soldier in the Spanish-American war did more or deserves more than he. My amendment should be adopted unanimously.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair desires to state to the gentleman—

Mr. SULZER. I am very glad, however, that the objection does not come from a Democrat, but from the gentleman from Iowa. We will have some more to say on this subject at some future time.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair desires to state to the gentleman from New York that, having repeatedly called the gentleman's attention to the rules, the Chair must ask the aid of the Sergeant-at-Arms if the gentleman does not obey them.

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Chairman, I shall not transgress the rules any more than the gentleman in the chair. Now, in regard to this section I desire to say—

Mr. HENDERSON. Regular order.

Mr. SULZER. I am discussing this section. This is no time for the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HENDERSON] to put in his oar by calling "Regular order!" This section is subject to the same point of order as the chairman of the committee made against my amendment. I want to say that this bill from beginning to end is full of inconsistencies. I can point out in almost every section of the bill provisions that are subject to a point of order. The bill is full of new legislation. In fact, we are legislating in the air. What is the use of making appropriations for the Army before we know what kind of an army we are going to have?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will confine himself to the amendment that is under consideration.

Mr. SULZER. I am confining myself to it. I know you do not care to hear one talk like that, but I am telling the truth about it. I now make the point of order that the section under consideration contains new legislation, and, under Rule XXI, should be stricken out.

This bill from beginning to end is entirely contrary to the rules of this House; and no one knows it better than the chairman. He is getting it through; and we are not objecting. But when one of us endeavors to amend the bill by putting in a provision that will do justice to one of the greatest heroes of the Republic—Gen. JOSEPH WHEELER—the chairman of the committee, forsooth, objects. How petty it all seems. But let me say to the gentleman from Iowa the Senate will do justice to his bill and to General WHEELER, just as it is now doing heroic justice to the gentleman's Army bill. When it comes back, he will not know it.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will confine himself to his point of order.

Mr. SULZER. Now, I object to this provision because it is new legislation, and I make that point of order.

Mr. HULL. Now let the Chair rule on the point of order raised by the gentleman from New York. I call for a ruling.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order raised by the gentleman from New York is overruled.

The Clerk read as follows:

Ordnance, ordnance stores, and supplies: For manufacture of metallic ammunition for small arms and ammunition for reloading cartridges, including the cost of targets and material for target practice, ammunition for burials at the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers and its several branches, including National Soldiers' Home in Washington, D. C., and marksmen's medals and insignia for all arms of the service, including machinery, tools, and fixtures for their manufacture at the arsenals, $500,000.

Mr. STEELE. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer the amendment I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Insert, after line 14, page 24, the words:

"Provided, That the Chief of Ordnance is authorized to issue such obsolete or condemned ordnance as may be needed for ornamental purposes for the Homes for Disabled Volunteers, the Homes to pay the expense of transportation and other expenses necessary."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, reserving the point of order, I would like to ask if there is not already a provision of law which authorizes this to be done?

Mr. STEELE. There is a provision of law that has reference alone to the guns which have been condemned. But there are some old gun carriages that have been condemned and are obsolete that are being broken up and thrown into the scrap heap at the armories. It is claimed at the Ordnance Department that they may not issue the carriages under the law, but they may issue guns.

I ask a vote on the amendment.

The amendment was considered, and agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For overhauling, cleaning, and preserving new ordnance on hand at the arsenals and depots, $50,000.

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word for the purpose of asking an explanation from the chairman of the committee with reference to this particular paragraph.

Mr. HULL. What is the point the gentleman makes?

Mr. SULZER. I would like to know as to the amount appropriated here. It seems to be extravagant. I make a point of order against it.

Mr. HULL. This simply provides a fund for the overhauling, cleaning, and the care of guns.

Mr. SULZER. How much was appropriated last year for this purpose?

Mr. HULL. Not so much as this. But the gentleman must remember that we have a great addition to our guns now.

Mr. SULZER. If my memory serves me right, it was not nearly so much last year. Can the gentleman state about what the appropriation was in the last appropriation bill?

Mr. HULL. I can not state exactly. My recollection is about $10,000, though I would have to look into the matter.

Mr. SULZER. And this appropriates $50,000? Quite a little difference, and a decided bit of new legislation.

Mr. HULL. Yes. If the gentleman thinks it is too much, of course he can offer an amendment to reduce it.

Mr. SULZER. I do think it is too much, and the gentleman seems to be wholly unable to justify it.

I move to strike out the words "fifty thousand," and insert "twenty-five thousand" instead. I think that is enough for this purpose at this time, especially when we do not seem to have money for other purposes a great deal more important and necessary.

Mr. HULL. I hope it will not be adopted. We need the full amount.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment proposed by the gentleman from New York.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out in line 25, on page 24, the word "fifty" and insert "twenty-five;" so that it will read "twenty-five thousand dollars."

Mr. HULL. I would only say, in answer to the remarks of the gentleman from New York, that the Department of Ordnance thinks it will be necessary to make this appropriation, and that the full amount is needed. That is the information we received in response to inquiries addressed to the Department.

Mr. SULZER. If the appropriations were left to the several Departments of the Government on their estimates, there would not be a dollar left in the Treasury. They would take every dollar they could get if we followed their estimates.

To-day they want $50,000 to clean old guns with brass mountings. Last year they only asked for five or ten thousand dollars. Next year they will ask for $300,000. In my judgment $25,000 is ample. It is all that is needed this year, and I hope the amendment will prevail.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I only wish to say that I was present at the hearings on this particular item of the bill, and I think the $50,000 appropriated is only a reasonable sum. I am, as much as anybody, for economical appropriations; but it seems to me that enough ought to be provided for the various Departments of the Government to carry on properly the work that they have in hand. I believe the amount appropriated here is not more than sufficient.

The question being taken on the amendment proposed by Mr. SULZER, it was rejected.

Mr. STEELE. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to recur to the paragraph to which I offered an amendment a few moments ago for the purpose of inserting after the word "ordnance" the additional words "gun carriages and ordnance stores."

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to recurring to the paragraph suggested by the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

The amendment proposed by Mr. STEELE was adopted.

The Clerk read as follows:

For the purchase of machinery, tools, fixtures, and for the installation of plant, for the manufacture of small arms at the armory shops, Rock Island Arsenal, available until expended, $350,000.

Mr. GILLET of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I should like to ask the chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs what effect that appropriation for Rock Island is to have upon the manufacture of arms at Springfield?

Mr. HULL. No effect at all. It is expected to run the Springfield Arsenal at its full capacity.

Mr. GAINES. I did not hear the reply of the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. HULL. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GILLET] asked what effect this would have on the armory at Springfield, and I say it will have no effect at all; that we expect to run the armory at Springfield at its full capacity. We have given the armory at Springfield $400,000 more than we ever gave it before, so that it can run to its full capacity, day and night.

Mr. GAINES. Now, will the gentleman give us the reason why he thinks the Government of the United States should begin the manufacture of arms at Rock Island? I know he has some good reason, and I should like to have it.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, it has been urged by the War Department for a good many years. Some years ago Congress appropriated money to put up buildings at Rock Island for the purpose of manufacturing small arms; but before the war broke out, with the Army at 25,000 men and with Congress believing that we never would have a war, we were going along at a very moderate pace in the manufacture of arms. Even at Springfield we were not running to the full capacity, having only one shift of men, as I remember.

Now, with the different States clamoring for the arming of the State guards or militia with the best arm that is made, in the place of an obsolete weapon, the committee believe that we should manufacture them in sufficient quantities, not only to supply the Regular Army, but gradually to arm the State troops with the best arm that can be had, so that when they go into active service, they shall be familiar with the gun that they ought to use in order to be on an equality with the soldiers opposing them.

Mr. GAINES. Why does the gentleman urge that the Government of the United States as such should manufacture these arms, instead of getting them from private individuals?

Mr. HULL. Why, Mr. Chairman, the policy of the Government has been settled for a great many years, not only to manufacture our small arms, but to manufacture our cannon, and we get better guns at less than what they would cost us if we had to buy them.

Mr. GAINES. Mr. Chairman, a point of order that the committee is in disorder. I could not hear the gentleman's last answer, and I desire to hear it.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee will be in order.

Mr. HULL. I say the policy of the Government has been settled for a great many years, not only to make our small arms, but to manufacture our cannon as well, and we have had better results from it than you could possibly have by going into the market and depending on private concerns to make the gun. The Government has adopted what is called the Krag-Jørgensen and renamed it the United States service rifle. The patents belong to the Government, and we can manufacture them for much less than we could buy them from private individuals, and we make a better gun, both as to the small arms and as to the cannon.

Mr. GRIFFIN. And they are absolutely uniform.

Mr. HULL. And as my friend suggests, they are absolutely uniform.

Mr. GAINES. You are satisfied of the wisdom of that policy?

Mr. HULL. I am satisfied of it.

Mr. GAINES. Now, let me suggest to the gentleman, before he leaves the floor, that I should like to have him give me his reasons, if he has any, if the Government can manufacture its own guns cheaper and better than private individuals have done it, why it is that the Government of the United States should not erect an armor-plate plant and make its own armor plate?

Mr. HULL. There is no parallel between the two, and I do not wish to take the time of the committee to discuss that matter. It is not before us.

Mr. GAINES. Is not armor plate a war supply?

Mr. HULL. The gentleman has a right to his opinion on that subject, as has every other man. This matter of the manufacture of small arms and cannon is the settled policy of the Government, and that is all that is before the committee.

Mr. GAINES. You have such good judgment about matters of that kind that I wanted to get your judgment on the other matter.

Mr. HULL. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. GAINES. I want to say that I heartily indorse the proposition as suggested.

Mr. GILLET of Massachusetts. I would like to ask the gentleman a little further question. As I remember, it was stated that $75,000 would double the plant at Springfield. Now, how much is it expected that you can turn out with this $350,000 at Rock Island?

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, the proposition was to appropriate $150,000 for buildings at Springfield. The buildings would give room for machinery enough to double the capacity, but it was thought at that time that the machinery would cost more than the buildings. So that the appropriation would not double the capacity at Springfield. It would only provide buildings in which this machinery could be placed for doubling the capacity.

Mr. GILLET of Massachusetts. I think the gentleman is mistaken in that.

Mr. HULL. I think it is estimated that it costs in the neighborhood of $2,000 a gun to put up the machinery as the first cost of making those guns; so that $150,000 for the buildings and machinery would not have done what was intended, as claimed by the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. GILLET of Massachusetts. How much of an output was this $350,000 for machinery expected to provide at Rock Island?

Mr. MARSH. About 175 guns a day.

Mr. HULL. It is nothing for buildings, but all for machinery. Now, to proceed; I desire to offer an amendment.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose; and Mr. MERCER having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, a message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills and joint resolutions of the following titles:

- H. R. 10714. An act granting a pension to John S. Draper;
- H. R. 3803. An act granting an increase of pension to Elam Allen;
- H. R. 10933. An act granting a pension to Sarah A. Kizer;
- H. R. 10355. An act granting an increase of pension to Catharine C. Goodrich;
- H. R. 10285. An act granting an increase of pension to Mazie V. Sullivan;
- H. R. 10605. An act to increase the pension of Annie Cusack;
- H. R. 10417. An act granting a pension to James H. Nichols;
- H. R. 8610. An act granting a pension to Minnie B. Titus;
- H. R. 9415. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry Bullen;
- H. R. 247. An act granting an increase of pension to John Doeblor;
- H. R. 9569. An act granting an increase of pension to Timothy A. Allen;
- H. R. 9344. An act granting an increase of pension to John Begley;
- H. R. 8578. An act granting an increase of pension to George W. Reisinger;
- H. R. 11296. An act granting a pension to Annie M. Rowe;
- H. R. 855. An act granting an increase of pension to James R. Zearing;
- H. R. 12026. An act to increase the pension of Thomas Crinigan;
- H. R. 8568. An act granting an increase of pension to Mrs. Susan Stedman;
- H. R. 10860. An act granting a pension to Mianda A. Sanford;
- H. R. 12077. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles N. Smiley;
- H. R. 7657. An act granting an increase of pension to James E. Searl;
- H. R. 6913. An act granting an increase of pension to Charlotte B. Cozzens;
- H. R. 635. An act increasing the pension of Howard L. James;
- H. R. 8749. An act granting a pension to James J. Marcher;
- H. R. 123. An act granting a pension to William F. Bolan;
- H. R. 9455. An act granting an increase of pension to Richard Atkinson;
- H. R. 10490. An act granting a pension to Nelly V. Crosby;
- H. R. 12093. An act granting a pension to Mary A. Kennedy;

H. R. 10738. An act granting an increase of pension to Beeri Serviss;

H. R. 2293. An act granting an increase of pension to Andrew J. Snowden;

H. R. 9843. An act granting a pension to America Easton;

H. R. 10803. An act granting an increase of pension to James Porter;

H. R. 10056. An act increasing the pension of James Webb;

H. R. 7046. An act granting an increase of pension to Arba Capron;

H. R. 10385. An act granting a pension to George Brown;

H. R. 4880. An act granting a pension to Jonathan Scott;

H. R. 3123. An act granting an increase of pension to Frank S. Devo;

H. R. 5497. An act to provide for terms of the circuit and district courts of the western judicial district of the State of Texas to be held at the city of Laredo, and for other purposes;

H. R. 3155. An act granting a pension to Kitty Ann Patterson;

H. R. 3271. An act to increase the pension of Mrs. Rebecca S. Foster;

H. R. 4249. An act granting a pension to Samuel B. Koontz; and H. R. 6876. An act to increase the pension of George Alexander.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments bills of the following titles; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

H. R. 8626. An act to punish the impersonation of weighmasters in the District of Columbia;

H. R. 5326. An act for the relief of Thomas Hickey;

H. R. 9760. An act to redeem outstanding certificates issued by the board of public works of the District of Columbia held by W. D. Williams;

H. R. 7271. An act to allow the return free of duty of certain articles exported from the United States for exhibition purposes, approved May 18, 1896;

H. R. 3567. An act to remove the charge of desertion against Gardner Dodge;

H. R. 8694. An act to enable the city of Albuquerque, N. Mex., to create certain indebtedness, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 2524. An act for the protection of birds, preservation of game, and for the prevention of its sale during certain closed seasons in the District of Columbia.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the amendments of the House of Representatives to bills of the following titles:

- S. 896. An act granting a pension to Mary J. Hill;
- S. 1071. An act granting a pension to Abigail R. Ellet;
- S. 1209. An act granting an increase of pension to Maj. John H. Gearke;
- S. 1245. An act granting an increase of pension to George W. Emery;
- S. 1378. An act granting a pension to William F. Gowdy;
- S. 1619. An act granting a pension to Michael Lannon;
- S. 1976. An act granting an increase of pension to Annie E. Ruff;
- S. 2217. An act to increase the pension of Aaron B. Page;
- S. 2235. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry Hatch;
- S. 2335. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles Edson;
- S. 3136. An act granting an increase of pension to William O. Torry;
- S. 3325. An act granting a pension to Maria S. Whitney;
- S. 4483. An act granting an increase of pension to John H. Crandall; and
- S. 4681. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph F. Mollere.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendment the bill (H. R. 3293) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to purchase a site for a new depot for the Sixth light-house district and erect the necessary buildings, asked a conference with the House of Representatives on the bill and amendment, and had appointed Mr. McMILLAN, Mr. McBRIDE, and Mr. PASCO as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendment the bill (H. R. 631) to confirm title to lots 13 and 14, in square 959, in Washington, D. C., asked a conference with the House of Representatives on the bill and amendment, and had appointed Mr. KENNEY, Mr. PRITCHARD, and Mr. PROCTOR as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments the bill (H. R. 11597) to extend S street in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, asked a conference with the House of Representatives on the bill and amendments, and had appointed Mr. McMILLAN, Mr. HANSBROUGH, and Mr. GORMAN as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments the bill (H. R. 11629) for the extension of Pennsylvania avenue SE. to the District line, asked a conference with the House of Representatives on the bill and amendments, and had appointed Mr. McMILLAN, Mr. HANSBROUGH, and Mr. GORMAN as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bills and joint resolutions of the following titles; in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

- S. 3672. An act granting a pension to Capt. Oscar Taylor;
- S. 4098. An act granting an increase of pension to Isaac H. Linn;
- S. 4730. An act to increase the pension of Levi Moser;
- S. 3291. An act to increase the pension of James C. Carlton;
- S. 4097. An act granting a pension to Elizabeth Wisler;
- S. 4006. An act for the relief of Joseph B. Presdee;
- S. 3216. An act granting a pension to David Carroll;
- S. 4919. An act granting a pension to Henry H. Lewis;
- S. 4916. An act granting a pension to Mary B. Christopher;
- S. 5415. An act granting a pension to Frederick Auer;
- S. 2654. An act granting a pension to Lydia F. Wiley;
- S. R. 48. Joint resolution granting permission for the erection of a monument in Washington, D. C., for the ornamentation of the national capital and in honor of Samuel Hahnemann;
- S. 5374. For the relief of Christiana Dengler;
- S. 3331. An act to correct the military record of Joseph T. Vincent;
- S. R. 220. Joint resolution to authorize the President to appoint Jonathan Brooks as assistant paymaster in the Navy;
- S. R. 243. Joint resolution authorizing foreign exhibitors at the commercial exposition to be held in Philadelphia, Pa., in 1899 to bring to this country foreign laborers from their respective countries for the purpose of preparing for and making their exhibits under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury.
- S. 5289. An act to provide a site for a building for the Washington Public Library;
- S. R. 225. Joint resolution relative to the Greater America Exposition to be held in Omaha, Nebr., in the year 1899;
- S. R. 247. Joint resolution for the relief of ex-Naval Cadet George H. Mather;
- S. 5474. An act granting a pension to Ellen Harden;
- S. 2022. An act for the relief of Louis Miller;
- S. 3151. An act for the relief of John G. Rose;
- S. 5463. An act to authorize certain persons who intermarried with Cherokees to sue for their interest in certain moneys of the tribe from which they were excluded;
- S. 3370. An act granting a pension to Benjamin F. Trapp, of South Omaha, in the State of Nebraska;
- S. 2991. An act granting an increase of pension to Oliver J. Leyon;
- S. 3187. An act for the relief of the widow and heirs of Samuel Kramer;
- S. 4437. An act granting a pension to B. H. Randall;
- S. 4817. An act for the relief of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company;
- S. 4805. An act to increase the pension of Annie B. Goodrich; and
- S. 5585. An act granting an increase of pension to Orphia W. Reynolds.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the reports of the committees of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to bills of the following titles:

- H. R. 11266. An act making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900; and
- H. R. 11217. An act making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment resolutions of the following titles:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the Public Printer be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to print for distribution by the Department of State 5,000 copies of Commercial Relations, 1898, and (in separate form) 10,000 copies of the Review of the World's Commerce, etc., being part of said Commercial Relations.

Also:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there be printed 12,000 additional copies of the Statistical Abstract of the United States for the year 1898, prepared by the Bureau of Statistics, Treasury Department; 3,000 copies for the Senate, 6,000 for the House of Representatives, and 3,000 for the Bureau of Statistics, Treasury Department.

Also:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there be printed and bound in cloth, for the use of the Director of the Mint, 3,000 extra copies of the Report on the Production of Gold and Silver for the calendar year 1897.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the Secretary be directed to request the House of Representatives to return to the Senate the bill (H. R. 4338) granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth V. Litsenberg, and amendment.

Also:

Resolved, That the Secretary be directed to request the House of Representatives to furnish the Senate a duplicate engrossed copy of its amendment to the Senate bill 104, to increase the pension of Lucretia C. Waring, and a copy of its message insisting on its amendment to said bill, the same having been mislaid or lost.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment the joint resolution (H. Res. 339) authorizing the President to appoint Osborne W. Deignan a naval cadet at Annapolis.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11865) to provide for the acquiring of rights of way by railroad companies through Indian reservations, Indian lands, Indian allotments, and for other purposes.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

The committee resumed its session.

The Clerk read as follows:

Insert, end of line 23, page 25, the following:

"For restoring the power house, machinery, and electric plant at the Rock Island Arsenal, which were destroyed by fire January 3, 1890, to be immediately available, $9,851.24."

Mr. SULZER. I reserve all points of order.

Mr. HULL. I only want to say, if the point of order is reserved, that the power house at the Rock Island Arsenal burned a few weeks ago, and it is absolutely important that it should be rebuilt. It is believed that this amount will erect the building with brick face and no wooden framework about it, and it will not be so liable to be destroyed again.

Mr. SULZER. I know about Rock Island, and I withdraw the point of order.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I wish to submit this amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

That all enlisted men of the Regular Army who enlisted subsequent to the declaration of war, for the war only, and hereafter mustered out of the service, who have served honestly and faithfully beyond the limits of the United States, shall be paid two months' extra pay when mustered out and discharged from the service; and all enlisted men in the Regular Army who enlisted subsequent to the declaration of war, for the war only, and hereafter mustered out of the service, who have served honestly and faithfully within the limits of the United States, shall be paid one month's extra pay when mustered out and discharged from the service, from any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, said money to be immediately available.

Mr. HAY. I reserve the point of order on that amendment.

Mr. GAINES. I would like to ask the gentleman a question. Why do you draw a distinction between the volunteers serving in the United States and the volunteers who served out of the United States and the Regular Army within the United States?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I make no such distinction. The law already provides for the volunteers who served in and out of the United States. This applies to those men who enlisted in the Regular Army for the war. The men serving in the different State militias have already been provided for by law.

Mr. GAINES. I must say that as I understood the amendment it was that the volunteer who had served out of the United States was to get two months' extra pay if he had conducted himself with proper deportment, and that the regular who had served out of the United States and conducted himself properly one month's pay extra, but that the volunteer who had not served outside of the United States but had been confined to the United States was to get one month, and the regular within the limits was to get a month's extra.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I think the gentleman misunderstood the provision.

Mr. GAINES. I listened particularly, and I hope I am not mistaken, because I do not like to see this discrimination made.

Mr. FITZGERALD. The law passed in regard to volunteers provides that those who served outside of the United States shall receive two months' additional pay, and those within the United States one additional month. I have asked that the same provision be inserted in the bill in regard to the Regular Army.

Mr. GAINES. I think I understood the amendment perfectly, but I hope I am mistaken.

Mr. FITZGERALD. For information, I hope that the amendment may be again read.

Mr. GAINES. I would like the amendment reported to the committee, and I ask for order, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee will be in order.

The amendment was again read.

Mr. GAINES. Now, I understand that the volunteer who has not served outside of the United States gets no extra pay, however honorably he may have served the country.

Mr. HULL. If the gentleman from Tennessee will listen a moment, I will explain the matter to him. We passed a bill in January last giving the volunteer soldiers exactly this pay. Before that bill passed, the War Department furloughed those volunteer soldiers, who had served outside of the United States, for sixty days, and on reassembling discharged them; and those who had served inside of the United States were furloughed for thirty days. We passed this act to give these volunteers this extra pay, so that they could be paid their extra month and go home and stay, and not compel them to come back. That was the provision for the volunteers. This is a copy of that bill, except the word "only," and that was written in so that it would not apply to the whole regular establishment; so that it would only apply to those enlisted for the war.

Mr. GAINES. This puts them all on an equality?

Mr. HULL. It puts the men who went into the Regular Army on the same footing as the volunteers.

Mr. GAINES. All I want is equality of payment.

Mr. HULL. It makes an equality of payment between the two.

Mr. BRUCKER. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment as a substitute.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is made against the amendment by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. HAY].

Mr. HAY. I reserved the point of order.

Mr. BRUCKER. I offer this as an amendment subject to the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will dispose of the point of order first.

Mr. HAY. I simply reserved the point of order, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. But the Chair must dispose of it.

Mr. HAY. I withdraw the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan offers an amendment to the amendment in the form of a substitute, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

That all men who enlisted in the Regular Army subsequent to the declaration of war with Spain and prior to the ratification of the treaty of peace by the United States Senate, and who served faithfully and honestly beyond the United States, shall be entitled to two months' extra pay on muster out and discharge from the service. And all men who enlisted in the Regular Army subsequent to said declaration of war, prior to the ratification of the treaty of peace, as above mentioned, and who served faithfully and honestly within the limits of the United States, shall be paid one month's extra pay on muster out and discharge from the service, from any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Mr. BRUCKER. The distinction between the amendment offered by myself and the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FITZGERALD] is this: The amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts does not limit the time of enlistment subsequent to the declaration of war with Spain and prior to the ratification of the treaty of peace by the United States Senate. I think that distinction ought to be made, and ought to be incorporated in any amendment adopted. I think that these men who volunteered in the Regular Army subsequent to the declaration of war, and prior to the ratification of the treaty of peace, ought to be provided for in this way by this additional two months' pay for those who served beyond the United States, and one month's pay for those who served within the limits of the United States. The distinction limiting the time of enlistment between the declaration of war and the ratification of the peace treaty ought to be observed in giving this additional pay to these men.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, if I caught the reading of the amendment correctly, the gentleman's amendment applies to the entire Regular Army. I do not understand him to confine it to those who enlisted for the war. Does the gentleman's amendment limit it to those who enlisted after the declaration of war and before the treaty of peace?

Mr. BRUCKER. Yes.

Mr. HULL. There has been probably 10,000 regulars enlisted for three years between those two dates.

Mr. BRUCKER. I do not think any distinction ought to be drawn.

Mr. HULL. The men who enlisted for three years went into it for a business.

Mr. BRUCKER. I think the gentleman will not contend that those who enlisted after the declaration of the war with Spain enlisted to make war their business.

Mr. HULL. I undertake to say that when they enlisted for three years—

Mr. BRUCKER. I think the presumption as far as this amendment is concerned ought to apply to all men who enlisted subsequent to the declaration of war; the presumption should be that they enlisted for that war and not for the purpose of making war their business.

Mr. HULL. The men that enlisted for the war enlisted under a specific contract with the Government entered into with the recruiting officer. I know as a matter of fact that a large number of men outside of those that enlisted for the war have enlisted in the Regular Army for the full term of three years with the expectation of remaining in the Army.

Mr. BRUCKER. How are you going to ascertain, how are you going to determine, what men enlisted for the war and those who did not enlist for the war?

Mr. HULL. The terms of the enlistment specify that absolutely.

Mr. BRUCKER. With that understanding I accept the amendment or suggestion offered by the chairman of the committee.

Mr. BAILEY. One moment. I want to ask the gentleman from Iowa how it could be that any recruiting officer could enlist men except according to law. We passed a law that the increase in the Army should be mustered out at the end of the war, and therefore no recruiting officer could enlist for three years.

Mr. HULL. One-third of the old Army goes out in a little while. They have been anticipating their going out because up to this time there has been no necessity for a reduction.

Mr. BAILEY. But still the recruiting officer must be governed by the law. No man had a right to enlist men in the Army of the United States except under the law that we passed, and that law provides that every man enlisted under it must be mustered out at the end of the war.

Mr. MARSH. The gentleman from Texas will allow me to say that our legislation of last spring provided for enlistments in the Regular Army to the number of 26,610, and any number of men in excess of that could only be enlisted for two years or during the war. Only the vacancies in that number, 26,610, could be filled out from time to time with three years' men.

Mr. BAILEY. Just as if we had never passed any other law. I understand that perfectly well. The men who enlisted as part of the 26,610 did not enlist under the law of last spring, but under the old law.

Mr. HULL. They enlisted after the declaration of war.

Mr. BAILEY. But not under the law which we then passed.

Mr. HULL. They enlisted after the declaration of war. Now, the amendment provides for sixty days' extra pay when the three years' term of enlistment of these regulars expires. Does not the gentleman want to do that?

Mr. BAILEY. I am not speaking about the question of pay; but I do not desire that any recruiting officer of the Government shall undertake to enlist men beyond the term now authorized by law.

Mr. HULL. I am perfectly willing to give all these men the extra pay here proposed if it is so desired, but want the committee to understand what is being done.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I send to the desk an amendment which is designed to take care of those men who have been already mustered out—an amendment to the amendment of the gentleman from Michigan.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the amendment to the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

After the word "service," in line 3, insert "or who have been already mustered out."

In line 10, after the word "out," insert "or who have already been mustered out."

Mr. BRUCKER. I accept that.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I yielded my point of order with the understanding that the amendment was to go through as offered. We are getting on dangerous ground; we are "skating on thin ice" when we undertake to hunt up every man who has been mustered out and give him this extra pay. I would have insisted absolutely on my point of order if I had known that such an amendment as this was going to be offered.

Mr. FITZGERALD. If the gentleman from Iowa who is chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs will listen for a moment, I think I will convince him that I am not acting in bad faith in the matter of the amendment I have just proposed to the amendment originally offered by me. The gentleman from Iowa states that his objection to this last amendment arises from the fact that it will include men who received their discharges from the Army through solicitations on the part of members of Congress and various other influences. While I do not deny that these men would receive the benefit of this provision, and am certainly willing that they should, because in a great number of instances where individual discharges have been made, the cause of such discharges were such as to commend themselves to the judgment of the War Department as well as the members of Congress who asked for them.

The last amendment that I have proposed will reach a large class of very deserving men. The chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs must be aware of the fact that the War Department issued orders within two or three weeks authorizing the discharge of all the men in the regular service who were then within the United States and who had enlisted in the Army for the war. All these men served faithfully, withstood all the dangers and horrors of the campaign, and, in my judgment, are at least equally deserving with the volunteers in the State regiments who will receive this two months' additional pay. A great many of these boys came from my own city; and I might add here that I think Massachusetts furnished more men, either if you consider the number of men enlisted as members of the volunteer State regiments or those who enlisted in the Regular Army from that State, than any other State in the Union.

First, as volunteer State troops she sent to the front the First Regiment of Heavy Artillery, and the Second, Fifth, Sixth, Eighth, and Ninth Regiments of Infantry, every one of which, except the First Heavy Artillery and the Fifth Regiment of Infantry, served the flag either in Cuba or Porto Rico. It is a well-established fact that most of the members of the Seventh United States Infantry and a great many of the members of the Seventeenth United States Infantry and of the Second Heavy Artillery were recruited in the city of Boston, and hundreds of young men from that city and State enlisted in other regiments in the regular service. It was only last week that almost a hundred brave fellows who were members of the Seventh United States Infantry returned to Boston after being mustered out, not because their discharges were solicited by their parents or friends and obtained through the efforts of members of Congress, but they were mustered out of the United States service through an order issued by the War Department through the regular channels.

As I have stated before, thousands of soldiers have been mustered out within the last two weeks through the express orders of the Secretary of War, and not through influence exerted by the friends of these young men with the Administration. This is the class of men whom I propose to incorporate in the last amendment, and I feel certain the chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs, when he realizes the fact that this amendment is not added to my original amendment, will be willing that this large and deserving class of men shall receive the benefits of the provision of legislation proposed by me.

I know when I drew up my original amendment and presented it to the chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs, so that no opposition would be offered to its consideration, that this last provision was not incorporated in the amendment, but I have sufficient confidence in his fairness to feel that he recognizes the justice and equity of this last proposition and that he will accept it. If he shall insist on his objection and make a point of order against the original amendment which I have introduced, which will cut off all chance of doing justice to the men who are now in the service, rather than have this meritorious provision defeated I will withdraw the amendment and trust to being able to bring about this legislation in some other way, either by special bill or by asking some member of the Senate to thus amend the bill when it reaches that body.

Mr. HULL. Every member of this House, I presume, has had men discharged from the Regular Army who had not served long enough to pay the Government for enlisting them—men who did not complete the term of their enlistment at all. Probably every man in this House (if other members have had the same experience that I have had) has been obliged to go to the War Department in answer to the urgent request of parents at home to get their boys discharged. Now, why should we vote a gratuity to men who have not lived up to the terms of their enlistment? The amendment does not provide that those who are to receive this extra pay shall have been mustered out on account of sickness or disability; it is broad enough to cover the cases of those who have been discharged from the service upon the request of their parents at home. Why should such men receive thirty or sixty days' extra pay?

My friend from Massachusetts will allow me to say that he is not acting in good faith in this matter. If I had anticipated such an amendment as this was to be offered, I would have raised my point of order and stuck to it.

The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FITZGERALD] submitted an amendment which was clearly subject to a point of order. I raised a point of order, but after some discussion with him I withdrew it upon the understanding that under its terms these regulars would be mustered out upon the same conditions as the volunteers. At different places within the last four weeks the regiments of regulars have been called up in line, and the men were given the option to be discharged if they were not willing to continue in the service, and in many regiments a large number have been mustered out. Under this amendment you give every one of those men who enlisted in the Regular Army and were thus discharged thirty or sixty days' extra pay, which you have not given to the volunteers and which you can not justly give to these others.

Mr. BAILEY. Is it not true that we passed through the House a bill giving the volunteers sixty days' extra pay?

Mr. HULL. Just the same as the amendment of the gentleman from Massachusetts proposes in this case.

Mr. BAILEY. Now, is it not true that the War Department has held that those men who were mustered out prior, we will say, to the 12th day of January—

Mr. HULL. As organizations.

Mr. BAILEY. The 12th day of January, I think, was the date—were not entitled to the sixty days' extra pay, while those mustered out after the 12th day of January were so entitled? Is that true?

Mr. HULL. It is true; and let me tell the gentleman why. When the first regiments were mustered out in my State, they were taken to Des Moines. They were then given furlough for thirty days. They had not been out of the country. The same is true of all other States under like circumstances. The volunteer troops in this way prior to January 12 got their extra pay. The Government has agreed to pay their transportation home; and those who volunteered and did not go out of the country were paid the extra sum, as I have already stated, while those who went beyond the confines of the United States got the extra allowance of sixty days' pay.

Now, the War Department said that this was a very expensive method of dealing with the question. If Congress passes an act authorizing thirty days' extra pay to those who have not been out of the country and sixty days' extra pay for those who have been out of the country, the Department stated it will save expense and enable them to deal with the question on a very much better basis than that which then prevailed.

Mr. BAILEY. I remember very well, Mr. Chairman, the arguments made at the time in answer to the inquiry which was made by myself as to this very point, and the gentleman from Iowa, as I understand it, says, as a matter of fact, that the volunteers mustered out prior to the passage of this bill would be paid the sums fixed in the bill.

Mr. HULL. They were paid thirty and sixty days extra, according to the circumstances, as I have stated.

Mr. BAILEY. That was true as to regiments and organizations. But was that true as to individuals?

Mr. HULL. No; only as to organizations. The men that I got out of the volunteer service, and that you got out of it, did not get this additional pay.

Mr. BAILEY. I was not able, at all events, to get two regiments out at one time.

Mr. HULL. Well, you got some out.

A MEMBER. Would the gentleman from Iowa accept an amendment providing for those who were mustered out not members of a regimental organization?

Mr. HULL. I would if it could be accomplished without harm. But the gentleman must know that there is danger in such a provision.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I will withdraw the amendment to the amendment, rather than have it meet the objection of the point of order of the gentleman from Iowa, and let the vote be taken upon the first question.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to withdrawing the amendment to the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. BRUCKER. Now, Mr. Chairman, to meet the objection of the gentleman from Iowa, I move as an amendment to the amendment what I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Insert the words "That all men who enlisted to serve during the war with Spain, in the Regular Army," etc.

Mr. BRUCKER. This, it will be seen, covers the objection that has been made by merely inserting the words "to serve during the war with Spain" in the amendment which has been read.

Mr. HULL. I shall have to make the point of order on the amendment, Mr. Chairman. This does not cure the defect which I have pointed out.

Mr. BRUCKER. My amendment covers exactly the objection which has been raised by the gentleman from Iowa. I ask for the reading of the amendment again as modified.

The Clerk read as follows:

That all men who enlisted to serve during the war with Spain in the Regular Army subsequent to the declaration of war with Spain and prior to the ratification of the treaty of peace by the United States Senate, and who served faithfully and honestly beyond the United States, shall be entitled to two months' extra pay on muster out and discharge from service. And all men who enlisted to serve during the war with Spain in the Regular Army subsequent to said declaration of war, and prior to the ratification of the treaty of peace, as above mentioned, and who served faithfully and honestly within the limits of the United States, shall be paid one month's extra pay on muster out and discharge from service, from any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Mr. BRUCKER. It will be seen that I have inserted a further modification of the amendment, by adding the words "who served during the war with Spain."

Mr. HULL. I hope that will be voted down.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment to the substitute, proposed by the gentleman from Michigan. The amendment was rejected.

The question recurred on the substitute for the amendment. The substitute was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question now is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FITZGERALD].

Mr. TAWNEY. Let it be read.

The amendment was again reported.

Mr. LINNEY. I would like to suggest to the gentleman from Iowa a modification of the pending proposition.

The bill does not embrace the most meritorious class of men who served during the war. I think it should be so modified as to embrace all men who died after a service of three months, for instance, and that the extra pay shall be paid to their widows or families. I offer that amendment.

Mr. HULL. I should be compelled, Mr. Chairman, to object to that, for the reason that we are now pensioning the widows and families of those who died in the service.

Mr. LINNEY. But this recognizes the services of these men, and provides a special fund out of which their families would be paid something.

Mr. HULL. This is already covered by the general pension laws of the country.

Mr. Chairman, I do not know how you are going to pay that.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. LINNEY] to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FITZGERALD].

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question now is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FITZGERALD].

Mr. GROSVENOR. I should like to have that amendment reported again.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the Clerk will re-report the amendment.

The amendment was again read.

Mr. HULL. That is an exact copy of what we passed for the volunteers, with the exception that we have inserted the word "only," so that it can apply to those regulars who enlisted for the war only.

The amendment was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. HULL, the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. HOPKINS, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill (H. R. 12106) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900, and had directed him to report the same back to the House with sundry amendments, and with the recommendation that the amendments be agreed to, and that the bill as amended do pass.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the amendments and on the bill to its final passage.

The previous question was ordered.

The amendments reported from the Committee of the Whole were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. HULL, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

Mr. KELLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to print in the RECORD some remarks which I did not have an opportunity to make on the general principles of this bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from South Dakota asks permission to print remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

OSBORNE W. DEIGNAN.

Mr. HAGER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of House joint resolution 339.

The joint resolution was read, as follows:

That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized to appoint Osman Deignan, of Stuart, Iowa, a cadet in the Naval Academy, notwithstanding the fact that said Osman Deignan is past the age when he could be admitted as a cadet at Annapolis.

The following amendments, recommended by the Committee on Naval Affairs, were read:

In lines 4 and 6 strike out "Osman Deignan" and insert "Osborne W. Deignan."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I should like to ask from what committee is this reported?

Mr. HAGER. It is unanimously reported from the Committee on Naval Affairs.

[Mr. UNDERWOOD addressed the House. See Appendix.]

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

There was no objection.

The amendments recommended by the Committee on Naval Affairs were agreed to.

The joint resolution as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

By unanimous consent the title was amended so as to read: "Joint resolution authorizing the President of the United States to appoint Osborne W. Deignan a naval cadet at Annapolis."

On motion of Mr. HAGER, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill passed was laid on the table.

Mr. HAGER. I ask unanimous consent to print in the RECORD some remarks on this joint resolution.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I ask the same privilege.

Mr. HANDY. What remarks are they?

Mr. HAGER. On this joint resolution authorizing the President to appoint Osborne W. Deignan a cadet at the Annapolis Naval Academy.

Mr. HANDY. Remarks just made?

Mr. HAGER. No; I have not made any.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa asks unanimous consent to print some remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I make the same request.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama submits the same request. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

Mr. HENDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I present a privileged report from the Committee on Rules.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Committee on Rules, having had under consideration House resolution No. 410, report the following as a substitute, with a recommendation that it do pass:

Resolved, That Tuesday, the 28th day of February, immediately after the reading of the Journal, be set apart for the consideration in the House of bills reported by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, as follows:

First. Such bills as relate to first-class post-offices, to custom-houses, and to court-houses as have heretofore been reported from the Committee of the Whole.

Second. Such bills as the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds shall indicate; the session of the House not to continue later than 6 o'clock p. m. of said day.

Mr. HENDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I will explain briefly the effect of the rule, and I hope attention will be given to it.

Mr. DOCKERY. I hope the gentleman will give a little time to this side. I should like to have five minutes.

Mr. HENDERSON. It will be seen by the reading of the resolution that this gives to-morrow until 6 o'clock for the consideration of all bills heretofore favorably recommended from the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union to the House, and that they will be limited to consider, first, those bills that pertain to first-class post-offices, to those having custom-houses, and to Federal courts; and after these are considered by the House, the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds will designate the bills to be considered.

Mr. BARTLETT. May I ask the gentleman one question?

Mr. HENDERSON (continuing). And the session must terminate at 6 o'clock.

Mr. BARTLETT. Do I understand the privileged report made by the gentleman from Iowa to be that bills which have been reported with reference to building or adding to buildings already in existence where there are first-class post-offices and United States court rooms and custom-houses to be made or built are to be first considered?

Mr. HENDERSON. That is correct. Did the gentleman from Missouri desire to be heard?

Mr. RIDGELY. I desire to ask the gentleman one question.

Mr. HENDERSON. I yield to the gentleman for a question.

Mr. RIDGELY. You said that after certain bills have been disposed of it was for the committee to determine what other bills are to be considered. Do you mean the Committee of the Whole House or the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds?

Mr. HENDERSON. The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds are after that to make the designation. How much time does the gentleman from Missouri desire?

Mr. DOCKERY. I would like five minutes; possibly I may get through in less time.

Mr. MADDOX. I would like to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. DOCKERY. The gentleman from Georgia desires to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. MADDOX. Is it contemplated to take up any bills except those reported by the Committee of the Whole?

Mr. HENDERSON. Those that have been recommended by the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union to the House—

Mr. MADDOX. None others?

Mr. HENDERSON. The rule limits the discussion to those in the first instance. After the other bills reported from the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union the matter of designating is left to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds. Now I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I want to ask the gentleman a question. If the gentleman pleases, I would like to know whether the Committee on Rules considered the possibility of taking up the second-class post-offices after the first-class post-offices were through, and then, after the second-class post-offices were disposed of, the third-class post-offices?

Mr. HENDERSON. We did not consider that as a distinctive proposition. I will say that this rule is brought in after consultation with gentlemen on the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds and others, and we thought that under this rule, unless a proper class of buildings were brought in, the committee would not make much headway. Now I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. LACEY. I would like to ask the gentleman a question for information about the rule.

Mr. HENDERSON. I yield to my colleague for a question.

Mr. LACEY. The rule, as I understand, is that first-class post-offices and those having custom-houses and court-houses are first to be considered?

Mr. HENDERSON. Yes, sir.

Mr. LACEY. And then comes, after that, such as are designated by the committee?

Mr. HENDERSON. The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. LACEY. I understood your statement a moment ago to be the designation should be by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and that the designation of the committee applied to those that had not gone through the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. HENDERSON. This whole rule is limited to bills that have already had the favorable stamp of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union. That is right.

Mr. DALZELL. No.

Mr. HENDERSON. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DOCKERY].

Mr. LOUD. I desire to ask the gentleman a question which I think he ought to yield to.

Mr. POWERS. I desire to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. LOUD. I would like to ask the gentleman if the Committee on Rules has contemplated the fact that Congress must adjourn on next Saturday at 12 o'clock, and that only Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday remain to this House to do all the business that yet remains to be completed?

Mr. HENDERSON. I refer that question to the gentleman from California.

Mr. LOUD. I ask the gentleman if they had contemplated that question?

Mr. HENDERSON. The question of the end of Congress has certainly been contemplated, as the gentleman well knows.

Mr. HEPBURN. Will my colleague yield to me for a question?

Mr. HENDERSON. I yield.

Mr. HEPBURN. Would you be willing to strike out the limitation fixing the time for the consideration at 6 o'clock? For this reason, that that very thing invites opposition and invites factious opposition. If it is known that at a fixed time the House must adjourn, it encourages gentlemen who want to pursue the same tactics that were pursued here the other day to do that, whereas if it was without anything of limitation and the House had the power to continue its session, the gentleman from Missouri and other distinguished gentlemen might be discouraged from any further attempts in that particular method to prevent legislation.

Mr. DOCKERY. I admit that it would be discouraging if the House were to continue into a night session, as we doubtless would.

Mr. HENDERSON. Mr. Speaker, before yielding to the gentleman from Missouri, I want to make one correction. My understanding was that the second proviso, like the first, limited the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds to calling up bills reported from the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union. I want to say that I am in error. It gives them discretion to call up any bill they choose after the first class is disposed of. The first one must come from those recommended by the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, as before stated. That class consists of first-class post-offices, those having post-office buildings, custom-houses, or court-houses. Now, I will make another effort to yield to the gentlemen from Missouri [Mr. DOCKERY].

Mr. DOCKERY. I would like the attention of the House for a few minutes. I am opposed to this rule because I am opposed to a number of the bills considered by the Committee of the Whole House; but the reasons conclusive to my mind, and which induce me to oppose the rule, are, first, the condition of the public business in the closing days of the session, and second, the condition of the public Treasury. Let me say to gentlemen in charge of this resolution that the proposition is now to pass the fortification appropriation bill under a suspension of the rules, notwithstanding this rule gives to-morrow to the Committee on Public Buildings. The proper consideration of the great appropriation bills is to be imperiled by this rule. In other words, if the House devotes the entire day to this order, it necessarily encroaches upon the time that ought to be given to appropriation bills, and in that view it is objectionable. But the overshadowing reason why I am opposed to the rule is because the condition of the public Treasury does not warrant the imposition of $11,000,000 additional liability for public buildings. I desire to state in a few words the condition of the National Treasury.

The appropriation bills already reported to the House at the present session amount to $477,036,317.60. Four of these bills have become laws, and although slight increases have been made on each bill by the Senate, I do not take them into account in this estimate.

Mr. SIMPSON. You refer to appropriation bills?

Mr. DOCKERY. Yes; to increases on appropriation bills. The permanent appropriations are $128,678,220. The bills already reported to the House, together with the permanent appropriations, aggregate $605,714,537.60. Then, in addition to that, a separate appropriation has been made of $20,000,000 to meet the requirements of the treaty of peace with Spain. An omnibus claim bill is already substantially agreed to by the conferees, and it is an open secret all around here that this omnibus claim bill will carry about $3,000,000.

Mr. LOUD. Is that all?

Mr. DOCKERY. Yes; and it is enough. In addition to that, the deficiency bill, already agreed upon by the Committee on Appropriations, will be reported to the House, and amounts to about $20,000,000. So that, Mr. Speaker, the total appropriations for the session aggregate $648,714,537.60, as nearly as we can estimate at this time.

Not only this, Mr. Speaker, but if the compromise Army reorganization bill becomes a law, and it certainly will, in my opinion, it will add at least $20,000,000 more to the amount provided in the Army appropriation bill to maintain the Army. Then $2,000,000 additional will certainly be added to the river and harbor bill as a result of a conference on the Senate amendments thereto.

In addition to that, the Senate has already added $4,000,000 to the sundry civil bill, and of this addition the House will certainly have to agree in conference to not less than $2,000,000.

This is not all, Mr. Speaker. The Navy personnel bill is pending in conference, and will become a law before Saturday next, and that carries $2,100,000 additional. In addition to that, the miscellaneous appropriations, at a low estimate, will amount to $2,000,000, including $1,000,000 carried by the census bill. So that the grand total of all the items to which I have referred aggregates $676,814,537.60.

If to this aggregate you add $115,000,000 for the Nicaragua Canal, we have a total of $791,814,537.60, and even that does not include the indefinite appropriation carried by the first section of what is known as the Hepburn canal bill. Not only that, Mr. Speaker, but this total, amounting to $791,814,537.60 for the session, is exclusive of the amount necessary to meet the claims of our citizens in the island of Cuba, and $25,000,000 of those have already been submitted to our State Department for adjudication. Nor does it include the liability carried by what is known as the Payne subsidy bill; but it is probable that that bill will not be considered at this session. But to the seven hundred and ninety-one millions of liabilities on the Treasury to which I have adverted you now propose to add eleven millions more for public buildings, thus making the stupendous aggregate of the liabilities of this session of more than $800,000,000.

At the last session there was appropriated $893,231,615.55. So that if we add $800,000,000 (and it will not be less than that) as the sum of the appropriations of this session, we shall have the appalling aggregate of $1,693,231,615.55 as the total liabilities imposed upon the Treasury by this single Congress.

I know that a part of this liability grows out of the war with Spain; and if I knew the amount of that liability, I would state it in determining the proper charge that should be made on that account against this Congress. But I do not at this time know what that liability is. Let me say, however, that whether particular appropriations be right or wrong, the total amount of the appropriations reaches the mighty aggregate of $1,700,000,000.

I suggest, therefore, Mr. Speaker, to the management of this House whether, with this staggering liability, the House can afford at this time, even for meritorious bills, to give even one day for the consideration of public-building measures. There must be a halt somewhere. You and I may agree as to many of these appropriations. I do agree as to the propriety of every dollar that has been appropriated to support our Army and Navy and to meet the obligations made necessary by ratification of the Paris treaty. But have we not reached the time, Mr. Speaker, when economy should be observed? If I can not get the ear of the House, I can at least challenge the attention of the country to the riotous total of the appropriations of this Congress. [Applause.]

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. HENDERSON. I yield to the gentleman from Vermont [Mr. POWERS] for a question.

Mr. POWERS. I desire to ask whether under the order now proposed bills which have not been reported from the Committee of the Whole will come up for consideration to-morrow?

Mr. HENDERSON. Those will come up after the first class of bills have been disposed of. That matter will be within the discretion of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. POWERS. The gentleman stated that the bills which had "the stamp of the Committee of the Whole" would be considered.

Mr. HENDERSON. That remark applied to the first class of bills, not to the second class.

Mr. POWERS. The gentleman might have corrected that remark and said, "the stamp of the Committee of the Whole."

Mr. HENDERSON. If the gentleman has been waiting to get in his wit, I have not the time to yield to him for that purpose.

Mr. POWERS. There are some dozen of bills which have not been reported from the committee, and I am interested in one of them. If that one could come up, I should feel altogether differently toward this proposition from what I would otherwise.

Mr. HENDERSON. I can not make any different statement from what I have made. I have permitted the gentleman to make a speech under the guise of a question.

The SPEAKER. The question is on ordering the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is now on the adoption of the resolution.

The question being taken,

The SPEAKER. The yeas seem to have it.

Mr. DOCKERY. I call for a division.

The question being again taken, there were—yeas 93, noes 32.

Mr. MADDOX. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were not ordered (only 20 voting in favor thereof).

So the resolution was adopted.

RETURN OF BILLS, ETC., TO THE SENATE.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following resolution of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Secretary be directed to request the House of Representatives to furnish the Senate a duplicate engrossed copy of its amendment to Senate bill 104, to increase the pension of Lucretia C. Waring, and a copy of its message insisting on its amendment to said bill (the same having been mislaid or lost).

The SPEAKER. Without objection, this request of the Senate will be agreed to.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the following resolution of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Secretary be directed to request the House of Representatives to return to the Senate the bill (H. R. 4838) granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth V. Litzenberg, and amendment.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, this request of the Senate will be considered as granted.

There was no objection.

CIVIL GOVERNMENT OF ALASKA.

Mr. KNOX. I ask unanimous consent that Senate bill 3729, now upon the Calendar, be considered at the present time by the House as in Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union.

The Clerk proceeded to read the bill (S. 3729) making further provision for a civil government for Alaska.

The SPEAKER (before the reading was concluded). This is a long bill, and as the House can understand its nature from what has been read, the Chair, if there be no objection, will put the question on its consideration now.

Mr. LOUD. I should like to ask the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. KNOX] how many districts and how many judges this bill provides for?

Mr. KNOX. Three.

Mr. LOUD. Then I shall object to the bill, if I have that power.

Mr. KNOX. I suggest to the gentleman that if an amendment reducing the number to two be desired, it can be offered. In the committee we took the best accessible evidence, and it appeared desirable the number should be three, as best meeting the needs of the people of that whole Territory. But if the gentleman desires to offer an amendment reducing this number to two, it certainly will receive careful consideration.

Mr. LOUD. I believe I have the power to defeat the bill now. I question whether I would have that power if I permitted it to be considered, unless the gentleman himself will propose and advocate such an amendment as has been indicated.

Mr. KNOX. It is absolutely essential that something should be done in connection with the matter—

Mr. LOW. There is no doubt about that.

Mr. KNOX (continuing). For the reason that there is but one court in Alaska, and that is located at Sitka, which is almost inaccessible to many parts of the Territory. I will state frankly to gentlemen that after a careful and thorough investigation of the matter I am satisfied that the provisions of the bill should be adopted.

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I object to the consideration of the bill at this time.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made, and the matter is not before the House.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I desire to submit a conference report on the Agricultural appropriation bill.

The SPEAKER. The report will be read.

The Clerk proceeded to read the conference report on the bill (H. R. 11266) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900, and for other purposes.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to dispense with the reading of the conference report and read instead the statement prepared by the House conferees, which covers all of the points of difference between the two Houses.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The statement of the House conferees was read, as follows:

The amount as passed the House for said bill was $3,696,322, and the amount as agreed upon by the conferees is $3,726,022, being a net increase over the House bill of $29,700, these increases being as follows:

Office of Secretary: Increase in salary of private secretary, $250. This is to equalize the salaries of all private secretaries to Cabinet officers.

Bureau of Animal Industry: Increases in salaries allowed to chiefs of divisions, $750. These small increases in salaries of several chiefs of scientific divisions have been frequently recommended by the Agricultural Committee of the House, but always stricken out on point of order. We believe these increases justifiable.

Division of Entomology: One additional assistant entomologist, $1,200. Made necessary by the increased work of the division, and strongly recommended by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Division of Vegetable Pathology (lump sum), $6,000. Granted by House conferees, at the special request of the Secretary of Agriculture, to enable him to investigate diseases known as "little peach" and the blight of Sea Island cotton and watermelons.

Division of Chemistry (lump sum), $2,500. Made necessary by the proposed investigation (provided by this Agricultural appropriation bill) of adulterated imported articles dangerous to health.

Division of Agrostology (lump sum), $2,000, to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to make certain experiments in agrostology in the arid regions.

Irrigation investigations (lump sum), $15,000, allowed at the earnest request of the Senators representing the arid regions of the West and the Secretary of Agriculture, whose statement in regard to same is appended hereto.

Library (lump sum), $1,000, allowed at the request of the Secretary of Agriculture.

Tea culture (new), $1,000, allowed to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to make special experiments in regard to curing tea grown in South Carolina.

Amendment 31, as agreed to by the House conferees, restores the following clause, which was stricken out in the House on a point of order:

"That hereafter section 3709 of the Revised Statutes of the United States shall not be construed to apply to any purchase or service rendered in the Department of Agriculture when the aggregate amount involved does not exceed the sum of $50."

All other amendments are not material in any way, being merely corrections of totals, typographical errors, punctuation, etc.

IRRIGATION INVESTIGATIONS.

The friends of the development of irrigation as applied in agriculture in the vast region west of the Missouri River secured from Congress at its last session an appropriation of $10,000 for the current fiscal year, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of Agriculture "for the purpose of collecting from agricultural colleges, agricultural experiment stations, and other sources, including the employment of practical agents, valuable information and data on the subject of irrigation, and publishing the same in bulletin form."

With a view to securing economy in the general administration of this fund it was decided not to create a separate division for this work. As by the terms of the act the work was largely to be done in cooperation with the agricultural colleges and experiment stations, its general supervision was intrusted to the Director of the Office of Experiment Stations. Special effort has been made to secure the services of experts who have had not only scientific training, but also practical experience in irrigation as conducted in the great West.

With a view to formulating plans of work along the most useful lines, a conference of experiment station officers and irrigation engineers was held at Denver last summer under the direction of the Director of the Office of Experiment Stations. The problems of irrigation were earnestly and freely discussed at this conference and the needs of the farmer for information on irrigation subjects were carefully considered. As a result of the expert advice which the Department thus received, it has been determined to confine the work on irrigation at present to two general lines: (1) The collation and publication of information regarding the laws and institutions of the irrigated region in their relation to agriculture, and (2) the publication of available information regarding the use of irrigation waters in agriculture, as determined by actual experience of farmers and experimental investigations, and the encouragement of further investigations in this line by the experiment stations.

Arrangements have already been made for the preparation of several bulletins by competent experts, and it is hoped that during the present fiscal year considerable useful information will be published and distributed by the Department. It is obvious that the present appropriation will enable the Department to go only a little way in the accomplishment of the work which is urgently demanded by the growing agricultural interests of the irrigated region. I heartily concur with the opinion set forth in the report of the Director of the Office of Experiment Stations, that Congress should establish a settled policy regarding the work of this Department on irrigation, and that if it is deemed wise to continue such work under my direction appropriations shall be made which will enable the Department to plan irrigation investigations on a comparatively large scale and continue them through a series of years. Some of the reasons which seem to make it very desirable that investigations on irrigation should be systematically pursued by this Department are set forth in the report above referred to, and I ask that careful consideration be given to the arguments there made in support of this proposition.

It is clear that a crisis has been reached in the life of the communities in which agriculture is dependent upon irrigation for its success. The laws and institutions relating to irrigation, which have grown up in these communities, have in many ways proved so inadequate and unsatisfactory that there is a widespread feeling that radical and immediate action is demanded for their reformation. Unfortunately, the accurate information on which alone intelligent reforms can be based is almost wholly lacking. As the problems which confront these communities are, in a general way, the same, and in many particulars affect the national as well as local interests, it is highly appropriate that the National Government should undertake investigations to aid in the solution of the problems of irrigation. As many of these problems are directly connected with those in other agricultural lines in which this Department and the experiment stations are working, it is my judgment that this Department should be put in a position to efficiently organize and conduct important investigations in this line.

As already stated, the investigations of the Department may properly follow two general lines: First, a careful study should be made of the laws and institutions of the irrigated region with special reference to their improvement. The objects of this work will be (1) to aid courts and administrative officers in the adjudication of claims respecting water rights; (2) to bring out the defects in existing laws and methods of administration, and to furnish impartial and adequate information on which wiser and more equitable legislation and court decisions may be based; and (3) to assist farmers in the acquirement of water rights and to protect their interests in the appropriation and use of water for irrigation. The other branch of work which the Department should take up is the carrying on of thorough original investigations along a number of different lines. The agricultural experiment stations in the irrigated regions have already shown the way in which such investigations should be conducted. Their means have, however, been too limited to enable them to make more than a beginning of the work in this direction.

One fundamental investigation which should be immediately undertaken relates to the correct determination of the practice of successful farmers in the use of water for irrigation with different soils and crops. At present such information is almost wholly lacking. The collation of such information in sufficient amount to warrant the conclusions on which agricultural practices, laws, and judicial and administrative proceedings may properly be based is in itself a large task.

The data thus obtained would be of great value not only for practical purposes, but also as a guide to investigations by the experiment stations and other agencies. When once the actual amounts of water used by farmers in the irrigated regions have been determined, investigations should be undertaken to find out what is the minimum of water required by different soils and crops, in order that we may know to what extent the available water supply of the irrigated region may be utilized in the development of its agriculture.

There are numerous other irrigation investigations which the Department and the experiment stations might well undertake; such are those which relate to the most economical methods for the application of water to crops, the utilization of the rainfall as affecting the need for irrigation waters, the problems of seepage and drainage, the effect of irrigation water on the growth and productivity of plants of different kinds, the prevention of the accumulation of alkali in the surface soils, and the reclamation of the alkali lands.

I believe that the importance and variety of the work demanded in the interests of irrigation in this country will justify a large increase in the appropriation for irrigation investigations by the Department. I hope that at the coming session of Congress a well-defined policy regarding the work of the Department on this subject will be definitely adopted.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. What is the increase in the salary of the private secretary?

Mr. WADSWORTH. Two hundred and fifty dollars.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. What is the total increase?

Mr. WADSWORTH. Two thousand two hundred and fifty dollars. This is putting the salary on just the same footing as the salary allowed to the secretaries of Cabinet officers. Some of them have been reduced; but this increases the total amount $2,250.

I ask the previous question on the adoption of the report.

The previous question was ordered, under the operation of which the report was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. WADSWORTH, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

INVESTIGATION OF LEPROSY.

Mr. CORLISS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 2904) for the investigation of leprosy.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read subject to the right of objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Supervising Surgeon-General of the Marine-Hospital Service, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, shall appoint a commission of medical officers of the Marine-Hospital Service to investigate the origin and prevalence of leprosy in the United States, and to report upon what legislation is necessary for the prevention of the spread of this disease; the expenses of this investigation, not exceeding the sum of $5,000, to be paid from the fund for preventing the spread of epidemic diseases.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. DOCKERY. Reserving the right to object, I would like to have some information, or explanation, in regard to this matter.

Mr. CORLISS. Mr. Speaker, I can make a very brief explanation that I think will satisfy the House.

It is estimated that there are from 200 to 300 cases of leprosy in the United States, and this is an effort to locate those cases, to find where the afflicted people are living, and make regulations, suitable regulations, for their care in conformity with the best interest of the public at large.

Mr. DOCKERY. I suppose this relates to our new possessions in Hawaii and elsewhere?

Mr. CORLISS. No—

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Has there been a report of a committee on this subject?

Mr. CORLISS. The Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce have acted upon the matter.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Was this recommended by the Department?

Mr. CORLISS. It has been recommended by the Department and by the Committee—

Mr. LIVINGSTON. And has been adopted by the House Committee on Commerce?

Mr. CORLISS. Yes; and a similar bill has been prepared by the committee and is on the Calendar.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Then you propose this bill as a substitute for the House bill?

Mr. CORLISS. We ask to take up the Senate bill and lay aside the House bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the third reading of the Senate bill.

Mr. DOCKERY. I simply desire to say that this is no doubt a proper precaution, which is made necessary by the acquisition of Hawaii and some other undesirable possessions. [Laughter.]

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time.

The question recurred on the passage of the bill.

Mr. CORLISS. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR] requests a few minutes, and I yield to him.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I only want to call the attention of the country to the statement made by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DOCKERY].

Two years ago a report was made to the State board of health of Ohio that there were in the county of Perry, in a small village, some cases that the local physician believed to be cases of leprosy. The matter was carried before the convention of the State board, and a thorough investigation was made of the whole history of the cases. There were two young girls, some 20 years old, perhaps, found to be afflicted with leprosy. Since that time a very careful tracing of the history of the cases has been made, and it has been discovered that a soldier serving in the South, who went there sound and well at the beginning of the war, brought this disease back and communicated it in the way of which I have spoken.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. I suppose the yellow fever came in the same way.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. CORLISS, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

FORTIFICATIONS APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HEMENWAY. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the substitute for the bill H. R. 12086. And I give notice now that I will ask unanimous consent that two hours and a half be given for discussion, the time to be equally divided.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana moves to suspend the rules and pass the bill which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Substitute for the bill (H. R. 12086) making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, for the armament thereof, for the procurement of heavy ordnance, for trial and service, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted, etc., That the sums of money herein provided for be, and the same are hereby, appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be available until expended, namely:

FORTIFICATIONS AND OTHER WORKS OF DEFENSE.

For construction of gun and mortar batteries, $1,000,000.
That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to transfer to the War Department, for purposes of the public defense, the present light-house reservation at Admiralty Head, on Admiralty Inlet, in the State of Washington, in exchange for a suitable and sufficient portion of the military reservation at that point, to be mutually agreed upon between the said Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of War, which said portion of the military reservation, together with the necessary right of way to permit of access to the same, the Secretary of War is hereby authorized and directed to transfer to the Treasury Department for light-house purposes; and the Secretary of War is further authorized and directed to remove the light-house and other buildings and structures pertaining to the light-house station from their present location and to erect and establish them complete and ready for service on the new site to be selected therefor.

as herein provided, or to erect new buildings and structures in lieu of those which can not be so moved, as may be found necessary in accordance with plans and details to be mutually agreed upon by the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of War, the cost thereof, not exceeding $8,000, to be defrayed from funds appropriated for gun and mortar batteries.

For the procurement of land, or right pertaining thereto, needed for the site, location, construction, or prosecution of works for fortifications and coast defense, $300,000.

For the protection, preservation, and repair of fortifications for which there may be no special appropriation available, $100,000.

For preparation of plans for fortifications, $5,000.

For construction of sea walls and embankments, $2,500.

For the purchase of submarine mines and necessary appliances to operate them for closing the channels leading to our principal seaports, needful casemates, cable galleries, etc., to render it possible to operate submarine mines, and continuing torpedo experiments, $50,000.

ARMAMENT OF FORTIFICATIONS.

For finishing and assembling coast-defense guns of 8-inch, 10-inch, and 12-inch caliber, and one type 16-inch gun at the Army Gun Factory, $255,000.

For oil-tempered and annealed steel for high-power coast-defense guns of 8-inch, 10-inch, and 12-inch caliber, $335,000: Provided, That no contract for oil-tempered and annealed steel for high-power coast-defense guns and mortars shall be made at a price exceeding 22 cents per pound: Provided, That in the discretion of the Secretary of War a portion of this money may be used for the purchase of material for steel-wire seacoast guns.

For construction of one 18-inch Gathmann gun, $85,000.

For powder and projectiles for test of 18-inch Gathmann gun, $10,000.

For purchase or manufacture of carriages for coast-defense guns of 8, 10, and 12 inch calibers, $199,500.

For purchase or manufacture of steel breech-loading mortars of 12-inch caliber, $368,000.

For purchase or manufacture of carriages for steel breech-loading coast-defense mortars of 12-inch caliber, $171,300.

For powders and projectiles for a reserve supply for armament of fortifications, $710,000.

For rapid-fire guns, including their mounts and ammunition, $163,000.

For coast-defense guns of 8, 10, and 12 inch caliber, manufactured by contract under the provisions of the fortifications acts approved August 18, 1890, and February 24, 1891, $327,162.

For necessary expenses, other than for powder for projectiles, incident to the test and inspection of the twenty-five 8-inch, fifty 10-inch, and twenty-five 12-inch guns provided under the fortifications acts of August 18, 1890, and February 24, 1891, and as provided for by said act of February 24, 1891, $5,000.

For powders and projectiles for the proof of coast-defense guns of 8-inch, 10-inch, and 12 inch caliber, $21,000.

For powder and projectiles for the proof of 12-inch breech-loading mortars, $25,200.

For purchase and erection of armor plates for testing armor-piercing shot, $25,000.

For armament chests for siege and seacoast cannon, $10,000.

For machine guns of caliber .30, army model, including metallic carriages, with limbers and protective shields complete for same, $100,000.

For amount required to complete the payment for ten Sims-Dudley dynamite guns ordered by the Chief of Ordnance under instructions from the Secretary of War dated June 27, 1898, $5,500.

For range finders for coast defense, $20,000.

For implements and equipments for service, and for care and preservation of seacoast armament mounted or in process of being mounted in seacoast batteries, $60,000.

For carriages for steel field guns, $178,000.

For sights for cannon, $20,000.

For fuses and primers for cannon, $35,000.

For inspecting instruments, gauges, and templates for the manufacture of cannon and projectiles, $3,000.

For the services of a chemist in investigating properties of smokeless powders and high explosives, with a view to improving same for adoption in service, $1,500.

PROVING GROUND, SANDY HOOK, NEW JERSEY.

For current expenses and maintenance of the ordnance proving ground, Sandy Hook, New Jersey, including expenses incident to the transportation of men and material there for general repairs and alteration and accessories incidental to testing and proving ordnance, including hire of assistants for the Ordnance Board, skilled mechanical labor, purchase of instruments and other supplies, building and repairing butts and targets, clearing and grading ranges, $57,000.

For the necessary expenses of officers while temporarily employed on ordnance duties at the proving ground and absent from their proper stations, at the rate of $2.50 per diem while so employed, and the compensation of draftsmen while employed in the Army Ordnance Bureau on ordnance construction, $16,000.

For repairs of railroad tracks connecting the proving ground with the Central Railroad of New Jersey, $3,000.

WATERVILLE ARSENAL, WEST TROY, N. Y.

For purchase and erection of two dynamos for electric-lighting plant, $1,400.

BOARD OF ORDNANCE AND FORTIFICATION.

To enable the board to make all needful and proper purchases, experiments, and tests to ascertain, with a view to their utilization by the Government, the most effective guns, small arms, cartridges, projectiles, fuses, explosives, torpedoes, armor plates, and other implements and engines of war, and to purchase or cause to be manufactured, under authority of the Secretary of War, such guns, carriages, armor plates, and other war material as may, in the judgment of the board, be necessary in the proper discharge of the duty devolved upon it by the act approved September 22, 1898; to pay the salary of the civilian member of the Board of Ordnance and Fortification provided by the act of February 24, 1891, and for the necessary traveling expenses of said member when traveling on duty as contemplated in said act; for the payment of the necessary expenses of the board, including a per diem allowance to each officer detailed to serve thereon, when employed on duty away from his permanent station, of $2.50 a day; and for the test of experimental guns, carriages, and other devices procured in accordance with the recommendation of the Board of Ordnance and Fortification, $100,000: Provided, That before any moneys shall be expended in the construction or test of any gun, gun carriage, ammunition, or implements under the supervision of the said board, the board shall be satisfied, after due inquiry, that the Government of the United States has a lawful right to use the inventions involved in the construction of such gun, gun carriage, ammunition, or implements, or that the construction or test is made at the request of a person either having such lawful right or authorized to convey the same to the Government.

That all material purchased under the foregoing provisions of this act shall be of American manufacture, except in cases when, in the judgment of the Secretary of War, it is to the manifest interest of the United States to make purchases in limited quantities abroad, which material shall be admitted free of duty.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana moves to suspend the rules and pass the bill which has been reported to the House. Is a second demanded?

Mr. BELL. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. HEMENWAY. I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana asks unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered. Is there objection? There was no objection.

Mr. HEMENWAY. Now, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be discussed until half past 5 o'clock, and that we then vote on the motion to suspend the rules and pass the bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana asks unanimous consent that the bill be discussed until half past 5.

Mr. DOCKERY. If that much time is required.

The SPEAKER. If that much time is required. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana will be in control of one hour and twenty-five minutes, and the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. BELL] in control of an equal amount of time on the other side.

Mr. HEMENWAY. Mr. Speaker, the substitute submitted to the House is the same as House bill No. 12086, which has been printed for several days, with some amendments, which I desire to explain to the House.

This bill is drawn with the intention of working the gun factory owned by the Government eight hours each day, and we have provided a sufficient appropriation for labor and a sufficient amount for gun forgings, and so forth, to supply the forgings and pay for the labor. The original bill has been amended on page 3, lines 15 and 16, by striking out $315,896 and inserting $255,000; and in line 19 by striking out $369,500 and inserting $535,000, and after line 25, inserting $65,000 to pay for one 18-inch Gathmann gun, and $10,000 for powder and projectiles; on page 5, in lines 13 and 14, by striking out the words "model of 1890," the model of 1890 being obsolete and the Government not desiring to buy that model. On page 5, in line 16, is a provision for amount required to complete the payment for ten dynamite guns, ordered by the Chief of Ordnance under the instructions of the Secretary of War, $5,500.

Line 16 of the original bill is so changed in the substitute that the total appropriation is increased from $27,000 to $37,000, this being to defray the expenses of giving to the Ordnance Department a boat of their own to run between Sandy Hook and New York City.

A complete statement of the amounts appropriated by the bill is made in the report which follows, except changes made as mentioned, which increase the total of the bill $165,104.

The Committee on Appropriations, in presenting the accompanying bill making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, and for the armament thereof for the procurement of heavy ordnance for trial and service, and for other purposes, submit the following in explanation thereof:

The estimates on which the bill is based will be found in the Book of Estimates for the fiscal year 1900, pages 202-207, and aggregate $12,151,898, of which sum there is recommended in the accompanying bill appropriations amounting $4,744,798.

During the Forty-ninth Congress (fiscal years 1887 and 1888) no appropriations were made on account of fortifications, their maintenance or armament, and for the twelve fiscal years 1875 to 1886, inclusive, the appropriation by Congress on this account averaged only $540,750 per annum, and only $463,500 per annum for the fourteen years, including 1887 and 1888, for which two later fiscal years no specific appropriations were made, as stated.

The bill reported herewith contains appropriations in continuance of the policy adopted by the Fiftyth Congress in the passage of the acts approved September 22, 1898, and March 2, 1899, and by the Fifty-first, Fifty-second, Fifty-third, Fifty-fourth, and Fifty-fifth Congresses in acts approved August 18, 1890, February 24, 1891, July 23, 1892, February 18, 1893, August 1, 1894, March 2, 1895, June 6, 1896, March 3, 1897, and May 7, 1898.

The appropriations by said acts for the eleven fiscal years 1889-1899 aggregate $48,761,747.50, or an average of $4,432,886.13 per annum.

Of the whole sum, $48,761,747.50, appropriated by the fortification acts covering the eleven fiscal years 1889-1899, the sum of $26,272,523 was appropriated in the three fortification acts enacted by the last and present Congress.

The fortification appropriation act enacted at the last session of the present Congress appropriated $9,377,494. Subsequent to its enactment sums aggregating $3,674,896 were provided in deficiency appropriation acts for fortifications and the armament thereof, and the further sum of $12,865,840.60 was allotted for the same objects from the general appropriation of $50,000,000 made for the national defense in the act of March 9, 1898, making, in all, $30,918,222.60 available for fortifications and the armament thereof under appropriations made at the last session of the present Congress.

The total appropriations made for fortifications and other works of defense since 1888, and since the recommendations of the "Endicott board" of 1885, including the appropriations made in deficiency acts at the last session and allotments made from the national defense fund, amount to $70,302,486.10.

The scheme of seacoast fortifications contemplated by the Endicott board and which has been followed by Congress in the appropriations made since 1888, it is now estimated will cost in the aggregate $112,167,367, of which sum there has been already provided $42,982,211.83, the Engineer Department having received $10,154,661.83 and the Ordnance Department $23,827,560.

The difference between the sum $42,982,211.83 already provided toward the scheme of the Endicott board and the sum total of appropriations, $70,312,489.10, for fortifications since 1888 is represented in expenditures for erecting and equipping the gun factory at Watervliet, the gun-carriage factory at Watertown, the Ordnance and Fortification Board, purchase of land for fortification sites, torpedoes for harbor defense, providing ammunition for service and for tests, manufacture of field guns, and for sundry other objects incident to providing and maintaining a system of seacoast defenses.

The following shows the aggregate amount appropriated under each natural subdivision of the accompanying bill, namely:

Gun and mortar batteries.....	$1,000,000
Sites for fortifications.....	300,000
Preservation and repair of fortifications.....	100,000
Plans for fortifications.....	5,000
Sea walls and embankments.....	2,500
Torpedoes for harbor defense.....	50,000
Armament of fortifications.....	3,139,888
Proving ground, Sandy Hook, N. J.....	46,000
Watervliet Arsenal, N. Y.....	1,400
Ordnance and Fortification Board.....	100,000
Total.....	4,744,798

APPENDIX.

ALLOTMENTS, ENGINEER AND ORDNANCE DEPARTMENTS, NATIONAL DEFENSE APPROPRIATION.

WAR DEPARTMENT, Washington, February 6, 1899.

SIR: Complying with the request contained in your letter of 26th ultimo for information as to the amounts allotted, respectively, to the Engineer and Ordnance departments from the $50,000,000 national defense appropriation, together with a detailed statement of the expenditures of said allotments, I have the honor to transmit herewith reports from the Chief of Engineers, dated January 30, 1899, and the Chief of Ordnance, just received, containing, it is thought, the information requested.

Very respectfully,

B. A. ALGER,
Secretary of War.

Hon. J. A. HEMENWAY,
Chairman Subcommittee on Appropriations,
House of Representatives.

OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF ENGINEERS,
UNITED STATES ARMY,
Washington, January 30, 1899.

Hon. R. A. ALGER, Secretary of War.

SIR: Replying to letter to the Secretary of War of Hon. J. A. HEMENWAY, chairman of the House subcommittee in charge of the fortification appropriation bill, dated January 28, 1899, requesting certain information relative to the expenditure of the amounts allotted to the Engineer and Ordnance departments, respectively, from the appropriation for "national defense," act of March 9, 1898, which letter was referred to the Chief of Engineers and the Chief of Ordnance for report, I have the honor to submit the following information as to the disposition of the amounts allotted to the Engineer Department.

The following is a statement of the various Presidential allotments:

1. March 17, 1898, for emplacements for 14 12-inch, 18 10-inch, 20 8-inch guns, and for rapid-fire guns.....	$2,725,000
2. March 17, 1898, for torpedo defense, including search lights, cable tanks, cables, mines, junction boxes, switches, dynamos, etc.....	250,000
3. March 31, 1898, for emplacements for 14 4.72-inch rapid-fire guns at specified points.....	90,000
4. March 31, 1898, for emergency purposes, for preparing temporary defenses at exposed points, and for torpedo service.....	60,000
5. April 2, 1898, for temporary batteries for old and new guns at specified points and for contingencies for further emergencies.....	150,000
6. April 2, 1898, for torpedo defenses of the country.....	1,150,000
7. April 16, 1898, for temporary batteries and installing and making serviceable old armament at specified points.....	65,000
8. April 21, 1898, for planting torpedoes.....	150,000
9. April 21, 1898, for emplacements for 8 6-inch rapid-fire guns at specified points.....	50,000
10. April 23, 1898, for emplacements for 17 12-inch and 21 8-inch B. L. rifles on barbette mounts.....	932,000
11. April 23, 1898, for cleaning ditches and moat of Fort Delaware, Del.....	6,000
12. May 23, 1898, for supplies for engineer depot at Manila.....	35,000
13. Allotted to officer in charge of public buildings and grounds for departmental telegraph service.....	7,000
Total.....	5,670,000
May 4, 1898, withdrawn by Secretary of War.....	$10,000
September 24, 1898, withdrawn by Secretary of War.....	75,000
Total.....	5,855,000

Not allotments..... 5,585,000

The President subsequently authorized the expenditure of $13,824.95, from allotments Nos. 1, 5, and 6, for equipment of engineer troops, and of $1,000, from allotment No. 6, for civilian assistants to engineer officers on the staff of department commanders.

The following summary of expenditures shows the purposes to which the foregoing allotments were applied:

Gun and mortar batteries.....	$4,005,471.75
Procurement of land.....	0.00
Preparation of plans.....	0.00
Construction of sea walls and embankments.....	0.00
Submarine mines and appliances to operate them, needful casemates, cable galleries, etc., to operate submarine mines.....	1,402,949.46
Cleaning out ditches and moat, Fort Delaware.....	6,000.00
Equipment of engineer troops.....	48,824.95
Civilian assistants to engineer officers, etc.....	366.00
Departmental telegraph service.....	7,000.00
Balance unallotted:
Battery construction.....	13,753.84
Submarine mine defense.....	70,000.00
Civilian assistants, etc.....	634.00
Total accounted for.....	5,585,000.00

The funds allotted for construction of gun and mortar batteries have been applied to the erection of permanent emplacements for 31 12-inch guns, 18 10-inch guns, 41 8-inch guns, and 46 rapid-fire guns, at 26 different harbors. These emplacements have been completed in all essential details, and much of the armament installed for service.

In addition to the above permanent batteries, temporary defenses were erected at 25 different harbors, involving the mounting of 79 old-type seacoast and modern siege guns, strengthening parapets and magazines of existing old-type batteries, cleaning and overhauling existing old-type armament, and sundry minor emergency work.

The funds allotted for torpedo defenses have been applied to the purchase of a vast amount of material, including over 400 miles of cable, over 100 tons of explosive, 1,650 new mine cases, 44 search lights, etc., and to planting and maintaining over 1,500 mines at 25 different harbors.

Detailed statements of the expenditures of the allotments for gun and mortar batteries and for submarine mine defense are given on the accompanying lists, marked sheets A and B, respectively. These statements are of a confidential nature, and should not under any circumstances be published.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN M. WILSON,

Brigadier-General, Chief of Engineers, U. S. Army.

Hon. R. A. ALGER,
Secretary of War.

Statement showing amounts allotted to the Ordnance Department, United States Army, from the $50,000,000 for the national defense, and expenditures under heads similar to those enumerated in the last fortification appropriation act.

[Prepared by request of Mr. HEMENWAY, chairman subcommittee on Appropriations, House of Representatives.]

Expended for—	Amount allotted.	Amount expended.	Amount returned to President.
Field ammunition.....	$48,356.00	$48,356.00	.....
Cast-iron mortar shells.....	15,000.00	15,000.00	.....
Projectiles for seacoast guns and mortars.....	715,000.00	715,000.00	.....
Ammunition, etc., for siege cannon.....	115,000.00	115,000.00	.....
Field ammunition.....	157,400.00	157,400.00	.....
Steel projectiles for seacoast guns and mortars.....	943,000.00	923,000.00	$20,000.00
Projectiles for siege cannon.....	25,000.00	25,000.00	.....
Powder for seacoast guns and mortars.....	200,000.00	200,000.00	.....
Powder for seacoast guns.....	315,000.00	315,000.00	.....
Powder and fuses for siege cannon.....	50,000.00	50,000.00	.....
Scott telescopic sights.....	21,250.00	21,000.00	250.00
Sights for field guns.....	3,300.00	3,300.00	.....
Brackets for telescopic sights.....	7,000.00	7,000.00	.....
3.2-inch field cannon and carriages, equipment, etc.....	436,000.00	387,750.00	48,250.00
Armor plates for testing projectiles.....	25,000.00	25,000.00	.....
12-inch barbette carriage.....	10,000.00	10,000.00	.....
12-inch disappearing carriage.....	14,000.00	14,000.00	.....
10-inch disappearing carriage.....	142,500.00	142,500.00	.....
Seacoast carriages.....	93,000.00	93,000.00	.....
10-inch seacoast gun carriages.....	597,460.00	597,460.00	.....
Seacoast guns from Bethlehem Iron Co., under contract November 7, 1891.....	261,445.00	261,445.00	.....
4.7-inch R. F. guns with mounts and ammunition.....	60,000.00	60,000.00	.....
6-inch R. F. guns with mounts and ammunition.....	205,000.00	205,000.00	.....
Seacoast guns from Bethlehem Iron Co., under contract November 7, 1891.....	120,000.00	120,000.00	.....
4.7-inch R. F. guns with mounts and ammunition.....	232,000.00	232,000.00	.....
6-inch R. F. guns with mounts and ammunition.....	244,700.00	244,700.00	.....
6 and 15 pounder R. F. guns with mounts and ammunition.....	294,000.00	92,000.00	202,000.00
5 and 6 inch R. F. guns with mounts and ammunition.....	240,000.00	240,000.00	.....
5 and 6 inch Brown segmental R. F. guns with mounts.....	30,000.00	30,000.00	.....
Armament chests.....	740,000.00	740,000.00	.....
Detonating fuses.....	1,050,180.00	532,929.00	517,251.00
Base percussion fuses.....	506,000.00	506,000.00	.....
Primers.....	20,000.00	20,000.00	.....
Cannon primers, fuses, and cartridge bags.....	36,000.00	36,000.00	.....
	6,000.00	6,000.00	.....
	5,000.00	5,000.00	.....
	65,000.00	65,000.00	.....
Total.....	8,008,591.00	7,280,840.00	727,751.00

REVISED ESTIMATES, ORDNANCE.

OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF ORDNANCE,
UNITED STATES ARMY,
Washington, February 7, 1899.

SIR: Agreeably with your verbal request, I have the honor to submit herewith a tabular statement showing reductions in the estimates submitted by the Ordnance Department for armament of fortifications, to correspond with the reduced engineer estimates of $3,000,000, $2,000,000, and $1,000,000, respectively.

Respectfully,

CHAS. S. SMITH,

Major, Ordnance Department, U. S. A.

Hon. J. A. HEMENWAY,
Chairman Subcommittee on Fortifications Bill,
House of Representatives.

ARMAMENT OF FORTIFICATIONS.

Reductions in estimates submitted by the Ordnance Department to correspond with reduced engineer estimates.

Item.	Engineer estimates.
	$5,000,000.	$2,000,000.	$1,000,000.
Carriages for 8, 10, and 12 inch guns:
16 12-inch disappearing carriages.....	$601,000
4 10-inch disappearing carriages.....
8 8-inch disappearing carriages.....
10 12-inch disappearing carriages.....
3 10-inch disappearing carriages.....
5 8-inch disappearing carriages.....		$442,500
5 12-inch disappearing carriages.....
3 8-inch disappearing carriages.....			$199,500
12-inch mortars:
72 mortars.....	828,000
56 mortars.....		644,000
32 mortars.....			368,000
12-inch mortar carriages:
73 carriages.....	384,200
56 carriages.....		299,600
32 carriages.....			171,200
R. F. guns and their mounts:
55 6-inch.....	567,000
20 6-inch.....		325,000
10 6-inch.....			163,000

CHAS. S. SMITH,

Major, Ordnance Department, United States Army.
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF ORDNANCE,
Washington, February 7, 1899.

UNEXPENDED BALANCES UNDER APPROPRIATIONS CONTROLLED BY THE BOARD OF ORDNANCE AND FORTIFICATION.

OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF ORDNANCE,
UNITED STATES ARMY,
Washington, February 8, 1899.

SIR: In reply to your verbal inquiry of this morning I have the honor to inclose herewith a statement made from the records of this office, showing the unexpended balances under appropriations controlled by the Board of Ordnance and Fortification.

Respectfully,

CHAS. S. SMITH,

Major, Ordnance Department, United States Army.

Hon. J. A. HEMENWAY,
Chairman Subcommittee on Fortifications Bill,
House of Representatives.

Statement of unexpended balances under appropriations controlled by the Board of Ordnance and Fortifications.

APPROPRIATIONS.

	Balance.
For the completion of the guns now under fabrication by the Ordnance Department, and for testing the same, etc.....	$3,631.73
For examining, testing, and experimenting with pneumatic or other dynamite guns, gun carriages, aerial torpedoes, dynamite shells and ammunition, and batteries for coast defense.....	2,360.87
For all needful and proper purchases, investigations, experiments, and tests, etc., by the Board of Ordnance and Fortification.....	7,336.84
For finishing and assembling of 8-inch, 10-inch, and 12-inch steel seacoast guns (under contract).....	5,413.28
To enable the Board of Ordnance and Fortification to purchase abroad, for experimental purposes, such articles of foreign manufacture as are not produced in this country.....	79.38
For pneumatic gun carriages, segmental guns, and high explosives.....	906.78
For movable submarine torpedoes.....	14,775.00
To enable the board to make all needful and proper purchases, experiments, and tests to ascertain, with a view to their utilization by the Government, the most effective guns, small arms, cartridges, projectiles, fuses, explosives, torpedoes, armor plates, and other implements and engines of war, and to purchase or cause to be manufactured, under authority of the Secretary of War, such guns, carriages, armor plates, and other war material as may, in the judgment of the board, be necessary in the proper discharge of the duty devolved upon it by the act approved September 22, 1888; to pay the salary of the civilian member of the Board of Ordnance and Fortification provided by the act of February 24, 1891, and for the necessary traveling expenses of said member when traveling on duty as contemplated in said act; for the payment of the necessary expenses of the board, including a per diem allowance to each officer detailed to serve thereon when employed on duty away from his permanent station, of $2.50 a day; and for the test of experimental guns, carriages, and other devices procured in accordance with the recommendation of the Board of Ordnance and Fortification.....	96,640.67
Total.....	131,234.55

EXPENDITURE OF FUNDS FOR USE OF BOARD OF ORDNANCE AND FORTIFICATION.

OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF ORDNANCE,
UNITED STATES ARMY,
Washington, February 8, 1899.

SIR: Referring to your question of this morning touching the amendment on page 18 of the fortifications bill, in italics, relative to the mode of making expenditures of the funds appropriated for the use of the Board of Ordnance and Fortification, and which is to the effect that the expenditures shall not only be made by the several bureaus of the War Department having jurisdiction of the same, but also by the board itself, as may be approved by the Secretary of War, I have the honor to state that the act of September 22, 1888, organizing the Board of Ordnance and Fortification, provides that "the expenditure shall be made by the several bureaus of the War Department having jurisdiction of the same under existing law," and since 1888 the appropriations made for the uses of the Board of Ordnance and Fortification have been placed on the books of this office and disbursed by the disbursing officers of this Department, as required by law.

To change the method of disbursing the funds as proposed would be new legislation and would change existing law.

Respectfully,

CHAS. S. SMITH,

Major, Ordnance Department, U. S. A.

Hon. J. A. HEMENWAY,
Chairman Subcommittee on Fortifications Bill,
House of Representatives.

APPROPRIATIONS MADE UNDER RECOMMENDATIONS OF ENDICOTT BOARD.
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, February 8, 1899.

Hon. J. A. HEMENWAY, chairman of fortification subcommittee, requests that Secretary will cause to be furnished him by to-morrow, if practicable, a statement which will show the total amount that has been appropriated since and including 1888 for fortifications in the line of the recommendations of the Endicott board; how much of said amount has been for the Engineer Department and how much for the Ordnance Department, said sums to include amounts appropriated in deficiency acts at the last session, and allotments from the national-defense fund; also how much it is now contemplated the whole scheme of seacoast defenses is to cost under the Endicott board recommendations as modified to date.

J. C. COURTS, Clerk.

JOHN TWEDDALE,

Chief Clerk, War Department.

WAR DEPARTMENT, February 8, 1899.

Furnishes official copy of telegram, dated House of Representatives, February 8, 1899, from J. C. Courts, clerk, specifying the information desired to-morrow, if practicable, by the chairman of the fortification subcommittee, House of Representatives.

[Second indorsement.]

OFFICE CHIEF OF ENGINEERS, UNITED STATES ARMY.

February 9, 1899.

Respectfully returned to the Secretary of War with memorandum giving the information called for, so far as it applies to the Engineer Department.

JOHN M. WILSON,

Brigadier-General, Chief of Engineers, United States Army.

[Third indorsement.]

WAR DEPARTMENT, February 9, 1899.

Respectfully transmitted to Hon J. A. HEMENWAY, chairman subcommittee on Appropriations, House of Representatives, in response to his request of 8th instant.

R. A. ALGER, Secretary of War.

MEMORANDUM.

The estimated cost of the work of the Engineer Department for completing the entire system of seacoast defenses under the scheme of the Endicott board as modified to date is about $30,000,000. This estimate covers the cost of all land batteries, exclusive of armament, and the cost of the needed torpedo appliances, but not the cost of land required as sites for seacoast defenses, for which the Endicott board made no recommendations or estimates. The estimated cost of the sites required for seacoast defenses is about $3,500,000.

The subjoined table shows the total appropriations from 1888 to date, including the allotments from the national-defense fund, for fortifications in the line of the recommendations of the Endicott board, so far as they pertain to the Engineer Department:

Act.	For gun and mortar batteries.	Torpedo defenses.
Sept. 22, 1888.....		$140,081.08
Mar. 2, 1889.....		500,000.00
Aug. 18, 1890.....	$1,221,000.00	200,000.00
Feb. 24, 1891.....	750,000.00	100,000.00
July 23, 1892.....	500,000.00
Aug. 1, 1894.....	500,000.00
Mar. 2, 1895.....	500,000.00	40,000.00
June 6, 1896.....	2,400,000.00	100,000.00
Mar. 3, 1897.....	3,841,333.00	150,000.00
Mar. 9, 1898 (national defense).....	3,880,325.83	1,152,949.48
May 4, 1898.....		50,000.00
May 7, 1898.....	3,000,000.00	150,000.00
July 7, 1898.....	* 2,562,000.00	† 600,000.00
Total.....	19,154,661.83	3,183,030.54

* Omitting $150,000 for San Francisco dynamite battery and $150,000 for installing range and position finders, neither of which were estimated for by Endicott board.

† Omitting $50,000 for supplies for operating electric-light plants during the war with Spain.

The total appropriations for purchase of sites for seacoast defenses aggregate $2,925,000.

OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF ORDNANCE,
UNITED STATES ARMY,
Washington, February 8, 1899.

SIR: In response to your request of even date, I have the honor to forward herewith for the information of your committee a statement showing the total amount of funds that have been appropriated, since and including 1888, for armament of fortifications in the line of the recommendations of the Endicott board. This statement includes the amounts appropriated in deficiency acts at the last session and allotments from the national-defense fund, and shows what additional appropriations will be necessary to complete the whole scheme of seacoast defenses under the scheme of the Endicott board as modified to date, and the total cost.

Respectfully,

CHAS. S. SMITH,

Major, Ordnance Department, United States Army.

Hon. J. A. HEMENWAY,
Chairman Subcommittee on Fortifications Bill,
House of Representatives.

Statement showing amount appropriated, including allotments from the appropriations for national defense, since and including 1899, for armament of fortifications, under the Ordnance Department, United States Army, in line of the project of the Endicott board, as modified to date.

[Appropriated to January 8, 1899.]

For—	Amount.	Amount remaining to be appropriated to complete the project.	Total appropriated and to be appropriated.
Steel forgings for seacoast-defense guns of 8, 10, 12, and 16 inch caliber .....	$0, 283, 201
Finishing and assembling 8, 10, 12, and 16 inch guns at the Army Gun Factory .....	1, 733, 700
Finishing and assembling 8-inch guns under contract .....	64, 000
Rapid-fire guns with their mounts, etc. ....	695, 725
4.7-inch rapid-fire guns with mounts and ammunition (Elswick, from Armstrong Co.) ..	344, 000
Nordenfeldt 4.7-inch rapid-fire guns with mounts and ammunition ..	244, 700
6-inch rapid-fire guns with their mounts, etc. (from Vickers Sons & Maxim G. & A. Co.) ..	240, 000	$10, 482, 957	$23, 482, 768
4-inch rapid-fire guns with their mounts (Driggs-Schroeder pattern) ..	30, 000
6-pounder and 15-pounder rapid-fire guns with their mounts and ammunition ..	740, 000
5 and 6 inch rapid-fire guns with their mounts ..	532, 029
5 and 6 inch Brown segmental wire rapid-fire guns with their mounts ..	506, 000
8, 10, and 12 inch guns, under contract with the Bethlehem Iron Co. ....	1, 411, 998
Seacoast guns from Bethlehem Iron Co., under contract of Nov. 7, 1891 ..	120, 000
Alteration of 15-inch barbette carriages to adapt them to present service ..	421, 000
Carriages for seacoast guns, 8, 10, 12, and 16 inch calibers ..	3, 473, 000
12-inch barbette carriages ..	14, 000	5, 962, 750	11, 230, 155
12-inch disappearing carriages ..	142, 500
10-inch disappearing carriages ..	93, 000
8, 10, and 12 inch seacoast gun carriages ..	1, 123, 905
12-inch breech-loading rifled mortars, cast-iron, hooped with steel ..	650, 000
12-inch breech-loading rifled mortars, steel ..	2, 805, 680	8, 012, 000	11, 527, 680
Carriages for 12-inch B. L. rifled mortars ..	1, 807, 684	3, 012, 000	5, 800, 684
Total .....	23, 827, 500	25, 500, 707	52, 107, 267

* These funds allotted from national defense.

It was not my intention to make any remarks upon this bill further than answer such questions as members saw fit to ask as to its provisions, but in view of the fact that certain members upon the floor of the House and certain newspapers have charged the Committee on Appropriations with cheeseparing, and with being responsible for the unprotected (as they supposed) condition of our coast during the recent war with Spain, I submit the following statement showing the amounts appropriated since 1889. The amounts prior to that date and since 1875 only averaged $540,750 per annum.

Fortification appropriations, 1839-1899.

Fiftieth Congress, Democratic House:
1889 .....	$3, 972, 000.00
1890 .....	1, 533, 594.00
Total .....	5, 505, 594.00
Fifty-first Congress, Republican House:
1891 .....	4, 222, 935.00
1892 .....	3, 774, 803.00
Total .....	8, 007, 738.00
Fifty-second and Fifty-third Congresses, Democratic Houses:
1893 .....	2, 734, 276.00
1894 .....	2, 210, 053.00
Total .....	4, 944, 331.00
1895 .....	2, 427, 004.00
1896 .....	1, 904, 557.50
Total .....	4, 331, 561.50
Fifty-fourth and Fifty-fifth Congresses, Republican Houses:
1897 .....	7, 377, 838.00
1898 .....	9, 517, 141.00
Total .....	16, 895, 029.00
1899 .....	30, 918, 232.60
1900 .....	4, 908, 902.00
Total .....	35, 828, 134.60
RECAPITULATION.
Fiftieth, Fifty-second, and Fifty-third Congresses, Democratic Houses ..	$14, 481, 486.50
Fifty-first, Fifty-fourth, and Fifty-fifth Congresses, Republican Houses ..	60, 730, 901.60
Total .....	75, 202, 388.10

You will notice from above statement that the Committee on Appropriations in the Fifty-fourth and Fifty-fifth Congresses have appropriated $52,723,163, or one-half the amount originally estimated in the Endicott report necessary to complete the coast fortifications for the whole of our seacoast. It must then be evident to members and to newspapers who have criticised the committee now in charge that they have done so without knowledge of the facts.

It is true that when war was declared our coast was not properly defended, but within a very short time thereafter we had 444 heavy guns and mortars mounted at the different ports, and within 10 days after the order was given by General Wilson 25 ports were protected by submarine mines. In my opinion great credit is due the Chief of Engineers and Chief of Ordnance and the officers under them for their prompt and rapid work.

While our seacoast defense is not complete, it certainly would have proved very disastrous to any war vessel trying to enter any of our principal ports in the face of our guns and over the submarine mines; and if since the Endicott plan was adopted each Congress had appropriated one-half the amount appropriated by either the Fifty-fourth or Fifty-fifth Congress our system of coast defenses would be complete. The following statement shows the number of guns and mortars that will be completed and emplaced when existing appropriations, not including the amount in this bill, have been expended:

Emplacements, guns, and carriages, under existing appropriations, completed or to be completed by June 30, 1899.

Mortars .....	312
12-inch .....	80
10-inch .....	118
8-inch .....	91
6-inch .....	62
5-inch .....	32
Rapid-fire .....	172
Total .....	867

Mr. HEMENWAY. I now yield twenty minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. FARIS].

Mr. FARIS. Mr. Speaker, on last Friday my ready and restless colleague [Mr. JOHNSON] appeared on this floor, as he has done occasionally during the present Congress, and read, in time yielded to him by a Democratic member, a carefully prepared speech on his view of the Philippine Islands, in which he bitterly assailed the President of the United States on account of the latter's recent address before the Home Market Club, of Boston. After the reading of my friend's philippic, in a colloquy with our colleague [Mr. LANDIS], he essayed to break the latter's stinging rebuke in repartee by contemptuously challenging the latter to contribute an argument to the question in debate, as if none could be made to answer that just delivered by himself.

It can not be overlooked that the performances of my colleague in his attacks upon the Chief Executive during the present session of Congress have attracted general attention in the State of Indiana. While there are thousands of our best people, both in and out of the Sixth Indiana district, who know my colleague's characteristics sufficiently not to care whether he is answered, yet there are other thousands who feel that his wanton fulminations should not go unheeded, and from Republican workers in Indiana it is asked, "Why don't some Indiana man answer?" and in their name and as one having faith in the President's high purposes, I accept the challenge so offensively hurled at our colleague and shall, if I can, puncture the baubles and show up the shortsightedness of my versatile colleague's argument.

I regret that my friend's speech has been withheld from the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD (at least I have not found it there), thus depriving me of its exact text and requiring an examination from memory and the newspaper reports.

Mr. Speaker, it is presumable that in my undertaking I may seem to reflect on my colleague personally. A decade of fair friendship with him is recalled to rebut such a presumption.

I would not add one feather to the unpleasant memories which I believe will bear upon him sooner or later because of his unjustifiable and wanton abuse of our great President, whose election was promoted by the good men of Indiana who have highly honored both him and me. He having indulged in such abuse, he inevitably invites such response as may fall within the limits of proper debate, and my purpose is to utter nothing not fairly evoked from the remarkable statements of my colleague. Sir, it should have been left to the Democratic side of this Chamber to muddy the waters about the Philippine problem now in our politics.

It should have been theirs exclusively to declare a want of confidence in the present Executive, as has been done in this debate, and extract some issue, if they could, to bolster and restore to respectable status the foundered and floundering fortunes of a once cohesive party. My honorable colleague has attempted to justify his vituperation against the President by claiming to occupy an elevated political plane on which he can support or condemn his party according to his agreement or disagreement with its policies. But his party has in no authoritative manner declared a policy as to the Philippines. Then why this contribution to Democratic comfort by assailing the Chief Executive as a falsifier and a criminal?

Mr. Speaker, I have noticed that when a man in public life becomes so enamored of his own conceptions and views, and exalts himself so immeasurably above his party, he usually retires shorn of the respect of his former political associates and laden with the contempt of his political opponents; and such high plane above party, though I will not charge it in this case, is usually mounted from the lower plane of disappointed hopes at an Administration "pie counter."

Now, Mr. Speaker, what is the occasion of my friend's distress? What is the measure of the President's offending? Let me condense my colleague's speech and set forth the points of his indictment, which I think can be fairly done under four paragraphs:

First. That the Chief Executive was the guest of honor at a banquet given by the Home Market Club, amid a profusion of flowers and music, overhung with pictures of Washington, Lincoln, and McKinley above the inscription of "Liberators;" that certain members of his Cabinet were there, and being introduced indulged in expressions of loyalty to their chief and praise of his Administration; that a great applauding assemblage of Massachusetts people looked down upon the festal gathering, and that in the midst of such gorgeous appointments and auspices, in the language of my friend, "the President does not appear to have been at all abashed." [Laughter.]

My colleague does not inform us that this was the only occasion wherein a President of the United States sat in the midst of festivities and within the sound of some adulation about himself without incontinently scampering away, and hence I am unable to embalm the fact in to-day's CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. I presume that the portrayal of that banquet scene was seriously designed by its author as a piece of word painting which furnished him the opportunity to lampoon certain Cabinet officials; for be it never forgotten that my colleague "goes the whole hog" when he starts in.

He is like the man in the story who swore he "hated a mule and hated everybody who didn't hate a mule." [Laughter.]

Second. The President's address, to quote my colleague, "was nothing more or less than a carefully devised and studious misstatement of the issue." Lend me your ears, my countrymen, for here is the milk in this cocoanut. I repeat "misstatement of the issue between the Chief Executive and those of his own party who are opposed to his wretched policy in the Philippines," and that he does not announce a policy in relation to those islands, but will await action by Congress.

The burden of my colleague's contention is couched herein by his assault upon the President about an "issue" between the latter and certain dissenting Republicans. In the same breath the President is pilloried about a "wretched policy" and an "issue," and in the next he is damned for not announcing a policy. You pay your money and take your choice. Now you see it and now you do not. It may be unfortunate that the President has not taken some of Aguinaldo's Congressional supporters into his confidence.

To hear them talk one might think their wisdom could settle this whole business before breakfast. There was work in the war with Spain that could thus be done. Dewey's gunners could destroy a Spanish squadron before breakfast, be it recorded to the praise of our Navy, but the evolution of a people and a government takes time. Who made an issue between the President and his assailants? The creation of issues presupposes two parties at least treating together.

The trouble with my colleague's utterances, and which makes them clash with every cool and conservative speech, is that he in the beginning started on the utterly false idea that this Government had entered upon a campaign of subjugation and forcible annexation of the Philippine Archipelago to the United States. Such an idea was never justified by the facts. Such a proposition was the creation of the extremist, the chaser of phantoms, the mind that speculates in ideals and loses the practical and real. The high duty of the President is to execute the laws of the land. This he is now doing through a military occupation of the Philippines, as Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy, under the Constitution of the United States.

He could not do any less and maintain the honor and dignity of the nation. He awaits action by Congress, and in due time it will be taken. But it will not be taken until Congress possesses information for wise and intelligent legislation that will comport with the greatness of our beloved country. The Home Market speech did not please the President's enemies, but it pleased his friends, and they are legion. As the guest of the club, he took occasion to address his countrymen, which he did with dignity and wisdom in words of fervid patriotism that found responsive echoes from the firesides of the Union.

Third. That the President's first impression was to hold only a coaling station in the Philippines, which would have been proper and legitimate, but that he "committed a fatal error" in listening to the opinion of Admiral Dewey, the peace commissioners, the people who greeted him on his Western trip last autumn, and that he actually changed his mind (mirabile dictu!), and the treaty with Spain secured the Philippines to us on payment of $20,000,000.

Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that if holding the Philippines as a result of the war with Spain is wrong, the holding of a coaling station by the same means would have been equally wrong. The only difference would be in the degree of the wrong. Be this as it may, the President changed his mind, and this was grievous. My colleague would have had him say to Dewey, "You struck a pretty hard blow at Manila and contributed much to reducing the enemy, but you have no sense in determining the results of the war. My mind is fixed on them."

He would have had him say to the distinguished gentlemen who went to Paris as our peace commissioners, "It is true that you were chosen to this duty by reason of great learning and experience in public affairs, and were charged with conserving the best interests of the United States in making the treaty, and that you have devoted weeks of labor that you might execute your trust intelligently, yet my mind was made up about this treaty from the beginning, and it can not be changed."

My colleague would have had the President say to the waiting thousands who hung upon his words in the trip through the great West, "I see your devotion to the flag that enriches the breeze at every home; I see in your faces that you are proud of the result of the war; I hear from your lips that the full measure of our victory shall be registered in the treaty. But I have come out from Washington to tell you that neither the judgment of Admiral Dewey, the advice of the peace commissioners, nor the opinions and sentiments of the throngs of my fellow-citizens who greet me can have any avail. A coaling station in the Philippines we will have—no more. My mind can not change."

Then would my clever colleague have bounded into this Chamber with glad acclaim praising the greatness and wisdom of the President of the United States? If so, what would the other millions have thought of both of them? Mr. Speaker, the blindest man is he who will not see. The assertion of the authority of this Government and the purpose to maintain it in the Philippines is clear as day to him that looks. The methods of acquiring territory by nations are by right of discovery, by purchase, and by conquest.

Our forces entered those islands just as logically and legitimately as a result of the war as they entered Cuba and Porto Rico, and by the same right of conquest is each held. War is a substantive thing, with its main purpose and its collateral incidents. The main purpose is to weaken and subdue the enemy. She may be overcome by destroying her army and navy or by capturing her territory that supports them. In a sense, when a nation goes to war she mortgages her resources and her domain to the god of battle to abide the conflict and be foreclosed to the victor as the conflict rages.

If she wins, the incumbrance vanishes through her victory; if she loses, foreclosure is complete with the triumph of the adversary. Recall our civil war to illustrate. The great contention was a preserved or a broken Union. In the beginning little, if any, thought was given to the abolition of slavery, but the resources of both sides were under the mortgage, and the horizon widened with the march of time and armies. The South lost her property in human chattels as well as she lost in the main contention.

Spain confronted us in war last April. The great question was the liberation from her dominion of the unhappy island of Cuba. This self-imposed task was undertaken by the United States from a feeling of humanity toward a downtrodden people. No thought was given to other Spanish possessions. Not half the people of this nation knew of the Philippines as a part of her domain. But they were under the mortgage. By the matchless prowess of Dewey's fleet in Manila Harbor was the first decree in the foreclosure process entered. Others followed, until the treaty at Paris barred Spain's right to redeem.

Yes; we will pay the unfortunate Kingdom of Spain $20,000,000. We need not have done it, but, thank God, a better civilization, that knows equity and disposes generously toward a fallen foe, has grown up in this favored hemisphere. The day of "might makes right" does not dawn to the people of the United States. The authority of this nation is exercised and will be maintained in the Philippines. How long it will remain is for the future to determine. But the croakers and the harping critics may well take notice that it will remain until law and order shall be established, and that it never will be withdrawn at the behest of any other power in this round world.

Fourth. That the whole business between the United States and the Philippines is wrong; that the capitalists of this country are at the bottom and behind our acquiring the islands, and our Army and Navy, to quote my colleague, "is to conquer and hold the Filipinos in subjection" as a prey for their greed.

Mr. Speaker, this proposition is a fitting creation of my colleague for the necessities of his argument. Facts are wanting to support his sordid suggestion against the capitalists of the country, and his charge is at variance with the truth. His ipse dixit will hardly carry conviction.

Had he a little longer service in this Chamber I doubt not he might soon give us another deliverance on our participation in the Spanish war being the result solely of a conspiracy among the capitalists of this country, and neither the Government nor the people know what they have been doing. I look upon this last ebullition of my honorable colleague as about the final step leading from the party that has generously fostered him. I shall not be surprised to see him next year marching in the Bryan columns of 16 to 1 without nausea and with head erect pouring forth his torrential vocabulary against the party that has trusted him, and against most every other form of political respectability in the United States. But the nation will survive and so will the Republican party.

Sir, I have no patience with an ultraism that injures and discredits. To charge that the Army and Navy of this Government are to be used to subvert liberty is not only to forget our history, but the charge touches close to the borderland of treason. Every genuine American sentiment pulsates for the universal reign of liberty among the peoples of the earth. He who reads any other sentiment in the President's Home Market speech does so to his own discredit and to his lasting shame.

But, Mr. Speaker, conditions in the Philippines are now beyond the question of the right or wrong in our military or naval forces being there. I wish that Admiral Dewey had sailed away from Manila after he destroyed the Spanish squadron, leaving our acquisition of the archipelago, if we wanted it, to be accomplished at a later day; but he did not, and his remaining binds the United States to his support. The question now is, Do we favor the rebellious Filipinos or the soldiers there under the Stars and Stripes? In this there is no middle ground. Our forces are there by authority of the sovereign people to do and to die to establish the authority of the flag above them.

Who says those brave Americans should be withdrawn until their mission is accomplished? When order is established and the sovereignty of this nation is recognized by the Filipinos it will be time to consider their future relations with us. That their contact with our civilization will elevate them and promote their every interest I have no doubt. Our soldier boys have shed their blood and died there. This fact begets hope, for every battlefield baptized by American blood, whether in this hemisphere or that, betokens a richer liberty.

With our soldiers falling in efforts to bring peace and establish a better civilization, the words that would embarrass or impede the triumph of our arms should be muffled in the throats that would speak them. While the right of free speech is a boon of our liberties, the wanton abuse of that right is reprehensible in the extreme. And at the bar of public opinion and in the arena of politics woe be unto the Democraldos and the Johnsonaldos who aid and abet the enemy by assaults on the President in this sore emergency. Rather should our salutation be "The Stars and Stripes forever." [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, the dawn and the full day will come and break. It will witness the silence of the shortsighted, the extremist, the croaker, and at the same time the Filipino will bless the hand that led him out into the light. The same three portraits will hang together on the walls of the Home Market Club and elsewhere, and the name of McKinley will be illustrious as the liberator of a race. [Loud applause.]

During the delivery of the foregoing remarks the time of Mr. FARIS expired.

Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my friend's time, if that can be allowed under the rules.

Mr. HEMENWAY. I yield the gentleman five minutes more.

Mr. FARIS resumed and concluded his remarks.

Mr. HEMENWAY. I hope that the gentleman from Colorado will now consume some of his time.

Mr. BELL. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Speaker, the demands upon my time, incident to duties connected with the Committee on Appropriations, have been so exacting that I have been unable to give to the Hanna-Payne ocean subsidy scheme that careful examination to which it is entitled by reason of its importance.

The policy of the measure, however, is a familiar one, and I must content myself, on account of limited time, with a restatement, principally, of the views I expressed when the proposition to give subsidies to certain steamship lines was last under consideration.

The provisions of the bill, which, to quote its title, is designed "to promote the commerce, increase the foreign trade of the United States, and to provide auxiliary cruisers, transports, and seamen for Government use, when necessary," involves a return to the policy of this country which was discarded, after an impartial and exhaustive test, prior to the civil war.

The Louisiana purchase added a new empire to the Republic, out of which we have carved thirteen States and two Territories—an immense domain of inexhaustible fertility and of manifold and varied production, consequent upon its vast climatic range. Its acquisition greatly enlarged the scope of our splendid commercial possibilities.

When Jefferson effected the Louisiana purchase, Napoleon exultantly prophesied that it would give his hereditary enemy, England, a maritime rival in the United States, which would in time wrest from England the supremacy of the seas. That prophecy was amply warranted by our commercial and maritime promise, and was rapidly accomplishing its fulfillment when, in 1855, the sails of the American mercantile navy were seen upon every sea and in every seaport mart of the world. At that time three-fourths of our commerce was carried under the American flag. Then we were indeed formidable rivals of England, for, as Mr. Webster declared—

We had a commerce which left no sea unexplored; navies which took no law from superior force.

That period, however, Mr. Speaker, was the culmination of our maritime expansion and development. Dating from that auspicious period to the present, our merchant navy has steadily declined. Though our foreign commerce, despite the restrictions which have been imposed by unwise trade regulations and protective tariffs, has more than trebled, yet our flag is now almost a stranger upon the ocean highways, only about 11 per cent of our foreign commerce being carried in American bottoms.

The Republic, under the ensign of protection, is degraded to an inferior rank upon the high seas; and Congress should make an exhaustive examination of the causes which have led to this decline, so that by wise legislation we may recover the old-time prestige of our merchant navy. In this examination partisanship should be subordinated to patriotism, for in my opinion, with the aid of proper legislation it is in our power now to enter upon a marvelous era of commercial expansion, in which the United States will become the dominating power among the nations of earth.

CAUSES OF DECLINE.

I fully concur with the minority of the committee in their statement, so far as it goes, of the causes that produced the decadence of our mercantile navy. I quote from their report as follows:

When the change came from wooden sailing ships to iron and steel steamships, our shipbuilders were at a disadvantage, because steel and iron cost more here than in Great Britain. Englishmen and Scotchmen began to build the cheapest and best ships. When we built the cheapest and best ships, Great Britain repealed her navigation laws and opened her trade to free ships, and enabled her shipowners to buy American-built ships and thus to keep on the sea. When the tables were turned on us, we stupidly continued our barbarous old navigation laws, and doomed our great shipping interests to destruction.

Mr. Speaker, in my opinion this is in part the correct explanation of the decline which began in 1855, since which time England has wrested from us the carrying trade of the world.

So long as wooden vessels alone were employed in commerce, our inexhaustible stores of cheap material for shipbuilding enabled us to maintain unchallenged supremacy in the construction of ocean vessels. When, however, iron and steel supplanted wood for construction, and steam was substituted for sails as the motive power, England secured an advantage which for a time did not seem to be realized by our own people.

Following this advantage came the civil war, during which England established her great shipyards and further intrenched her supremacy. The result is that the difference of cost in the construction and equipment between an English vessel and an American vessel ranges all the way from $25,000 to $125,000 or more in favor of the English vessel.

Again, Mr. Speaker, another apparent cause of our decline is a difference of 25 per cent or more in operating expenses in favor of English vessels; and yet another cause is to be found in the subsidies enjoyed by the mercantile steamers of many foreign nations.

These several causes, associated as they are with the business of constructing and operating ships for ocean commerce, practically forbid the construction of American vessels.

Still another cause of the decline, not directly connected with the ocean carrying trade, was the diversion of American capital and enterprise from maritime business to the wonderful field of the great West. The smoke of our civil conflict had scarcely cleared from the skies before the great Northwest entered upon a period of wonderful development. Great cities, beautiful towns, and thriving villages were built up; railway systems spanned our rivers, pierced our mountains, and traversed our prairies; everywhere there was a demand both for capital and labor. Under these conditions it is not surprising that the young men of New England and the coast line of our country should have turned their attention to the great Northwest rather than sought their fortunes upon the ocean, as had previously been their custom.

These conditions, however, are now in great measure inoperative. The present railroad mileage is ample for our needs for at least twenty years. Our public domain, excepting here and there an Indian reservation, has been opened to settlement and occupation. The great West no longer offers the inducements it did during the period immediately succeeding the civil war. Hence there no longer exists this hindrance to the restoration of our flag to the seas. The time is at hand when the young men of our coast territory must again find employment upon the ocean.

Before passing to a brief glance at the legislation which, in my judgment, is essential to a restoration of our merchant marine, I desire to advert to the fact that our maritime decline began during a period of large subsidies, which proved powerless to arrest it. The United States gave large gratuities to a number of ocean lines from 1850 to 1858. But these lavish contributions from the Treasury were impotent to maintain the supremacy of wooden sailing vessels against iron steamers constructed by the enterprise and genius of the English people. Therefore, this Government, after full and impartial experiment, wisely abandoned that policy, and by the act of June 14, 1858, authorized sea postage to foreign vessels in the carriage of mails, and both sea and inland postage to American vessels. This was the only discrimination made by the law during a long period of years, and until the recent mail subsidy granted by Congress.

HOW TO RESTORE OUR MERCHANT NAVY.

Mr. Speaker, in considering the effect of the protective policy upon the fortunes of our merchant marine, we must recognize the existence of two fundamental propositions—first, that the cost of constructing and operating ships must be such as to enable them to carry products as cheaply and with as great dispatch as competing lines, and second, that there must be commerce both for the outward and the returning voyage.

The tariff, heretofore, has not only operated to increase enormously the construction cost of ships, and incidentally their operating expenses, but also to limit or prevent the return cargo. There can be no profitable ocean carrying trade unless the ocean carrier is able to command a cargo both ways. It would be just as reasonable to expect a railway line to realize satisfactory dividends to stockholders while commanding freight only one way as to expect a line of ocean steamers to do a profitable business with a cargo for the outward voyage only. Therefore, the policy of commercial exclusion which has been maintained by the Republican party is at war with the interest of our ocean carrying trade. Under the theory of protection as supplemented by subsidies, the Republican party has tried to sell to every nation while practically refusing to buy from any. It has attempted, under the protective theory, the impossible feat of controlling at the same time the home market and the commerce of the outside world.

The purpose of protection, as graphically stated by the present Chief Executive, "is to check imports of such articles as are produced by our people." The accomplishment of this purpose inevitably limits the cargo of the ocean liner for the return voyage, and the subsidy proposed by this bill, amounting in twenty years to not less than $165,000,000, and perhaps $300,000,000, must be paid by the people as a mere gratuity to compensate for the lack of a return cargo.

Mr. Speaker, having made a cursory analysis of some of the causes which, in my opinion, have driven our flag from the pathways of ocean traffic, it becomes material to suggest remedial legislation that will be competent and effective.

Lavish subsidies to ocean steamships would, indubitably, maintain such lines in the absence of remunerative business. That is to say, the Government can, at the expense of the taxpayers, enter into such an unprofitable partnership, and thus keep our flag afloat; but it can not thus permanently build up profitable lines of ocean transportation. There must be cargoes both ways, and, in the absence of the ability to command such freight, the moment that subsidies are withdrawn, the lines of ocean transportation decline. This has been practically the experience of all nations.

I will now cite some of the remedial legislation I submitted to the House in a former debate upon the principle underlying ocean subsidies. The fundamental proposition already laid down—that if we would compete successfully for ocean commerce, we must be able to carry it as cheaply and with as great dispatch as our competitors—seems to me necessarily to force the conclusion that there should be a repeal of all laws which impose taxes of any sort, tonnage dues, consular fees, and other burdens of such character as add to the operating expenses of the vessel, as well as the repeal of the tariff tax upon every kind of material entering into or required in its construction. Indeed, sir, if we are properly to reembark upon this competitive field, it is essential also that we permit our shipowners to purchase their ships wherever they may elect, with a view to securing as favorable terms as their competitors. I by no means ignore the importance of developing the shipbuilding industry of our own country. But, sir, this will come in its proper time. If we reestablish our carrying trade, the primary effect will be to occasion a demand for repairing, and shipbuilding will soon follow as a natural sequence.

So far as the interests of commerce, as such, are involved, the restatement of the proposition—that if we would develop our commerce we must sell as cheaply as other nations do—involves of necessity a reduction of tariff burdens to the utmost extent compatible with the needs of government.

I need not amplify the remedial measures suggested in behalf either of shipbuilding or of commerce; for the analyses of the causes which have led to the decline of the one and retarded the growth of the other have almost suggested, without such amplification, to the mind of every gentleman on this floor, the remedies to which I have just adverted.

Mr. Speaker, the opposing theories of commercial exclusion and freedom of trade have contested for supremacy at many periods in the world's history, but always with an ultimate result in favor of unhampered commerce. Let us return, then, to that propitious policy under which our merchant navy, freighted with an abundant and increasing commerce, formerly explored every sea and cast anchor in every harbor. Divested of artificial impositions and freed from hurtful restraints, our merchant marine can then renew and reassert its strength and importance upon the great deep. Sir, the world's Klondike wealth of commerce will yet be ours, if we but catch the spirit of commercial expansion now inviting us to mightier conquests and larger fields of endeavor. I yield fifteen minutes to my colleague [Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri].

[Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri addressed the House. See Appendix.]

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I ask leave to extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks leave to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. DOCKERY. I now yield ten minutes to my colleague [Mr. VANDIVER].

Mr. VANDIVER. Mr. Speaker, I number myself among those whose motto is, "My country, may she ever be right; but right or wrong, my country!" So long as the brave soldiers of my country are contending with a foreign foe I shall do what is in my power to sustain them. I shall do what is in my power, too, as soon as I think it advisable, to have them withdraw from a conflict which I think is unworthy of them.

Mr. Speaker, one year ago, we, on this side of the Chamber, were struggling to drive the Administration into a war for the liberation of enslaved humanity. To-day, many of us, with the same patriotic and humanitarian purpose, are seeking to drag the Administration out of a war which has degenerated into a barbarous extermination of an inferior race.

I remember, sir, that after the inauguration of the present Administration it took more than twelve months for this patriotic and humanitarian impulse among the people to produce an effective impression on the Government. The oppression, the suffering and distress of the reconcentrados in Cuba was the most fruitful theme for public indignation until the tide of sentiment throughout the land rose so high that the party in power here could no longer resist it, and open revolt in the party ranks seemed to threaten them with lasting ruin. In other words, sir, nothing was done for the relief or assistance of the Cuban patriots, although your party had declared for it in your platform, until the force of public sentiment threatened to drive the party out of power.

And now, sir, having found, in the pursuit of a foreign war, the means for promotion of party favorites and the fulfillment of personal pledges to political friends, as well as a safe and sure ground for appealing to that patriotic sentiment which, though often misguided, is always reliable, the President after ending the war with Spain declares war against the helpless victims of Spain's tyranny.

War was commenced to extend the blessings of freedom. It is now waged to crush the spirit of freedom.

But I venture to prophesy that within another twelve months that same noble sentiment of sympathy for the oppressed, that same sense of even-handed justice which constantly rules the counsels of free men, will again assert itself with such force and potency that your war of aggression and extermination of a helpless people will be brought to an end, like the other war commenced, with a threat of political extermination for the Republican party in this country.

What has changed the policy of this war? Is it the land grabbers' greed? Or is it the bloodthirsty spirit of the lion's whelp after once tasting blood? When war was first declared, this country formally announced to the world that we were not entering upon a war of aggression; that territorial aggrandizement was not our purpose; but that we were setting before the nations of the world the first example in history of a great and powerful government reaching out its mighty arm for the protection and assistance of a weak and helpless neighbor, who had become the victim of tyrannical and despotic power. The President himself announced to the world that "forcible annexation would be criminal aggression," and was not to be thought of; and accordingly he seemed to entertain no purpose of annexing the Philippine Islands until after the Paris commission had met to form a treaty of peace. Then his mind seemed to undergo a radical change.

He suddenly demanded the cession of the Philippine Islands from Spain, not for the use and benefit of the natives of these Islands, as had been done for Cuba, but for territorial expansion of the United States; and from that day to this the Army and Navy of the United States, which had been put at his command for the defense of liberty and right, for the protection of person and property, have been used as the mighty engines of destruction for those unfortunate half-civilized people whom the accidents of war have placed at our mercy. Spain was cruelly crushing the life out of Cuba in a vain endeavor to uphold the majesty of the throne. To-day, the great Republic of America, heir of all the ages, repository of freedom for all climes and countries, the much-boasted final home of liberty, is crushing the very spirit of liberty, which has dared not raise its front in that far-off wilderness of the eastern seas.

In the name of Liberty! In the name of God and Humanity! instead of trying to carry republican civilization into those islands, as one gentleman on this floor has suggested, "with a sword in one hand and a Bible in the other;" instead of trying to shoot Christian civilization into heathendom at the mouth of the cannon; instead of a bloody and heartless campaign for the glory of conquest and upholding the majesty of McKinley imperialism, let us offer to those people the assistance of a great Republic on the opposite side of the globe, the sympathy of a great and free people beyond the seas who cherish the memory of a time when their forefathers pledged their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor for the maintenance of that sublime doctrine, "that all government derives its just powers from the consent of the governed."

Let us proclaim to them that our pride in the noble achievements of our ancestors waxes warm as we see their example illustrated, and the very words of their declaration of independence followed by those who, in a distant part of the world, are now struggling to establish and maintain the sublime principle of self-government. Let us rejoice that the Declaration of American Independence has at last penetrated the dark recesses of heathendom, and so long as they profess adherence to the doctrine of our own Constitution and its bill of rights let us not dare deny to them that precious boon of civil and religious liberty which we would fight to maintain for ourselves.

Mr. Speaker, I have heard much about the glory of our victories, and in so far as those victories have been won over Spanish forces I have rejoiced with others; but where is the glory when a great stalwart giant kicks a helpless child into the gutter? The victories of Dewey at Manila, of Schley at Santiago, and Wheeler at San Juan stimulated the pride of patriotic American hearts because they were victories for American principle and the divine right of manhood. But the recent victories over the Philippine insurgents have aroused no such enthusiasm in the American breast. Why? Because they feel that they were not victories for freedom, and seemed to indicate only that the Filipinos have had a change of masters.

If President McKinley had given those people hearty assurance that we were not intending to rob them of their country and their government, we would not now be compelled to shoot them down. They were our friends, and would have continued to be so if the President had assured them that he would not rob them of their personal and political rights. And hence, sir, I believe that the blood of our soldiers and that of the Philippine insurgents, now being shed in those unhappy islands, is justly chargeable to this wild craze of the Administration for forcible annexation of the islands, which the President himself in the beginning of the war had declared to be "criminal aggression." I confess, sir, that while I have the highest admiration for the courage and discipline of our soldiers and sailors who are braving the dangers of disease lurking in every breath of air they breathe, and the bullets of treacherous foes in ambush, in execution of orders of their superior officers, that I deplore the fact that they must sacrifice their lives in so unworthy a cause.

And, sir, while I have always cherished a high respect for the Christian religion and its representatives, believing it to be the great uplifting moral agency of the world, I have a most profound contempt for the sentiment of these would-be missionaries who would christianize the heathen by trampling upon all their rights and shooting religion into them with Gatling guns. If Christianity has to be propagated by the sword, and gain a foothold by imitating the followers of Mohammed, whose custom it was to offer conquered people only a choice between the Koran and the sword, then Ingersoll should have a bishop's mitre.

But, Mr. Speaker, aside from the rights or the interests of the people of the Philippine Islands, I am opposed to annexing them to the United States from the standpoint of our own interests. I see no good to come to us, but only evil. We hear a new doctrine preached by these expansionists which they would not have dared to proclaim twelve months ago. They tell us that the Declaration of Independence and the bill of rights in the Constitution itself have no application to the people of conquered territory.

They tell us that we own the Philippine Islands by right of conquest; that we can do with them what we wish; that the right of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, the right of trial by jury, the habeas corpus—all those inestimable privileges which we have cherished as the inalienable rights of man were not intended for conquered subjects, and can only be extended to them when, in our own good time, we may deem it expedient to bestow them. We are told that the American flag waves over the Philippine Islands, and we are asked, "Whom shall it pull down?" In reply I say, "Whom shall pull down the Constitution?" The American flag is the emblem of free government. May its folds never wave over enslaved subjects or conquered provinces where the Constitution has no meaning. May it never become the emblem of tyranny and oppression. May its stars be stars of hope, and not of hatred, for those over whom it waves. [Applause.]

I say, sir, that I look at the whole question from the standpoint of American interests and the destiny of this Republic. You can not maintain a constitutional government at home and an unconstitutional government abroad. Deny self-government to any people over whom our flag floats and you have taken one long step toward denying it to all. No republic in the history of the world has ever long succeeded in administering constitutional government at home and monarchical government for its colonies. An empire means an emperor as well as a territory, and I believe, sir, that the great statesman from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] was right when he declared some weeks ago:

My opinion is that if the United States acquire the Philippine Islands to govern them as a subject or vassal state, the destruction of the American Republic will date from the Administration of William McKinley.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I wish to call attention again to the increasing expenses of the Government and the condition of the Treasury, and ask whether or not we can afford this investment in the Philippine Islands from a financial standpoint; and in this connection I think it would be profitable to observe the figures which tell the story of our increasing extravagance, and especially the story of the reckless and riotous extravagance of this Republican Congress.

In opening the debate on the sundry civil bill the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON], the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, very cautiously, but significantly, sounded the alarm to his party associates. He tells us that the estimates of the Secretary of the Treasury, showing a probable deficit of $112,000,000, are entirely too low; that the deficit will reach $159,000,000, not counting the $20,000,000 to be paid to Spain, and that when this is added in the deficiency will reach $179,000,000, and confidently asserts that this amount is rather under than above what we will actually witness.

It is indeed refreshing to hear a Republican even in the faintest manner suggest any necessity for economy in public expenditures. But no suggestion of economy seems to find favor with the Republican Administration, and the gentleman from Illinois labors in vain when he undertakes to restrain his associates from lavish and extravagant appropriation of public funds. He tells us now that the Secretary of the Treasury estimates the total expenditures of the Government for the next fiscal year, on a peace footing, at $641,000,000, exclusive of all war expenses and a number of other items necessarily omitted from his estimates; or that altogether the total expenditures for next year will reach the enormous sum of $700,000,000, which will be the largest sum of money ever appropriated for the government of this country, or any other country, in time of peace.

It is no answer to this to say that the business and population of the country are increasing, and hence the Government expenses must be greater, because the increase in Government expenses has greatly exceeded the increase of population and business. By all the rules of economic business a large institution should be run at proportionately less expense than a small one. But Republican extravagance has reversed that law of economics, and our Government becomes more expensive to the individual, as well as to the community, in proportion as it grows larger.

For many years before the civil war the total expenses of the Government only amounted to about $3 per capita of the population, and for many years after the civil war and after the disbanding of the armies, notwithstanding the heavy appropriations for pensions and interest on the public debt, still the total expenses of the Government amounted to less than $5 per capita of the population until the "Reed Congress," which ran it up to nearly $6 per capita, and now McKinley's Administration and another "Reed Congress" have run it up to more than $7 per capita, and we are deliberately informed by the members of the Appropriations Committee that for the next year the appropriations called for will aggregate $700,000,000, on the supposition that we are at peace with the world, which amount, divided among the 75,000,000 people, makes $9.33 per head for every man, woman, and child in the country. And this means, remember, for every man who has a wife and three children, a total tax for the General Government amounting to five times this sum, which is $46.65, to say nothing of State, county, and municipal taxation.

Then do you think it strange that the people groan under this burden? I tell you there must come a time of reckoning. If we refuse to call a halt now, the time will come when the stubborn protest of a tax-ridden people will be heard in this Chamber, and will be respected.

The distinguished chairman of the Appropriations Committee also tells us that he sees no hope for the reduction of taxes during the next two years. We must continue to lick stamps, and pay high prices for sugar and coffee.

I tell him, in reply, that I think the relief will come soon after the two years are out; for I hope and believe that on the 4th of March, 1901, a new Administration will come into power, commissioned by the people to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of the inauguration of that stalwart old champion of Democracy Thomas Jefferson, whose honesty and simplicity laid the foundation of a party whose constant watchword from that time to this has been economic administration of public affairs.

And as the beginning of the nineteenth century witnessed the triumph of a great national reform party, so the opening of the twentieth century will usher in again a great national reform movement, with a Democratic Congress at one end of Pennsylvania avenue and that great champion of Democracy, that worthy successor to Thomas Jefferson, Wm. J. Bryan, at the other end. Then, and not till then may the people hope to get relief.

In proof of Democratic economy and Republican extravagance I submit the following table, showing that every time a Republican Congress has come into power there has been a large increase in the expenses of the Government, and every time a Democratic House has been elected by the people it has carried out the pledge of retrenchment and reform. These figures show the actual appropriations made by every Congress since 1875.

Total appropriations of Republican and Democratic Congresses.
[Always made for the year in advance.]

For year ending June 30—	Congress.	Session.	Politics.	Total appropriations
1875	Forty-third	First	Republican	$325,666,791
1876	do	Second	do	328,123,199
1877	Forty-fourth	First	Democratic	290,591,138
				28,537,061
Reduction of expenses by Democrats.
1878	Forty-fourth	Second	Democratic	296,066,694
1879	Forty-fifth	First	do	352,407,775
1880	do	Second	do	372,019,629
1881	Forty-sixth	First	do	361,672,204
1882	do	Second	do	365,965,479
1883	Forty-seventh	First	Republican	422,137,073
1884	do	Second	do	554,297,875
1885	Forty-eighth	First	Democratic	318,829,489
				35,408,386
Reduction of expenses by Democrats.
1886	Forty-eighth	Second	do	299,439,918
1887	Forty-ninth	First	do	367,340,971
1888	do	Second	do	359,011,523
1889	Fiftieth	First	do	422,635,343
1890	do	Second	do	395,337,516
1891	Fifty-first	First	Republican	463,398,510
1892	do	Second	do	525,019,672
1893	Fifty-second	First	Democratic	507,609,188
				17,418,484
Reduction of expenses by Democrats.
1894	Fifty-second	Second	Democratic	519,504,369
1895	Fifty-third	First regular	do	492,230,685
1896	do	Second	do	497,008,520
1897	Fifty-fourth	First	Republican	519,446,810
1898	do	Second	do	528,512,789
1899	Fifty-fifth	First regular	do	592,527,991
1900	do	Second regular	Republican (proximo).	675,000,000

For purpose of comparison these figures will be still more striking and instructive if we add together the appropriations of both sessions of each Congress and get the total amount appropriated by each separate Congress; or still greater will be the contrast if we leave out of account the amounts appropriated for payment on the public debt and standing contracts of the Government, and give only the appropriations which are under the control of each separate Congress.

For instance, the Forty-third Congress was Republican, and the total appropriations of both sessions amounted to $653,974,900
And the Forty-fourth Congress was Democratic, and its total appropriations of both sessions amounted to 595,597,832

Showing a difference, or Democratic saving of 58,377,158

Forty-seventh Congress, Republican, total appropriations 776,434,948
Forty-eighth Congress, Democratic, total appropriations 655,269,407

Reduction or Democratic saving 121,165,541

The Forty-ninth and the Fiftieth Congresses were both Democratic.
Total appropriations Fiftieth Congress, Democratic 817,963,859
Total appropriations Fifty-first Congress, Republican 988,417,183

Republican increase 170,453,323

Again, the Fifty-third Congress was Democratic and the total appropriations amounted to $889,239,205, and its successor, the Fifty-fourth Congress, was Republican, and the appropriations rose to $1,047,959,599, which shows a Republican increase of $58,720,394.

Finally, the total appropriations of the present or Fifty-fifth Congress, also Republican, can not yet be stated with absolute accuracy, but will nearly reach the enormous sum $1,000,000,000, which means another Republican increase of nearly $600,000,000, and after taking out all money appropriated for war expenses there will remain a net increase of more than a hundred millions of dollars in the regular expenses of the Government.

In a whole quarter of a century you will observe but one increase of expenses made by a Democratic Congress, and that was forced upon Congress and the country by the reckless and extravagant legislation of the previous Republican Congress.

Now, Mr. Speaker, as the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, the distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON], tells us that we have now appropriated for next year's expenses of the Government $179,000,000 more than the total revenues of the Government will yield, or, in other words, that a deficit of that enormous amount will be staring us in the face, I wish to ask if you think, in view of these facts, we can afford at this time to make this investment of $20,000,000 in Philippine Malays and "yellow belles" at $2 per head and $150,000,000 per year for an Army and Navy to protect them and keep them in order. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. VANDIVER. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask permission to extend my remarks in the RECORD to put in some statistical matter and other documents in connection with what I have said.

There was no objection.

Mr. BOTKIN. Mr. Speaker, without having thoroughly investigated the pending bill, I assume that its provisions are wise and necessary. I always favor the appropriation of every dollar essential to the highest efficiency of the public service. But, sir, I stand appalled in the face of the figures presented this morning by the distinguished gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DOCKERY] showing the colossal sum of money already appropriated during this term. These astounding figures warrant the assertion that the Fifty-fifth Congress is long on legislation increasing the expenditures of the people and short on legislation tending to increase their ability to meet these enormous obligations.

Availing myself of the liberties already accorded to others in this debate, I desire at this time to submit a few remarks which, while not bearing directly upon the pending bill, are nevertheless upon questions of vital interest to the masses of the American people.

To close observers of political movements it is perfectly apparent that a persistent effort is being made by a subsidized press and a class of designing politicians, unwittingly aided by some of the best men of the country, to divert the attention of the masses from political or governmental affairs.

School-teachers are to keep out of active politics for the reason that they serve people of all political creeds. The average business man must be nonpartisan for similar reasons. Wage-earners must serve the interests of their employer by keeping their mouths shut on politics altogether, or by wearing the badge of the employer's party and shouting for his candidate. Of course the farmer must stay at home and work a little longer and harder, economize a little more closely, make no complaint at falling prices and shrinking values, and leave the management of politics to the lawyer, banker, and ward heeler at the county seat. And with a holy show of undying interest in religion, these minions of organized greed demand that the clergy shall attend strictly to their business of preaching the gospel and refrain from "bedraggling their clerical robes in the muddy pool of politics."

In short, the good people of this country are to understand that there is a governing class, composed of a few leading bankers, a few big corporation attorneys, and a few of the chief organizers and promoters of trusts, and that under this system politics are so corrupt that decent men must stand aloof. The masses are to passively submit to being governed by these corrupt elements without an effort at purification. And all this for the general good.

Some go so far as to make a distinction between the citizen's political interests and his commercial, industrial, and social interests. They would have us believe that the thing we call government is some great Mogul, separate and distinct from the masses of the people, bearing relation only to their political interests and affecting in no way their business interests, except that it absorbs a portion of their products and earnings to support itself in its mysterious if not exalted realm, in return for which support it graciously proposes to assume the entire management of their dirty politics, leaving them nothing to do but to toil and sweat on the farm and in the mine, in the factory and shop, and in the busy marts of trade.

One of the most advanced and frankest writers of this school, in a pamphlet recently issued, said:

Government is the organized instrument of a people in their political capacity only and for the accomplishment of political purposes. Trade is not a political act or matter. The properties it exchanges are not owned by political bodies, but by private persons; they are not exchanged by governments, but by the citizens of governments; and the ownership and exchange of properties, whether material substances or valuable services, by the citizens of a government are not by virtue of their political relationship nor in their capacity as citizens, whether under one political form or another, but by virtue of the purely natural, economic, mutual relations of persons, each of whom has something the others need and needs something the others have.

Against this un-American theory I invoke the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution of the United States, and the accepted teachings of the fathers for more than a hundred years.

THE PURPOSE OF GOVERNMENT.

The Declaration of Independence says:

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; that, to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed; that, whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it, and to institute a new government, laying its foundation on such principles, and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness.

Here is an expression of the highest wisdom as to the purpose of republican government. According to the American idea, "all men are created equal." Not equal in body and mind, but as to rights. "They are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights," rights that can not be alienated or separated without violence to the purposes of the Creator, except when forfeited by crime. Among these rights "are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; that, to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men."

Here, then, is the purpose of government—shall I say the only purpose of government?—to secure to all men their God-given rights. If all men were free from selfishness and obedient to the Golden Rule; if we were angelic in our natures, so that no one could be induced to live by preying upon others, there would be little need of government. The very language of this great instrument—"to secure these rights"—is an assumption that the strong will seek to live off the weak, that the wise will endeavor to overreach the foolish, and that the one prime purpose of government is to protect the weak and foolish against the encroachments and oppression of the strong and wise.

"Whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it, and to institute a new government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness." Here the doctrine is taught that the people—not part, but all the people—make and unmake government; that the people who make the government are greater than the government they make; that the government is for the people and not the people for the government; that it is the function of government, the creature, to serve the people, the creator; that the people have the right to alter or abolish their government when in their judgment it ceases to fill its mission, which is to secure to them their rights and effect their safety and happiness. Theoretically, then, republican government is an instrument made and used by the people for purposes of their own protection, development, and happiness.

This is in harmony with the Divine plan. The world is for man, not man for the world.

And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness; and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth. (Genesis, i, 26.)
Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of thy hands; thou hast put all things under his feet." (Psalm, viii, 6.)

It is not the purpose of God or of republican government for any man to be a serf, but rather that every man, no matter what may be his intellectual or social status, shall be a sovereign. The principles of God's government and of our Government are outraged when any man enjoys any measure of right or privilege not accorded to the humblest law-abiding citizen.

That the people have built this Government for themselves is set forth in the preamble to the Constitution:

We, the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of North America.

The doctrine that this is a people's government was taught by George Washington. In his Farewell Address he said:

You have, in a common cause, fought and triumphed together. The independence and liberty you possess are the work of joint counsels and joint efforts, of common dangers, sufferings, and success.

To the efficacy and permanency of your Union, a government for the whole is indispensable. No alliances, however strict, between the parts can be an adequate substitute; they must inevitably experience the infractions and interruptions which all alliances in all times have experienced. Sensible of this momentous truth, you have improved upon your first essay by the adoption of a constitution of government better calculated than your former for an intimate union and for the efficacious management of your common concerns. This government, the offspring of your own choice, uninfluenced and unawed, adopted upon full investigation and mature deliberation, completely free in its principles, in the distribution of its powers, uniting security with energy, and containing within itself a provision for its own amendment, has a just claim to your confidence and your support.

Respect for its authority, compliance with its laws, acquiescence in its measures, are duties enjoined by the fundamental maxims of true liberty. The basis of our political systems is the right of the people to make and to alter their constitutions of government. But the constitution which at any time exists, until changed by an explicit and authentic act of the whole people, is sacredly obligatory upon all. The very idea of the power and the right of the people to establish government presupposes the duty of every individual to obey the established government.

In discussing the necessity for a flexible government which the people could alter to meet the requirements of their changing conditions and needs, Thomas Jefferson said:

Let us, as our sister States have done, avail ourselves of our reason and experience to correct the crude essays of our first and unexperienced, although wise, virtuous, well-meaning, councils. And, lastly, let us provide in our Constitution for its revision at stated periods. What these periods should be nature herself indicates. By the European tables of mortality, of the adults living at any one moment of time a majority will be dead in about nineteen years. At the end of that period, then, a new majority is come into place, or, in other words, a new generation. Each generation is as independent of the one preceding as that was of all which had gone before.

It has, then, like them, a right to choose for itself the form of government it believes most promotive of its own happiness; consequently, to accommodate to the circumstances in which it finds itself, that received from its predecessors; and it is for the peace and good of mankind that a solemn opportunity of doing this every nineteen or twenty years should be provided by the Constitution, so that it may be handed on, with periodical repairs, from generation to generation, to the end of time, if anything human can so long endure. If this avenue be shut to the call of suzerainty it will make itself heard through that of force, and we shall go on, as other nations are doing, in the endless circle of oppression, rebellion, reformation, and oppression, rebellion, reformation again, and so on forever.

In strict accord with these statements of fundamental principles by the founders of this Republic is the closing sentence of the great Lincoln's famous Gettysburg speech, an utterance which shows him to have been equal to the greatest and best, and marked him as the patron saint of liberty, loving men to the end of time:

A government of the people, by the people, and for the people shall not perish from the earth.

"Of the people" because they originated it and are the governed, "by the people" because they are the governors, "for the people" because the Government exists solely for their benefit.

MALADMINISTRATION OF GOVERNMENT.

For the purpose of diverting the attention of the toiling masses from the political field, and thus protecting public officials against the "petitions of the rabble," the mouthpieces of organized capital and greed in this country vociferously declare that "you can not legislate value into anything," and that "for the Government in its legislative, its judicial, or its executive branch, one or all, to be used to promote any private business interest would be rank paternalism, which can not for one moment be tolerated in a republic."

While these designing politicians thus attempt to mislead the people as to the relation of the Government to every human interest, the hired lobbyists of the corporations and trusts are working every State legislature and the National Congress, as well as the executive and judicial departments, for every possible concession and advantage to these favored classes. Nor is this an entirely new thing in our Government. On November 17, 1877, during the extra session of the Forty-fifth Congress, the Hon.

Dudley C. Haskell, one of the Representatives from Kansas, in a speech in this Chamber, discussing the repeal of section 3 of the resumption act, said:

We ask that Wall street, the Rothschilds, and the Barings shall no longer have the entire control of our financial legislation. And when I charge that our legislation has been in the interest of the capitalist and the dealer in money, I charge that which I can prove from the record, and I challenge successful contradiction.

On February 15, 1878, the Hon. John J. Ingalls, of Kansas, in a notable speech in the United States Senate, sounded the alarm thus:

We can not disguise the truth that we are on the verge of an impending revolution. The old issues are dead. The people are arraying themselves upon one side or the other of a portentous contest. On one side is capital, formidably entrenched in privilege, arrogant from continued triumph, conservative, tenacious of old theories, demanding new concessions, enriched by domestic levy and foreign commerce, and struggling to adjust all values to its own standard. On the other is labor, asking for employment, striving to develop domestic industry, battling with the forces of nature, and subduing the wilderness; labor, starving and sullen in cities, resolutely determined to overthrow a system under which the rich are growing richer and the poor are growing poorer; a system which gives to a Vanderbilt the possession of wealth beyond the dreams of avarice and condemns the poor to a poverty which has no refuge from starvation but the prison and the grave. Our demands for relief, for justice, have been met with indifference or disdain. The laborers of the country asking for employment are treated like impudent mendicants begging for bread.

Here is the just charge that legislative bodies have conferred special privileges upon capital to the extent that it is "formidably entrenched" in those privileges, and has become "arrogant from continued triumph." And yet it is ever "demanding new concessions," and has at last adjusted "all values to its own standard." While from a few years prior to the date of this speech until now the capitalistic class has been manipulating the machinery of this Government in their own interest, values have been shrinking, and the condition of the producers and wage-earners of the country has been growing worse and worse, relieved only by occasional temporary spurts of prosperity. In other words, under the existing system, which defeats the legitimate purpose of our Government and makes it a class government, "the rich are growing richer and the poor are growing poorer."

On January 14, 1891, Senator Ingalls delivered a most impressive speech, the opening sentence of which was:

Mr. President, two portentous perils threaten the safety if they do not endanger the existence of the Republic.

Referring to the second of these perils, he said:

The other evil, Mr. President, the second to which I adverted as threatening the safety if it does not endanger the existence of the Republic, is the tyranny of combined, concentrated, centralized, and incorporated capital. And the people are considering this great problem now. The conscience of the nation is shocked at the injustice of modern society. The moral sentiment of mankind has been aroused at the unequal distribution of wealth, at the unequal diffusion of the burdens, the benefits, and the privileges of society.

In the body of this same speech the Senator discussed the influence of capital upon legislation in the following style:

There is, Mr. President, a deep-seated conviction among the people, which I fully share, that the demonization of silver in 1873 was one element of a great conspiracy to deliver the fiscal system of this country over to those by whom it has, in my opinion, finally been captured. I see no proof of the assertion that the demonization act of 1873 was fraudulently or corruptly procured, but from the statements that have been made it is impossible to avoid the conviction that it was part of a deliberate plan and conspiracy, formed by those who have been called speculators, to still further increase the value of the standard by which their accumulations were to be measured. The attention of the people was not called to the subject. It is one of the anomalies and phenomena of legislation.

That bill was pending in its various stages for four years in both Houses of Congress. It passed both bodies by decided majorities. It was read and reread and reprinted 13 times, as appears by the records. It was commented upon in newspapers; it was the subject of discussion in financial bodies all over the country, and yet we have the concurrent testimony of every Senator and every member of the House of Representatives who was present during the time that the legislation was pending and proceeding that he knew nothing whatever about the demonization of silver and the destruction of the coinage of the silver dollar. The Senator from Nevada (Mr. STEWART), who knows so many things, felt called upon to make a speech of an hour's duration to show that he knew nothing whatever about it. I have heard other members declaim and with one consent make excuse that they knew nothing about it.

As I say, it is one of the phenomena and anomalies of legislation, and I have no other explanation to make than this: I believe that both Houses of Congress and the President of the United States must have been hypnotized. So great was the power of capital, so profound was the impulse, so persistent was the determination that the promoters of this scheme succeeded by the operation of mind power and will force in capturing and bewildering the intelligence of men of all parties, of members of both Houses of Congress, and the members of the Cabinet and the President of the United States.

And yet, Mr. President, it can not be doubted that the statements that these gentlemen make are true. There is no doubt of the sincerity or the candor of those who have testified upon this matter; and it is incredible (I am glad it occurred before I was a member of this body) that a change in our financial system that deprived one of the money metals of its debt-paying power, that changed the whole financial system of the country and to a certain extent the entire fiscal methods of the whole world, could have been engineered through the Senate and the House of Representatives and the Cabinet of the President and secured Executive approval without a single human being knowing anything whatever about it. In an age of miracles, Mr. President, wonders never cease.

Capital has lost none of its hypnotic power. Through the press and through its representatives in both Houses of Congress it has convinced multitudes of people that real and universal and permanent prosperity has returned to this country as the fruitage of the McKinley Administration, the Dingley tariff law, and the gold standard. Many farmers conscientiously believed that the high price of wheat in 1897 was due to these causes. If the new Administration and tariff law advanced the price of wheat so soon, what strange influence reduced the price of the crop of 1898 to the old "hard times" standard? Were not the Republican party, the new tariff, and the gold standard still in charge of affairs? And did not they have the assistance of war, which always stimulates prices?

But it is claimed that "the time was when the man was seeking the job, but now the job is seeking the man." It is quite evident that more men are employed in this country to-day than two years ago, but that there is a vast army of honest and industrious men still in enforced idleness will not be denied by any sincere and well-informed man in his quiet and thoughtful moments.

The shortage of foreign crops made an unusual demand for our surplus wheat crop of 1897. Good prices resulted. This enabled the wheat grower to pay part or all of his debts and to purchase long-needed supplies for his family. This increased the circulation, enlarged the trade of the local merchant, and made new demand upon the wholesale merchant and the manufacturer, necessitating the employment of additional men along the line. Next came the war. An army had to be organized, clothed, fed, equipped. Munitions of war of all kinds were needed. All this largely increased the demands upon manufacturers and led to the employment of many men. In addition to this, a large number of idle men found employment as soldiers, while others who held positions in civil life enlisted, leaving their jobs to be filled by men from the army of the unemployed.

There is positively no ground for believing that in the absence of foreign crop failures and war the McKinley Administration, the new tariff, and the gold standard would have materially changed the financial and industrial conditions of this country. The new tariff might or might not have increased the revenues of the Treasury, but if, unaided by the potent influences already mentioned, it had failed to distribute among a considerable portion of our population large sums of money through increased prices of farm products there could have been no stimulation of mercantile and manufacturing interests, and therefore no employment of additional laborers. The people are learning that a full public Treasury does not necessarily imply plethoric pocket-books among the masses, or a condition of general prosperity.

A favorite method by which certain politicians seek to prove general prosperity is to parade the stock market. It is true that as a result of the war this branch of industry (?) has been greatly stimulated. It is also true that through the determined opposition of the Republican party in Congress to an income-tax law, backed by what millions of people believe to have been a partisan decision of the Supreme Court, the few men who have made almost a billion of dollars on the stimulated stock market, and therefore have gathered most of the fruits of war, have been relieved of their just share of the expense of the war, the necessary tax having been levied upon the consumption of the people.

The "popular loan" is also pointed to as an additional evidence of general prosperity. It is claimed that the people bought the bonds, proving that they have plenty of money. In a speech delivered in this Chamber on April 23, 1898, I had the honor to say:

No one knows better than the gentleman that the banks and speculators will get the bonds. They, and not the people, are demanding an issue of bonds. In a recent conversation with a prominent Eastern banker he asked me if I thought the bond provision of the pending bill would pass both Houses. My reply was, "I am afraid it will." "Well," said he, "we bankers want it to pass, for we have piles of money we wish to invest in bonds." "But," I remarked, "it is stated that this is to be a popular loan—that the people are to take the bonds." "Oh, well," said he, "the banks have the money and will get the bonds."

That the advocates of this loan are not sincere in calling it a popular one is evident from an interview had yesterday in New York with the Hon. Lyman J. Gage, Secretary of the Treasury, and published in this morning's Washington Post. It is as follows:

NEW YORK, April 27.

Secretary of the Treasury Gage is in this city to-day. During the morning he was in conference with Assistant Treasurer Jordan I. N. Seligman, James Speyer, and other leading financiers, and in the afternoon with representatives of the leading banks.

Secretary Gage, after the conference, said he thought it wise while in this city to hear what the leading financiers might have to say concerning the present condition of things and the outlook.

He was also desirous, he said, of getting their views on the financial measures now before Congress. "All the gentlemen present at the conference," continued Mr. Gage, "expressed a kindly interest in the popular features of the contemplated measures, and, so far as was necessary and proper, offered their cooperation in making the bond issue a popular loan."

The Secretary said he was not in favor of raising any issue at the present time calculated to cause discontent among those holding opposite political views. The bills pending should be adopted on their merits.

ALL SIDE ISSUES TO BE SUNK.

"There were no differences of opinion on this point," continued Mr. Gage. "All side issues are to be sunk, and all hands will get together and help sustain the credit and dignity of the country."

The money stringency was incidentally discussed according to Mr. Gage, and nothing definite was decided on in the matter of placing our bonds in the European markets. It was admitted by Mr. Gage that some of the financiers thought the rate of interest on the new bonds ought not to be less than 3½ per cent, but most of them, he said, were satisfied with a 3 per cent bond.

Several questions will naturally possess the minds of thinking people who read this interview.

1. Why was Mr. Gage consorting with the Wall street gang yesterday, if this is to be a popular loan?

2. Why was he so anxious to get the views of "leading financiers" on the "financial measures now pending before Congress," if the people are to buy the proposed bonds and Congress is to appropriate the proceeds to carry on the war?

3. Why did those financiers express such "a kindly interest in the popular features of the contemplated measures and offer their cooperation in making the bond issue a popular loan"? Is it possible that the officials at Washington and the American people can not enter into negotiations without consulting Wall street and inviting its cooperation?

4. Why should any of the Wall street patriots object to the rate of interest proposed, since the people and not the aforesaid patriotic financiers are the interested parties?

On July 20, 1898, "The American Banker," in an editorial on "The Government loan," said:

Assistant Secretary Vanderlip, who is said to have taken extraordinary precautions against accepting subscriptions which seemed on the surface to come from individuals but which were suspected of being part of a large offering, now admits that of the $30,000,000 supposed to have been subscribed by individuals perhaps not more than half are really what they purport to be. But when we consider how active and all-pervading the canvass for irresponsible names has been, we are inclined strongly to question Mr. Vanderlip's estimate.

Little money has been withdrawn from the savings banks by depositors who intended to buy bonds. This at least appears to be the general testimony of savings-bank officers. The fact that the banks pay 3½ and 4 per cent for deposits, while the loan yields but 3 per cent, renders it decidedly improbable that many savings-bank depositors have subscribed for the bonds. Since our people are not given to hoarding money to any large extent, it is from this class that subscriptions should have come if the loan was to be in fact a popular one. Nothing has transpired, therefore, since what we said last week about the absurdity of regarding this as a popular loan to modify the conclusion that the loan has completely failed to realize the hopes of those who hoped to prevent the banks and other financial interests from getting the bulk of the bonds.

Observe, too, that the part which "the people" have played in the negotiation of this loan will not give much comfort to the demagogues. There has been much talk of late about dealing directly with the people and ignoring the "bloated bondholders" and Wall street "sharks."

Congress resounded with such talk and the press overflowed with it. But, as a matter of fact, thousands of "the people" appeared to be ready to sell their names to agents of these despised interests at 50 cents to $1 per head. Thousands thus went hand in hand with the various syndicates without betraying any distrust or horror of persons whom it has become a common habit to hold up to public execration.

The Financial Chronicle, discussing the same point, said:

The simple truth is that Congress offered a loan below its market value and the shrewd and thrifty among our population were wise enough to "chip in" and take it. Some of these bidders live near Wall street and pretty much all of them have affiliations with Wall street.

The fact that banks are full of money and begging people to take it at low rates is urged as an evidence of prosperity. On the contrary, it is proof that a few men have the money of the country and the many who need it can not get it because of a lack of securities.

Also that the men who possess the money refuse to invest in property because of the shrinkage of values for a number of years, and they will not invest in business enterprises because they know there is not sufficient money in the pockets of the masses to support an increased volume of business. This congestion of the blood of commerce in the centers indicates either a stagnation of business or that a vast amount of business is being done on the credit system, which presages failures and panic.

The papers a few weeks ago reported 15,000 destitute families, or about 75,000 individuals, in the city of New York. Similar conditions are reported in the cities and towns in all parts of the country. At the same time the banks of New York and the leading banks all over the country are fairly bursting with money. But how does that fact help the hundreds of thousands of starving and freezing victims of this vicious system of congestion or concentration?

Distribution of the medium of exchange among the masses by a proper monetary system, and not its centralization in the hands of the classes by a vicious system of legislative favoritism, produces what we call "good times." When, by reason of remunerative employment and good prices for products under a system of legislation for all the people, they shall have plenty of money to liquidate their debts and pay cash for needed supplies, then, and not till then, can it be truthfully said that we have general and permanent prosperity.

Great activity is witnessed among the trusts. More trusts were organized, involving greater capital, in 1898 than in any previous year. Thus organized capital is rapidly obtaining a monopoly of output for the purpose of reducing expenses and increasing prices. This means higher prices for the consumer, greater profits for the capitalists thus organized, and an increase in the army of the unemployed.

Members have recently received numerous copies of the leading papers of this country containing marked editorials against the newly formed paper trust. Many of these papers have in the past been the apologists of trusts and the trust-breeding tariff, and had no word of censure for the practice of watering stocks so prevalent in this country. But now a trust has been formed for the expressed purpose of reducing the expenses and increasing the profits of a few paper manufacturers.

In order to accomplish these results we are told that many men have been discharged from employment, and that the stock of the new concern has been highly watered. For the purpose of earning dividends on this watered stock the price of paper has been raised from five to ten dollars per ton. So long as only the people were pinched by trusts and watered stocks these great papers were silent, but now that they are in the toils they are sounding the alarm.

The Chicago Record of February 1, 1899, contained the following editorial:

HOW TO BREAK ONE TRUST.

The Record has contended that most, if not all, injurious trusts owe their power for evil to special privileges of one sort or another conferred by Government, and that the proper way to break the power of such trusts is to withdraw the special privileges rather than to enact laws directly forbidding the formation and maintenance of trusts and combinations. An illustration in point is the print-paper trust, the power of which can be effectually broken by simply removing the duty on paper and materials entering into the manufacture of paper, none of which duties is needed for purposes of legitimate protection.

The Dingley law placed a protective duty on paper and pulp. Soon after the passage of that act the print-paper trust was formed and prices were raised to consumers. The increase amounted to about $2,000,000 a year, which is very aptly termed a "tax on intelligence" of that amount. The rise in the price of paper has very materially increased the cost of manufacturing newspapers. That the increased price is not necessary, but represents simply that much more profit to the trust, is shown by the fact that the trust sells paper in England, Australia, and Japan in successful competition with Canadian, German, and Swedish manufacturers. Were it not for the special privilege accorded it in the form of a protective tariff the trust would not have been able to raise prices within the United States, to the detriment of consumers.

When complaint is made of trusts the existence of which are inimical to the public welfare undoubtedly the print-paper trust should be included in the category. It is not necessary, however, in order to draw the fangs of that trust to pass a law forbidding combinations. Probably such a law, if enacted, would not seriously interfere with it so long as the special privilege on which its existence depends is not disturbed. The only sure, effective, and sensible way to break the print-paper trust is to take away its special privilege—the duty on paper and pulp. It is the veriest nonsense to indulge in general denunciation of trusts and to talk of prohibiting them by law, when the remedy is as simple as it is in this case and involves merely the withdrawal of a special privilege conferred by law.

The weekly edition of the Springfield (Mass.) Republican of February 10, 1899, contained the following editorial:

PROTECTION FOR EXTORTION.

Trusts can be organized in free-trade England, but they can not practice extortion in defiance of foreign competition. They are still held within the bounds of moderation by the force of active competition, whether it has been suppressed in the home market or not. But not so the trust in the United States. A paper combination could be organized here under free trade in pulp and paper, but it could not quite so readily advance prices $5 to $10 a ton as it has. It could not quite so readily water its capitalization 300 to 400 per cent in the certainty of being able for some time to earn handsome dividends on the whole inflated mass. It could not quite so easily undertake to put old and out-of-date machinery on a paying basis through the sheer force of monopoly.

Practically all of the American trusts are thus favored by the tariff laws of the nation and made instruments of extortion and oppression by the representatives of the people, where otherwise they would be comparatively harmless. "The old argument over again" is as sound as ever. Our tariff in the present epidemic of trust-building is a tariff to protect trust extortion and to deliver the people, bound, into the hands of the extortioners. We are not to lose sight of that fact. The paper trust is entrenched behind the laws of Congress to make the consumers of paper pay dividends on watered capital and worn-out machinery, and that is true of practically every one of the scores of trusts now operating in nearly every product which is of common use among the people.

The New York Commercial in its issue of February 9, 1899, in a discussion of the future of the sugar trust, said:

What is wanted is more capital, new and special legislation, and more extraordinary privileges. What is also wanted is a new sugar tariff. All this requires time.

Rumor has it that President McKinley's views regarding the Dingley tariff have undergone a sudden change. Whatever the nature of that change may be, the people of the United States can rest assured that the sugar trust will have something to do with the framing of another sugar schedule.

All well-informed people know that the sugar trust had much to do with the framing of the sugar schedule in the last tariff act.

In its issue of February 8, 1899, this same paper sounded a note of warning as follows:

CONSOLIDATION AND PRICES.

A recent special dispatch to the New York News Bureau stated that the consolidation of the different steel and wire plants into the American Steel and Wire Company had resulted in the dismissal of 200 traveling salesmen, and that through this there would be a saving to the consolidated company from salaries, commissions, and traveling expenses alone of $1,000,000 a year. It was also stated that the company was endeavoring to dispose of various warehouses over the country now no longer needed.

These facts serve to illustrate once more what has so often been pointed out, viz., that consolidation means economy, and that through combination the cost of production is lowered. That the lowered cost of production does not necessarily mean lower prices to the consumer is made very apparent by the fact that since the consolidation of various interests into the American Steel and Wire Company the price of wire nails has been advanced.

The question may well be asked, as indeed it often has been, What benefit accrues to the general public from the economic saving which results from industrial combination? And the answer must be that, as a rule, the public gains nothing, but that those in control of the combinations reap all the advantages. The public is well aware of this fact, and the result of such knowledge has been the present general hostility toward industrial combinations and the extended efforts to suppress them.

I have thus shown the maladministration of this Government under the power of organized capital. It is plain that a few men and organizations have manipulated the machinery of Government in their own interest and to the impoverishment of the masses of the people who perform the labor and create the wealth of the country. It is also plain that activity in stocks, bonds, banks, and trusts is not a guaranty that the masses for whom theoretically this Government exists are properly sheltered, clothed, and fed.

PROTECTION FAILS TO PROTECT.

There are many wise and good people who believe a protective tariff is the sovereign remedy for all industrial ills. It is not my present purpose to discuss this subject at great length. I only desire to show that a protective tariff is not a sufficient panacea for the industrial ills from which countless thousands of our people have been for years and are now suffering.

The title of the McKinley tariff law is "An act to reduce the revenue and equalize duties on imports, and for other purposes." The Dingley tariff law is entitled "An act to provide revenue for the Government and to encourage the industries of the United States." Thus a protective tariff is designed by its champions to reduce revenue at one period, and at another to provide revenue. How well it provides revenue may be known upon reflection that notwithstanding the bond sale and the great revenue-producing war tax, our expenses for the fiscal year beginning last July and coming as far down as February 27, 1899, were $98,477,183.41 in excess of our receipts.

But what of the effect of a protective tariff upon the industries of the United States? In his letter of acceptance, under date of August 26, 1896, William McKinley, referring to the depression of 1893, said:

What a startling and sudden change within the short period of eight months, from December, 1892, to August, 1893. What had occurred? A change of Administration; all branches of the Government had been intrusted to the Democratic party, which was committed against the protective policy that had prevailed uninterruptedly for more than thirty-two years, and brought unexampled prosperity to the country.

It is true that from the time the first Republican tariff was enacted in 1861 to August, 1894, when the McKinley law was superseded by the Wilson-Gorman law, this country was every minute under a protective tariff policy. During that period this country did not, as I shall show, enjoy that measure of uninterrupted prosperity which the intelligence and industry of the people and the vast material resources of the country would seem to warrant. That we have had occasional periods of prosperity under this tariff policy will not be denied. That we have had alternate periods of great depression and numerous disastrous panics will be admitted by all. That the general tendency of prices and values has been downward for the past twenty-five years is patent to every unbiased student of economic conditions.

Among the results of this general fall of prices and shrinkage of values are the congestion of money to the centers, the passing of land and other properties from the people to the speculators and the consequent development of a system of landlordism and tenantry, the increase of the army of the unemployed and the resultant growing seriousness of the conflict between labor and capital. I would not say that all these conditions have been caused by the protective tariff, but I will say that protection has failed to prevent the development of these conditions. And if it can not prevent it certainly can not cure.

In his inaugural address delivered on March 5, 1877, President Hayes said:

With respect to the financial condition of the country, I shall not attempt an extended history of the embarrassment and prostration which we have suffered during the past three years. The depression in all our various commercial and manufacturing interests throughout the country, which began in September, 1873, still continues.

This is the testimony of a Republican President given at a time when there could have been no possible motive for the distortion of facts. It is highly interesting, if not positively curious, because it shows the "embarrassment" and "prostration" and "depression in all our various commercial and manufacturing interests throughout the country," and because it dates the beginning of our sorrows back to the exact time of the demonetization of silver and the actual establishment of the gold standard.

I again cite that eminent authority, the Hon. John J. Ingalls, an extract of whose speech of February 15, 1878, I have already quoted, in which he portrays the rising conflict between labor and capital and condemns a "system under which the rich are growing richer and the poor are growing poorer." And all this under a protective tariff. In the month of April, 1890, William McKinley, chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, submitted to the House his report on the proposed tariff bill, which afterwards became a law and has ever since borne his name. In that report, on page 2, he says:

That country is the least prosperous where low prices and low wages prevail. One of the chief complaints now prevalent among our farmers is that they can get no price for their crops at all commensurate to the labor and capital invested in their production. Those who differ from us must believe that even further agricultural depression is desirable, for no other consequence can result from their economic theories. They advocate cheap prices as the chief object of the industrial policy they commend to the country. This means permanently low prices for agricultural products as well as for manufactured goods.

Your committee have not sought by the proposed legislation to further cut down prices at the expense of our own prosperity, but to provide with certainty against that increasing competition from other countries whose conditions our people are unwilling to adopt. We have not believed that our people, already suffering from low prices, can or will be satisfied with legislation which will result in lower prices. No country ever suffered when prices were fairly remunerative in every field of labor, and it has been the purpose of the committee to so adjust duties upon competing foreign products as to save our people from ruinous competition abroad.

On page 16 of the same report Mr. McKinley said:

The committee have given months of investigation to the existing conditions of agriculture and matters connected therewith. This great industry is foremost in magnitude and importance in our country. Its success and prosperity are vital to the nation. No prosperity is possible to other industries if agriculture languish. In so far as the fostering care of government can be helpful, it must be faithfully and forcefully exerted to build up and strengthen agriculture.

That there is widespread depression in this industry to-day can not be doubted. Every remedy within the scope of practical legislation known to your committee has been recommended in the proposed measure to meet the urgent requirements of the situation.

Here is the highest authority in this land, the acknowledged Napoleon of protection, giving his voluntary and official testimony to the fact that our agricultural interests were suffering from low prices, and "that there is wide spread depression in this industry to day can not be doubted." And he declares that "the fostering care of Government * * * must be faithfully and forcefully exerted to build up and strengthen agriculture." And this after Benjamin Harrison had been President thirteen months and the policy of protection had been in uninterrupted and active operation for twenty-nine years. The remedy proposed by Mr. McKinley and his party at that time was not an increase of the circulation in the bloodless forms of agriculture and labor, but rather a deeper incision by the tariff lance for the purpose of drawing still more blood through indirect taxation.

Senator Ingalls delivered a speech in the other end of this building on January 14, 1891, in which he said:

Nor is this all, Mr. President. The hostility between the employers and the employed in this country is becoming vindictive and permanently malignant. Labor and capital are in two hostile camps to-day. Lockouts and strikes and labor difficulties have become practically the normal condition of our system, and it is estimated that during the year that has just closed, in consequence of these disorders, in consequence of this hostility and this warfare, the actual loss in labor, in wages, in the destruction of perishable commodities by the interruption of railway traffic, has not been less than $300,000,000. * * *

A financial system under which more than one-half of the enormous wealth of the country, derived from the bounty of nature and the labor of all, is owned by a little more than 30,000 people, while 1,600,000 American citizens, able and willing to toil, are homeless tramps, starving for bread, requires readjustment.

A social system which offers to tender, virtuous, and dependent women the alternative between prostitution and suicide as an escape from beggary is organized crime, for which some day unrelenting justice will demand atonement and expiation.

Mr. President, the man who loves his country and the man who studies her history will search in vain for any natural cause for this appalling condition. The earth has not forgotten to yield her increase. There has been no general failure of harvests. We have had benignant skies and the early and the latter rain. Neither famine nor pestilence has decimated our population nor wasted its energies. Immigration is flowing in from every land and we are in the lusty prime of national youth and strength, with unexampled resources and every stimulus to their development; but, sir, the great body of the American people are engaged to-day in studying these problems that I have suggested in this morning hour. They are disheartened with misfortunes. They are weary with unrequited toil. They are tired of the exactions of the speculator. * * *

Such, sir, is the verdict which I read in the elections from which we have just emerged—a verdict that was unexpected by the leaders of both parties and which surprised alike the victors and the vanquished. It was a spontaneous, unpremeditated protest of the people against existing conditions.

Mr. President, it may be cause, it may be coincidence, it may be effect, it may be post hoc or it may be propter hoc, but it is historically true that this great blight that has fallen upon our industries, this paralysis that has overtaken our financial system, coincided in point of time with the diminution of the circulating medium of the country.

The public debt was declared to be payable in coin, and then the money power of silver was destroyed. The value of property diminished in proportion, wages fell, and the value of everything was depreciated except debts and gold. The mortgage, the bond, the coupon, and the tax have retained immortal youth and vigor. They have not depreciated. The debt remains, but the capacity to pay has been destroyed. The accumulation of years disappears under the hammer of the sheriff, and the debtor is homeless, while the creditor obtains the security for his debt for a fraction of what it was actually worth when the debt was contracted.

It should be borne in mind that this speech was delivered after thirty years of uninterrupted protective-tariff policy, several months after the enactment of the McKinley law, and within a few weeks of the middle of the Harrison Administration; and yet according to this high authority labor was unemployed, virtuous womanhood was driven to beggary, while depression, paralysis, and blight had settled upon all our industries.

The year 1892 is pointed out as the year of crowning prosperity in the history of our country. I admit, sir, that this was a year of comparatively "good times," but I call attention to the fact that during this year some of the greatest labor strikes in our history occurred, notably that at Homestead, Pa.

The year 1893 was one of most disastrous panic. In his letter of acceptance, already quoted, Mr. McKinley attributed the great industrial and financial depression of that year to a change of administration. It must be remembered, however, that his own pet tariff law was still in operation and continued to be until the autumn of 1894. It is thus shown that protection is not a bulwark against financial panics and industrial paralysis.

I shall not discuss the recent past or the present further than to call attention to the numerous and bloody conflicts between labor and capital since the present Administration was inaugurated. And these under the new and matured tariff law framed and enacted by the Republican party, aided by a popular war which resulted in at least the temporary improvement of our economic conditions.

Quarterly statements of failures for twenty-four years and average of liabilities.

Years.	First quarter.			Second quarter.			Third quarter.			Fourth quarter.			Total for the year.
	No. of failures.	Amount of liabilities.	Average liabilities.	No. of failures.	Amount of liabilities.	Average liabilities.	No. of failures.	Amount of liabilities.	Average liabilities.	No. of failures.	Amount of liabilities.	Average liabilities.	No. of failures.	Amount of liabilities.	Average liabilities.
1875	1,982	$43,173,000	$21,782	1,582	$33,667,000	$21,295	1,771	$54,328,000	$30,678	2,405	$70,888,000	$29,475	7,740	$201,060,333	$25,900
1876	2,806	64,044,000	22,830	1,794	43,771,000	24,398	2,450	47,857,371	19,535	2,042	34,844,893	17,064	8,082	191,117,786	21,020
1877	2,969	54,538,074	19,010	1,880	45,088,097	23,972	1,816	42,846,083	23,318	2,307	48,717,080	21,117	8,872	190,660,036	21,491
1878	3,355	82,078,826	24,464	2,470	48,753,940	19,738	2,853	66,378,363	23,238	1,800	37,172,001	20,651	10,478	234,383,132	22,399
1879	2,524	43,112,065	17,081	1,534	22,666,725	14,776	1,262	15,275,550	12,104	1,338	17,094,113	12,775	6,458	98,149,053	14,741
1880	1,432	12,777,074	8,922	1,065	20,111,689	18,884	979	12,121,422	12,381	1,259	20,741,815	16,474	4,735	65,782,000	13,886
1881	1,761	24,447,250	13,900	1,105	16,499,395	14,931	1,024	10,112,395	9,875	1,692	30,086,922	17,000	5,582	81,155,932	14,530
1882	2,127	33,338,271	15,670	1,470	17,242,649	11,722	1,300	18,942,893	14,571	1,841	32,023,751	17,394	6,738	101,547,564	15,076
1883	2,821	38,372,643	13,602	1,816	27,816,391	15,317	1,803	52,072,884	28,881	2,744	54,612,254	19,902	9,184	172,874,172	18,823
1884	3,296	40,186,978	12,193	2,214	84,204,304	37,998	2,346	56,627,821	24,138	3,112	45,324,324	14,547	10,968	226,343,427	20,632
1885	3,658	46,121,051	12,608	2,346	28,601,304	12,091	2,173	23,874,391	10,988	2,460	25,623,575	10,416	10,637	124,220,321	11,678
1886	3,203	29,681,726	9,266	1,953	20,752,734	15,746	1,932	27,227,630	14,090	2,746	36,982,029	13,467	9,834	114,644,119	11,651
1887	3,007	32,161,762	10,695	1,955	22,976,330	12,061	1,938	73,022,556	37,674	2,784	39,400,296	14,152	9,634	167,560,944	17,332
1888	2,948	38,884,789	13,190	2,241	29,229,370	13,043	2,361	22,114,254	9,366	3,129	33,601,560	10,738	10,679	123,829,973	11,595
1889	3,311	42,972,516	12,970	2,292	22,856,337	9,972	2,273	39,227,045	17,235	3,003	43,728,439	14,561	10,882	148,784,337	13,672
1890	3,223	37,852,068	11,747	2,162	27,466,416	12,704	2,196	35,452,436	16,144	3,326	39,085,144	20,784	10,907	189,856,964	17,406
1891	3,545	42,167,631	11,894	2,529	50,248,636	19,868	2,754	44,302,494	16,086	3,445	53,149,877	15,423	12,273	189,868,638	15,471
1892	3,384	30,284,349	11,009	2,119	22,089,331	10,449	1,984	18,659,235	9,405	2,867	33,111,252	11,549	10,344	114,044,167	11,025
1893	3,202	47,338,300	14,784	3,199	121,541,239	37,984	4,015	82,469,821	20,402	4,826	95,430,329	19,770	15,242	346,779,889	22,751
1894	4,304	64,137,333	14,900	2,734	37,598,973	13,751	2,868	29,411,196	10,028	3,979	41,848,354	10,172	13,885	172,992,856	12,458
1895	3,802	47,813,683	12,577	2,855	41,026,261	14,370	2,782	32,167,179	11,528	3,748	52,188,737	13,924	13,197	173,196,090	13,124
1896	4,031	57,425,135	14,246	2,935	40,444,547	13,504	3,757	73,285,349	19,507	4,305	54,941,803	12,762	15,088	226,096,834	14,992
1897	3,932	48,007,911	12,209	2,889	43,884,876	15,121	2,851	25,601,188	8,886	3,649	37,038,086	10,150	13,351	154,332,071	11,559
1898	3,687	32,946,565	8,936	3,031	34,498,074	11,381	2,540	25,104,778	9,886	2,928	38,113,482	13,017	12,186	130,662,899	10,722

A study of this table will disclose the reason for the frequent changes of Administration in recent years. In every Presidential campaign the politicians shouted "tariff," but the people, seeing that protection did not protect and that business conditions grew steadily worse, and not fully understanding causes and remedies, adopted the plan of "turning the rascals out" every four years. It will be seen that the number and liabilities of failures increased from 1875 to 1878. To satisfy the clamor of the people during this period the Bland-Allison act was passed, removing in a measure the embargo which had been placed upon silver and increasing the circulating medium of the country. A very marked improvement of industrial and financial conditions immediately followed this legislation, as will be seen in the table.

These improved conditions continued about four years. In 1883 a new Republican tariff law was enacted. That very year marked a large increase in the number and liabilities of business failures. During the next year the country touched high-water mark in this respect, and the people in their distress defeated the Republican party under the leadership of the most eminent and popular statesman of the time, and elected a comparatively obscure and untried man to the Presidency. This election was followed by a temporary improvement of condition, but before the next Presidential election occurred the number and liabilities of the failures had so increased that the people reversed their former verdict and elected a Republican President. No improvement followed this election so far as business failures were concerned, and accordingly the people changed Administrations again. The highest point ever reached in the history of this country in the number and liabilities of business failures was that reached in 1893 under the Cleveland Administration, which had just been inaugurated, and the McKinley tariff law, which had been in operation three years.

CURRENCY AND BANKING REFORM THE NEED OF THE HOUR.

All agree in demanding a reform of our present currency and banking system. The distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. WALKER], the present chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee, in a letter to the Boston Herald of October 11, 1897, charged that our national-bank act is directly responsible for the annual loss of $50,000,000 to $75,000,000 to the people; that it was the cause of the great panic of 1893; that "it is crushing the very life out of business and agriculture" through excessive interest, and that before 1900 a storm cloud will arise

Of the future no man can speak with accuracy, but the Hon. JOSEPH H. WALKER, of Massachusetts, chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee of the House, in a printed speech of February 14, 1899, on "United States Treasury and Banking and Currency Problems," gives on the title page the following note of warning:

We have the worst financial system in the world. Doubt, fear, and panic inherent in it. Panic of 1893 sure to be repeated.

Whether this prediction ever comes true or not, here is one of the wisest and most prominent of New England Republicans who believes that Republican protective tariff can not secure permanent national prosperity under our present financial system.

I now invite a most careful study of the accompanying table, taken from Dun's Review of January 7, 1899. It is proper to say that this publication is admitted by all to be the very highest and most trustworthy authority in such matters.

and develop into a storm that will sweep with the besom of destruction the party that dallies with this question. The same gentleman, in his speech in this Chamber on February 14, 1899, said:

Up to 1893 it was the fashion to pronounce the financial and banking system of the United States the best the sun ever shone upon.

To-day there is scarcely a man in the country who has any interest in questions pertaining to economics, if there is even one, who is not demanding its immediate reform.

Hon. James H. Eckels, ex-Comptroller of the Currency, in answer to a question by the chairman, said to the Banking and Currency Committee: "Yes; the United States has the worst financial and currency system of any leading nation."

Upon the above being read to Hon. Charles S. Fairchild, ex-Secretary of the Treasury, and his opinion asked, he replied: "I think it is the worst," and Secretary Gage concurred in Mr. Fairchild's statement.

In fact, all writers on finance, banking, and currency are a unit in condemning our system, those of Europe declaring that there is not a dollar of "true bank currency" or really sound currency in the United States.

In his inaugural address President McKinley said:

Our financial system needs some revision; our money is all good now, but its value must not further be threatened. It should all be put upon an enduring basis, not subject to easy attack, nor its stability to doubt or dispute. The several forms of our paper money offer, in my judgment, a constant embarrassment to the Government and imperil a safe balance in the Treasury.

In his special message to Congress on the last day of its extraordinary session, July 24, 1897, the President said:

Another question of very great importance is that of the establishment of our currency and banking system on a better basis. * * *

The sentiment of the country is strongly in favor of early action by Congress in this direction, to revise our currency laws and remove them from partisan contention. A notable assembly of business men, with delegates from twenty-nine States and Territories, was held at Indianapolis in January of this year. The financial situation commanded their earnest attention, and after a two days' session the convention recommended to Congress the appointment of a monetary commission. I commend this report to the consideration of Congress. * * * This subject should receive the attention of Congress at its special session. It ought not to be postponed until the regular session.

It will thus be seen that the President was insistent upon the immediate reform of our currency and banking system on the lines suggested by the Indianapolis convention. In his annual messages of December, 1897, and December, 1898, he renewed this urgent request. We are therefore no longer to hear the old threadbare campaign slogan, "the best currency and banking system the world ever saw," a system that stands as a monument to the folly of that party which must bear the responsibility for all national legislation from 1861 to the present time, except during Cleveland's second reign, when the only change made in our fiscal system was the result of a combination between the Republican leaders in Congress and Grover Cleveland.

While all men agree that a speedy change in our monetary system is essential to the well being of not to the life of our Republic, we honestly differ as to the nature of the reform needed. Broadly considered, we are divided into two classes: those who believe in the gold standard and affirm that the Government should go entirely out of the banking business, and those who believe in bimetallism and demand that the banks shall go entirely out of the governing business. Men hold these different views with variations as to details, according as they view the subject from the standpoint of the interests of bankers and speculators or from the standpoint of the interests of the whole people. Being with the people, I take the latter view.

It is in perfect accord with our selfish human nature for every man to attempt the control of legislation in the interest of his own business.

That bankers and money speculators have done and are doing this should surprise no man with sufficient brains to feed and clothe himself. That these classes have secured a great advantage over the producers and laborers of this country in this respect may not prove greater selfishness in the classes than in the masses in this respect; but it does unquestionably prove that the classes have been wiser than the masses to see their opportunities, and being comparatively few in number and living in close touch with each other in a few of the great centers, it has been easy for them to combine their money and their influence for the control of Congress and the State legislatures. On the other hand, the great masses have been widely scattered, and, being busy with daily toil, have had neither the time nor the disposition to study the relation of politics to their material, moral, and intellectual well being.

The first organized effort at currency and banking reform in recent years that attracted national attention was that of the noted convention of bankers held in Baltimore October 11, 1894, which promulgated what is known as the "Baltimore plan." This proposed the repeal of the law requiring a deposit of bonds to secure bank notes, that the banks should issue the national currency against their assets, that "the banks issuing circulation shall deposit and maintain with the Treasurer of the United States a redemption fund equal to 5 per centum of their average outstanding circulation, as provided for under the existing law." It also provides that "the notes of insolvent banks shall be redeemed by the Treasurer of the United States out of the guaranty fund, if it shall be sufficient, and if not sufficient, then out of any money in the Treasury, the same to be reimbursed to the Treasury out of the guaranty fund when replenished, either from the assets of the failed banks or from the tax aforesaid."

Such a storm of indignant protest arose from the people against the proposition to turn the issue and control of the currency over to the banks that the bankers quietly retired to await the further effort of politicians to bring public sentiment into subjection to this proposed plan. No man in the Middle, Western, and Southern States dared to advocate such a policy during the campaign of 1896. But as soon as the election of Mr. McKinley was an assured fact the bankers and speculators came into the open and began a determined effort to secure the adoption of their pet schemes by the new Administration.

Within less than a week after the election of 1896 the Chicago Record interviewed a number of the leading bankers of that city. While they differed somewhat in minor matters, they were in substantial agreement as to the main proposition. They demanded the funding of all Government paper currency into gold bonds to be used by the banks as a basis of their credit, or notes which should circulate as the sole currency of the country. The following from John J. Mitchell, president of the Illinois Trust and Savings Bank, will indicate the drift of these interviews:

My opinion, briefly, is this: Congress should retire all the greenbacks and silver certificates and, to prevent a contraction of the currency, issue long-term 2 per cent gold bonds, allowing the banks to issue currency against them at par. This would do away with the reserve fund and take the Government out of the banking business entirely. Then Congress should make a sufficient tariff to run the Government. The banks can issue currency as it becomes necessary. This will give us an elastic currency.

An elastic currency is one which expands and contracts under some controlling influence. Its expansion means rising prices, its contraction means falling prices. The bankers desire the sole authority to "issue currency as it becomes necessary," they to decide when it is necessary. Thus when they or their friends desire to invest their surplus funds in property, they can contract the currency and reduce prices and values. After the investments are made they turn the screw another way, expanding the currency, when the property can be sold on an advanced market.

Had these sentiments been uttered two weeks prior to the election they would have turned the tide of public sentiment and support from that party which to-day stands for a banker's currency to that party which stands for a people's currency. This the bankers know, and therefore wisely held their peace until the election of their friends was an assured fact.

Following this was the Indianapolis convention, the President's messages, the public utterances of the President and his Secretary of the Treasury, the Gage bill, the McCleary bill, and the Hill bill, which last is now pending in Congress, all with one accord demanding the permanent establishment of the gold standard, making gold the only legal-tender money, the retirement of all forms of Government paper money, and the turning over to the national banks the sole authority to issue and control the volume of our currency. The lamented Garfield is reported to have said:

Whoever controls the volume of currency is absolutely master of the industry and commerce of the country.

This the bankers and their immediate friends know, hence their inordinate desire to gain control of the volume of currency. My faith in the intelligence of the people leads me to believe that they also can see this point, and, seeing it, will arise in their might and overthrow that party which is now bending all its energies to force them and their industry and commerce into absolute and perpetual bondage to the greed and power of organized wealth.

I now affirm that high prices make "good times" and that low prices make "hard times." But low prices mean a dear dollar, while high prices mean a cheap dollar. For illustration, when wheat commands but 50 cents a bushel the dollar is twice as dear, or has twice the purchasing power, as when wheat commands a dollar a bushel. The same principle holds good when applied to the relation between the dollar and all other commodities and property and between the dollar and labor. In other words, the dollar is dear when it requires much of labor and its products to procure it and cheap when it requires little of labor and its products to procure it. The American people must choose between the dear dollar and low prices on the one hand and a cheaper dollar and higher prices on the other.

In opening the campaign in Ohio on August 15, 1896, in a speech which was published by the Republican National Committee and scattered broadcast over the nation as a campaign document, the Hon. John Sherman said:

Of all the evils which a government can inflict none can be greater than cheap money, whether of coin or paper. That dollar is the best dollar that buys the largest quantity of food and clothing.

Mr. Sherman describes that dollar which is best for the comparatively few men in this nation who own the dollar. But what of the masses who have not dollars but who have labor and its products they wish to exchange for dollars with which to pay their crushing debts?

If I had a large income of dollars from gilt-edged and remunerative securities, or as an ample and permanent salary, or from any other unfailing source, and had no heart of sympathy for oppressed humanity, I should want the dollar so dear, so great in purchasing power, that my money would buy the largest possible measure of labor and its products. I should want my dollar to buy four bushels of the farmer's wheat, ten bushels of his corn, five bushels of his potatoes, fifteen pounds of his butter, twenty dozen of his eggs, a ton of his hay. I should want ten of my dollars to buy a suit of clothes which now costs me fifty dollars. I should want twenty-five of my dollars to buy a buggy which would now cost $100. If I desired the services of a laboring man, I should want one of my dollars to buy four days of labor. It will be seen that if the farmer must sell his produce and the manufacturer his wares at these low prices it follows that they would be forced to pay correspondingly low wages to labor. But this is John Sherman's idea and his party's idea of the best dollar, the dollar "that buys the largest quantity of food and clothing." Does any man of sense believe that such a dollar as this can ever produce general prosperity?

What this country needs is cheaper money and higher prices. Not that one kind of money should be cheaper than another kind, but that all money must have less purchasing power than it now possesses. We have heard much of fifty-cent dollars, but there are no such dollars. Every dollar has a hundred cents, whether stamped on 25.8 grains of gold, or on 412.5 grains of silver, or on a few cents' worth of copper, or on a fraction of one cent's worth of paper. One of these dollars will buy as large a quantity of the necessities of life, pay as much tax, and liquidate as much debt in the ordinary transactions of our country as any other dollar.

But it is claimed that the price of a day's labor, of a bushel of corn, or a pound of cotton will command as much manufactured goods or property to-day as formerly, when these prices were double what they are now. Admitting this to be in a measure true it must be remembered that the enormous debts of this country, both public and private, were contracted at a time when not more than one-half the labor and its products would have been required to pay it as would be required to-day. On the 1st of March, 1860, the national debt was $2,827,868,950.46. At the prices then prevailing it would have required to pay that debt the quantities named of each of the following staple products:

Wheat.....	bushels.....	1,486,842,105
Flour.....	barrels.....	302,791,698
Cotton.....	pounds.....	5,887,416,629
Mess pork.....	barrels.....	92,576,313
Sugar.....	pounds.....	25,233,348,314
Wool.....	pounds.....	5,339,188,679
Beef.....	cwt.....	181,967,213
Bar iron.....	pounds.....	41,851,851,151
Superior farming lands as above (approximately).....	acres.....	37,093,693

In July, 1896, the public debt, interest bearing and noninterest bearing, in round numbers, was $1,225,000,000, or less than one-half what it was in March, 1896, and yet so low were the prices of the staple products of this country in 1896, the products with which the people, in the last analysis, must pay their public and private debts, that it would have required twice the quantity of these products to pay the reduced debt in the last-named year as the entire debt thirty years before. The following table shows the quantity of each of the staple products named required to pay the debt in 1896:

Wheat.....	bushels.....	2,443,636,636
Flour.....	barrels.....	413,538,461
Cotton.....	pounds.....	17,929,000,000
Mess pork.....	barrels.....	215,040,000
Sugar.....	pounds.....	41,353,846,154
Wool.....	hundred weight.....	8,960,000,000
Beef.....	do.....	179,200,000
Bar iron.....	pounds.....	45,948,717,417
Superior farming lands as above (approximately).....	acres.....	38,400,000

During the six years beginning in 1862 the Government sold bonds to the amount of $2,490,975,700. The amount received by the Government for those bonds, in round numbers, was $1,400,000,000. The principal of these bonds was payable in the lawful money of the country and the interest in coin. The credit-strengthening act of 1869 and the refunding act following made the principal payable in coin. The Government, which originally received $1,400,000,000 for its bonds, had up to 1893 paid back to the bondholders in principal $1,756,000,000, being $356,000,000 more than was at first received. It had paid as interest on the debt $2,538,000,000, or nearly twice the total amount received. As premium on bonds bought in it had paid $58,000,000, making a total of $4,352,000,000. Thus the people have in twenty-five years paid more than four and a quarter billions of dollars on a debt which was originally but a little more than two billions of dollars, and for which they actually received in the beginning only a little more than one and a quarter billions of dollars. And they still owed in 1893 on that same debt close to one billion of dollars.

It will thus be seen that the prices and values of the people's holdings diminished in proportion as the value of the bonds increased. In other words, the debt-paying power of the people diminished as the purchasing power of the debt increased. These conditions resulted from legislation in the interest of the debt holders of the nation and against the interests of the debt payers of the nation. Whatever diminishes the value of the people's property and the prices of their products lessens their ability to pay their private debts as well as their public debts; hence the loss of homes and of property and the utter financial ruin of countless thousands of American citizens in the past quarter of a century, the utter hopeless indebtedness of other countless thousands of the present, the dire distress of the laboring classes during this period, and its inevitable fruitage of strife and bitterness and blood.

Abraham Lincoln once said that the greatest crime a government can commit against the people is to contract a public debt, and then by a system of currency contraction lessen their ability to pay the debt. This is precisely what our Government has done. Lincoln, it will be noticed, held that currency contraction does reduce the people's ability to pay.

That the contraction of the currency results in falling prices and shrinking values is universally held by political economists. John Stuart Mill said:

The value of money, other things being the same, varies inversely as its quantity, every increase of quantity lowering the value and every diminution raising it in a ratio exactly equivalent.

Ricardo has also said:

That commodities rise or fall in proportion to the increase or diminution of money I assume as a fact that is incontrovertible.

Hugh McCulloch, Secretary of the Treasury, in his report of 1867, on page 8, says:

Money being an unprofitable article to hold, very little is withheld from active use, and in proportion to its increase prices advance; on the other hand, a reduction of it reduces prices.

On page 9 of same report he says:

The excess or deficiency of money in a country is always pretty accurately indicated by the condition of its industry and trade. In all countries there is just as much money needed as will encourage enterprise, give employment to labor, and furnish the means for the ready exchange of property.

On page 10 he says:

The prices of most kinds of property in the United States advanced near three fold during the war, but this advance was mainly the result of the increase of the circulating medium. * * * The purchasing power of the money in circulation was diminished in the ratio that its volume was increased.

In a great speech in the Senate on January 14, 1891, the lamented Preston B. Plumb said:

Now, there has been something said about the dollar, and I am repeating what I said sometime ago to the effect that a dollar has been created by law dishonest, oppressive, and, having been created, we are now besought to maintain it, and to measure not only wheat and corn and oats and cattle but silver by it, when the fact is that the silver which the Senator speaks of as having depreciated, and the 412.5 grains of silver which he says is worth less than a dollar, will, as merchandise at its present merchandise value, exchange for more wheat and oats and cattle and hogs and clothing and land and all other things that people use in all quarters of the world than it ever would before.

Now which dollar is dishonest? the dollar which has maintained a parity with all other productions or the dollar which by the arts of legislation has been elevated above all other things and has thus become valuable beyond all other things and has become the thing in which the creditors of the world have sought and have secured to have measured the things that are coming to them? There, Mr. President, is the point of this controversy. I see no reason why a dollar should be so constituted by law as to buy more than it would, without the aid of the law, have done before, and for the law to do that thing is to do a dishonest thing against the men who produce other things than dollars.

In his reply to Mr. Cleveland, at the Lincoln banquet of the Ohio Republican League at Toledo, Ohio, February 12, 1891, William McKinley said:

The gentleman who is now so insistent for cheap necessities of life, while in office and clothed with authority, was unwilling that sugar, an article of prime necessity to every household, should come untaxed to the American people, when it was known that it was an annual burden upon them of $60,000,000. He stood then as the uncompromising friend of dear sugar for the masses. During all his years at the head of the Government he was dishonoring one of our precious metals, one of our own great products. He endeavored even before his inauguration to office to stop the coinage of silver dollars, and afterwards and to the close of his Administration persistently used his power to that end.

He was determined to contract the circulating medium and demonetize one of the coins of commerce, limit the volume of money among the people, make money scarce and therefore dear. He would have increased the value of money and diminished the value of everything else—money the master; everything else its servant. He was not thinking of "the poor" then. He had left "their side." He was not "standing forth in their defense." Cheap costs, cheap labor, and dear money; the sponsor and promoter of those, professing to stand guard over the welfare of the poor and lowly! Was there ever more glaring inconsistency or reckless assumption?

I call special attention to the words, "He was determined to contract the circulating medium and demonetize one of the coins of commerce, limit the volume of money among the people, make money scarce and therefore dear. He would have increased the value of money and diminished the value of everything else—money the master, everything else its servant." This is the strongest possible support of my contention that the contraction of the currency increases the value of money and diminishes the value of everything else.

Mr. McKinley, who was in 1891 the friend of the debtor class, has at length become the friend of the creditor class. In his messages he has recommended the retirement of the Government paper currency, amounting in round numbers to $346,000,000, through gold redemption, these notes to remain in the Treasury out of circulation except when paid out for gold. This would convert them into mere gold certificates, and would contract the currency by $346,000,000. This scheme is not in the interest of the "plain people" because this contraction of the currency would still further diminish their debt-paying power. It would directly benefit the speculators and creditor class for the reason that they, and not the "plain people," would present the Treasury notes and secure the gold. In this way they hope to secure the gold of the country which, under pending Republican legislation, will be made the only legal-tender money, thus placing at their mercy all the people and their labor and products.

In his speech at the banquet of the Manufacturers' Association, in New York City, on January 27, 1893, President McKinley said:

Nothing should ever tempt us—nothing ever will tempt us—to scale down the sacred debt of the nation through a legal technicality. Whatever may be the language of the contract, the United States will discharge all of its obligations in the currency recognized as the best throughout the civilized world at the times of payment.

Here is a bold announcement of his purpose and the purpose of his party to violate a contract. Such a proposition by certain other people would be denounced as anarchy. Made by Mr. McKinley and indorsed by his party, it is the loftiest patriotism. I hold that every creditor, public or private, should be paid in the exact number of dollars and the exact kind of dollars defined in the contract. Not only that, but he should be paid in dollars possessing exactly the same purchasing power that dollars possessed when the contract was made. This is strict and eternal justice to both parties. To be paid in a less number of dollars or in dollars of less purchasing power would defraud the creditor of his just rights.

To exact from the debtor payment in more dollars than stipulated in the contract, or in dollars possessing greater purchasing power than when the debt was contracted, would be to rob the debtor. The honest dollar is not gold, silver, copper, or paper; it is that dollar which through the years in public and private transactions maintains an unchanging purchasing power over the labor and products of the people and over all the property of the country. I therefore insist that the volume of money should be increased, to the end that its value or purchasing power may be diminished and the value of labor, products, and property may be increased, so that something like the old relation between them and money may be restored. This would be strict justice to the creditor and the debtor.

As a long step toward this happy condition, I urge that silver be restored to an equal position with gold in the coinage and legal-tender laws of the country. To prove that this would have the desired effect I cite the fact that Republican orators throughout the country during the campaign of 1896 rung the changes on the declaration that free coinage of silver would flood the country with cheap money, and that therefore the prices of all things to be purchased would be advanced. Wage-earners and pensioners were appealed to upon this point with tremendous emphasis. Advance in the prices of labor and its products was held up as a calamity to be avoided.

A year later, when under the influence of foreign crop failures the price of our wheat was doubled, these same Republican orators on the floor of Congress, on the lecture platform, and through the newspapers, pointed to these high prices as the evidence of restored prosperity, claiming them as the first fruits of the new tariff law. Admitting for a moment, what is not true, that the new tariff caused the advance in the price of wheat, how does it come that dollar wheat was prosperity in 1897, while dollar wheat would have been a calamity under free coinage of silver in 1896? Would not the one reduce the purchasing power of the wage and the pension as much as the other? I have already said that high prices produced "good times." During "good times" labor is employed at remunerative wages and the old soldiers do not need half the pensions they need during "hard times."

Instead of adopting the method proposed by the present Administration for destroying that bogymen "the endless chain," I would have the people elect to the Presidency a man who holds sacred existing law and contracts, and who would give the Treasury portfolio to a law-abiding man. Such a Secretary would pay coin, both gold and silver, in redemption of all outstanding obligations. This would double the amount of our redemption money, stimulate the silver industry in this country, largely remove the embargo now resting upon the white metal, deter the holders of greenbacks from demanding their redemption or from hoarding them for possible future raids upon the Treasury, and thus insure the increase of the money in actual circulation.

The most obstinate fight that is being made by the creditor class is against the existing ratio of 16 to 1. For this and other reasons I urge the perpetuation of this ratio.

The war debt was payable in the lawful money of the country. Ostensibly for the benefit of the public credit, but really to satisfy the greed of the debt holders, the so-called credit strengthening act was passed in 1869, making the debt payable in coin. The refunding act of July 14, 1870, providing for the refunding of the national debt, authorized the Secretary of the Treasury to issue bonds in the sum of about $1,500,000,000, "redeemable in coin of the present standard value." Those bonds contained the following statement:

This bond is issued in accordance with the provisions of an act of Congress entitled "An act to authorize the refunding of the national debt," approved July 14, 1870, amended by an act approved January 29, 1871, and is redeemable at the Treasury of the United States * * * in coin of the standard value of the United States on said July 14, 1870.

At the time of the passage of this refunding act the standard coin of this country was a gold dollar of 25.8 grains of gold and a silver dollar of 412.5 grains of silver. Under this law we have issued all the bonds thus far put upon the market.

On April 21, 1877, John Sherman, then Secretary of the Treasury, addressed to his colleague in the Cabinet, Attorney-General Devens, the following inquiry:

Can I stipulate in the body of the 4 per cent bonds about to be issued that they shall be redeemable in coin of the present standard value; that is, the standard value at the date of their issue, or must it be the date of the law?

To this the Attorney-General replied:

The act provides for the issue of bonds "redeemable in coin of the present standard value." The word "present" undoubtedly refers as a matter of date to the time when the act was passed, and not to the time when the bonds were thereafter issued. It contemplated that a long period would elapse before it would finally be carried into effect, and that changes in the coinage of the country might occur during that period.

In January, 1878, the following resolution, introduced by Stanley Matthews, John Sherman's successor in the Senate, was adopted by overwhelming majorities in both Houses of Congress:

Be it resolved, * * * That all the bonds of the United States issued or authorized to be issued under the said acts of Congress (credit-strengthening act of 1869 and the refunding act of 1870), hereinbefore recited, are payable, principal and interest, at the option of the Government of the United States, in silver dollars of the coinage of the United States, containing 412.5 grains each of standard silver; and that to restore to its coinage such silver coins as a legal tender in payment of said bonds, principal and interest, is not in violation of the public faith nor in derogation of the rights of the public creditor.

That this is now the law, that it determined the original contract between the bondholders and the people, and that under this law that contract is still binding, is evident from the fact that the pending bill, known as the Hill bill, which is the expression of the Republican party of to-day upon this question, contains the following explicit provision to repeal this law and make all bonds payable in gold:

That all obligations of the United States for the payment of money now existing or hereafter to be entered into shall, unless hereafter otherwise expressly stipulated, be deemed and held to be payable in gold coin of the United States, as defined in the standard aforesaid.

Thus in 1869 the bondholders gained an advantage over the people by securing through legislation the conversion of their bonds then payable in the lawful money of the country into coin bonds. They scored another advantage over the people in 1873 when they demonetized silver in the sense of closing the mints against it and of destroying its legal-tender quality except in sums of $5 and less. The effect of this legislation, as could be shown by a long line of eminent Republican authority if time permitted, was to start silver on its career of diminishing bullion value. This furnished a basis for the demand for a change in the ratio.

The scarecrow of a "fifty-cent dollar" has been held up with telling effect upon thoughtless people. The proposition that if we are to coin silver we must put a hundred cents' worth of silver into the dollar has proven a successful bait with which to catch suckers. Might as well talk of putting a hundred cents' worth of paper into a paper dollar.

But this demand for an increase in the quantity of silver in the dollar has been urged, not because it would increase the debt-paying and purchasing power of that dollar in the ordinary affairs of life, but because it would change the ratio. It would define the quantity of silver in the dollar to be other than 412.5 grains, and thus take the silver dollar entirely out of the contract now existing between the bondholders and the people. It would make it impossible for any Secretary of the Treasury hereafter to pay the coin obligations of this Government in other than gold coin for the reason that there would be no silver dollars of 412.5 grains.

With silver fully restored and made equal with gold in our coinage and legal-tender laws at the existing ratio of 16 to 1, and with the paper currency of the country issued solely by the people under the constitutional provisions of the Government in such volume as may be required by the laboring, producing, and business interests of the country, without any regard for the wishes and schemes of speculators, this country will have taken a long stride toward permanent prosperity.

THE ABOLITION OF TRUSTS DEMANDED.

The great corporations and trusts of this country are organized for the purpose of monopolizing the volume of business, of reducing expenses, and of increasing the profits. Without going into detail, I will simply mention that probably the chief method by which they increase their revenues is their practice of watering stocks and then levying upon the people such tariffs as will secure sufficient money to pay handsome dividends on this fictitious capital. Under this system the people are paying exorbitant transportation rates, both passenger and freight, and also exorbitant prices for all articles placed upon the market by trusts. By such methods the wealth of the country is rapidly being concentrated in the hands of a few men. Should these gigantic concentrators of wealth be permitted to continue their operations, no matter how generally money might be diffused among the people by currency reform or by any other method, creating general prosperity, it will only be a question of time when this "life blood of commerce" will be congested to the centers, leaving the extremities in a state of paralysis.

The greatest of all trusts is the banking or money trust. This trust controls that which fixes the price on labor and property and products. In order to destroy this trust and give a deathblow to the whole brood of bloodsuckers, I would, in addition to reforms already suggested, establish Government postal savings banks. Under the present national banking system and under all the proposed reforms of that system by its friends its circulation is secured by the Government, making the holders of the notes of insolvent banks perfectly good. There is no provision, and so far as I know none proposed, by which the depositors in insolvent banks are secured. Millions of people have lost all or part of their possessions through their confidence in "the best banking system the world ever saw." Under the postal savings bank system every dollar will be good, as now, and every depositor will be absolutely secure.

On July 8, 1897, I had the honor to introduce a postal savings bank bill in this Congress. That bill provided, among other things, that 20 per cent of the people's deposits should constitute a reserve fund out of which deposits should be paid on demand, and that 80 per cent should be turned into the Government Treasury and be used by the Government in paying its current expenses; and in the event that the deposits should ever be in excess of the expenditures, the surplus should be devoted to the liquidation of the public debt. Thus the money of the people, which, under the present banking system, is deposited in the banks and then loaned back to the people at high rates of interest, would be employed to defray the expenses of the people's Government, thereby relieving the people from the present heavy burdens of taxation. This the present bankers would oppose, for the reason that it would destroy a most fruitful source of their profits.

The bill also provides that certificates of deposits held by the people shall be endowed with the currency function, with suitable safeguards. Thus the man who deposits $100 with the Government receives from the Government a certificate or token of credit to that amount. As this certificate or token of credit will be received at its face value on presentation at any postal-savings bank in the nation, it will readily pass current for debts, taxes, and in all the ordinary transactions of business.

If it be objected that the people should not be permitted to thus use their credits, I reply that under this system every dollar of credit thus used would be based upon a dollar of good money deposited with the Government. This is in pleasing contrast with the almost reckless use of credits by the national banks. The entire volume of money issued by national banks, or rather by the Government for the banks, is credit money. In other words, the banks are doing business on their credit. Their credit is still further employed in the use of checks and drafts. Besides this, they loan the people's deposits down almost, and too often quite, to the breaking point.

But why should it be thought a crime for the people to claim for their own use this proposed credit system, at once so secure and so beneficial to all their interests, since the reckless and speculative credit system now in vogue has been enjoyed for a quarter of a century by a few pampered pets of class legislation, resulting in the centralization of enormous wealth with the classes and the consequent impoverishment of the masses?

Confident of the integrity of my motives, sensible of my inability to adequately discuss these great questions, I have tried to show that the people have permitted the classes to gain control of this greatest Government on earth, and have indicated the method by which I believe the people should restore it to themselves and make it in fact what it now is in theory, "a Government of the people, by the people, and for the people."

I will yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HEMENWAY. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR] forty minutes.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, I do not rise to deliver flippant commentaries upon any of the speeches that have been made on the other side of this House, nor do I come here to-day to challenge any man's honesty, loyalty, or faithfulness to duty.

During the last three or four days a series of attacks upon the Administration have been made here, based upon allegations of facts which I will attempt to show have no existence. I shall state exactly what I understand to be the position taken by gentlemen on the other side of the House, without more especially particularizing. I understand their position to have been this, and to be this now:

First, in point of time, that there was some sort of an alliance, as it was put by one gentleman, sought for and accepted by the United States with one Aguinaldo; that we took the benefit of his discharge of duty under the alliance, and then have been in some way unfaithful to him. Then, as was repeated by the gentleman who last but one addressed the House, that the Army of the United States has been used as an aggressive force to destroy the liberty of the people from whom we lifted the yoke of Spain.

In addition to that, charges have been repeatedly made that there has been a delay in the matter of a statement of policy by the United States, in one instance at least, for the purpose of selling the franchises in the Philippine Islands to speculators, in the friendship and interest of the dominant forces of the United States Government.

Furthermore, the claim is constantly made, made with endless iteration, that the President of the United States has been faulty, and lacking in duty because he has not announced, first to the Filipinos, as they are called, and secondly to the world at large and to his own people at home, a policy for the future disposition of the Philippine Islands.

I will attempt in the brief period which has been allotted to me to show, first, that there has not been one American shot fired aggressively against any Filipino. I will show beyond all cavil and dispute that there was never any alliance or any connection or any suggestion binding either in morals or in law between Aguinaldo or anybody else in the Philippine Islands and the United States Government, and I shall not be turned aside and I shall not belittle my opinion of the judgment of the House by talking about an alliance, a treaty made by a consul of the Government of the United States, nor will anybody who has any respect for himself as a lawyer or an intelligent citizen do so.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, may I ask the gentleman a question?

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Ohio yield to the gentleman from Missouri?

Mr. GROSVENOR. Well, if you will not use up my time, my friend.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Do you deny that an insurgent army, estimated variously at from 10,000 to 20,000—

Mr. GROSVENOR. Now, the gentleman has interrupted me to make a speech.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. No; I want to ask a question.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I will not be interrupted by the gentleman from Missouri in that way. I most respectfully attempted to ask him a question the other day and he brushed me aside with absolute contempt.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. That was in a brief debate, it was not when I was making an elaborate effort.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I will talk about the gentleman's army. I think it is a good deal like the size of another army which was about 250 until $3,000,000 was sent, and now I think it is about 30,000. You can fool nobody, my friend, with that sort of talk.

I will undertake to show that there was never any alliance, and further than that I will show by the official records which I have here in my hand—I will not make the statement that there is such a thing, but I will give the records to the country—that not only was there never any alliance or combination or obligations sought or entered into or accepted with Aguinaldo, but that upon each attempt and solicitation that he made he was ruthlessly driven out of the court by the proclamation of the President and the orders of the men executing his commands.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Was not that after Manila surrendered?

Mr. GROSVENOR. After Manila, no; long before Manila surrendered. I am going to give my friend a little history this evening.

Mr. FITZGERALD. After Dewey's victory?

Mr. SETTLE. After the 1st of May?

Mr. GROSVENOR. Why, my friend, it could not have been before. The President of the United States did not know the exact spot where the fleet of the Spaniards was until he got word of its destruction.

Mr. SETTLE. It was after the 1st of May.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Those men assisted Dewey in the consummation of that victory.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Now, let us go on and take these things in their order, and see how completely and perfectly this structure will rise from the foundation which I have laid, until it will be absolutely unassailable in its completion.

The attack upon the Spanish fleet was made on the morning of the 1st day of May. In a very few hours that fleet was destroyed. Somewhere in the neighborhood of the 7th to the 9th of May full information had been received by the President and the Navy Department of that victory of Dewey's in Manila Harbor.

At that time Aguinaldo was at some British possession, having taken refuge from the troubles that had surrounded him, and nobody in the United States had ever heard that there was such a man until after the destruction of the fleet. The President of the United States sent a letter of congratulation dated at Washington, May 26, 1898. At that time Aguinaldo was down somewhere in a British possession. He made his escape from there by virtue of an accommodation extended to him by an American consul upon the dispatch boat McCulloch, and arrived at Manila about the 19th day of June.

Mr. VANDIVER. I do not desire to interrupt the gentleman. Did he not come by invitation of Dewey?

Mr. GROSVENOR. No more, my friend, than you did.

Mr. VANDIVER. Did not Dewey send a dispatch requesting him to come?

Mr. GROSVENOR. A request was sent to Dewey to let him come, and Dewey said "let him come."

This was the first order signed by the President of the United States in any wise affecting the situation at Manila:

WASHINGTON, May 26, 1898.

DEWEY (Care of American Consul),
Hongkong:

You must exercise discretion most fully in all matters, and be governed according to circumstances which you know and we can not know. You have our confidence entirely. It is desirable, as far as possible, and consistent for your success and safety, not to have political alliances with the insurgents or any faction in the islands that would incur liability to maintain their cause in the future.

LONG.

Mr. GAINES. What date was that?

Mr. GROSVENOR. Let me go on. I will not be disturbed by the ringing voice of the gentleman from Tennessee.

In order that there may be no mistake about this, now comes a telegram from a gentleman, whom, I think, probably, after the demonstrations that have been made in this House will at least be regarded as a man telling the truth, and not lying officially:

HONGKONG, June 6, 1898 (from Cavite, June 5).

Now, the President's telegram was dated May 26. He answered it June 3.

SECRETARY OF NAVY, Washington:

Receipt of telegram of May 26 is acknowledged, and I thank the Department for the expression of confidence. Have acted according to the spirit of Department's instructions therein from beginning, and I have entered into no alliance with the insurgents or with any faction. This squadron can reduce the defenses of Manila at any moment, but it is considered useless until the arrival of sufficient United States forces to retain possession.

DEWEY.

[Loud applause.]

Now we have got to the 3d day of June, and we have the first order of the President forbidding any alliance, and the declaration of Dewey that up to that time he had formed no alliance. Now let us go forward. There has been a great deal said here about some consul having in some way or other entered into a conspiracy or alliance, or something of that sort. Now, I am not going to stand alone upon that which I might well stand upon. I know the attempt at this late date to prove an alliance through any action of a United States consul would not receive the consideration of any intelligent man for one moment, and I do not need to stand upon that.

I hold in my hand the official dispatches from Williams, from Wildman, and from Pratt. I can not read the whole of it; there is very much said here about the rumors that have reached in various directions in regard to the matter. I find this, dated the 15th day of June, following immediately Williams's dispatch to Mr. Day:

At a conference with General Aguinaldo, the head of the movement, I was told that they had now above 4,500 Mauser rifles taken from the Spaniards, and had also abundant ammunition.

Now, that answers the whole of this story we have heard about their having furnished Aguinaldo with arms.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Do you say that Dewey did not furnish them with arms?

Mr. GROSVENOR. No; they took arms. I admit that he permitted him—he being on the shore and Dewey being on board of ship, there being no forces of the country there—he permitted him to take from the Spanish arms in the arsenal at Cavite a certain number of guns and amount of ammunition.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. These had been captured by our Government.

Mr. GROSVENOR. No, they had not. They never had put a foot on shore. There is the trouble my friend is laboring under. We never sent one armed man on shore until long after this.

Now, on the 16th day of June, from Williams to Day.

For future advantage, I am maintaining cordial relations with General Aguinaldo, having stipulated submissiveness to our forces when treating for their return here.

There is the utmost Williams has said up to that date, that he was keeping himself in touch, he, Aguinaldo, promising to become submissive to the power of the United States Government.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Was not that placing his arms at the disposal of the United States?

Mr. GROSVENOR. Now, do not interrupt me; I did not interrupt you. On the 4th day of August reports had permeated this country that something had been done through some American consul looking to an agreement between these parties, and the Secretary of State sent this:

I have to acknowledge the receipt of your special dispatch of 16th of June, which I have just read, a copy of which has been sent to the Secretary of War and the Navy. Your course, while maintaining amicable relations with the insurgents in abstaining from any of the so-called provisional governments, is approved.

We have come to the 4th of August with an absolute prohibition up to that date to have anything to do with Aguinaldo so far as to make any agreement or stipulation with him.

Mr. GAINES. Does not the gentleman know—

Mr. GROSVENOR. Why does the gentleman from Tennessee want to puncture my speech? He gets into the RECORD often enough as it is, and that is about the only way he ever does get in. [Laughter.]

Now, Mr. Secretary Day, on the 15th of December, sends the following.

Directly I shall go back and read telegrams covering a great deal more. This is directed to Mr. Wildman:

I have to acknowledge the receipt of your dispatch of November 3, in which you announce the arrival of Agoncillo—

That is the recent late departed who was torn away from the embraces that he was enjoying here with the Aguinaldo party in this country, and who fled away to Canada some time during the night and later on went out of the country where he understood he was an enemy of the country and was liable to arrest and imprisonment and to be shot for the perpetration of crimes against this Government.

Whom you describe as a foreign agent and high commissioner of the new republic of the Philippines, and who holds full power to negotiate and conclude treaties with foreign powers. Agoncillo offers an alliance.

Recollect he is offering an alliance here on the 15th of December. My friends have been thinking that there was an alliance formed with him way back in June or May—they didn't know when—but here, on the 15th of November, Agoncillo is representing himself, just as he represented and held out and was embraced here in the city of Washington—representing that he had power to make treaties for an alliance, and he goes on to tell what he can do.

You may briefly advise Mr. Agoncillo, in case he should call upon you, that the Government of the United States does not negotiate such treaties, and it is not possible to forward the desired arms and ammunition.

There we have him up to the 15th of December. Bluffed out three or four times, he is attempting to get into some sort of an alliance under which he could pretend what is now being claimed on this floor.

I come forward now to a series of papers, dated the 14th of May, by all the leading officials of the Filipinos—and their names I will give in full in my remarks—each one of which gives the character of his relation to the Filipino people, each one of which surrenders and begs that Dewey, through the President, shall come and take possession of the government, which they are ready to yield to the people of the United States.

MR. WILDMAN TO MR. DAY.

No. 42.]

CONSULATE OF THE UNITED STATES,
Hongkong, May 6, 1898.

SIR: Supplementary to my cable of this date, I have the honor to inclose, by request, statement of Don Dorotes Cortes, Don Maximo Cortes, and Dona Eustaquia, wife of Don Maximo; also like statement of Arcadio Rosario, Graciano Gonzaga, and Don Jose Maria Basa, all very wealthy landholders, bankers, and advocates, of Manila.

They desire to tender their allegiance and the allegiance of their powerful families in Manila to the United States. They have instructed all their connections to render every aid to our forces in Manila.

The letters to the President, inclosed, explain themselves.

I have the honor to be, etc.,

ROUNSEVILLE WILDMAN, Consul.

MR. CRIDLER TO MR. WILDMAN.

No. 42.]

JUNE 16, 1898.

SIR: The Department has received your dispatch No. 42, of the 6th ultimo, reporting that a number of influential families of Manila desire to tender their allegiance to the United States.

In reply I have to inform you that a copy has been sent to the War Department with the suggestion that the information be conveyed to General Merritt.

Respectfully, yours,

THOS. W. CRIDLER,
Third Assistant Secretary.

MR. WILDMAN TO MR. DAY.

No. 43.]

CONSULATE OF THE UNITED STATES,
Hongkong, May 14, 1898.

SIR: I have the honor to inclose, by request, the statements of Severino Rotea, Claudio Lopez, A. H. Marti, and Eugenia Ploua, all wealthy and prominent landholders of the Philippine Islands.

They desire to submit their allegiance and the allegiance of their families in the Philippine Islands to the United States.

The letters to the President inclosed explain themselves.

I have the honor to be, etc.,

ROUNSEVILLE WILDMAN, Consul.

To the President of the United States of North America:

Severino Rotea and Lopes, proprietor and farmer, native of Negros Oriental (Visayas), Philippine Islands, with great consideration exposes:

Having known the history and constitution of the noblest liberal and rightful nation of the United States, he willingly adheres to the Government in annexing his country, and it will be for him a great honor to be joined it as soon as an additional star to the victorious flag of the United States of America and considered him as one of its citizens.

Hongkong, May 11, 1898.

SEVERINO ROTEA.

To the President of the United States of America:

Claudio Lopez, merchant and proprietor and vice-consul of Portugal at Iloilo, native of the Philippine Islands, emigrant to this colony of Hongkong for political causes, exposes with great consideration:

Having known the history and constitution of the noblest liberal and rightful nation of the United States of America, he for the present adheres to the Government in annexing his country, and considers that it will be for him a great honor to join his country as an additional star to the always victorious flag of the United States of America and to count him as one of its citizens.

Hongkong, 9th May, 1898.

CLAUDIO LOPEZ.

To the President of the United States of America:

We, the subscribers, natives of the Philippine Islands, emigrants to this colony for political causes, with great consideration expose:

Having known the history and the Constitution of the noble, liberal, and rightful nation of the United States of America, for the present, they adhere to the Government, considering that it will be for them a great honor to join their country as an additional star to the always victorious flag of the United States of America and considered them as its citizens.

A. H. MARTI.

To the President of the United States of North America:

Eugenio Plona and Padilio, proprietor and farmer, native of Negros Occidental (Visayas), Philippine Islands, and emigrant to this colony for political causes, with great consideration, exposes:

Having known the history and Constitution of the noblest, liberal, and rightful nation of the United States, he willingly adheres to the Government in annexing his country, and it will be for him a great honor to be joined it as an additional star to the always victorious flag of the United States of North America, and considered him as one of its citizens.
Hongkong, May 10, 1898.

EUGENIA PLONA.

And but for the rebellion put on foot by Aguinaldo we should have peace ever since.

Now, let me show, gentlemen, what there is in this claim that some consul has done something. Our State Department heard as early as August rumors of that character, and the Secretary, through Mr. Moore, the assistant, wrote Mr. Wildman as follows:

If you wrote Aguinaldo as reported by the Hongkong correspondent of the Daily Mail, your action is disapproved, and you are forbidden to make pledges or discuss policy.

Mr. SETTLE. Was that communicated to the insurgents?

Mr. GROSVENOR. I did not carry it. Undoubtedly it was at once communicated to the insurgents. Later on here comes the answer from Wildman, who stands as the substructure of this whole assault on this floor. He now says that he recognized that the Department has heard something about him, and here is his answer:

August 8.—Never made pledges or discussed policy of America with Aguinaldo further than to try and hold him to promises made before Dewey took him to Cavite, believing it my duty, it being understood that my influence is good. If report contrary, disavow it.

WILDMAN.

Mr. SETTLE. What is the date of that?

Mr. GROSVENOR. August 8.

Mr. SETTLE. I desire to call attention to the printed document, Messages of the President of the United States, containing the treaty, etc.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I have it right here.

Mr. SETTLE. To page 328, in a letter from Williams to Day, as follows:

MR. WILLIAMS TO MR. DAY.

U. S. S. BALTIMORE,
CONSULATE OF THE UNITED STATES,
MANILA BAY, OFF CAVITE,
Manila, Philippine Islands, May 24, 1898.

SIR: I have the honor to report successful efforts on the part of the insurgents of these islands in preparation for more successful war against Spain. Officers have visited me during the darkness of night to inform the fleet and me of their operations, and to report increase of strength.

At a conference with General Aguinaldo, the head of the movement, I was told that they had now above 4,500 Mauser rifles taken from the Spaniards, and had also abundant ammunition. Until the present they have been fatally crippled in these respects.

Last week Major Gonzales captured two buffalo-cart loads of rifle ammunition from the Spaniards. To-day I executed a power of attorney whereby General Aguinaldo releases to his attorneys in fact $400,000, now in bank in Hongkong, so that money therefrom can pay for 3,000 stands of arms bought there and expected here to-morrow.

The same sources informed me that about 37,000 insurgents stand ready to aid United States forces, and General Aguinaldo's headquarters were this a. m. at 7 o'clock surrounded by 500 to 1,000 men eager to enlist. I was there at that hour and saw the men.

My relations with all are cordial, and I manage to keep them so pro bono publico.

When General Merritt arrives he will find large auxiliary land forces adapted to his service and used to this climate.

I am, sir,

OSCAR F. WILLIAMS,
United States Consul.

Now, while a consul may not make a treaty, does not the gentleman see the force of the situation when he communicates those facts to the Secretary of State and puts this Government in possession of them?

Mr. GROSVENOR. Yes; and you will find that the Secretary of State at once repudiates the whole business.

Mr. SETTLE. But not for the insurgents themselves.

Mr. GAINES. Let me ask—

Mr. GROSVENOR. I decline to be interrupted.

Mr. GAINES. You interrupted me the other day.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Can the gentleman understand my language when I say I decline to be interrupted?

Mr. GAINES. The gentleman has repeatedly interrupted me.

Mr. GROSVENOR. My friend must see that I can not permit him to use up my time. It is not fair.

Mr. GAINES. And you must not use up my time in the future.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Well, I do not want to.

Mr. GAINES. You have done it heretofore.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to say that when one gentleman has the floor another gentleman has no right to interrupt him without his consent first had and obtained. The Chair hopes that gentlemen will pay attention to this rule, as the gentleman from Ohio has expressly desired not to be interrupted.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I was perfectly willing that the gentleman from Kentucky should point out the coincidence that fits into my remarks, but for half a dozen gentlemen to interpose when another is occupying the floor—everybody knows that no man living can bear that sort of interruption and do himself justice.

Now, following immediately upon that, I will point out to the gentleman that on the 15th day of August—bear in mind this long letter from which the gentleman has read an extract—

Mr. SETTLE. A short one.

Mr. GROSVENOR. No, sir, quite a long letter. It came by mail, as appears, and was dated the 24th of May. It probably did not reach this country much before August.

Mr. SETTLE. And during all the intervening time the insurgents were acting.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Not at all. I will show you what they were doing.

Now after a while, on the 15th of August, came this dispatch from Wildman:

The Spanish consul received dispatch Sunday ordering the surrender of Manila.

That shows Manila had not surrendered, as the gentleman from New York intimated.

Shall I offer to deliver personally and save more delay? Believe can be of service to Dewey, should Aguinaldo make trouble.

WILDMAN.

This telegram from Wildman was thus answered by the Secretary:

Spanish consul should deliver dispatch in his own way. Take no action respecting Aguinaldo without specific directions from this Department.

That put an end to the interference of Wildman.

Now it is said that one Platt, at Singapore, was the agent that procured in some way the transmission of this man over to Manila; and he sends his dispatches. And as soon as they reach here, there comes the answer of the Government to Mr. Platt.

Mr. SETTLE. I would like to ask one more question.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Very well, I yield.

Mr. SETTLE. Waiving all this question of technical alliances and the action of this Government, I want to ask this question: What inducement could there have been for these insurgents to render the aid they did?

Mr. GROSVENOR. Now I have the gentleman's whole meaning.

Mr. SETTLE. What were they doing it for?

Mr. GROSVENOR. How easy it is to answer that question!

Mr. SETTLE. Well, go on and answer it.

Mr. GROSVENOR. They had been crushed for hundreds of years under the criminal domination of Spain; and as soon as the United States got into war with Spain they went to war with Spain themselves. Nobody doubts that they were carrying on a war of their own. They were investing Manila; they were doing whatever they could with this "Lafayette" of my friend's over here running away from them.

Mr. SETTLE. They were doing whatever they could to carry out the purposes for which they had inaugurated their war.

Mr. GROSVENOR. They were doing it to get their freedom.

Mr. SETTLE. That is right.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Which, as I will show you directly, they have more fully obtained than they ever hoped.

Mr. SETTLE. They must be the judges of that.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Not at all, under these circumstances.

Mr. SETTLE. Ah!

Mr. GROSVENOR. At this point it may be well to say that while it can not be denied the Filipinos were engaged in war for their own liberation from Spanish dominion, yet they could not intervene as between the United States and Spain and wrest aside the inevitable consequences of war. They were under the sovereignty of Spain when the war began, and when, by the protocol of August 12th, war with Spain ceased for the time being, the possession of the city of Manila was given to the United States, the Filipinos were transferred to the United States in so far as the cession by Spain could transfer the inhabitants of a country over which Spain had held dominion and sovereignty, and it would have been fruitless and suicidal upon the part of our Government to have turned over to a conscienceless, unorganized rabble the government of a city of 350,000 people simply because, under the inspiration of our war with Spain, they had begun a rebellion against the constituted authorities. So the legal status is simple; the United States acquired the right of possession to Manila and took upon itself the obligation to protect the persons and property of all the inhabitants thereof, foreign and domestic, and hence could not surrender its sovereignty, or any part of it, to Aguinaldo or anybody else.

Now it is said that Pratt made some arrangement and sent on under date of June an article from the London Spectator, which was reproduced in the Singapore Free Press, etc., and as soon as the State Department got hold of it they sent him word—

Your dispatch 212 received and answered. Avoid unauthorized negotiation with Philippine insurgents.

If in the course of your conference with General Aguinaldo you acted upon the assumption that this Government would cooperate with him for the furtherance of any plan of his own, or that in accepting his cooperation it would consider itself pledged to recognize any political claim which he may put forward, your action was unauthorized and can not be approved.

WILLIAM R. DAY.

It is being urged that Admiral Dewey solicited the presence of Aguinaldo at Manila. The fact about it is that Mr. Pratt, an overofficial consul-general of the United States located at Singapore, a British possession, telegraphed the State Department at Washington on the 27th of April as follows:

General Aguinaldo gone my instance Hongkong arrange with Dewey cooperation insurgents Manila.

And the whole outfit that the gentlemen have fastened upon with so much avidity is included with the following telegram sent to the consul-general at Hongkong:

Aguinaldo, insurgent leader, here. Will come Hongkong arrange with Commodore for general cooperation insurgents Manila if desired. Telegraph.

PRATT.

The Commodore's reply reading thus:

Tell Aguinaldo come soon as possible.

DEWEY.

I consider and I believe all fair men will consider that these communications between Pratt and the Hongkong consulate and Aguinaldo were unauthorized and absolutely void, for it can not be supposed for a minute that Aguinaldo was ignorant of the powerless character of the office held by Pratt to so negotiate. These negotiations took place in the early days of May, and indeed the first dispatch to which I have referred was dated April 27, before the fall of Manila, but it was a solicitation upon the part of Pratt, acting as the representative of Aguinaldo, that Aguinaldo might be permitted to go to Manila, and doubtless Dewey, acting as any other man under like circumstances would act, was willing to see Aguinaldo and learn from him the purpose and intent of that body of insurgents to which he nominally belonged.

And now, right here, Mr. Speaker, I beg the gentlemen to be frank. A hundred times, a thousand times during our civil war prominent men of the South were invited to visit our camps and talk with the commanders with regard to the situation in the country. Hundreds of men were invited to our camps and to the camps of the enemy to give such information as amounted to the report of spies. Every available source of information is justly operated by a commander under these circumstances. But lest there should be any doubt about it, on the 16th of June Secretary Day flatly repudiated every act, and while Mr. Pratt seems to have squirmed under it, he denies having made any negotiations, for on the 19th of June he telegraphs:

SECRETARY OF STATE,
Washington:

No intention negotiate. Left that Dewey who desired Aguinaldo come.

PRATT.

When Aguinaldo got to Manila he very soon learned what his relation was to be, and Mr. Pratt, under date of June 21, notifies the Department that Aguinaldo would have returned to Manila in any event.

On the 25th of June the Department of State said to Mr. Pratt:

I have to inform you that the Department is pleased to learn that you did not make any political pledges to Aguinaldo.

Then on the 20th of July, "to make assurance doubly sure," the Secretary of State telegraphed to Pratt:

Your address does not repel this implication, and it moreover represents that General Aguinaldo was "sought out by you," whereas it had been the understanding of the Department that you received him only upon the request of a British subject named Bray, who formerly lived in the Philippines. Your further reference to General Aguinaldo as "the man for the occasion," and to your "bringing about" the "arrangement" between "General Aguinaldo and Admiral Dewey which has resulted so happily," also represents the matter in a light which causes apprehension lest your action may have laid the ground of future misunderstandings and complications.

For these reasons the Department has not caused the article to be given to the press, lest it might seem thereby to lend a sanction to views the expression of which it had not authorized.

Respectfully, yours,

WILLIAM R. DAY.

Then comes Mr. Pratt under date of July 23:

I have carefully considered your observations upon my action in this matter and beg to repeat what I have stated in my later dispatches on the same subject, that I declined even to discuss with General Aguinaldo the question of the future policy of the United States with regard to the Philippines, that I held out no hopes to him of any kind, committed the Government in no way whatever, and, in the course of our confidences, never acted upon the assumption that the Government would cooperate with him—General Aguinaldo—for the furtherance of any plan of his own, nor that, in accepting his said cooperation, it would consider itself pledged to recognize any political claims which he might put forward.

I have the honor, etc.,

E. SPENCER PRATT,
United States Consul-General.

And in this connection it may be stated with propriety that the services of Mr. Pratt were thereupon dispensed with, and he is no longer negotiating treaties of peace and alliance for the United States Government; at least that is the information which comes to me. And, Mr. Speaker, I defy any gentleman to find anywhere in any of these publications the utterance of the head of the Government of the United States that is a repudiation of the statement that we had no connection of any kind whatever with these people, excepting in the way that I have spoken of.

Mr. SETTLE. Does the gentleman think the Government had no intention of the annexation of the islands and the control of the people at the time that our troops were landed on their shores?

Mr. GROSVENOR. I have stated that we were not—

Mr. SETTLE (continuing). Then why object to them as allies, as the gentleman has been objecting?

Mr. GROSVENOR. Because, as the President says, we did not want to get mixed up with them.

Mr. SETTLE. But he accepted their services.

Mr. GROSVENOR. No, sir; he did not accept their services. I deny it. The first thing that the soldiers of the American army did, when they landed there, was to exclude them from the town and prevent them from the opportunity which they desired of pillaging and looting the property of the people. That was all that was done.

Mr. BARTLETT. Will the gentleman allow me an interruption just there?

Mr. GROSVENOR (continuing). We did it in Cuba.

Mr. SETTLE. And we did it in the Philippines, too. We gave these people precisely the same assurances, and we accepted their services.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I deny that, emphatically. The gentleman has not listened to my remarks. I deny that from the very first moment that this proclamation was issued up to the present time there was anything to justify the impression that we regarded these people as our allies in this controversy. I deny that anything was done, excepting, as I have said, under the guns of the American army, to drive them beyond the confines of the city, to keep them from doing damage, to keep them from murdering, destroying and pillaging the property of the people, and under no possible condition or circumstances could they have been considered in the light in which the gentleman places them.

Mr. BARTLETT. Now, will the gentleman allow me to refer to a record that I find in this document, submitted to the Senate by the President, in answer to that suggestion?

Mr. GROSVENOR. I will yield to the gentleman for a moment.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. They agreed to respect our orders, at all events.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Unquestionably.

Mr. GROSVENOR (interrupting). Oh, Mr. Speaker, if I tell a man to get out of my house or I will kick him out, and he goes, that is certainly no treaty of peace between us. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. BARTLETT. If the gentleman from Ohio will permit me, I will refer the gentleman to the information furnished by the President to the Senate, to be found on page 390 of the very document from which he has been reading. A letter from General Anderson to Aguinaldo, the commander of the insurgent forces in the Philippine Islands, and dated July 4, 1898, in which he addressed Aguinaldo as the "commander of the Philippine forces," and in which he says, among other things:

For these reasons I desire to have the most amicable relations with you and to have you and your people cooperate with us in military operations against the Spanish forces.

Now, how does the gentleman explain his present contention, in view of that statement?

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, the suggestion that the gentleman from Georgia has made in reference to this letter I have in mind. It was my intention to publish the letter in full. It does not at all meet the point that I am making. I will put the entire letter in the RECORD, and the gentleman can see for himself, in connection with what I am saying, how little relevancy it has to the course of my argument:

HEADQUARTERS FIRST BRIGADE,
UNITED STATES EXPEDITIONARY FORCES,
Cavite Arsenal, Philippine Islands, July 4, 1898.

SEÑOR DON EMILIO AGUINALDO,
Commanding Philippine Forces, Cavite, Luzon.

GENERAL: I have the honor to inform you that the United States of America, whose land forces I have the honor to command in this vicinity, being at war with the Kingdom of Spain, has entire sympathy and most friendly sentiments for the native people of the Philippine Islands.

For these reasons I desire to have the most amicable relations with you, and to have you and your people cooperate with us in military operations against the Spanish forces.

In our operations it has become necessary for us to occupy the town of Cavite as a base of operations. In doing this, I do not wish to interfere with your residence here and the exercise by yourself and other native citizens of all functions and privileges not inconsistent with military rule.

I would be pleased to be informed at once of any misconduct of soldiers under my command, as it is the intention of my Government to maintain order, and to treat all citizens with justice, courtesy, and kindness.

I have therefore the honor to ask your excellency to instruct your officials not to interfere with my officers in the performance of their duties and not to assume that they can not visit Cavite without permission.

Assuring you again of my most friendly sentiment and distinguished consideration, I am, with all respect,

THOMAS M. ANDERSON,
Brigadier-General, U. S. Volunteers, Commanding.

Here is the letter of Aguinaldo:

Brig. Gen. THOMAS M. ANDERSON,
Commanding the United States Volunteers.

GENERAL: Interpreting the sentiments of the Philippine people, I have the honor to express to your excellency my most profound gratefulness for the sympathy and amicable sentiments which the natives of these islands inspire the great North American nation and your excellency. I also thank most profoundly your desire of having friendly relations with us and of treating us with justice, courtesy, and kindness, which is also our constant wish to prove the same, and special satisfaction whenever occasion represents.

I have already ordered my people not to interfere in the least with your officers and men, orders which I shall reiterate to prevent their being unfulfilled, hoping that you will inform me of whatever misconduct that may be done by those in my command, so as to reprimand them and correspond with your wishes.

I beg of your excellency to accept in return the assurance of my most respectfully consideration.

I remain, respectfully,

EMILIO AGUINALDO.

And here is the further letter of General Anderson:

HEADQUARTERS FIRST BRIGADE,
UNITED STATES EXPEDITIONARY FORCES,
Cavite Arsenal, Philippine Islands, July 6, 1898.

Señor Don EMILIO AGUINALDO Y FAM, Y,
Commanding Philippine Forces.

GENERAL: I am encouraged by the friendly sentiments expressed by your excellency in your welcome letter received on the 5th instant to endeavor to come to a definite understanding, which I hope will be advantageous to both.

Very soon we expect a large addition to our forces, and it must be apparent to you as a military officer that we will require much more room to camp our soldiers, and also storeroom for our supplies. For this I would like to have your excellency's advice and cooperation, as you are best acquainted with the resources of this country.

It must be apparent to you that we do not intend to remain here inactive, but to move promptly against our common enemy; but for a short time we must organize and land supplies and also retain a place for storing them near our fleet and transports.

I am solicitous to avoid any conflict of authority which may result from having two sets of military officers exercising command in the same place.

I am also anxious to avoid sickness by taking sanitary precautions. Your own medical officers have been making voluntary inspections with mine and fear epidemic disease if the vicinity is not made clean. Would it not be well to have prisoners work to this end under the advice of the surgeons?

I again renew my assurances of distinguished consideration.

I am, with great respect,

THOMAS M. ANDERSON,
Brigadier-General, U. S. Volunteers, Commanding.

We now discover the fact that on these dates the military forces of the United States had arrived and were landed. Up to that time there had been no intention of a general occupation or interference with affairs in the Philippine Islands so far as appears from the correspondence and orders; it was simply a question of war. But then there did come to the President for the first time knowledge that Aguinaldo was desiring a general occupation. Here is a telegram sent to the Adjutant-General, which explains the whole matter:

ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Cavite, August 13, 1898. (Received August 17, 1898.)

Send the following telegram to the Adjutant-General:

"Since occupation of the town and suburbs the insurgents on outside are pressing demand for joint occupation of the city. Situation difficult. Inform me at once how far I shall proceed in forcing obedience in this matter and others that may arise. Is Government willing to use all means to make the natives submit to the authority of the United States?"

"MERRITT.
"DEWEY."

To which the President replied as follows:

ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, August 17, 1898.

Maj. Gen. MERRITT, Manila, Philippines:

The President directs that there must be no joint occupation with the insurgents. The United States in the possession of Manila City, Manila Bay, and harbor must preserve the peace and protect persons and property within the territory occupied by their military and naval forces. The insurgents and all others must recognize the military occupation and authority of the United States and the cessation of hostilities proclaimed by the President. Use whatever means in your judgment are necessary to this end. All law-abiding people must be treated alike.

By order Secretary War:

H. C. CORBIN,
Adjutant-General.

Here then appears the solution of the whole controversy between myself and my friends here. General Anderson was about to land his forces upon an unknown shore to strike the Spanish military forces the final blow; and anxious to ascertain the conditions of the country, proper location for his camps, the necessary steps for the promotion of the health of his soldiers, he invites cooperation with Aguinaldo, who still stood in the same relation that I have already described, an insurgent fighting the Spanish.

How much of compromise or obligation grew out of the mere fact that Anderson was willing to utilize, even in the direction of cooperation, a force that he found in the field; how does that project itself forward into the future of those islands?

Then came the next trouble, and then followed the proclamation of the President of the United States, which I will put in in full:

WAR DEPARTMENT, Washington, May 23, 1898.

Maj. Gen. WESLEY MERRITT, U. S. Army,
Commanding Army of Occupation to the Philippines, Washington, D. C.
GENERAL: The following instructions of the President are communicated to you for your information and guidance:

EXECUTIVE MANSION, Washington, May 19, 1898.

TO THE SECRETARY OF WAR.

SIR: The destruction of the Spanish fleet at Manila, followed by the taking of the naval station at Cavite, the paroling of the garrisons, and acquisition of the control of the bay, have rendered it necessary, in the further prosecution of the measures adopted by this Government for the purpose of bringing about an honorable and durable peace with Spain, to send an army of occupation to the Philippines for the twofold purpose of completing the reduction of the Spanish power in that quarter and of giving order and security to the islands while in the possession of the United States. For the command of this expedition I have designated Maj. Gen. Wesley Merritt, and it now becomes my duty to give instructions as to the manner in which the movement shall be conducted.

The first effect of the military occupation of the enemy's territory is the severance of the former political relations of the inhabitants and the establishment of a new political power. Under this changed condition of things the inhabitants, so long as they perform their duties, are entitled to security in their persons and property and in all their private rights and relations. It is my desire that the people of the Philippines should be acquainted with the purpose of the United States to discharge to the fullest extent its obligations in this regard.

It will therefore be the duty of the commander of the expedition, immediately upon his arrival in the islands, to publish a proclamation declaring that we come, not to make war upon the people of the Philippines nor upon any party or faction among them, but to protect them in their homes, in their employments, and in their personal and religious rights. All persons who, either by active aid or by honest submission, cooperate with the United States in its efforts to give effect to this beneficent purpose will receive the reward of its support and protection. Our occupation should be as free from severity as possible.

Though the powers of the military occupant are absolute and supreme and immediately operate upon the political condition of the inhabitants, the municipal laws of the conquered territory, such as affect private rights of persons and property and provide for the punishment of crime, are considered as continuing in force, so far as they are compatible with the new order of things, until they are suspended or superseded by the occupying belligerent; and in practice they are not usually abrogated, but are allowed to remain in force and to be administered by the ordinary tribunals substantially as they were before the occupation.

This enlightened practice is so far as possible to be adhered to on the present occasion. The judges and the other officials connected with the administration of justice may, if they accept the authority of the United States, continue to administer the ordinary law of the land as between man and man under the supervision of the American commander in chief. The native constabulary will as far as may be practicable be preserved. The freedom of the people to pursue their accustomed occupations will be abridged only when it may be necessary to do so.

While the rule of conduct of the American commander in chief will be such as has just been defined, it will be his duty to adopt measures of a different kind if, unfortunately, the course of the people should render such measures indispensable to the maintenance of law and order. He will then possess the power to replace or expel the native officials in part or altogether, to substitute new courts of his own constitution for those that now exist, or to create such or supplementary tribunals as may be necessary. In the exercise of these high powers the commander must be guided by his judgment and his experience and a high sense of justice.

One of the most important and most practical problems with which the commander of the expedition will have to deal is that of the treatment of property and collection and administration of the revenues. It is conceded that all public funds and securities belonging to the government of the country in its own right, and all arms and supplies and other movable property of such government, may be seized by the military occupant and converted to the use of this Government.

The real property of the state he may hold and administer, at the same time enjoying the revenues thereof, but he is not to destroy it, save in the case of cables, railways, and boats belonging to the state, may be appropriated to his use; but unless in the case of military necessity they are not to be destroyed. All churches and buildings devoted to religious worship and to the arts and sciences, all schoolhouses, are, so far as possible, to be protected, and all destruction or intentional defacement of such places, of historical monuments or archives, or of works of science or art, is prohibited, save when required by urgent military necessity.

Private property, whether belonging to individuals or corporations, is to be respected, and can be confiscated only as hereafter indicated. Means of transportation, such as telegraph lines and cables, railways, and boats, may, although they belong to private individuals or corporations, be seized by the military occupant, but unless destroyed under military necessity are not to be retained.

While it is held to be the right of a conqueror to levy contributions upon the enemy in their seaports, towns, or provinces which may be in his military possession by conquest, and to apply the proceeds to defray the expenses of the war, this right is to be exercised within such limitations that it may not savor of confiscation. As the result of military occupation the taxes and duties payable by the inhabitants to the former government become payable to the military occupant, unless he sees fit to substitute for them other rates or modes of contribution to the expenses of the government. The moneys so collected are to be used for the purpose of paying the expenses of government under the military occupation, such as the salaries of the judges and the police, and for the payment of the expenses of the Army.

Private property taken for the use of the army is to be paid for, when possible in cash at a fair valuation, and when payment in cash is not possible receipts are to be given.

In order that there may be no conflict of authority between the Army and the Navy in the administration of affairs in the Philippines, you are instructed to confer with the Secretary of the Navy, so far as necessary, for the purpose of devising measures to secure the harmonious action of these two branches of the public service.

I will give instructions to the Secretary of the Treasury to make a report to me upon the subject of the revenues of the Philippines, with a view to the formulation of such revenue measures as may seem expedient. All courts and places in the Philippines which may be in the actual possession of our land and naval forces will be opened, while our military occupation may continue, to the commerce of all neutral nations, as well as our own, in articles not contraband of war, and upon payment of the prescribed rates of duty which may be in force at the time of the importation.

WILLIAM MCKINLEY.

Very respectfully,

R. A. ALGER, Secretary of War.

The gentleman has been saying here constantly, and the gentleman from Missouri has just repeated the question a few minutes ago, Why did not the President notify the people of the Philippine Islands what his purpose was? Let us see what he said on the 19th day of May to the people of the Philippine Islands. And I state that this was printed by tens of thousands in Spanish and circulated far and wide, and it was this proclamation which I charge the insurgents burned up.

Mr. SETTLE. When was it first printed in the Philippine Islands?

Mr. GROSVENOR. As soon as it could be telegraphed there—about the 19th of May.

Mr. SETTLE. About August.

Mr. GROSVENOR. No, telegraphed there.

It is my desire that the people of the Philippines should be acquainted with the purposes of the United States to discharge to the fullest extent its obligations. It will, therefore, be the duty of the commander of the expedition immediately on his arrival in the islands—

That was before he ever put a soldier on shore—

to publish a proclamation declaring that we come not to make war upon the people of the Philippines nor upon any party or faction of them, but to protect them in their homes, in their employments, and in their personal and religious rights.

And so he went on and wound up by a strong appeal to the people of the Philippines to rest assured that no final determination as to their future was involved in the military protection which was extended to them.

Mr. SETTLE. Will the gentleman permit another interruption? I thought the gentleman stated a little while ago that there was no dispatch from Commodore Dewey in reference to Aguinaldo's coming.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I did not say anything of the sort.

Mr. SETTLE. I call the gentleman's attention to this letter, in which he says "Tell Aguinaldo to come."

Mr. GROSVENOR. I will not have the gentleman get ahead of where I am—

Mr. SETTLE. You are always coming to it.

Mr. GROSVENOR. In order to say that I have said this or that. My notes will show that I said no such thing.

Mr. VANDIVER. I asked the gentleman the question and he said expressly that there was no such thing.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I said Dewey did not invite him to come, but consented that he should come.

Mr. SETTLE. No, he invited him. He says, "Tell Aguinaldo to come as soon as possible."

Mr. GROSVENOR. Haven't I read it?

Mr. SETTLE. I understood you denied there was any such thing.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I deny that that was an invitation. I had already read that Pratt had asked the privilege for him to come; had asked Dewey if he might come, and Dewey said, "Tell Aguinaldo to come."

Mr. SETTLE. Telling him to come was an invitation to him to come.

Mr. GROSVENOR. It was not; it was a consent for him upon his application.

Mr. SETTLE. It led him to suppose he was welcome.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Very well, suppose he was. I admit that he was welcome, but after he got there Merritt refused to see him.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Merritt was not there.

Mr. GROSVENOR. The first time Merritt was there he refused to see him, and Dewey gave him no order and no instruction, and telegraphed the President that he had made no promise to him. Then comes the proclamation of December 27.

As explanatory of this proclamation read the following:

ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, December 27, 1898.

General OTIS, Manila:

By direction of the Secretary of War I have the honor to transmit herewith instructions of the President relative to the administration of affairs in the Philippine Islands:

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, December 21, 1898.

To the SECRETARY OF WAR.

SIR: The destruction of the Spanish fleet in the harbor of Manila by the United States naval squadron commanded by Rear-Admiral Dewey, followed by the reduction of the city and the surrender of the Spanish forces, practically effected the conquest of the Philippine Islands and the suspension of Spanish sovereignty therein.

With the signature of the treaty of peace between the United States and Spain by their respective plenipotentiaries at Paris on the 10th instant, and as a result of the victories of American arms, the future control, disposition, and government of the Philippine Islands are ceded to the United States. In fulfillment of the rights of sovereignty thus acquired and the responsible obligations of government thus assumed, the actual occupation and administration of the entire group of the Philippine Islands become immediately necessary, and the military government heretofore maintained by the United States in the city, harbor, and bay of Manila is to be extended with all possible dispatch to the whole of the ceded territory.

In performing this duty the military commander of the United States is enjoined to make known to the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands that in succeeding to the sovereignty of Spain, in severing the former political relations of the inhabitants, and in establishing a new political power the authority of the United States is to be exerted for the security of the persons and property of the people of the islands and for the confirmation of all their [private] rights and relations.

It will be the duty of the commander of the forces of occupation to announce and proclaim in the most public manner that we come not as invaders or conquerors, but as friends, to protect the natives in their homes, in their employments, and in their personal and religious rights. All persons who, either by active aid or by honest submission, cooperate with the Government of the United States to give effect to these beneficent purposes will receive the reward of its support and protection. All others will be brought within the lawful rule we have assumed, with firmness if need be, but without severity so far as may be possible.

Within the absolute domain of military authority, which necessarily is and must remain supreme in the ceded territory until the legislation of the United States shall otherwise provide, the municipal laws of the territory in respect to private rights and property and the repression of crime are to be considered as continuing in force, and to be administered by the ordinary tribunals so far as practicable. The operations of civil and municipal government are to be performed by such officers as may accept the supremacy of the United States by taking the oath of allegiance, or by officers chosen as far as may be practicable from the inhabitants of the islands.

While the control of all the public property and the revenues of the State passes with the cession, and while the use and management of all public means of transportation are necessarily reserved to the authority of the United States, private property, whether belonging to individuals or corporations, is to be respected except for cause duly established. The taxes and duties heretofore payable by the inhabitants to the late Government become payable to the authorities of the United States, unless it be seen fit to substitute for them other reasonable rates or modes of contribution to the expenses of government, whether general or local. If private property be taken for military use, it shall be paid for when possible in cash at a fair valuation, and when payment in cash is not practicable receipts are to be given.

All ports and places in the Philippine Islands in the actual possession of the land and naval forces of the United States will be opened to the commerce of all friendly nations. All goods and wares not prohibited for military reasons by due announcement of the military authority will be admitted upon payment of such duties and other charges as shall be in force at the time of their importation.

Finally, it should be the earnest and paramount aim of the military administration to win the confidence, respect, and affection of the inhabitants of the Philippines by assuring to them, in every possible way, that full measure of individual rights and liberties which is the heritage of free peoples, and by proving to them that the mission of the United States is one of benevolent assimilation, substituting the mild sway of justice and right for arbitrary rule.

In the fulfillment of this high mission, supporting the temperate administration of affairs for the greatest good of the governed, there must be sedulously maintained the strong arm of authority, to repress disturbance and to overcome all obstacles to the bestowal of the blessings of good and stable government upon the people of the Philippine Islands under the free flag of the United States.

WILLIAM MCKINLEY.

H. C. CORBIN, Adjutant-General.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, January 20, 1899.

To the SECRETARY OF STATE:

My communication to the Secretary of War, dated December 21, 1898, declares the necessity of extending the actual occupation and administration of the city, harbor, and bay of Manila to the whole of the territory which by the treaty of Paris, signed on December 10, 1898, passed from the sovereignty of Spain to the sovereignty of the United States and the consequent establishment of military government throughout the entire group of the Philippine Islands.

While the treaty has not yet been ratified, it is believed that it will be by the time of the arrival at Manila of the commissioners named below. In order to facilitate the most humane, specific, and effective extension of authority throughout these islands, and to secure with the least possible delay the benefits of a wise and generous protection of life and property to the inhabitants, I have named Jacob G. Schurman, Rear Admiral George Dewey, Major-General Elwell S. Otis, Charles Denby, and Dean C. Worcester to constitute a commission to aid in the accomplishment of these results.

In the performance of this duty, the commissioners are enjoined to meet at the earliest possible day in the city of Manila, and to announce by a public proclamation their presence and the mission intrusted to them, carefully setting forth that, while the military government already proclaimed is to be maintained and continued so long as necessity may require, efforts will be made to alleviate the burdens of taxation, to establish industrial and commercial prosperity, and to provide for the safety of persons and of property by such means as may be found conducive to these ends.

The commissioners will endeavor, without interference with the military authorities of the United States now in control of the Philippines, to ascertain what amelioration in the condition of the inhabitants and what improvements in public order may be practicable, and for this purpose they will study attentively the existing social and political state of the various populations, particularly as regards the forms of local government, the administration of justice, the collection of customs and other taxes, the means of transportation, and the need of public improvements.

They will report through the State Department, according to the forms customary or hereafter prescribed for transmitting and preserving such communications, the results of their observations and reflections, and will recommend such executive action as may from time to time seem to them wise and useful.

The commissioners are hereby authorized to confer authoritatively with any persons resident in the islands from whom they may believe themselves able to derive information or suggestions valuable for the purposes of their commission, or whom they may choose to employ as agents, as may be necessary for this purpose.

The temporary government of the islands is intrusted to the military authorities, as already provided for by my instructions to the Secretary of War of December 21, 1898, and will continue until Congress shall determine otherwise. The commission may render valuable services by examining with special care the legislative needs of the various groups of inhabitants and by reporting, with recommendations, the measures which should be instituted for the maintenance of order, peace, and public welfare, either as temporary steps to be taken immediately for the perfection of present administration, or as suggestions for future legislation.

In so far as immediate personal changes in the civil administration may seem to be advisable, the commissioners are empowered to recommend suitable persons for appointment to these offices from among the inhabitants of the islands who have previously acknowledged their allegiance to this Government.

It is my desire that, in all their relations with the inhabitants of the islands, the commissioners exercise due respect for all the ideals, customs, and institutions of the tribes and races which compose the population, emphasizing upon all occasions the just and beneficent intentions of the Government of the United States.

It is also my wish and expectation that the commissioners may be received in a manner due to the honored and authorized representatives of the American Republic, duly commissioned on account of their knowledge, skill, and integrity, as bearers of the good will, the protection, and the richest blessings of a liberating rather than a conquering nation.

WILLIAM MCKINLEY.

Mr. SETTLE. Let me call the gentleman's attention to this. I know he wants to be fair. In a letter from the consul-general to Mr. Day, dated the 28th of April, he uses this language:

I think that in arranging for his direct cooperation with the commander of our forces, I have prevented possible conflict of action and facilitated the work of occupying and administering the Philippines.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Of course he did. That was before the battle of Manila at all.

Mr. SETTLE. That was in April, 1898. No matter when it was, it arranged for his cooperation.

Mr. GROSVENOR. And no doubt Pratt was in some sort of a combination, but what I said was—and the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SETTLE] knows it and he knows that he is unjust and unfair to interrupt me with such a statement as that—was that the very moment the State Department heard Pratt had entered upon any such negotiation they forbade him to talk to Aguinaldo upon any such subject.

Mr. SETTLE. Where do you find that?

Mr. GROSVENOR. Haven't I read to you the dispatch signed by William R. Day?

Mr. SETTLE. That was in August.

Mr. GROSVENOR. That was the first time they ever heard of it. That was an immaterial matter, before the battle. Now, for fear my time will be exhausted—these gentlemen have used the most of it—

Mr. SETTLE. I am very sorry to have interrupted the gentleman. I did not do it in any bad faith.

Mr. GROSVENOR. No; I am sure you did not. The only effect of it was to use one-half of my time.

Mr. SETTLE. You used about all of mine the other day. We are even. I am willing that the gentleman's time should be extended.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Now, I shall, only for this purpose, refer to the statement made by some gentleman, who will know who he was, who stated that all of this was being done for the purpose of having certain concessions sold and arranged for out in the Philippine Islands. Before the treaty of peace was signed, on the 29th day of December, the commanding general at Manila, the commander of the forces and the government, received the following, was telegraphed the following order, and I may say this same order has been telegraphed to Porto Rico and to Cuba in effect:

Until otherwise ordered, no grants or concessions of public or corporate rights or franchises for the construction of public or quasi public works, such as railroads, tramways, telegraph and telephone lines, waterworks, gas works, electric-light lines, etc., shall be made by any municipal or other local governmental authority or body in the Philippine Islands, except upon the approval of the major-general commanding the military forces of the United States in the Philippine Islands, who shall, before approving any such grant or concession, be so especially authorized by the Secretary of War.

I defy any gentleman, and I send the challenge forth, to say that by the authority of this Government or this Administration there has been a single concession sold or bartered by any legal authorities or military commanders in any of the three countries to which I have referred.

Mr. SIMPSON. Will the gentleman yield to me for a question?

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Ohio yield to the gentleman from Kansas for a question?

Mr. GROSVENOR. If it is a question.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman yields for a question only. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired, however.

Mr. SIMPSON. I am sorry.

Mr. HEMENWAY. How much time have I now?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has sixteen minutes.

Mr. HEMENWAY. I yield ten minutes to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. SIMPSON. Quite often during this Congress the impression got abroad upon this side that the gentleman from Ohio spoke for the Administration. The question I wish to ask now is this: Is the gentleman to-day speaking now with authority or in defense of the present Administration of President McKinley? Has he authority to speak?

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, there is a rule of law in this country that no man shall be tried except by a jury of his peers.

Mr. CARMACK. And he is not bound to criminate himself, either. [Laughter.]

Mr. HENDERSON. I think it would be a good thing for you to keep your mouth shut.

Mr. SIMPSON. I think that advice would be well taken by the gentleman from Iowa himself.

Mr. HENDERSON. Take it home and digest it.

Mr. SIMPSON. I think your mouth hurts you more than anything else. If the gentleman will answer the question directly—if he is authorized—

Mr. GROSVENOR. I first want to answer the gentleman from Tennessee. I have no doubt he has piled up authorities on the subject that no man can be compelled to incriminate himself. I have no doubt that he is ready to defend cases of that kind under any and all circumstances.

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Kansas treats everything as a joke. We all of us treated it as a joke when he first came here.

Mr. SIMPSON. Now, that is not an answer to my question. [Laughter.] It is no matter what I am; what you are doing is what I am trying to get at.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I understand it to be—

Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman from Kansas will now sit down and let me answer his question, I will do it.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kansas will please be seated.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I am speaking upon my own authority, as I always speak, without the suggestion of anyone; and if my speech does not commend itself without having behind it the assurance that somebody else has instigated it, let my speech fall to the ground.

Mr. SIMPSON. That is a straightforward answer.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Now a single topic in the few moments I have left. It has been stated here, and over and over repeated by gentlemen whom I respect, and gentlemen of apparently high legal attainment, that the President of the United States has in some way been derelict in making no proclamation as to the policy concerning and as to the disposition of the Philippine Islands.

I ask any gentleman in the further continuance of this debate to say to this House and the country what right the President of the United States would have under the Constitution to make any such proposition as that? Where, under the Constitution and laws of this country, is it given the President of the United States to proclaim a policy for the United States in a matter of this kind?

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Under what law did he proclaim it for Cuba?

Mr. GROSVENOR. He proclaimed the law of Congress, the declaration of war with Spain on the question of Cuba, and he has carefully and religiously lived up to that in Cuba, so that the benign influence of peace is rapidly spreading itself over that island. The President confined himself at the close of the war—at the time the treaty of Paris was signed—he confined himself from that date under the Constitution to simply holding military occupation of the Philippine Islands until Congress should settle what should become of them; and in this Boston speech that has been criticised so much here he has made known to the people of the United States that he would not offer any policy or propose any impinging on the Constitution or the rights of Congress.

Here is a proclamation of the President which was published in English, Spanish, and Tagalo, dated the 4th of January, 1899, at Manila, which I think fills all the requirements:

PROCLAMATION.

OFFICE OF MILITARY GOVERNOR OF PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

Manila, P. I., January 4, 1899.

To the People of the Philippine Islands:

Instructions of His Excellency the President of the United States, relative to the administration of affairs in the Philippine Islands, have been transmitted to me by direction of the honorable the Secretary of War, under date of December 28, 1898.

They direct me to publish and proclaim, in the most public manner, to the inhabitants of these islands that in the war against Spain the United States forces came here to destroy the power of that nation and to give the blessings of peace and individual freedom to the Philippine people; that we are here as friends of the Filipinos to protect them in their homes, their employments, their individual and religious liberty; and that all persons who, either by active aid or honest endeavor, cooperate with the Government of the United States to give effect to these beneficent purposes will receive the reward of its support and protection.

The President of the United States has assumed that the municipal laws of the country in respect to private rights and property and the repression of crime are to be considered as continuing in force, in so far as they may be applicable to a free people, and should be administered by the ordinary tribunals of justice, presided over by representatives of the people and those in thorough sympathy with them in their desires for good government; that the functions and duties connected with civil and municipal administration are to be performed by such officers as wish to accept the assistance of the United States, chosen in so far as it may be practicable from the inhabitants of the islands; that while the management of public property and revenues and the use of all public means of transportation are to be conducted under the military authorities until such authorities can be replaced by civil administration, all private property, whether of individuals or corporations, must be respected and protected.

If private property be taken for military uses, it shall be paid for at a fair valuation in cash if possible, and when payment in cash is not practicable at the time, receipts therefor will be given, to be taken up and liquidated as soon as cash becomes available. The ports of the Philippine Islands shall be open to the commerce of all foreign nations, and goods and merchandise not prohibited for military reasons by the military authorities shall be admitted upon payment of such duties and charges as shall be in force at the time of importation.

The President concludes his instructions in the following language:

"Finally, it should be the earnest and paramount aim of the Administration to win the confidence, respect, and affection of the inhabitants of the Philippines by insuring to them in every possible way the full measure of individual rights and liberty which is the heritage of a free people, and by proving to them that the mission of the United States is one of beneficent assimilation, which will substitute the mild sway of justice and right for arbitrary rule. In the fulfillment of this high mission, while upholding the temporary administration of affairs for the greatest good of the governed, there will be sedulously maintained the strong arm of authority to repress disturbance, and to overcome all obstacles to the bestowal of the blessings of good and stable government upon the people of the Philippine Islands."

From the tenor and substance of the above instructions of the President, I am fully of the opinion that it is the intention of the United States Government, while directing affairs generally, to appoint the representative men now forming the controlling element of the Philippines to civil positions of trust and responsibility, and it will be my aim to appoint thereto such Filipinos as may be acceptable to the supreme authorities at Washington.

It is also my belief that it is the intention of the United States Government to draw from the Philippine people so much of the military force of the islands as is possible and consistent with a free and well-constituted government of the country, and it is my desire to inaugurate a policy of that character.

I am also convinced that it is the intention of the United States Government to seek the establishment of a most liberal government for the islands, in which the people themselves shall have as full representation as the maintenance of order and law will permit, and which shall be susceptible of development, on lines of increased representation and the bestowal of increased powers, into a government as free and independent as is enjoyed by the most favored provinces of the world.

It will be my constant endeavor to cooperate with the Philippine people, seeking the good of the country, and I invite their full confidence and aid.

E. S. OTIS,

Major-General, United States Volunteers, Military Governor.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Has the gentleman any information whether Congress is to be called in an extra session to outline a policy?

Mr. GROSVENOR. Does the gentleman from Indiana think he could outline a policy now?

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. I understood the gentleman from Ohio to say that it is the duty of Congress. I want to know whether we have got to wait nine months to do it?

Mr. GROSVENOR. The Constitution fixes the time when Congress shall come and go. Thank God for our Constitution. [Laughter and applause.]

Now, let me go on; somebody interrupts me every time I attempt to make a connected sentence. The President found himself charged with the single duty of maintaining the peace and of holding these islands subject to the future action of Congress. Now, what else has happened? I hold in my hand a letter, a communication made by Aguinaldo to the Belgian Government, and presumably to all the other nations of Europe, dated on the 8th day of January, declaring his purpose to attack the soldiers in the Philippine Islands.

I will publish the orders of the President dated all through the month of January, way up into the month of February, calling upon Otis and the other commanders to forbear shooting anybody—to stand only upon the defensive. But Aguinaldo came there with his armed troops and fired upon the troops of the United States. It was just as much a war on the part of Aguinaldo as was the battle of Santiago. Aguinaldo and his armed men shot the American soldiers, and he was an enemy of the United States. What is the law of your country, my friends? Treason against the United States consists in levying war against the United States, and that is what Aguinaldo has done.

Treason is adherence to the enemies of the United States and giving them aid and comfort. How much comfort do you think it is to have brave Congressmen here day after day protesting that they will vote against, and speak against, the defensive action of the United States Government in protecting her soldiers from the deadly assault of Aguinaldo and his army.

The Department of State, under date of February 25, furnishes me with a memorandum of a document laid before Mr. André, late Belgian consul at Manila. Here is the document:

FEBRUARY 24, 1899.

Mr. André, Belgian consul at Manila, has shown me a proclamation of Aguinaldo, detailing his grievances against the United States Government, dated at Malolos, the 8th of January, 1899, and also a written communication signed by Aguinaldo, saying "I have considered it my duty to remit the accompanying documents that you may inform your Government of the true causes of the attitude of the Philippines in case the Americans oblige me to open hostilities." This is dated the 9th of January, 1899, several weeks before the attack which he made upon the American forces at Manila, showing conclusively that this attack had been contemplated for some time.

Here now is a copy of a letter written by General Otis in reply to one received from General Aguinaldo, dated January 9, 1899, showing that at the very time that Aguinaldo was laying his plans to shoot down American troops our Government was preventing an outbreak by stringent orders to our troops and repeated manifestations of good will to the Filipinos:

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE PACIFIC AND EIGHTH ARMY CORPS.
Manila, P. I., January 9, 1899.

Gen. EMILIO AGUINALDO,
Commanding Revolutionary Force, Malolos, P. I.

GENERAL: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of to-day, and am much pleased at the action you have taken. I greatly regret that you have not a clear understanding of my position and motives, and trust that my explanation, assisted by the conference I have invited, will make them clear to you.

In my official capacity I am merely the agent of the United States Government to conduct its affairs under the limits which its Constitution, laws, precedents, and specific instructions prescribe. I have not the authority to recognize any national or civil power not already formally recognized by my Government, unless specially authorized so to do by the instructions of the Executive of the United States. For this reason I was unable to receive officially the representatives of the revolutionary government, and endeavored to make that inability clear to the distinguished gentlemen with whom I had the pleasure to converse a few evenings since. You will bear witness that my course throughout my entire official connection with affairs here has been consistent, and it has pained me that I have not been able to receive and answer communications of the cabinet officers of the government at Malolos, fearing that I might be erroneously charged with lack of courtesy.

Permit me now briefly, General, to speak of the serious misunderstanding which exists between the Philippine people and the representatives of the United States Government, and which I hope that our commissioners, by thorough discussion, may be able to dispel. I sincerely believe that all desire peace and harmony, and yet by the machinations of evil-disposed persons, we have been influenced to think that we occupy the position of adversaries. The Filipinos appear to be of the opinion that we meditate attack, while I am under the strict orders of the President of the United States to avoid conflict in every way possible.

My troops, witnessing the earnestness, the comparatively disturbed and unfriendly attitude of the revolutionary troops and many of the citizens of Manila, conclude that active hostilities have been determined upon, although it must be clearly within the comprehension of unprejudiced and reflecting minds that the welfare and happiness of the Filipino people depend upon the friendly protection of the United States. The hand of Spain was forced, and she has acknowledged before the world that all her claimed rights in this country have departed by due process of law. This treaty acknowledgment, with the conditions which accompany it, awaits ratification of the Senate of the United States; and the action of its Congress must also be secured before the Executive of that Government can proclaim a definite policy. That policy must conform to the will of the people of the United States expressed through its Representatives in Congress.

For that action the Philippine people should wait, at least, before severing the existing friendly relations. I am governed by a desire to further the interests of the Philippine people, and shall continue to labor with that end in view. There shall be no conflict of forces if I am able to avoid it, and still I shall endeavor to maintain a position to meet all emergencies that may arise.

Permit me to subscribe myself, General, with the highest respect,
Your most obedient servant,

E. S. OTIS,

Major-General U. S. Vols., Commanding.

[Telegram.]

MANILA.

(Received Washington, January 11, 1899—3.15 p. m.)

ADJUTANT-GENERAL, Washington:

Sent communication to General Aguinaldo yesterday, expressing desire that peace would be maintained. Informed him that instructions of President would not permit us to bring on conflict.

OTIS.

But, however, on New Year's Day the President had forwarded the following to Otis at Manila:

[Telegram.]

ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, January 1, 1899—4.30 p. m.

General OTIS, Manila:

The President considers it of first importance that a conflict brought on by you be avoided at this time, if possible. Can not Miller get into communication with insurgents, giving them President's proclamation and informing them of the purposes of the Government, assuring them that, while it will assert its sovereignty, its purpose is to give them a good government and security in their personal rights.

By order Secretary War:

CORBIN.

This was only in keeping with his telegram of December 4, which was as follows:

[Telegram.]

ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, December 4, 1898.

General OTIS, Manila, Philippine Islands:

By direction of the Secretary of War, following from the President is sent you for your early consideration.

CORBIN.

"The President desires that Admiral Dewey and General Otis shall have an early conference and advise him what force and equipment will be necessary from the Philippine Islands. The President would be glad to have suggestions from these commanders as to the government of the islands, which of necessity must be by the Army and the Navy for some time to come. When these islands shall be ceded to us, it is his desire that peace and tranquillity shall be restored and as kind and beneficent a government as possible given to the people, that they may be encouraged in their industries and made secure in life and property. The fullest suggestions are invited."

"WILLIAM MCKINLEY."

On January 8, 1899, the President sent the following to Otis and Dewey at Manila:

[From the President's message to Otis and Dewey, January 8, 1899.]

They will come to see our benevolent purpose and recognize that before we can give their people good government our sovereignty must be complete and unquestioned.

We accepted the Philippines from high duty in the interest of their inhabitants and for humanity and civilization. Our sacrifices were with this high motive. We want to improve the condition of the inhabitants, securing them peace, liberty, and the pursuit of their highest good.

Every movement of the President was made with the direct purpose to avoid a conflict. On the 21st of December he telegraphed to Otis as follows:

ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, December 21, 1898.

General Otis, Manila:

Answering your message of December 14, the President directs that you send necessary troops to Iloilo to preserve the peace and protect life and property. It is most important that there should be no conflict with the insurgents. Be conciliatory but firm.

By order of the Secretary War:

CORBIN.

The President of the United States has not shot anybody except in self-defense. The soldiers of my country in the Philippines are as free from aggression as any man on this floor is free from judicial judgment, in my opinion, on that side of the House. There has been no aggression, there has been nothing but defensive conduct of the war from the time Aguinaldo conspired to do it here, by the organization that had its root in this city—conspired to do it by the hope that it might precipitate European interference—and from that moment to this the United States Government has done nothing but to defend her sons against the deadly assaults of Aguinaldo.

I protest that there shall be no question of who is right or who is wrong, or what is to be the future disposition of the Philippines, while my brothers and your sons are being shot down on the battlefields of the world anywhere. [Applause.] And I protest that it is a question of degree only in that aid and comfort which comes from protests, that comes from abuse, that comes from attacks by armed forces of the enemy against the Government.

I know how weak our systems are. I know how prone we are to take advantage, but, as I said at the start, I censure the motives of no man; but I warn my friends on the other side, I warn them by a friendship because you can harm nobody but yourselves, I warn you in a friendly way, that every word uttered here in depreciation of the defense of these soldiers and the supplying of the men with ammunition to carry on the defense of the flag of your country will be misconstrued by the judgment of the people of this country in the coming years.

You can not stop to determine what shall be the future disposition of these islands. No man living knows to-day what ought to be done with the Philippine Islands, but I know, I think I know, that the American people have never yet retired from any position they have taken by reason of the demands of an enemy in the front or by deprecating friends in the rear. [Applause on the Republican side.]

So the time will come when intelligence will lighten up the pathway, when the lamp of experience and the lamp of patriotism will project its rays along the pathway of my country during the next six months. The gentleman talks about the nine months to come. We shall come back here in December, and a great many of us will not know enough about the Philippine question to write a very large book that the people of the country will approve of. [Great applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to print in the extension of my speech various orders and quotations which I have made and from which I have read, together with the President's speech at Boston, and some comments upon that.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks by printing various orders, and also the President's speech at Boston, with some comments thereon. Is there objection?

Mr. GAINES. I object, Mr. Speaker.

On motion of Mr. FLEMING, the rules of the House were suspended and the request of Mr. GROSVENOR was granted.

Mr. GROSVENOR. The following is the speech of the President delivered at the Home Market Club in Boston on the evening of February 16, and which has been so bitterly criticised on this floor:

Mr. President, members of the Home Market Club, ladies, and gentlemen, I have been deeply and profoundly moved at this manifestation of your good will, and the cordial welcome extended by the governor of your great Commonwealth, as well as from the chief executive officer of this, the principal city of your State. No one could sit in this magnificent presence, listening to the patriotic strains from choir and orchestra, without knowing what this great audience was thinking most about. It is thinking of country, because of love for it and faith in themselves and its future. I thank the governor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, I thank the mayor of the city of Boston, for their warm and generous words of greeting.

My fellow citizens, the year goes by quickly. It seems not so long, but is, in fact, six years since it was my honor to be a guest of the Home Market Club. Much has happened in the intervening time. Issues which were then engaging us have been settled or put aside for larger and more absorbing ones. Domestic conditions have improved, and are generally satisfactory. We have made progress in industry and have realized the prosperity for which we have been striving. We had four long years of adversity, which taught us some lessons which will never be unlearned and which will be valuable in guiding our future action. We have not only been successful in our financial and business affairs, but have been successful in war with a foreign power, which has added great glory to American arms and a new chapter to American history.

I do not know why in the year 1898 this Republic has unexpectedly had placed before it mighty problems which it must face and meet. They have come and are here, and they could not be kept away. Many who were impatient for the conflict a year ago, apparently heedless of its larger results, are the first to cry out against the far-reaching consequences of their own act. Those of us who dreaded war most and whose every effort was directed to prevent it, had fears of new and grave problems which might follow its inauguration.

The evolution of events which no man could control has brought these problems upon us. Certain it is that they have not come through any fault on our part, but as a high obligation, and we meet them with clear conscience and unselfish purpose, and with good heart, resolve to undertake their solution.

War was declared in April, 1898, with practical unanimity by the Congress, and once upon us, was sustained by like unanimity among the people. There had been many who had tried to avert it, as, on the other hand, there were many who would have precipitated it at an early date. In its prosecution and conclusion the great majority of our countrymen of every section believed they were fighting in a just cause, and at home or at sea or in the field they had part in its glorious triumphs. It was the war of an undivided nation. Every great act in its progress from Manila to Santiago, from Guam to Porto Rico, met universal and hearty commendation. The protocol commanded the practically unanimous approval of the American people. It was welcomed by every lover of peace beneath the flag.

The Philippines, like Cuba and Porto Rico, were intrusted to our hands by the war, and to that great trust, under the providence of God and in the name of human progress and civilization, we are committed. It is a trust we have not sought; it is a trust from which we will not flinch. The American people will hold up the hands of their servants at home, to whom they commit its execution, while Dewey and Otis and the brave men whom they command will have the support of the country in upholding our flag where it now floats, the symbol and assurance of liberty and justice.

What nation was ever able to write an accurate program of the war upon which it was entering, much less decree in advance the scope of its results? Congress can declare war, but a higher Power decrees its bounds and fixes its relations and responsibilities. The President can direct the movements of soldiers on the field and fleets upon the sea, but he can not foresee the close of such movements or prescribe their limits. He can not anticipate or avoid the consequences, but he must meet them. No accurate map of nations engaged in war can be traced until the war is over, nor can the measure of responsibility be fixed till the last gun is fired and the verdict embodied in the stipulations of peace.

We hear no complaint of the relations created by the war between this Government and the islands of Cuba and Porto Rico. There are some, however, who regard the Philippines as in a different relation; but whatever variety of views there may be on this phase of the question, there is universal agreement that the Philippines shall not be turned back to Spain. No true American consents to that. Even if unwilling to accept them ourselves, it would have been a weak evasion of manly duty to require Spain to transfer them to some other power or powers, and thus shirk our own responsibility. Even if we had, as we did not have, the power to compel such a transfer, it could not have been made without the most serious international complications. Such a course could not be thought of, and yet, had we refused to accept the cession of them, we should have had no power over them—even for their own good.

We could not discharge the responsibilities upon us until these islands became ours either by conquest or treaty. There was but one alternative, and that was either Spain or the United States in the Philippines. The other suggestions—first, that they should be tossed into the arena of contention for the strife of nations; or, second, be left to the anarchy and chaos of no protectorate at all—were too shameful to be considered.

The treaty gave them to the United States. Could we have required less and done our duty? Could we, after freeing the Filipinos from the domination of Spain, have left them without government and without power to protect life or property or to perform the international obligations essential to an independent State? Could we have left them in a state of anarchy and justified ourselves in our own consciences or before the tribunal of mankind? Could we have done that in the sight of God or man?

Our concern was not for territory, or trade, or empire, but for the people whose interests and destiny, without our willing it, had been put in our hands. It was with this feeling that, from the first day to the last, not one word or line went from the Executive in Washington to our military and naval commanders at Manila or to our peace commissioners at Paris that did not put as the sole purpose to be kept in mind first, after the success of our arms and the maintenance of our own honor, the welfare and happiness and the rights of the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands. Did we need their consent to perform a great act for humanity? We had it in every aspiration of their minds, in every hope of their hearts. Was it necessary to ask their consent to capture Manila, the capital of their islands? Did we ask their consent to liberate them from Spanish sovereignty or to enter Manila Bay and destroy the Spanish sea power there? We did not ask these; we were obeying a higher moral obligation which rested on us and which did not require anybody's consent. We were doing our duty by them with the consent of our own consciences and with the approval of civilization.

Every present obligation has been met and fulfilled in the expulsion of Spanish sovereignty from their islands, and while the war that destroyed it was in progress we could not ask their views. Nor can we now ask their consent. Indeed, can anyone tell me in what form it could be marshaled and ascertained until peace and order, so necessary to the reign of reason, shall be secured and established? A reign of terror is not the kind of rule under which right action and deliberate judgment are possible. It is not a good time for the liberator to submit important questions concerning liberty and government to the liberated while they are engaged in shooting down their rescuers.

We have now ended the war with Spain. The treaty has been ratified by the votes of more than two-thirds of the Senate of the United States and by the judgment of nine tenths of its people. No nation was ever more fortunate in war or more honorable in its negotiations in peace. Spain is now eliminated from the problem. It remains to ask what we shall now do. I do not intrude upon the duties of Congress or seek to anticipate or forestall its action. I only say that the treaty of peace, honorably secured, having been ratified by the United States and, as we confidently expect, shortly to be ratified in Spain, Congress will have the power and, I am sure, the purpose to do what in good morals is right and just and humane for these peoples in distant seas.

It is sometimes hard to determine what is best to do, and the best thing to do is oftentimes the hardest. The prophet of evil would do nothing, because he flinches at sacrifice and effort, and to do nothing is easiest and involves the least cost. On those who have things to do there rests a responsibility which is not on those who have no obligation as doers. If the doubters were in a majority, there would, it is true, be no labor, no sacrifice, no anxiety and no burden raised or carried; no contribution from our ease and purse and comfort to the welfare of others, or even to the extension of our resources to the welfare of ourselves. There would be ease, but alas! there would be nothing done.

Grave problems come in the life of a nation, however much men may seek to avoid them. They come without our seeking; why, we do not know, and it is not always given us to know; but the generation on which they are forced can not avoid the responsibility of honestly striving for their solution. We may not know precisely how to solve them, but we can make an honest effort to that end, and, if made in conscience, justice, and honor, it will not be in vain.

The future of the Philippine Islands is now in the hands of the American people. Until the treaty was ratified or rejected the executive department of this Government could only preserve the peace and protect life and property. That treaty now commits the free and enfranchised Filipinos to the guiding hand and the liberalizing influences, the generous sympathies, the uplifting education, not of their American masters, but of their American emancipators. No one can tell to-day what is best for them or for us. I know no one at this hour who is wise enough or sufficiently informed to determine what form of government will best subserve their interests and our interests there and our well being.

If we knew everything by intuition—and I sometimes think that there are those who believe that if we do not, they do—we should not need information, but unfortunately most of us are not in that happy state. This whole subject is now with Congress, and Congress is the voice, the conscience, and the judgment of the American people.

Upon their judgment and conscience can we not rely? I believe in them. I trust them. I know of no better or safer human tribunal than the people.

Until Congress shall direct otherwise, it will be the duty of the Executive to possess and hold the Philippines, giving to the people thereof peace and order and beneficent government, affording them every opportunity to prosecute their lawful pursuits, encouraging them in thrift and industry, making them feel and know that we are their friends, not their enemies, that their good is our aim, that their welfare is our welfare, but that neither their aspirations nor ours can be realized until our authority is acknowledged and unquestioned.

That the inhabitants of the Philippines will be benefited by this Republic is my unshaken belief. That they will have a kindlier government under our guidance, and that they will be aided in every possible way to be a self-respecting and self-governing people is as true as that the American people love liberty and have an abiding faith in their own Government and in their own institutions.

No imperial designs lurk in the American mind. They are alien to American sentiment, thought, and purpose. Our priceless principles undergo no change under a tropical sun. They go with the flag. They are wrought in every one of its sacred folds and are inextinguishable in their shining stars:

"Why read ye not the changeless truth,
The free can conquer but to save."

If we can benefit these remote peoples, who will object? If in the years of the future they are established in government under law and liberty, who will regret our perils and sacrifices? Who will not rejoice in our heroism and humanity? Always perils, and always after them safety; always darkness and clouds, but always shining through them the light and sunshine; always cost and sacrifice, but always after them the fruition of liberty, education, and civilization.

I have no light or knowledge not common to my countrymen. I do not prophesy. The present is all absorbing to me, but I can not bound my vision by the blood-stained trenches around Manila, where every red drop, whether from the veins of an American soldier or a misguided Filipino, is anguish to my heart; but by the broad range of future years, when that group of islands, under the impulse of the year just past, shall have become the gems and glories of those tropical seas; a land of plenty and of increasing possibilities; a people redeemed from savage indolence and habits, devoted to the arts of peace, in touch with the commerce and trade of all nations, enjoying the blessings of freedom, of civil and religious liberty, of education and of homes, and whose children and children's children shall for ages hence bless the American Republic because it emancipated and redeemed their fatherland and set them in the pathway of the world's best civilization.

And comment upon the President's address, to which reference was made in the application for leave to extend, is found in the admirable address of Dr. Seth Low on the occasion of the celebration of Washington's birthday this year at the city of Philadelphia. It is a paper which I commend to the fearful saints of the country who dread the clouds that seem to be rising in the far-off horizon of the Orient:

MR. PROVOST, LADIES, AND GENTLEMEN: A century and a half ago the College of province of New York were both under discussion, but neither had yet been founded. The College of Philadelphia, now the University of Pennsylvania, was chartered in 1753, and King's College, now Columbia University, in the city of New York, in 1754. It is an interesting circumstance that the same man, the Rev. Samuel Johnson, S. T. D., of Connecticut, was invited by each of the young colleges to become its first president. It would seem, therefore, as if the timber out of which college presidents are made was as scarce then as it appears to be to-day. Why it was that Dr. Johnson, in the presence of such a tempting alternative, should have chosen to become the first president of King's College I shall not attempt to say. The incident serves to show how closely the University of Pennsylvania and the university over which I have the honor to preside were related in those early days. Within a decade of their foundation both of them were represented in a joint attempt to secure funds in England for their common benefit. The original papers relating to this transaction are in your possession.

Our own records merely show that you are credited with a full and true accounting for our share of the funds so raised, about $6,000. As we were thus closely associated in origin, so the history and development of the two universities have followed parallel lines. Each being located in an important city, each illustrates the effect of a large city upon such an institution. So long as the city was small these colleges rendered a service to the country at large second to no others. Their influence was as wide as the colonies. As the city closed about them, on the other hand, their patronage and their influence became chiefly local, because, as I suppose, their immediate surroundings were more important and there was less need and less opportunity to reach the country outside. Few people from without were willing then, as comparatively few are now, to send their sons to college in a city at the youthful age which ordinarily marks the beginning of college life.

As the educational system of the country has developed, on the other hand, in the closing decades of the present century, demanding opportunities for advanced instruction not only in the professions, but in all branches of learning, it has become evident that for this class of work the location in a great city is in itself a distinct advantage. Accordingly, during the last two decades both the University of Pennsylvania and Columbia University have attained once more to a position of national influence such as they have not held for nearly a century. It seems probable that the tide which has begun to turn will flow with increasing volume for many years to come, and it is not improbable that even upon the college side of their work these institutions under the changed conditions of the country may render a service in the future much more important than they have rendered in the past at any time since the early years of their foundation. This result is to be obtained, undoubtedly, by identifying the universities with the best activities of the city in which each is placed, not by attempting to hold the university aloof from the city's life. For the life part, the country or the small city is still the better location.

As our two universities have thus been closely associated in experience throughout their history, so there is an evident link between the cities of New York and Philadelphia in the history of the nation. The Government of the United States was established by the inauguration of Washington as President in the city of New York in 1789. In the following year the Government was removed to Philadelphia and was maintained here until it was moved again, in the year 1800, to the city of Washington, which was founded to be its abiding place. The city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, was founded in a district ceded to the Federal Government by the States of Maryland and Virginia, in order that the capital of the country might be in a territory directly under Federal control. It is interesting to observe that the federation of Australia, now in process of formation, has just adopted a similar arrangement for the solution of the same problem. The capital of the Australian federation is to be established in New South Wales upon territory to be ceded to the federation and to be under its direct control. Thus the wisdom of our fathers in this particular is curiously justified and illustrated a century after the fact.

EVENTS OF THE PAST YEAR.

I recall that a year ago, in this place and on a similar occasion, we were listening to the earnest and patriotic words of President McKinley. It was only one week after the unhappy destruction of the Maine in the harbor of Havana. What a page of our national history has been written since! The action of the President in attending this celebration a year ago was characteristic of his attitude, as it seems to me, during the whole of that fateful spring. Nothing that he could have done would have contributed more importantly to quieting the public mind at that juncture than his appearance here at such a moment to speak the calm and measured words which we had the pleasure of hearing.

Only one who has tried to meet calmly such an occasion with a great burden of anxiety resting upon his heart can have the faintest conception of the mastery of self called for by such an undertaking. I like to think that in every crisis in our national history, so many of which have marked the intervening months, the nation has had the benefit of the same self-control, the same cool judgment, and the same utter devotion to the welfare of the country. It is not necessary to claim for the President entire freedom from mistakes in order to recognize in his general bearing a very high quality of leadership.

The anxieties of the war are over, and the problems of peace resulting from the war are now upon us. No one who has lived through it can forget the exhilarating sense of gratified patriotism which marked the action of Congress and of people as the war came on. The enthusiastic response of the volunteers to the President's call, the splendid valor displayed by our men on land and sea, the noble devotion of good women to the sick and wounded—all of these were as welcome as our victories except as our victories were themselves the fitting and natural reward of the qualities thus displayed.

For these things show that the character of the nation, when thus tried in the fiery furnace of war, glowed with the brightness of pure and precious metal, and that the nation's capacity for self-sacrifice, in a large sense, is not less than it used to be. But this is not all. The mechanical skill and ready efficiency so characteristic of the American told with overwhelming effect in the overthrow of the enemy. This capacity to turn industrial effectiveness into efficiency in war, as the swift ocean steamers of the merchant marine take on themselves, upon demand, the qualities of men-of-war, is evidence that warlike power sufficient for our need is developed in peace among a people that does not suffer itself to be dismayed by difficulties or weakened by luxury.

I wish it could also be said that the American genius for organization and for business had displayed itself during the war to equal advantage. In the Navy it did. There was something as admirable as its fighting in the way in which everything that fell to the lot of the Navy to do was done quickly, without confusion and with absolute success. In the Army it did not. It must in all candor be admitted that the task of the War Department was much the heavier. It had to multiply the Army tenfold, and it had to do quickly on a large scale what it had only been in the habit of doing slowly and on a small scale. But it is precisely under such circumstances that genius shows; and we were obliged to admit that on the side of the War Department the genius that has made our railroads the most effective in the world, the genius that is enabling our manufacturer to conquer the market of the world was not forthcoming.

The Santiago campaign of the Army was splendidly and brilliantly successful, and if the war had lasted longer I dare say we should have had a better criterion than we have now by which to judge how much of the dreadful suffering in camp and in the field is inseparable from war at the very best. But the contrast between the work of the Navy Department and of the War Department is too great to be wholly explained away. It is as clear as the noonday sun that the organization of the War Department and of the Army is absolutely unfriendly to efficiency. The President's commission has pointed out some of the difficulties and has suggested some of the remedies. It remains for public opinion to see that these remedies, or others equally effective, are promptly enacted into law. I am glad that the President has appointed a court of inquiry to go to the bottom of the grievous charges that have been made against the Commissary Department, for it is hideously in contrast with the self-sacrificing heroism of our troops that such charges can even be mooted, much less made, by the Commanding General of the Army. Now that the inquiry has been ordered, the people may well await the finding with patience and with an open mind, as a people at once too great to do injustice even to a single one not known to be at fault and too earnest to permit any who may be proven guilty either of wrongdoing or of false charges to escape the blazing fury of their wrath.

CONSEQUENCES OF THE WAR.

To some of our people, perhaps to many of them, the consequences to ourselves of this war with Spain seem more terrible than the dangers of the war itself. When patriots like Senator Hoar, of Massachusetts, and Senator Hale, of Maine, not to speak of others, feel called upon to break away from their party and vote against the ratification of the treaty of peace, he must be a light-headed man, indeed, who does not consider seriously the gravity of the decisions that have been made by those charged with authority by the American people to make precisely such decisions. I want to point out, if I can, why it seems to me that the decisions reached may be accepted with a good heart, and to indicate some, at least, of the duties that flow from the ratification of the treaty.

A century ago John Adams was President. Washington was still alive, enjoying at Mount Vernon his well-earned retirement; and he had just given a new evidence of his unquenchable public spirit by accepting a commission as Lieutenant-General of the Army of the United States in view of a possible war with France, which was then feared. During the sessions of Congress held in your city the foundations were laid of the Navy of the United States whose achievements and traditions have made its victories of last summer appear to be only the natural continuation of its glorious past. Truxton and Hull, Perry and Decatur, Farragut and Porter, seemed to be only other ways of spelling the names of Dewey and Sampson.

During his Presidency of eight years Washington had demonstrated the strength of the new Government in various directions. He had avoided complications with revolutionary France, despite the strong and natural popular sympathy with the country which had aided so importantly in winning our own independence; he had settled outstanding questions full of embarrassing possibilities by a treaty with Great Britain, which at the time was exceedingly unpopular; he had put down by force an armed insurrection, and he had inflicted summary punishment upon the Indians, who showed a disposition to harass our Western borders.

The new Government, therefore, by 1799 was fairly launched, but already new dangers began to make their appearance. The election of Thomas McKean as Governor of Pennsylvania in 1799 foreshadowed the triumph of Jefferson and the Republican or Democratic party of that day. In the eyes of the Federalists, who had controlled the Government from the start, this seemed like the beginning of the end. There is more than a little evidence that in the minds of some of them it seemed to forebode a civil war. All the time the problem of slavery was embedded in the Constitution, unrecognized indeed, in a certain sense, until 1820, but always there. In 1820 came the discussion which terminated for the moment in the Missouri Compromise. Like a thunderbolt out of a clear sky, these discussions revealed the electricity in the air and suggested the coming storm. Then came nullification, and all the uneasy years attending the angry controversy about slavery, and, finally, attempted secession and the civil war. Foreign wars with England in 1812, with Mexico in 1846, and with Spain in 1898, have tested the country in its capacity for combat against an outside foe, while widespread commercial panic and disaster in 1819, in 1837, 1857, 1873, and 1893 have tested the capacity of the people for self-control under circumstances of great domestic hardship and distress.

COURAGE TO MEET NEW DANGERS.

It may fairly be said that no period of twenty years has passed that has not brought the country face to face with some grave danger and up to some new test. Phillips Brooks once said that if a man believed that the country had escaped all the dangers which have confronted it only by a series of happy accidents such a man naturally would be full of fear at every new peril that makes its appearance, because such a man never could tell when the country's luck might not change. If, on the other hand, said Dr. Brooks, a man believes that the country has overcome the dangers of the past because its political system is inherently sound, such a one faces every new peril with a courage born of the dangers that have been overcome.

It is in this spirit of well-grounded courage, I think, that the people of the United States should contemplate the situation in which they find themselves placed, in 1898, by the treaty of peace with Spain. The advocates of ratification have been called imperialists and expansionists, and the treaty itself has been said to be in woful contradiction with all we stand for as a nation. These are serious charges, and it behooves every man who loves his country to consider whether they are well made. Unless our treaty with Spain has been dictated by lust of empire, it is not fair to call those who advocated it imperialists; unless it has been dictated by lust of territory, it is not fair to call them expansionists; unless a better way can be shown by which peace could have been secured, it is not just to criticize the Government for accepting even unwelcome obligations that the war has brought in its train.

What, then, are the facts? The Congress of the United States, in demanding the withdrawal of Spain from Cuba, declared it to be the purpose of this country to secure freedom for the Cubans. There is certainly neither imperialism nor expansion in those resolutions. Up to this hour there is not an indication that the purpose of the country, as thus formulated by Congress, will not be lived up to both in the letter and in the spirit. It is evident, therefore, that our imperialism and our expansion, if they exist at all, are by-products; they do not represent the heart's desire. But some one will say, "Why, then, did we demand the cession of Porto Rico and of the Philippines? If the American people are not imperialists and are not expansionists, why should we demand from Spain the cession of those islands?" The answer, it seems to me, is very simple, though it is not the same in both cases. If Spain had withdrawn from Cuba without war, she would undoubtedly be still in possession, so far as we are concerned, of both Porto Rico and the Philippines. The moment she compelled us to go to war in order to expel her from Cuba, it became evidently the dictate of good sense to make it impossible for future troubles to arise between us from similar causes by removing her from this hemisphere. She has been a difficult neighbor from the beginning. No one, I think, seriously criticizes this decision.

It is said, however, that in the Philippines, by reason of their distance and their population, the case is different. Undoubtedly it is, and therefore the answer is different. Evidently it would have been unwise to attempt any solution of the Philippine problem which should place Spanish and American civilization side by side in control of different parts of the Philippine group. That would have been deliberately to reproduce in the Eastern Hemisphere the very conditions that had just led to conflict in the Antilles. It was inevitable, therefore, that either Spain or America must leave the Philippines. We had destroyed Spain's authority there and had also destroyed her power to reestablish it. In no fair sense of the words, under these conditions, is it just to say that in determining to make peace by securing the cession of the Philippines the United States has been animated by either the lust of empire or the lust of territory.

REGARDING THE PHILIPPINES.

But some say that the islands should have been surrendered to the natives under a joint protectorate. It is urged that our action, in demanding a cession of the Philippine Islands to ourselves, is comparable with what the action of France would have been if, at the end of the Revolutionary war, France had made peace with England by demanding the cession of England's American colonies to herself. Leaving out of account the fact that France had entered into formal alliance with the colonists to aid them in securing independence, it seems to me, rather, that the demand of those who seek a joint protectorate for the natives is like a demand on the part of France, had she made it, that England's colonies should be left to the Indians under a joint protectorate. It is impossible, in such affairs, to leave out of account the demonstrated capacity of a people for self-government.

Undoubtedly, the United States should, and undoubtedly we shall, give to the natives of the Philippines as great a measure of self-government as they are capable of exercising; but we could not, in justice to civilization, assume, in our treaty with Spain, a capacity for civilized government on the part of the natives which has never been shown to exist. It was the same Jefferson who wrote in our Declaration of Independence that government ought to rest upon the consent of the governed, and who argued for a strict construction of our national Constitution, that purchased Louisiana from Napoleon without the consent of the people sovereignty over whom was thus transferred to the United States, and also without any other constitutional authority than that which has been exercised in connection with the cession of the Philippines. That is the difference between Jefferson and the statesman and Jefferson and the philosopher.

The philosopher stated the ideal, which I believe to be the ideal of the American people to-day as fully as it always has been; but the statesman did a great service to his country and to civilization, by doing a wise thing at a fortunate moment, although, in doing it, he contravened his own ideal. I freely say that if the dilemma with which we have had to deal in the matter of the Philippines had been voluntarily and consciously sought, the outcome would have been discreditable to our good faith and alarming in its portent. Coming as it has, however, as an unintended result of a war with Spain having its origin in disturbances with Cuba, I believe the children have given the answer the father would have made in the like case. Unless civilization under proper conditions has a right to withhold control from barbarism and semibarbarism and to substitute for either something better, our own national life rests upon inexcusable wrong to the aborigines whose land we have taken and for whose civilization, such as it was, we have substituted our own.

But others again say that the American ideal is government "of the people, by the people, and for the people," and that, however truly we may give to the Philippine Islands a government for the people, it will not be and can not be, under our authority, a government of the people and by the people. Undoubtedly in this aspect, also, the fact comes short of the ideal; but to say that, in the premises, we have no duty to civilization or to the Philippine Islanders is to claim that a self-governing democracy, by its very nature, is incapable of serving other people except by its own example. I do not think so meanly of democracy. Yet I would not admit for a moment, even by implication, that the service of the American democracy to mankind has been hitherto anything less than a world service. I have no sympathy with any one who speaks with a certain air of apology of America's isolation in the past. No nation since the American Republic was founded has influenced the history of all nations more importantly or more beneficially. Indirectly by its influence, and directly by its action, it has done more than any other country to substitute arbitration for war as a means of settling international disputes; while its general success as a self-governing nation, sincerely devoted to the arts of peace, has given a profound impulse to democracy the world over. Neither do I believe that the short and successful war with Spain has changed the temper of our countrymen in a night.

AMERICA'S WORLD MISSION.

The equally successful war with Mexico produced no such result, and the inbred habit of a century is not so easily cast aside. Our mission, indeed, has been a world mission of the highest order. We have invited to our shores men of every European country and many others to share with us in the development and civilization of a continent. Not even England's mission, with her colonies and dependencies scattered over the earth, has been more wide-reaching than ours. We have asked the people of the civilized world to join with us in developing a continent, and in doing so to learn with us the art and lesson of self-government. We have also invited here the wealth of Christendom to take part in the development of our material resources.

It is noticeable that in the same eventful year of 1893 that has burdened us with new duties to people across the sea, we have become for the first time a creditor nation, lending vast sums of money to the people of Europe. It is a striking and suggestive coincidence that at the very moment when our relations to the civilized world have changed financially, an obligation of duty to outside people, less civilized than we are, seems also to have been laid upon us. It is as if a voice that admits of no remonstrance had said to us, in the plenitude of our prosperity and power: "Hereafter you must heed the call to service both with men and with money away from home as well as at home." Certainly the change in our political relations is not more striking than that which has taken place in our domain finance. To me it seems an evidence of the soundness of heart of the American people that they have unflinchingly accepted the heavy burdens devolved upon the nation by reason of the war with Spain; and I do not see in the acceptance of these burdens any unfaithfulness to our past or to what we stand for among the nations of the earth.

It is possible, but by no means sure, that our material interests will be benefited by the course we have pursued. As I interpret the attitude of our people, they have taken up the task which seems to have been laid upon them, not stopping to question closely whether it will be advantageous to themselves or not, but determining to do it as best they can. How heavy a burden it already is, how heavy it may yet be, is witnessed by the mournful echoes of the guns in the Philippines that tell of what it is to stand in the shoes of Spain in the eyes of a semibarbarous people.

But if they have taken it up as a burden they are determined no less to convert it into an opportunity.

LESSONS FROM ENGLAND.

In this discussion I have given no consideration to the constitutional questions involved, partly because at best these are matters of opinion, and no opinion that I might express would have any special value, and partly because the treaty with Spain has been ratified, so that we are already involved in whatever constitutional difficulties there are. There is no doubt that war with Spain has confronted us, both as to Porto Rico and the Philippines, to say nothing of Cuba, with questions that are wholly new to our experience. Without attempting to make any fine distinction between colonies and dependencies, some things are written upon this subject on the pages of history in letters of flame to which we must not shut our eyes. England lost her American colonies, now the United States, because she attempted to control their trade in the interest of England. The mother country, having learned the lesson of this experience, has since become the great colonizing power of the world, because she has appreciated that colonies or dependencies to be sources of strength must be administered in their own interest.

It is said that the Bourbons never learn from experience; and Spain has evidently lost her possessions in the Antilles and the Philippines because she has continued to do down to this day what caused the revolt of the American colonies in 1776. In other words, the colonies or dependencies of Spain have been places to be exploited in the interest of the mother country. The welfare of the colonies themselves has never been permitted to shape their policy or administration. It would be a ghastly act of folly if, in the face of facts like these, we ourselves repeat with Porto Rico and the Philippines the mistakes which drove our own forefathers into revolution and which have cost Spain her possessions in both the West Indies and the East. It is not clear that we are wholly free from the danger of precisely this mistake; not that the mistake is likely to be made deliberately and with malice aforethought, but that it may be made thoughtlessly, simply because the point of view up to this time has been wholly foreign to our vision. Our navigation laws, for instance, which confine the privileges of domestic commerce to vessels carrying the American flag, have already extended to Hawaii and Porto Rico.

Looking at these places as part of the American territory, the action is natural enough, but if the policy be questioned from the point of view of Hawaii and Porto Rico, it is by no means so clear that the policy is wise. Hawaii lies as far from our western shores as Southampton from New York. Porto Rico is half as far away. It is certainly a fair question for the inhabitants of Hawaii and of Porto Rico to ask what benefit they obtain from a policy which will arbitrarily confine their trade with this country with vessels carrying the flag of the United States. Our navigation laws have their origin in a conception of national advantage, which affords justification for them from our own point of view; but I submit that the application of such laws to islands 1,500 miles and 3,000 miles away from our nearest port may wear a very different aspect to the inhabitants of these islands from what it wears to us.

THE TARIFF IN NEW POSSESSIONS.

Similarly the tariff question is a question of vital importance from the same point of view. These islands are not now manufacturing centers, nor are they very likely to become so. It is evident, therefore, that the tariff for the Philippines and the tariff for Porto Rico might easily be one thing if framed from the point of view of the islands, or another thing if framed from the point of view of the United States. We ought not to forget, and I hope we shall not forget, that it was questions of this kind—not precisely the same in form, but similar in tendency—which led to our own revolution against Great Britain. I am sanguine enough to believe that in the long run our policy toward Porto Rico and the Philippines in these respects will be guided by the principles for which our own fathers contended; but there is undoubtedly a momentary danger growing out of the fact that the whole question is entirely new to our habits of thought. It is not an easy thing for a nation which has consistently pursued for a hundred years a policy of self-development to put itself suddenly in the place of distant islands with whose interests it is really unacquainted in any fundamental sense of the word.

The action of the President in sending a well-constituted commission to the Philippines to report upon these very subjects is worthy of the highest commendation. A similar commission, equally well constituted, might do equally good service in acquainting us with the problems with which we have to deal in Porto Rico. The West Indian Islands seem so near that it is natural to think of them as a part of the American continent, and, indeed, they are much closer to us in all their interests than are the Philippines. On the other hand, Porto Rico, measured by miles, is really far away, and its historic development is as different from ours as possible. Because it is so naturally a part of the American continent we are apt to think we know all about it, whereas our true wisdom lies, I am sure, in endeavoring to acquaint ourselves with its needs in the most careful manner possible.

In this connection I am glad to emphasize a suggestion which President Gilman formulated a few months ago, that the universities of the country can render service of the highest value by encouraging their advanced students to look into all these questions. The thing to be feared at the hand of the American people in these new relations is not so much mistakes of the heart as mistakes of the head—mistakes that will be made either because we fancy that we know what we do not know, or because it has not seemed worth while for us to take the trouble to learn. Therefore, every contribution of knowledge that tends to the understanding of the problem will be most helpful, and in no quarter can we more hopefully look for such contributions than to the universities and to the investigations of their advanced students of history and economics.

ISLANDS WILL BENEFIT BY OUR RULE.

You will not imagine, I am sure, because I have emphasized first of all what seems to me a real danger in the situation, that I have any doubt as to the great service which the United States can do for the population of all these islands, both in the West and in the East. We can give to them undoubtedly many of the things which we ourselves value most highly. We can give to them free schools and free speech, freedom to worship God according to their own conscience, and equality before the law. We can give to them, if we will, the opportunities that are born of a stable government, justly and equitably administered, and certainly we can and we should develop everywhere the capacity for self-government up to the utmost limit of possibility. I have not the slightest doubt that these are the things which the American people as a whole intend to do for these islands which have come so unexpectedly under our influence. Neither have I any doubt that the most self-sacrificing efforts will be made by the multitudes of our people to give both to Porto Rico and the Philippines, as well as Cuba, of the very best that we have.

It ought not to be forgotten, however, that it is one thing to intend to do a thing and quite another thing to accomplish it. I have not the slightest doubt that a people who have maintained Roberts College, in Constantinople, for so many years—the influence of which, in due time, undoubtedly led to the freedom of Bulgaria and Roumania from the Turkish yoke—will carry the torch of education far and wide throughout these islands. I have equally little doubt that the spirit of our laws will be embodied in any legislative action that we may take with reference to these islands. The critical question is, What sort of administration shall we provide during the period, whether it be long or short, in which we must be ourselves directly responsible for results? If we want instructions on an engineering subject, we must go to an engineer; and if we want information on a question of commerce or of agriculture we must go to men who have made a careful study of the problems in business or farming about which we wish to know.

Similarly, if we want to learn how to administer colonies and dependencies wisely, we must study the methods of the one great power of modern times which has made a good record in this field of enterprise. We may indeed study also, and we should, the efforts of other countries in similar directions which have been less successful, for by such a comparative study of the question we shall be able to learn absolutely the conditions upon which success in these enterprises depends. Such a survey of the history of the colonies and the dependencies of our time will land us surely to one conclusion—that if we are not to do any real kindness to these distant people, whose lot is now measurably identified with our own, and if we wish to avoid occasion for shame which will make us a byword among the nations, we must develop a colonial service with permanency of tenure that will offer a life career to many of the talented and promising men of the land. No country in the world, not even England, I believe, abounds more richly in the material available for such a service; but you can not obtain the service of such men unless you make the conditions of the service such as will attract them.

The Supreme Court of the United States has always been able to command the services of many of the best legal minds in the country, not because a bench on the Supreme Court pays a large salary, for it does not, but because of the honor of the position, because of its permanency of tenure and because of its provision of old age. If you were to subtract from these conditions the permanency of tenure, the quality of the judges composing the Supreme Court of the United States would suffer a rapid and fatal deterioration. If you were to deduct both the permanency of tenure and the provision for old age, not even the high honor of the appointment could long secure the quality of service, even in the highest court of the nation, which we have enjoyed in the past.

Similarly, a colonial service that is constantly changing, and which offers no permanent career to a young man of promise who may embark upon it, is as sure to be a failure as anything can be. It is indeed one of the great drawbacks to the public service of the United States in any capacity that it does not offer, under existing conditions, to young men who are inclined to follow it, a permanent career, simply upon the basis of good service to the public. Something may be learned even from Tammany Hall in this regard, which does offer permanency of opportunity in one form or another to those who are loyal to the organization. The difficulty is, in this case, that the permanency comes from loyalty to the organization, not from efficient and loyal service to the commonwealth. Tammany also demands for its own service peculiar efficiency and skill.

Some day the people will realize that they can not afford to be less careful of their own interests than Tammany is of its own. When this day comes the people will not only create but sustain in all departments of the public service a system that will make it worth while for young men of promise to enter into the service of the State and of the community with the expectation of making that their life work. It must be made their life work upon conditions also that make permanency of tenure dependent on service to the public, not upon service to any political organization less comprehensive than the public. Unless we can do this for our colonies we shall add only one more failure to the melancholy history of colonial enterprise. If we do it for our colonies we may well hope that the demonstrated advantage of it will tend to elevate and improve our own civil service at home.

Looking out upon the country at the present time, we must thankfully recognize that we are passing through an era of almost unexampled prosperity. Our arms have been crowned with brilliant victory both on sea and on land in our recent war with Spain, and our trade and industry, as shown by the phenomenal record of exports and imports, have won almost as decisive victories in all the markets of the world. In contemplation of these peaceful achievements one may indeed exclaim: "Peace hath her victories no less renowned than war!" Such a moment is a moment of great opportunity and of peculiar danger. The danger is that the ideal life of the nation shall suffer hurt in the presence of such abounding prosperity. If it is hard for a rich man to enter into the Kingdom of God, it is no less hard for a rich nation.

It is pleasant, when wealth increases, to strive for more wealth; and it is easy, in the midst of plenty, to leave the hard tasks of the world to others. In this light I think we may well be grateful rather than disturbed that, at a time when our material prosperity is so conspicuous, there should have been laid upon our shoulders some of the burdens of the world that our brothers across the sea have been carrying in the effort to improve and elevate the civilization of the race. It may well be true, in the providence of God, that this young nation, inhabiting a continent, which has so far mastered its material environment as to become a creditor nation, must owe in service as well as money, directly as well as indirectly, to the cause of civilization throughout the world.

I plead especially with the young men at a time like this to keep bright their high ideas; to be willing to serve society and the state as Washington did, unselfishly, and not to permit themselves to be warped by any dream of wealth from this ideal service. If there be also here men who are wealthy as well as young, I beg them to consecrate wealth and life alike to this ideal service. The country, at home and abroad, needs such service in a thousand forms.

"Then welcome each rebuff
That turns earth's smoothness rough,
Each sting that bids not sit nor stand; but go,
Be our joys three parts pain;
Strive and hold cheap the strain;
Learn, nor account the pang; dare, never grudge the throe!"

OLIVIA WORDEN.

Mr. RAY of New York submitted a conference report; which was read, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 2919) granting a pension to Olivia Worden, widow of the late John L. Worden, United States Navy, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House and agree to the same with an amendment, numbered 1, as follows in line 8, after "Olivia," insert "T."

That the Senate agree to the amendment of the House numbered 2.

GEORGE W. RAY,

E. S. HENRY,

EDMUND H. DRIGGS,

Managers on the part of the House.

H. C. HANSBROUGH,

WM. E. CHANDLER,

JNO. L. MITCHELL,

Managers on the part of the Senate.

Mr. RAY of New York. I ask that the statement of the House conferees accompanying the report be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Statement to accompany the conference report on the bill, S. 2919, "An act granting a pension to Olivia Worden, widow of the late John L. Worden, United States Navy."

This bill as it passed the Senate directs the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension roll the name of Olivia Worden, widow of the late John L. Worden, an admiral in the United States Navy, and pay her a pension at the rate of $100 per month.

The House amended the bill as to the title to make it accord with the practice of both the Senate and the House, by making it read "An act granting a pension to Olivia T. Worden," that being her correct and full name, and also amended the bill by striking out "one hundred" and inserting "fifty," so as to grant the claimant a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of $100 per month as stated in the Senate act.

It has been the policy of the Committee on Invalid Pensions of the House of Representatives to refuse to increase the pension of the widow of an officer, however high the rank, beyond $50 per month when death was caused by or was the result of disease or disabilities incurred in the service, and this policy has been strictly adhered to. This is $50 per month more than the general law allows.

The Senate has acquiesced in this policy heretofore, and has finally acquiesced in this case.

So much adverse criticism of the Committee on Invalid Pensions of the House through the press has been indulged in that we deem it proper here to state some of the reasons why the policy above referred to has been insisted upon by the conferees on the part of the House. It is well also to state that this criticism through the press has been inspired and promoted by those who, forgetful of their duty to the great mass of old soldiers and soldiers' widows, have sought to coerce the Committee on Invalid Pensions into legislation in this case which they themselves would not commend and have not commended in other cases.

John L. Worden commanded the Monitor in its famous engagement with the rebel ironclad, the Merrimac. He was a lieutenant in the Navy at the time and did his duty, as did every officer and person under his command.

He did nothing more. This is the only important engagement with the enemy in which he ever was engaged. The Government of the United States during his lifetime freely rewarded him for his bravery and devotion on that occasion. He was promptly promoted and placed on duty from time to time in places of honor until he was finally made an admiral in the United States Navy and placed on the retired list December 23, 1886. He died October 18, 1897, having drawn the pay of a retired officer from the date of his retirement until the date of his death. He left no minor children, but did leave a widow, now 77 years of age, and he left a residence in the city of Washington, D. C., worth $25,000 at least, and also property which yields a small income to his widow and two grown daughters.

The Committee on Pensions in the Senate reported this bill in the Senate recommending a pension of $50 per month, and said:

"The distinguished services of Admiral Worden are a matter of history, and if this was a proposition to pension the soldier it is highly probable that Congress would agree to a rating much in excess of that granted by the general law. This, however, is a claim in behalf of the widow, and it comes under a class of cases that this committee has felt compelled to deal with in a spirit of less generosity than Congress has heretofore exhibited. The large pensions granted in a few cases have resulted in a demand upon Congress by the widows of officers of high rank, both in the Army and Navy, for very large pensions, the tendency being to ignore the Pension Bureau altogether and come direct to Congress.

"It is highly probable, too, that the granting of these large pensions has led officers to feel that it mattered little whether they accumulated property or not, as their dependent ones would be provided for by a generous Government. The granting of these large pensions has done more than this. It has created a feeling of unrest and dissatisfaction among the soldiers and their widows of lower grade, and innumerable complaints have come to this committee against the continuance of a practice that seems to them inequitable and unjust.

"Confronted by numerous problems of an exceedingly troublesome nature, this committee at the beginning of the present session of Congress adopted a code of rules for its guidance, one of which limits pensions to widows to an amount not in excess of $50 per month, $20 a month more than is allowed by general law.

"Thus far that rule has been kept inviolate, and it is exceedingly important, in view of the pressure that is being exerted upon Congress to grant large pensions, that it be not departed from in this instance. For the reasons stated your committee feel constrained to recommend that the bill be amended by striking out, in lines 8 and 9, the words '$2,000 per annum,' and inserting in lieu thereof the words '$50 per month,' and that the title of the bill be amended by striking out the words 'widow of the late John L. Worden, United States Navy.'

"As thus amended the passage of the bill is recommended."

This was in accord with the rule adopted by the Committee on Invalid Pensions of the House. The Senate, however, when it came to act upon the bill saw fit to increase the rate to $100 per month, which in the House was cut down to $50 per month.

The Senate disagreed to this amendment and also to the amendment to the title. A conference was the result.

The effect of the conference report is to give to Olivia T. Worden, the widow of Admiral Worden, for the remainder of her life, a pension at the rate of $50 per month, which is $20 per month more than the general law gives in such cases to the widow of any officer in the Army or Navy, however high the rank or however distinguished the services of the officer. We repeat what we said in the report on this bill: "Our pension system is broad and liberal, and increases should only be granted when by reason of old age and inability to earn a living absence of income and necessitous circumstances demand it. Neither should the Government, by the granting of special pensions by special acts, assume to save the real estate of a deceased soldier for his children or grandchildren. So long as the old, poor, and needy widows of the privates draw only $12 per month, your committee are of the opinion that $50 per month in a case like this is all that justice or a sound public policy demands."

The granting of $50 per month in this case is a departure from the policy of the Committee on Invalid Pensions in such cases, for it can not be said that the widow of Admiral Worden, who lives in and owns a house in the city of Washington that would sell for $25,000 and who is also in the receipt of a small income and entitled to a pension of $30 per month under the general law in addition, is in necessitous circumstances.

The managers on the part of the House therefore assert that the granting of this pension to this widow at the rate of $50 per month is by far the most liberal special pension legislation indulged in by the Fifty-fifth Congress, and is a most liberal recognition of the valuable services of Lieutenant Worden in fighting the Monitor, services fully recognized and gratefully rewarded by a generous Government in his lifetime.

GEO. W. RAY,
E. S. HENRY,
E. H. DRIGGS,

Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. FLEMING (interrupting the reading of the statement). Mr. Speaker, can not this reading be dispensed with by unanimous consent? We have but very little time left for the debate on the fortification bill.

Mr. LENTZ. I want to hear the statement.

Mr. FLEMING. By insisting on this reading the gentleman is simply depriving members on his side of the opportunity to speak on the fortification bill.

Mr. LENTZ. This is an important matter, and I think we ought to hear it.

The Clerk resumed and concluded the reading.

Mr. RAY of New York. I move the adoption of the report.

The question being taken, the report of the committee was agreed to.

GEORGE W. NEVINS.

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I submit another conference report.

Mr. FLEMING. Does it not require unanimous consent for the consideration of these conference reports at this time?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks a conference report is privileged.

Mr. FLEMING. Gentlemen on the other side of the House have used an hour and twenty minutes in debate on the fortification bill and gentlemen on our side have not yet spoken. The time occupied on these conference reports comes out of our proportion of the whole time allowed for debate, which terminates at half past 5 o'clock.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the report.

The report was read, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill S. 1963, an act granting an increase of pension to George W. Nevins, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its amendment.

GEORGE W. RAY,
C. A. SULLOWAY,
C. H. CASTLE,
Managers on the part of the House.
J. H. GALLINGER,
GEO. L. SHOUP,
JOHN L. MITCHELL,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The statement of the House conferees was read, as follows:

Statement to accompany conference report on the bill (S. 1963) granting an increase of pension to George W. Nevins.

The bill passed the Senate and came to the House increasing the pension of George W. Nevins from $30 to $50 per month.

The Committee on Invalid Pensions of the House reported the bill to the House recommending its passage without amendment as to amount. In the House the amount was cut down to $40.

After a full and free conference and discussion of the matter the conferees on the part of the House have decided to recede from the amendment and recommend the allowance of the $50 per month.

The soldier served over two years, and was shot twice through the body—once through the shoulder and once through the thigh—in actual battle. He also suffered from fever in the service. He requires aid and attendance all of the time, and while it may be that all of his disability is not strictly of service origin, his condition is such that he would be entitled to $72 per month under the law if all his disabilities were proved to be strictly of service origin. He is very poor and a man of good character.

The effect of the conference agreement is to increase the soldier's pension from $30 to $50 per month.

GEO. W. RAY,
C. A. SULLOWAY,
C. H. CASTLE,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. RAY of New York. I move the adoption of the conference report.

Mr. TALBERT. This bill was discussed at one of our Friday night sessions. During the debate it appeared that the disabilities of the soldier could not be traced to service origin; and the result was that in the Committee of the Whole there was a compromise by which the amount to be allowed was reduced from $50 to $40. I hope, therefore, that the House will refuse to adopt this report and that we shall have a further conference.

The question being taken, the report of the committee of conference was agreed to.

FORTIFICATION BILL.

The House resumed the consideration of the motion of Mr. HENWAY to suspend the rules and pass the fortification appropriation bill.

Mr. BELL obtained the floor and said: I yield fifteen minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. CARMACK].

[Mr. CARMACK addressed the House. See Appendix.]

Mr. LACEY. I ask unanimous consent that other gentlemen who have spoken may have the same privilege.

Mr. WALKER of Massachusetts. Or who may speak.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa asks that all other gentlemen who have spoken may have the same privilege.

Mr. GAINES. I object.

Mr. BELL. Mr. Speaker—

Mr. LACEY. I move to suspend the rules to permit other gentlemen who have spoken to extend their remarks.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Colorado [Mr. BELL] is recognized.

Mr. LACEY. I move that other gentlemen be permitted to extend their remarks.

Mr. GAINES. I object, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made by the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. BELL. Mr. Speaker, I yield ten minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BURKE].

Mr. BURKE. Mr. Speaker, during the present session of this Congress I have intruded myself but very little upon the attention of this House. But there sometimes arise issues and questions respecting which we should not remain silent when we feel it incumbent on us to express ourselves whenever and wherever an opportunity should present itself. I voted for the declaration of war last April. I have never regretted the vote that I cast upon that occasion, and were it to do over again, I should vote precisely the same way. That war brought upon the United States grave responsibilities; and, sir, in speaking of these responsibilities, upon some of the issues that have devolved upon us since the cessation of active hostilities, I must say I dissent from much that has been said on both sides of this Chamber.

Mr. Speaker, as an incident of that war the Philippine Islands fell into the possession of the United States, and if there can be such a thing as the right of possession by conquest, we are rightfully to-day in possession of the Philippine Islands. [Applause.] We are in possession of those islands to-day by right of conquest as much as we are in possession of the island of Porto Rico. Who denies it?

A MEMBER (on the Democratic side). Aguinaldo.

Mr. BURKE. Yes; Aguinaldo may deny it, but I take very little stock in Aguinaldo or any of his crowd. [Applause.] If the inhabitants of the island of Porto Rico or of Cuba were shooting down American soldiers and sailors to-day, what would gentlemen of this House say to it? What position would you assume? What would you believe should be done in such a case as that? Mr. Speaker, gentlemen may say what they please, but I contend that we are rightfully in possession of the Philippines; and to go further, I say that when these people stop shooting down American soldiers it will then be time enough to talk about Aguinaldo and his crowd and what we propose to do in these islands. [Applause.]

Mr. HENRY of Texas. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. BURKE. I have but a few minutes, but I will yield to my colleague.

Mr. HENRY of Texas. What course are you in favor of pursuing in regard to the Philippine Islands?

Mr. BURKE. I will tell my colleague.

Mr. HENRY of Texas. And one additional question, so that you may answer them both at the same time. Are you in favor of a permanent retention of the Philippine Islands against the will of their people?

Mr. BURKE. I ask the Clerk to read what I send to the Clerk's desk; but before he does so, Mr. Speaker, I will say that this resolution which he will read was adopted on the 11th day of last August, at the convention that unanimously nominated me to represent them upon the floor of this House in the Fifty-sixth Congress. I stood then where I stand now, and the delegates to that convention declared what their idea was and what they thought was the policy that should govern and control the action of the United States in this matter. I ask the Clerk to read it.

The Clerk read as follows:

We are opposed to hauling down our flag at Manila—

[Applause on the Republican side]— which was raised and has been maintained by the imperishable valor of Admiral Dewey and his men, to be supplanted by the flag of Spain, that has so long oppressed the people of those islands, and we favor the permanent retention by this Government of ports and territory in the Philippine and Ladrones islands amply sufficient for the requirements of our Government for commercial, coaling, and recruiting stations in that part of the Eastern Hemisphere; and we also favor some ample and just provision which will secure to the insurgents of such islands such measure of freedom and independence as their condition may justify and as will protect them against the cruel oppressions and outrages of the Spanish Government against which they have rebelled.

[Applause.]

Mr. HENRY of Texas. Will my colleague allow me to ask him another question?

Mr. BURKE. Yes.

Mr. HENRY of Texas. That does not answer my question. What course are you in favor of pursuing with them now, and are you in favor of annexing the Philippine Islands?

Mr. BURKE. If my friend will just keep quiet I will answer his question if I have time.

There is where I stood on the 11th day of August, 1898. There is where the people of my district stand, whose commission I bear on this floor and will bear in the next House if I live. The flag of the United States is rightfully at Manila, and I say as my people say in that declaration, that I want it to remain there forever. [Loud applause on the Republican side.]

If I had my way about it, I would carry out the suggestion contained in that resolution and let the American flag, the emblem of freedom and good government, the emblem of everything that should commend itself to the American people and to the world at large, remain there for all time in that city and in that bay; but in the fullness of time, when it is demonstrated that these people have sufficient capacity to govern themselves, let the balance of the Philippine group be organized as an independent government and see if they can not govern themselves under the protecting ægis of the American flag. [Loud applause.] And when they demonstrate their capacity and fitness for self-government, then we can withdraw our protection and leave them the possessors of a free and independent government, just as we propose to do in Cuba to-day.

If it were within my power, I would put the Philippine Islands in the same position, except that the flag of this Union would remain at Manila and over that beautiful bay for all time to come, affording us ample territory for a coaling, commercial, and naval station in that part of the Eastern Hemisphere. [Applause.] Is my friend answered?

Mr. HENRY of Texas. I think not. Are you in favor of continuing the war against them until they will be able to govern themselves?

Mr. BURKE. If my friend understands me in that way, I have been unfortunate in my language. I say this: Let the people in the Philippine Islands stop shooting down American soldiers; and when they stop this, then it will be time enough to determine as to the rights they have. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, I believe this question is one that should be discussed on a plane far above all political considerations. We should consider and discuss it from the broad standpoint of American citizenship, and not from that of party bias. Our soldiers and sailors are in the Philippines, and, as I said a few moments ago, I believe they are there rightfully. They have been shot down by these people, and they have defended themselves and upheld the flag of our country with that valor and devotion that is characteristic of the American soldier.

Gentlemen declare that the President, in not giving to these people the assurance that this Government did not intend to annex these islands, is responsible for the blood that has been shed there. I do not think so. But grant that this is true, for the purpose of the argument, what relief does this grave charge bring to the condition that to-day confronts us in these islands? What would gentlemen have us do? Abuse by either political party against the other does not relieve or remedy the situation.

Some go so far as to say that we should at once withdraw our army and navy from Philippine waters. They seem to forget that we have assumed international obligations by the provisions of the treaty of peace signed at Paris and ratified by this Government, which absolutely preclude such action on our part. Besides these international obligations, a decent regard for our position before the civilized world forbids that such a step be taken. Nations, like individuals, are often confronted with situations and responsibilities, not of their seeking, which they can not ignore and avoid if they would; neither should they avoid them if they could.

It must be apparent to all who have closely watched the trend of affairs in this country since the declaration of war with Spain that the United States has taken a long stride forward and stands before the civilized world to-day far in advance of the position she occupied before this war. No nine months of the nation's life can show as many important events or have made more history than those following the declaration of war.

The guns of Dewey which belched forth their early morning greetings to the Spanish fleet at Manila on May 1 proclaimed not only to us but to the civilized world that a new era had dawned on our land; and this fact was emphasized on the morning of July 3 when Schley swept from the seas practically the whole Spanish fleet. With the victories of our magnificent Army and Navy came the treaty of peace, and we have assumed responsibilities before the world which must be met and solved as becomes a great and powerful people. And, Mr. Speaker, I have an abiding confidence in the American people. I believe they will meet and rightfully solve any problem of legislation or any responsibility that may confront them.

So far affairs in Cuba and Porto Rico seem to be progressing satisfactorily to all, and it is only in the Philippines where the authority of our Government is denied and assailed. We are bound to restore order there, and see that a government suited to their wants and necessities is organized and maintained. These people should understand once for all that we are not their enemies, but so long as they continue to fire on our soldiers we shall treat them as enemies; and further, that they can not defy the authority of this Government, and with arms in their hands attempt to dictate terms.

Porto Rico is practically a part of this country now. All of us hope that the Cubans may soon be enjoying the blessings of self-government, and that they will demonstrate their ability to maintain on that island a stable government. If in the future the people of that island should desire closer relations with us under terms of annexation, and such terms can be satisfactorily agreed upon between the two Governments, I believe, sir, we will all welcome Cuba as a part of the territory of this country.

As to the Philippines, let us hold forever ample territory at and around Manila and Manila Bay to serve our Government as a coaling, commercial, and naval station for all time in the future, and then when peace and order has been restored in the Philippine group extend to these people the privilege and opportunity of organizing a government of their own, and demonstrate to the world their capacity for self-government. Should they succeed in doing this, then when all obligations, international and otherwise, which have been assumed by us shall have been fully carried out, let this new government repay back to the United States the amount that is paid to Spain under the Paris treaty. When this is done, withdraw our forces, except such as may be needed at Manila and Manila Bay, where our flag shall float forever as the symbol of progress, justice, and freedom in that part of the world. [Loud applause.]

Mr. Speaker, this cry of "imperialism" and "imperial policy" has no terrors for me. The same cry was heard in 1803 and at every subsequent step taken when our territory has been enlarged and expanded. In fact, expansion has been an accepted policy with us since 1803. I have no fears of "imperialism" in this land nor in any land over which our flag will ever float. The permanent annexation of the Philippine Islands by this Government is one of the disturbing issues before the people of this country to-day, and the question to be answered is this, Is such annexation desirable and best for the interests of the American people?

We have annexed territory acquired by conquest and purchase jointly, just as the Philippines have been acquired; and we did this, too, without asking for or obtaining the consent of the people of the annexed territory. We have annexed other territory by purchase alone, without the consent of the people so annexed. In fact, with the exceptions of Texas and the Hawaiian Islands, the consent of the people in the territory heretofore annexed to this Government has never been given. So, Mr. Speaker, no one can say that our history since 1803 does not furnish precedents amply sufficient to justify the permanent retention of these islands, with or without the consent of their inhabitants. The American people, I believe, will decide this question rightly, and when that decision is made it will be upheld and maintained by the patriotic sentiment throughout the length and breadth of this country. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. BURKE. Let me have one moment more.

Mr. MARSH. I hope the gentleman will be allowed five minutes longer by unanimous consent.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Colorado has the floor.

Mr. BELL. I can not yield any more time, for I have yielded the whole of it.

Mr. BURKE. Then, Mr. Speaker, although I am constitutionally opposed to extending remarks in the RECORD, I will ask to extend mine.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas asks permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection? There was no objection.

Mr. BELL. I now yield to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. RIDGELY].

[Mr. RIDGELY addressed the House. See Appendix.]

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks permission to print his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. BELL. I now yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. FLEMING].

SOME MORAL ASPECTS OF IMPERIALISM.

Mr. FLEMING. Mr. Speaker, on a former occasion I submitted to the House my views on some of the legal and economic results of the Administration's new policy of imperialism. I now purpose to discuss some of the moral aspects of the same subject.

In the first place, I desire to direct the attention of the House and the country to some of the deplorable consequences which have already followed fast upon the heels of this new departure.

When thoughtful and conservative men warned against the dangers ahead along this untrodden road, they were met, among other things, with the charge of timidity and cowardice, that favorite weapon of heedless braggarts who seek to gain the applause of the people whom they mislead. But that sort of evasion can not avail our opponents now. I will now deal not with prophecies, but with facts, not with the doubt of what may be, but with the certainty of what has been and is.

In situations like the present it is not wise to exaggerate things either for the better or the worse. The realization of the unvarnished truth is of far more importance than either optimism or pessimism. No finer tribute was ever paid a man than when Carlyle said of Cromwell:

He stood bare—not cased in euphemistic coat of mail, but face to face and heart to heart he grappled with the naked truth of things.

Some good may come to the nation yet if we in this same spirit of fearless candor will discard all disguises and pretenses and look squarely at some of the facts that have already transpired in this bloody drama. It is a time for plain talk. I intend to speak the truth as I am able to see it.

STRANGE PARADOX.

At the outset we are confronted with a strange paradox. We began the war for the purpose of freeing a people on this side of the world, and we are trying to end it by subjugating a people on the other side. With our strong arm we helped to raise toward heaven the flag of a new republic at Havana, and with that same strong arm we have done much to drag down into the dust the flag of a new republic at Manila. If newspaper reports speak the truth, or anything like the truth, our American soldiers in the last few days have killed and wounded in battle in the island of Luzon more human beings than Weyler killed and wounded in battle during the whole period of his last bloody régime in the island of Cuba. There is not, I venture to say, in the whole history of warfare, ancient or modern, a spectacle more pathetic than those 700 half-naked Filipinos, armed only with bows and arrows, fighting in the holy cause of freedom, as they understand it, against the deadly fire of American artillery.

MORAL LEADERSHIP FORFEITED.

Only a few months ago this nation went proudly forth to war to free the oppressed in Cuba, and by so doing we took, undisputed, the moral leadership of the world. To-day we forfeit that leadership; nay, we ruthlessly fling it away and stoop to the lower level of subjugating and slaughtering the brave, though perhaps misguided, patriots in the Philippines. What a glorious beginning! What an inglorious ending!

"How did it all come about," the future historian will ask: "by what sort of hypnotism were the people of these United States turned away from their high purpose as the champions of human freedom, and made to play the sinister roll of oppressors?" Let us answer these questions now while our memories are fresh. To answer truly we must look to the complex motives that urged our nation into action, and then trace if we can how it came about that the good motives lost the mastery they at first possessed and fell under the domination of the bad motives.

OPPOSING FORCES.

The heart of the American people had long been touched with admiration for the heroic patriots of Cuba. That heart soon became filled with pity for the sufferings of the women and children, and then it was stirred with righteous indignation at the inhuman cruelties of Weyler. Against this rising tide of sentiment there was opposed the natural desire to maintain friendship with Spain and the conservatism of business interests and the selfishness of bondholding syndicates. With these forces thus standing in doubtful balance, there came the news, like a clap of thunder from a clear sky, that 265 of our sailors on board our battle ship had been murdered in the then friendly harbor of Havana—murdered without warning—murdered in the darkness of the night—murdered while they slept. From that hour there was no longer room under the same sky for Spain's flag and our flag to float together.

We all know the result in Cuba. Spain has departed from this hemisphere, and over the devastated island that she left there will soon be raised by our aid the flag of a free republic. There, indeed, the glory of our arms and the honor of our statesmanship went hand in hand, though candor compels the admission that it was not without a hard struggle in Congress that we checked the rising spirit of greedy conquest and proclaimed our unselfish purpose of giving freedom and not bondage to Cuba.

But in the Orient, how different! A naval victory unprecedented in the glories of the sea. But a statesmanship faltering, short-sighted, blind, and yet, withal, puffed up in its own conceit, loud in its own self-praise, and almost pious in some of its protestations.

GREED OF CONQUEST SEIZES ADMINISTRATION.

The Filipinos were our allies, openly recognized as such, for a time at least, by our civil and naval officers in the East. They joined forces with us against the common enemy. We knew that they had long before rebelled against Spain. We aided them in their rebellion. We knew they cherished the fond hope of national independence. We encouraged them in that hope.

But when the final victory was won, the greed of conquest and the lust of power that had been subjected to our nobler sentiments at the first call to arms now obtained the mastery over our Administration. Instead of following the plain and safe and wise course of duty, and saying to Spain, "You must surrender your sovereignty," and saying to the rest of the world, "We warn you to keep hands off," and saying to the Filipinos, "We will restore order, help you to establish your government, and then raise the flag of your independence"—instead of doing these simple things and thus cementing forever friendly commercial relations of vast benefit to our trade, our boss politicians at home began to look askance at one another, and to look away from the Filipinos when they came with grateful hearts and outstretched hands asking for nothing more than they had a right to expect—our consent to their independence.

The more they begged for some assurance of our friendly intentions the more unfriendly our actions grew. They sent their formal petition and protest to the Paris Commission. Failing of success there, they sent their representative in person to Washington, where he was spurned officially and detectives set to watch him privately.

In the meantime, though the war with Spain was practically at an end, we kept sending more troops to Manila. In view of all those facts, any wayfaring Filipino, though a fool, must have been convinced that the Administration at Washington did not intend to permit them to have their independence. If so, why did it not speak the word?

Why could it not hold out some promise? Why all these ominous preparations for more war when the war with Spain had ceased?

WHAT IS NOT LIBERTY.

Remember, too, in this connection that the Filipinos had begun their struggle for independence and had set up a form of government in their islands before we agreed to buy them from Spain. How could anyone expect them to surrender their cherished hopes without striking a blow at their new oppressors? A clash sooner or later was inevitable unless they were too cowardly to fight, in which event they would not be fit to be American citizens.

For us to say that they ought not to have fought because we intended to give them liberty according to our notion of liberty, which we think better than theirs, is a hypocritical evasion of the real issue. There is no such thing as giving a people liberty according to your will and against their will. As Mr. Webster said on a memorable occasion:

No matter how easy may be the yoke of a foreign power, no matter how lightly it sits upon the shoulders, if it is not imposed by the voice of one's own nation and of his own country he will not, he can not, he means not to be happy under its burden.

REAL POLICY OF ADMINISTRATION.

For weeks the Filipino army and the American Army stood face to face at Manila. In this critical situation there was one sure and certain way of avoiding a general conflict of arms, and that was for the Administration at Washington to say to the Filipinos that we did not intend to subjugate them, but, on the contrary, to aid them to national independence in due time.

Such an assurance would have removed at once all cause for a conflict and thus prevented loss of life on either side. But our Administration would not speak either to the Filipinos or to us. It pursued a policy of silence, of apparently not knowing its own intentions. This noncommittal course may have appeared to superficial observers as a policy of double dealing, evenly balanced, with no inclination to either side, a sort of straddling equilibrium. But to those who looked beneath the surface it meant only one thing, and that was that the Administration was opposed to the independence of the Filipinos and was in favor of annexing them, and doing so by subjugation if necessary.

If such was not the real meaning of the Administration's dumbness, then what a terrible blunder not to have spoken its real intentions. For, seek to avoid it as we may, that refusal to declare a friendly policy, looking to independence, was the prime moving cause that brought on the clash of arms at Manila, with the result of scores of American soldiers wounded and thousands of Filipinos slaughtered, including women and children, according to all reports that come from other sources than our own censored press. The President may be an ambitious man. He is certainly a wise man, as the phrase goes. He is surely not a bloodthirsty man.

Therefore, rather than believe that in such critical condition of strained relations he withheld the utterance of sentiments which he really entertained and which if uttered would have averted bloodshed, I prefer for his own sake to conclude that his policy has been not for ultimate independence, but for permanent annexation, peaceably if he could, forcibly if he must. This conclusion is the more charitable one to him, as well as the one more consonant with the logic of the facts.

Such is his policy, if he has a policy; and the people of this country are going to have a stormy reckoning with him about it in 1900, unless in the meantime he shifts his sails and steers in another direction. The Boston banquet speech was an excellent piece of declamation, full of lofty platitudes, but it held out no hope of independence to the Filipinos—the one single issue about which blood is being shed in the Philippines.

TRUTH ABOUT RATIFICATION OF TREATY.

There seems to have been a determined effort on the part of some of our newspapers to misunderstand or misrepresent the true situation about the ratification of the Paris treaty. There was never at any time any general desire on the part of those who oppose the President's policy of imperialism to defeat that treaty. Their object was solely to amend it, and the only amendment they insisted upon was to change one clause, so as to give ultimate independence to the Filipinos on the same general plan we had promised it to the Cubans. There was never a day after the treaty was reported to the Senate that it could not have been ratified with practical unanimity if such an amendment had been accepted.

Nay, more, while many of the anti-imperialists considered it wisest to write such a provision into the text of the treaty, there was scarcely a day for weeks that the treaty could not have been overwhelmingly ratified without amendment if a clear declaration favoring ultimate independence for the Filipinos had been unequivocally made in a joint resolution by Congress. Such a declaration would have been the pledge of our national word of honor, which our own court might have construed as a substantial feature of the cession of the islands when it comes to pass upon the question of our sovereignty in relation to the operation of our tariff and other laws in our outlying possessions.

RESPONSIBILITY FOR LOSS OF LIFE AT MANILA.

Even assuming that an earlier ratification by us of the treaty as it stood would have prevented the Filipinos from fighting for their liberty—and this is a most violent assumption against all the probabilities—it is perfectly plain to every fair-minded man, first, that of course the treaty could have been ratified at any time by either side acceding fully to the demands of the other; second, that the moral responsibility for the delay in its ratification and the consequent loss of life at Manila must turn upon this other question, namely, whether such an amendment or declaration of policy as was requested ought to have been made.

If it ought to have been done, the responsibility rests upon the Administration for preventing it. If it ought not to have been done, the responsibility may rest upon those who favored it. Upon that issue we are ready to stand or fall before the calm, sober judgment of the people when passion subside and reason again mounts her throne. It is an ungracious task to lay the blame for that fearful destruction of human life at the door of any man or set of men. But if it must be done, as some have essayed to do, let it be done in accordance with the facts. We prefer not to speak, but if we must speak, we can say to the President, as the prophet of old said to the king: "Thou art the man."

MCENERY RESOLUTIONS A MAKESHIFT.

The defeat a few days ago in the Senate of the Bacon resolution favoring independence for the Filipinos and the passage of the McEnery resolutions instead, all done by Senators in close touch with the Administration, only emphasize the correctness of the conclusions I have drawn regarding the policy of the Administration. These McEnery resolutions were framed by some one with consummate skill so as to avoid saying the very thing they ought to say. Their real purpose seems to be not to give any hope of independence to the Filipinos, but to try to avoid some of the necessary legal effects that follow the ratification of the treaty by attempting to forestall and shape the decision of the Supreme Court when it comes to pass on the constitutional questions that are bound to arise. If these resolutions ever come to an issue here, I trust this House will substitute for them a more manly declaration, or else vote down the miserable makeshift.

EFFECT OF CRAZE OF IMPERIALISM ON SOME EDITORS.

Another deplorable result which has already followed the advent of our new imperial policy is found in the baneful effect it has produced on the minds of some of our hitherto conservative and respectable editorial writers. It seems to have worked upon some of them like a poisoned virus, slowly but surely destroying their equipoise, their conservatism, their judgment, and at last, in some instances, their self-respect.

An influential metropolitan paper, edited with great brilliancy and with much sound sense on some subjects, was so upset mentally by this imperialistic craze as to be guilty of publishing the following statement, which I shall read, about those Senators who followed their patriotic convictions and constitutional privileges in standing out to the last in their effort to have the Paris treaty amended so as to give independence to the Filipinos. That paper said editorially:

Twenty-nine traitors are now in the Senate of the United States, and here are their names—

And proceeds to enumerate.

Again it says:

Everyone of these twenty-nine names will be a hissing and a byword among Americans from this time forth.

Could anyone have believed twelve months ago, prior to this frenzy of imperialism, that any respectable paper in America could have fathered such rot? And this, too, in a strong metropolitan journal, to say nothing of the feebler and lesser sheets that have joined their weaker voices in the same silly cry.

PROPOSED ARREST FOR TREASON.

Let us follow that logic a little further. If these twenty-nine Senators are traitors, what then? Certainly traitors ought not to be permitted to legislate for the nation they have already betrayed. The next step would be to arrest and try them. Indeed, incomprehensible as such a thing would be under ordinary conditions, it is a fact that another editor, more reckless than the one I have referred to, has seriously proposed that the senior Senator from Massachusetts should be arrested and tried for treason. As there is so much treason in the air, we could not be greatly surprised if some one should rise up to demand that the United States Army disperse the Senate until that body is fully purged of traitors that now infest it. A few more editorial writers of this type would soon make straight the way for a military dictator—except for the saving common sense of the people.

WE ARE TO CONVERT THE HEATHEN.

But again, it is said we will convert these heathen to our own Christian religion. With this pious object in view many holy men of God have recently been using their pulpits to bolster up this policy of imperialism, which knows no law but might. No loftier sentiment ever ennobled the human heart than the consecrated love of the Christian missionary who sails to distant lands in obedience to the Master's injunction: "Go preach the gospel to every creature." Had we kept faith and friendship with the Filipinos we would have found, no doubt, in their islands a wide field and a rich harvest for Christian work.

But, unfortunately, heathen souls can not be bought by us at so much per thousand, nor can Filipinos be converted to Christianity by the use of rapid-fire machine guns. The mind and heart of the subject must usually be given some sort of kindly preparation for the reception of the truths of Christianity; and, above all things, the example of a professedly Christian nation will be potent in attracting or repelling the souls of these unsaved heathen, about whom our imperialistic pulpiterers are wont to grow so eloquent in special sermons designed to quicken the hearts and loosen the purses of the brethren in the pews.

I fancy it will take long years of work by devoted men and women to erase from the minds and eradicate from the hearts of the Filipinos the baneful effects against our claims for Christianity produced by our recent slaughterings, when their only offense consisted in fighting for their freedom.

REBELS MOWED DOWN LIKE GRASS.

Our dispatch conveying news of the battle of Calococan said: "The rebels were mowed down like grass." Boom! goes the cannon. Swift speeds the shell. Down fall the ranks of men like blades of grass before the scythe. Again and again the "reeking tube" hurls forth the "iron shard." The work is soon finished, and there on the bloody ground, some still grasping their rude bows, lie heaped up the dark corpses of the slain—

Thick as autumnal leaves that strew the brooks
In Vallombrosa.

And all this done in the name of a superior civilization and by men of a Christian nation, who kill these heathens, so late our friends and allies in arms, because, forsooth, they would not forswear their love of liberty, which self-same love has lifted us from weakness into power, from darkness into light, but, alas, has not yet sufficiently taught us that other hearts than our own have the right, the equal right with us, to aspire to freedom and national independence.

IS THERE A SPOT LIKE CONCORD BRIDGE NEAR MANILA?

Mr. Chairman, it was my privilege one beautiful afternoon last summer, when just recovering from a serious illness, to ride with a valued friend from Lexington Common to Concord Bridge—those two historic spots so dear to all Americans, where our Revolutionary sires first defied their British oppressors. The scene at Concord Bridge was to me entrancing. The tall trees, the dense shade, the green slopes, the quiet stream, all peaceful in the soft summer light. Just across the bridge stood the bronze figure of the minute man, every limb and feature, as it were instinct, with life. My heart thrilled with patriotic pride when I gazed on that perfect statue and read on the pedestal those immortal lines of Emerson:

Here once the embattled farmers stood,
And fired the shot heard round the world.

I have recently mused much on this and wondered if there was, anywhere out along the firing line around Manila, a spot that looked like Concord Bridge. There are many points of resemblance in the principles involved in those two battles that were fought so far apart in time and space. I need not mention them; they rise up in every mind familiar with the facts.

HEART GOES WITH THE FLAG.

Let no one charge that I am out of sympathy with our Army and Navy. I am not criticising soldiers or sailors. Their duty is to obey. My heart goes with the men who follow our flag, in whatever land and on whatever sea. May victory always be theirs. But my condemnation falls, for what it is worth, much or little, on the blundering statesmanship that makes necessary this slaughter in the Orient and that makes our flag stand for something, in the eyes of the world, meaner than it ever stood for before.

REMEDY: GIVE ASSURANCE OF INDEPENDENCE.

Still I have not lost my faith in the American people. Deep down in their hearts they love justice and right. I believe they will yet assert themselves and soon compel this or some other Administration to wipe that stain from off the Stars and Stripes. It is not too late to retrieve in part what we have lost. Let the Filipinos have prompt assurance of their independence in due time. Then we can look the world in the face, and say with infinite satisfaction: "We went forth to war to give freedom to one people. Behold, we have given it to two."

Mr. HEMENWAY. Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that the time has been all taken up in the discussion of other matters than that involved in the bill now before the House, I ask unanimous consent to print the report of the committee, and also some remarks on the bill in explanation of its provisions.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. DALZELL). If there be no objection, the request of the gentleman from Indiana will be granted.

There was no objection.

Mr. HEMENWAY. I move that the rules be suspended and the bill passed.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that, in the judgment of the Chair two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bills passed.

RETURN OF BILL TO THE SENATE.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair desires to state to the House that a request was received from the Senate for the return of a certain bill to that body. This request was granted by the House, but subsequently it appeared, as we are informed from the Senate, that the request was unnecessary and the return of the bill is not desired. If there be no objection, the action heretofore taken will be rescinded and the order revoked.

There was no objection.

LEAVE TO PRINT.

Mr. FLEMING. Mr. Speaker, I desire to submit a request for unanimous consent.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. FLEMING. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR] may be permitted to extend his remarks in the RECORD, in accordance with his original request today, to which objection was made.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

Mr. GAINES. I object.

Mr. FLEMING. Then I move to suspend the rules and agree to the request of the gentleman from Ohio that he be permitted to extend his remarks in the RECORD in accordance with his original request.

Mr. MADDOX. I move to amend that motion, if it be amendable, by allowing the same privilege to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. CARMACK].

Mr. FLEMING. That has already been allowed. There was no objection to that.

Mr. PERKINS. His request was granted.

Mr. FLEMING. I renew my motion, Mr. Speaker, to suspend the rules and authorize the gentleman from Ohio to extend his remarks in accordance with his original request.

The motion was agreed to, two-thirds voting in favor thereof.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I desire to present a conference report on the Indian appropriation bill.

Mr. LEWIS of Washington. Will the gentleman from New York allow me to make a request to print?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes; I will suspend for a moment. Mr. Speaker, if it is agreeable to the Chair, to allow the gentleman from Washington to make his request.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state his request.

Mr. LEWIS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to print remarks upon the fortifications bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Washington asks unanimous consent to print remarks upon the fortifications bill. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask that all gentlemen who have made remarks may have the same leave.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I do not yield for that purpose. I have yielded as far as I can.

Mr. BELL. I withdraw the request, then.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

There was no objection.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. SHERMAN. Now, Mr. Speaker, I present a conference report on the Indian appropriation bill, and I ask that the reading of the report may be dispensed with, but that instead the statement of the House conferees may be read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent that the statement may be read instead of the report. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The statement of the House conferees was read, as follows:

From amendments 1, 6, 8, 15, 26, 23, 38, 42, 43, 50, 59, 60, 65, 66, and 67 the Senate recedes, leaving the bill in these particulars as it left the House.

The House recedes from amendment numbered 2, which increases by $200 the pay of the agent at the Santee Agency, making it uniform with that of other agencies of its class.

The House recedes from amendment numbered 3, which merely changes the total in conformity with amendment numbered 2.

The House recedes from amendment numbered 4, which authorizes the payment of special Indian agents while at Washington under orders from the Secretary of the Interior, for a period not exceeding twenty days, during the years 1898 and 1899.

The House recedes from amendment numbered 5, which provides that in the employment of practical farmers they shall be chosen from the State or Territory or the adjoining State or Territory to the agency where they are employed.

The House recedes from amendment numbered 7 with an amendment. The amendment, as agreed to, provides that the Secretary of the Interior shall investigate, through the officers of his Department, the cutting of timber upon the Chippewa Reservation in Minnesota and that, pending the report upon such investigation, the Secretary may, in his discretion, suspend the operation of existing law relating to surveys and valuations.

The House recedes from amendment numbered 9, which provides an appropriation of $30,000, which appropriation is reimbursable out of the funds arising from the sale of timber lands on the Chippewa Reservation for the erection of day schools thereon.

The House recedes from amendment numbered 10. This is made necessary by reason of the death of one Kickapoo Indian and the payment to his heirs of his pro rata share of the funds in the Treasury, in accordance with treaty stipulations.

The House recedes from amendment numbered 11, which provides that all chattel mortgages executed in the Quapaw Agency shall be recorded in the town of Miami.

The House recedes from amendment numbered 12 with an amendment which permits the Secretary of the Interior, in his discretion, to expend $10,000 for the benefit of the Kiowa and Comanche Indians.

The House recedes from amendment numbered 13, which increases to $100,000 the appropriation for the Arapahoe and Cheyenne Indians, and from amendment numbered 14, which permits the Secretary of the Interior, in his discretion, to expend $10,000 of that amount in accordance with the provisions of an old treaty.

The House recedes from amendment numbered 16, which makes immediately available the appropriation of $5,000 for the benefit of the Kicking Kiapooes.

The House recedes from amendment numbered 17, increasing the amount from twenty to twenty-five thousand dollars of the appropriation for the support of the Shoshone Indians; from amendment numbered 18, which appropriates $5,000 for the support of the Arapahoe Indians in Wyoming, and from amendment numbered 19, which provides for the construction of a telephone line between the main and sub agencies of the Arapahoos. The last four amendments are all strongly recommended by the Indian Bureau.

The House recedes from amendments 20 and 21, which make the expenditure of the appropriation for Big Jim's band discretionary with the Secretary of the Interior and also make it immediately available.

The House recedes from amendment numbered 22 with an amendment which makes the appropriation available until expended. This is an emergency fund, and the House appropriated $5,000 and the Senate increased this amount to $20,000. As a fund of $25,000 had heretofore answered all purposes for upward of five years, it was thought wise to make this fund available until entirely expended.

The House recedes from amendments numbered 23, 24, and 25, which provide for the employment of a physician at the Walker River Reservation at $500 per year, makes the appropriation therefor, and changes the amount of the total, which necessarily follows.

The House recedes from amendment numbered 27, which provides for the repair of a Government bridge between two Indian reservations in Nebraska.

The House recedes from amendment numbered 29, which reduces the appropriation from twenty-five thousand to ten thousand dollars to allot certain lands.

The House recedes from amendment numbered 30, appropriating $25,000 for the survey of lands on various Indian reservations in South Dakota. The chairman of the Indian Committee of the Senate personally appeared before the conference committee and demonstrated the need of this appropriation.

The House recedes from amendment numbered 31 upon like ground.

From amendment numbered 32 the House likewise receded. This confirms the allotments to 83 Indians upon the Uncompahgre Reservation, which were made after April 1 last, when the time for allotments had expired.

The House recedes from amendment numbered 33, with an amendment authorizing the Secretary of the Interior, in his discretion, to do certain irrigating ditch and canal work on the Uintah Reservation, in Utah, out of tribal funds.

The House recedes from amendment numbered 34, with amendments. This amendment as amended provides for the construction of an insane asylum for Indians in the State of South Dakota, at a cost not to exceed $45,000.

The House recedes from amendment numbered 35, with an amendment limiting to $15,000 the appropriation for the construction of necessary agency buildings for the new agency at Leech Lake, Minnesota.

The House recedes from amendment numbered 36, permitting the Indians of the Yakima Reservation, Wash., to lease their lands for a period of five years, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior.

The House recedes from amendment numbered 37, with an amendment. This amendment readopts the provision of the last appropriation bill in reference to irrigation for the Southern Utes in Colorado, with a slight change in phraseology. It does not involve an appropriation.

The House recedes from amendment numbered 39, which provides for the employment of an architect and a draftsman and a laborer in the Bureau of Indian Affairs, and also provides for repairs to the Fort Lewis School in Colorado.

The House recedes from amendment numbered 40, with amendments. This amendment, as agreed to by the Senate, provided for an appropriation for contract schools for the next fiscal year to an amount not exceeding 20 per cent of the amount appropriated in 1895. As amended, this amount is decreased from 20 to 15 per cent, and there is incorporated in the section a provision that this shall be the final appropriation for sectarian schools.

The House recedes from amendment numbered 41, which provides that poultry can be purchased as well as cattle, etc.

The House recedes from amendment numbered 44, appropriating $2,500 for an electric light plant at the Flandreau School, and from amendment 45, which changes the total of the appropriation made necessary by the former amendment.

The House recedes from amendment numbered 46, which made immediately available an appropriation for a sewerage system at the Grand Junction School, Colorado, and from amendment 47, which is a like provision for an ice plant at the same school; and from amendment 48, which provides that in the making of such repairs Indians be employed where possible, and that the materials may be purchased by the superintendent in the open market.

The House recedes from amendment numbered 49, which is the appropriation for the Lincoln Institution at Philadelphia.

The House recedes from amendment 51, with an amendment which increases from two to six thousand dollars the amount appropriated for repairs and improvements at the Pipestone School, Minnesota, and also provides that out of this sum may be expended such portion as is necessary for the erection of additional buildings.

The House recedes from amendment numbered 52, with an amendment, which is simply a change in the amount of the total in accordance with the last amendment.

The House recedes from amendment numbered 53, which increases the appropriation $14,000 for the erection of a girls' dormitory at the Tomah School, Wisconsin.

The House recedes from amendment numbered 54, which provides for submission to the Secretary of the Interior of the claims of certain attorneys for compensation for services rendered under a contract heretofore approved by the Secretary of the Interior.

The House recedes from amendments numbered 55, 56, and 57, which amendments simply change the number of sections made necessary by the previous changes in the bill.

The House recedes from amendment numbered 59, which provides that appropriations heretofore, as well as those now made, for the benefit of Indians under treaties, may be diverted to other uses than those for which they were specifically appropriated, in the discretion of the President and with the consent of the tribes.

The House recedes from amendment numbered 61, which provides that the Secretary of the Interior, with the consent of the Crow Indians in Montana, and in his discretion, may use the annuity funds to complete the irrigation system in process of construction on that reservation.

From amendments numbered 62, 63, and 64 the House recedes. These are simply formal amendments, changing sections of the bill made necessary by previous amendments.

The conference report was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. SHERMAN, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

PROTECTION OF GAME IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the bill (H. R. 2534) for the protection of birds, the preservation of game, and for the prevention of its sale during certain closed seasons in the District of Columbia, with Senate amendments thereto.

The Senate amendments were read.

Mr. BABCOCK. Mr. Speaker, I move to concur in the Senate amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

THOMAS HICKEY.

The SPEAKER pro tempore also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 5326) for the relief of Thomas Hickey, with a Senate amendment thereto.

The Senate amendment was read.

Mr. BELKNAP. I move to concur in the Senate amendment. The Senate amendment was concurred in.

GARDNER DODGE.

The SPEAKER pro tempore also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 3567) to remove the charge of desertion against Gardner Dodge, with a Senate amendment.

The Senate amendment was read.

Mr. LACEY. I move to concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

TITLE TO CERTAIN LOTS IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The SPEAKER pro tempore also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 631) to confirm title to lots 13 and 14, in square 959, in Washington, D. C., with a Senate amendment.

On motion of Mr. BABCOCK, the House nonconcurring in the Senate amendment and asked for a conference with the Senate; and the Speaker pro tempore appointed as conferees on the part of the House Mr. JENKINS, Mr. SPRAGUE, and Mr. RICHARDSON.

S STREET, IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The SPEAKER pro tempore also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 11597) to extend S street, in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, with Senate amendments thereto.

On motion of Mr. BABCOCK, the House nonconcurring in the Senate amendments, and agreed to the conference asked by the Senate; and the Speaker pro tempore appointed as conferees on the part of the House Mr. BABCOCK, Mr. CURTIS of Iowa, and Mr. RICHARDSON.

EXTENSION OF PENNSYLVANIA AVENUE SE.

The SPEAKER pro tempore also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 11629) for the extension of Pennsylvania avenue SE. to the District line, with Senate amendments.

Mr. BABCOCK. I move to nonconcur in the Senate amendments.

Mr. DOCKERY. I would like to have the amendments read.

The Clerk proceeded to read the amendments.

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Chairman, after consultation with the chairman of the committee I withdraw the demand for the reading of the amendments.

Mr. HEPBURN. I understand what the amendments are, and I want to ask the chairman of the committee what the contention is, or what probably the contention will be? Does anyone object to the landowner paying one-half of the expense of condemnation?

Mr. BABCOCK. The only question about that matter is this,

There are a number of amendments that the House committee knows nothing about, especially the widening of Sherman avenue and the opening up of Eleventh street. One or the other must be abandoned. It is unnecessary to go to that expense.

Mr. HEPBURN. About the other amendment.

Mr. BABCOCK. There are five or six amendments that the House committee has never considered at all.

Mr. HEPBURN. Five or six amendments of this character, however, that provide that the owner of the land shall recover but one-half of the value of the lands that are to be improved in these streets. Now, what I want to know is, does the House committee object to that?

Mr. BABCOCK. They only recover one-half. They can only recover the value of the damages, one-half to be paid by the property benefited and one-half by the District.

Mr. HEPBURN. Is there objection to that?

Mr. BABCOCK. No, sir.

Mr. DOCKERY. As I understand this amendment, it includes a number of streets. Of course under the rules of the House that would not be in order—to amend one proposition relating to a private enterprise by another—and I hope the House conferees will stand firm by our rules.

Mr. BABCOCK. I move, Mr. Speaker, that the House nonconcur and agree to the conference asked.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair appoints as conferees Mr. BABCOCK, Mr. CURTIS of Iowa, and Mr. RICHARDSON.

IMPERSONATION OF WEIGHMASTERS IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The SPEAKER pro tempore also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 8626) to punish the impersonation of weighmasters in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, with Senate amendments.

The amendments were read.

Mr. BABCOCK. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House nonconcur in the Senate amendments and request a conference.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair appoints as conferees Mr. CURTIS of Iowa, Mr. JENKINS, and Mr. COWHERD.

RETURN FREE OF DUTY OF CERTAIN ARTICLES EXPORTED FROM THE UNITED STATES FOR EXHIBITION PURPOSES.

The SPEAKER pro tempore also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 7271) amending the act entitled "An act to allow the return free of duty of certain articles exported from the United States for exhibition purposes," approved May 18, 1896, with Senate amendments.

The amendments of the Senate were read.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the House nonconcur and ask for a conference.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair appoints as conferees Mr. PAYNE, Mr. DOLLIVER, and Mr. BAILEY.

SENATE BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS REFERRED.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, Senate bills and joint resolutions of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and referred to their appropriate committees as indicated below.

S. 3972. An act granting a pension to Capt. Oscar Taylor—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 4098. An act granting an increase of pension to Isaac H. Linn—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 4730. An act to increase the pension of Levi Moser—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 3291. An act to increase the pension of James C. Carlton—to the Committee on Pensions.

S. 4097. An act granting a pension to Elizabeth Wisler—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 4006. An act for the relief of Joseph B. Presdee—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 4919. An act granting a pension to Henry H. Lewis—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 4916. An act granting a pension to Mary B. Christopher—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 5415. An act granting a pension to Frederick Auer—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 2654. An act granting a pension to Lydia F. Wiley—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. R. 48. Joint resolution granting permission for the erection of a monument in Washington, D. C., for the ornamentation of the national capital and in honor of Samuel Hahnemann—to the Committee on the Library.

S. 5374. An act for the relief of Christiana Dengler—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

S. 3831. An act to correct the military record of Joseph T. Vincent—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. R. 220. Joint resolution to authorize the President to appoint Jonathan Brooks as assistant paymaster in the Navy—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

S. 3187. An act for the relief of the widow and heirs of Samuel Kramer—to the Committee on Pensions.

S. 2991. An act granting an increase of pension to Oliver J. Lyon—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. R. 247. Joint resolution for the relief of ex-Naval Cadet George H. Mather—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

S. 5474. An act granting a pension to Ellen Harden—to the Committee on Pensions.

S. 2022. An act for the relief of Louis Miller—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 3151. An act for the relief of John G. Rose—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

S. 3370. An act granting a pension to Benjamin F. Trapp, of South Omaha, in the State of Nebraska—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 4817. An act for the relief of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company—to the Committee on Claims.

S. 4437. An act granting a pension to B. H. Randall—to the Committee on Pensions.

ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS SIGNED.

Mr. HAGER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills and joint resolutions of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

H. R. 11677. An act to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Monongahela River at Morgantown, in the State of West Virginia;

H. R. 9281. An act authorizing the construction of three bridges across the Conecuh River, a navigable stream in Escambia County, Ala.;

H. R. 3261. An act to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of George L. Plummer;

H. R. 11733. An act to prevent the sale of intoxicating liquors on Sunday in the District of Columbia;

H. R. 1800. An act to reimburse George W. McKinsey, postmaster at Kokomo, Ind., for money paid out by him as said postmaster;

H. R. 5328. An act granting a pension to Patrick O'Shea;

H. R. 1136. An act for the punishment of seduction in the District of Columbia;

H. R. 6930. An act for the relief of and to correct record of Jacob Covert;

H. R. 3297. An act to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of William Henry Woodward;

H. R. 5740. An act to remove the charge of desertion against William Britton;

H. R. 6248. An act to provide for the disposition of assessment certificates of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes;

H. R. 11023. An act to regulate the height of buildings in the District of Columbia;

H. R. 7860. An act to amend an act entitled "An act for the relief of Brig. Gen. John R. Brooke, United States Army," approved March 30, 1894.

H. R. 11024. An act to authorize the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to remove dangerous or unsafe buildings and parts thereof, and for other purposes;

H. R. 8739. An act to authorize a resurvey of certain lands in Cheyenne County, in the State of Nebraska, and for other purposes;

H. R. 11570. An act to cause the removal of weeds from lands in the city of Washington, D. C., and for other purposes;

H. R. 11771. An act to amend section 1 of an act to provide for the entry of lands in Greer County, Okla., to give preference right to settlers, and for other purposes;

H. R. 321. An act for the relief of the Berdan Firearms Manufacturing Company;

H. Res. 339. Joint resolution authorizing the President of the United States to appoint Osborne W. Deignan a naval cadet at Annapolis;

H. R. 247. An act granting an increase of pension to John Doebler;

H. R. 6876. An act to increase the pension of George Alexander;

H. R. 8578. An act granting an increase of pension to George W. Reisinger;

H. R. 10855. An act granting an increase of pension to Catharine C. Goodrich;

H. R. 8610. An act granting a pension to Minnie B. Titus;

H. R. 8568. An act granting an increase of pension to Mrs. Susan Stedman;

H. R. 4249. An act granting a pension to Samuel B. Koontz;

H. R. 3808. An act granting an increase of pension to Elam Allen;

H. R. 10933. An act granting a pension to Sarah A. Kizer;

H. R. 2293. An act granting an increase of pension to Andrew J. Snowden;
 H. R. 635. An act increasing the pension of Howard L. James;
 H. R. 123. An act granting a pension to William F. Bolan;
 H. R. 7657. An act granting an increase of pension to James F. Searl;
 H. R. 8749. An act granting a pension to James J. Marcher;
 H. R. 9415. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry Bullen;
 H. R. 12026. An act to increase the pension of Thomas Crinigan;
 H. R. 10056. An act increasing the pension of James Webb;
 H. R. 12033. An act granting a pension to Mary A. Kennedy;
 H. R. 10385. An act granting a pension to George Brown;
 H. R. 10803. An act granting an increase of pension to James Porter;
 H. R. 10605. An act to increase the pension of Annie Cusack;
 H. R. 10860. An act granting a pension to Mianda A. Sanford;
 H. R. 4980. An act granting a pension to Jonathan Scott;
 H. R. 3123. An act granting an increase of pension to Frank Devol;
 H. R. 9569. An act granting an increase of pension to Timothy A. Allen;
 H. R. 9344. An act granting an increase of pension to John Begley;
 H. R. 4249. An act granting a pension to Samuel B. Koontz;
 H. R. 12077. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles N. Smiley;
 H. R. 11296. An act granting a pension to Anna M. Rowe;
 H. R. 10417. An act granting a pension to James H. Nichols;
 H. R. 10738. An act granting an increase of pension to Beeri Services;
 H. R. 855. An act granting an increase of pension to James R. Zearing;
 H. R. 10716. An act granting a pension to John S. Draper;
 H. R. 9455. An act granting an increase of pension to Richard Atkinson;
 H. R. 10480. An act granting a pension to Nelly V. Crosby;
 H. R. 9843. An act granting a pension to America Easton;
 H. R. 7046. An act granting an increase of pension to Arba Capron;
 H. R. 6913. An act granting an increase of pension to Charlotte B. Cousins; and
 H. R. 10285. An act granting an increase of pension to Mazie V. Sullivan.
 The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills of the following titles:
 S. 5514. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to grant the right of way through the Indian Territory to the Denison, Bonham and New Orleans Railway Company for the purpose of constructing a railway, and for other purposes," approved March 28, 1898, and to vest in the Denison, Bonham and Gulf Railway Company all the rights, privileges, and franchises therein granted to said first-named company;
 S. 5427. An act granting to the Clearwater Short Line Railway Company a right of way through the Nez Perces Indian lands in Idaho;
 S. 1776. An act to increase the pension of Mrs. Letitia Tyler Semple; and
 S. 1154. An act granting a pension to George Hughes.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:
 To Mr. CASTLE, for remainder of session, on account of urgent business.

To Mr. FOX, indefinitely, on account of serious sickness in his family.

DEATH OF HON. DENIS M. HURLEY.

Mr. FISCHER. Mr. Speaker, I am in receipt of the sad news that Mr. DENIS M. HURLEY, a colleague of mine, and a member of this House, died on yesterday at Hot Springs, in Virginia. It is not my purpose now to go into any extensive remarks concerning his life, character, and work. I shall, however, at some other day ask the House to take proper action. At the present I offer the resolutions which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the House has heard with deep regret and profound sorrow of the death of Hon. DENIS M. HURLEY, late a Representative from the State of New York.

Resolved, That a committee of eleven members of the House, with such members of the Senate as may be joined, be appointed to attend the funeral at Brooklyn, N. Y., and that the necessary expenses attending the execution of this order be paid out of the contingent fund of the House.

Resolved, That the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House be authorized and directed to take such steps as may be necessary for properly carrying out the provisions of this resolution.

Resolved, That the Clerk of the House communicate these resolutions to the Senate and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the resolutions.

The question was taken; and the resolutions were unanimously agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair appoints the following committee: Mr. FISCHER, Mr. SHERMAN, Mr. HOWE, Mr. SHANNON, Mr. ODELL, Mr. BARTHOLOTT, Mr. MAHON, Mr. KULP, Mr. DRIGGS, Mr. BARTLETT, and Mr. CLAYTON.

The Clerk will report the last resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect the House do now adjourn.

The resolution was agreed to; and accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 58 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until 11 o'clock a. m. to-morrow.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following executive and other communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a communication from the assistant director of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing relating to the Larman, Harley, and Sparks claim—to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a communication from the Treasurer of the United States relating to extra work performed by employees of his office—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

The annual report of the Georgetown Barge, Dock, Elevator and Railway Company for the District of Columbia—to the Committee on the District of Columbia, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a communication from the acting chief of the division of loans and currency relating to reasonable compensation for extra work done by employees—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a communication from the Attorney-General submitting certain estimates of deficiencies in appropriations—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a communication from the Register of the Treasury relating to extra compensation for certain employees—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the several Calendars therein named, as follows:

Mr. FOSS, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 5363) granting extra pay to officers and enlisted men of the temporary force of the Navy, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2302); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. SKINNER, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 5543) to provide for the erection of a public building at Elizabeth City, N. C., reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2305); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. CAPRON, from the Committee on Election of President, Vice-President, and Representatives in Congress, to which was referred the joint resolution of the House (H. Res. 354) proposing amendments to the Constitution prohibiting polygamy within the United States and all places subject to their jurisdiction and disqualifying polygamists for election as Senators or Representatives in Congress, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2307); which said resolution and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. BOUTELLE of Maine, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 5352) creating the office of admiral of the Navy, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2308); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, private bills and resolutions of the following titles were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House, as follows:

Mr. CARMACK, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 11803) directing the issue of a check in lieu of a lost check drawn by H. C. Newcomer, captain of engineers, in favor of Stone & Stansell, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2303); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. LENTZ, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 7796) for the relief of Robert W. Caldwell, First Regiment Ohio Heavy Artillery Volunteers, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2306); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS INTRODUCED.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. NORTON of Ohio: A bill (H. R. 12189) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to enlarge and improve the United States custom-house and post-office building at Sandusky, Ohio—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. BROSIUS: A bill (H. R. 12190) for preventing the adulteration, misbranding, and imitation of foods, beverages, candies, drugs, and condiments in the District of Columbia and the Territories, and for regulating interstate traffic therein, and for other purposes—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. STARK: A bill (H. R. 12191) to provide for the revision and adjustment of the sales of the Otoe and Missouri Reservation lands, in the States of Kansas and Nebraska, and to confirm the titles under said sales—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. OSBORNE: A bill (H. R. 12197) providing for the establishment and erection of a military post near the city of Sheridan, in the State of Wyoming, and making an appropriation therefor—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HEMENWAY, from the Committee on Appropriations: A bill (H. R. 12198) making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, for the armament thereof, for the procurement of heavy ordnance for trial and service, and for other purposes.

By Mr. CUMMINGS: A joint resolution (H. Res. 375) granting permission for the erection of a bronze statue in Washington, D. C., in honor of Francis E. Spinner, late Treasurer of the United States—to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. HENDERSON, from the Committee on Rules: A resolution (House Res. No. 420) that February 28, after reading the Journal, be set apart for the consideration in the House of bills reported by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. BABCOCK: A resolution (House Res. No. 421) that a committee of ten members be appointed by the Speaker to confer with other committees on centennial anniversary—to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. CLARK of Missouri: A memorial from the legislature of the State of Missouri, asking a loan of certain ordnance captured in Spanish war—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By the SPEAKER: A memorial from the legislature of Oklahoma Territory, asking for the taxation of Indian lands in said Territory and for Congressional action—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Also, a memorial from the legislature of South Dakota, favoring the passage of a homestead law—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, a memorial of the legislature of Utah, praying Congress to pass the bill introduced by United States Senator WOLCOTT, of Colorado, providing for the creation of another judicial circuit of the United States to have jurisdiction in Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, Idaho, and Montana—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, a memorial from the legislature of Utah, asking for the passage of laws by Congress to prevent Indians from Colorado from trespassing on lands in Utah—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. COWHERD: A bill (H. R. 12192) for the relief of John F. Neil—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. DRIGGS (by request): A bill (H. R. 12193) to authorize Court of Claims to hear and determine the claim of the legal representatives and assigns of the firm of Carpenter & Plass against the United States of America for munitions of war and labor and materials furnished the Government and claims arising under contracts made by said firm with the Government of the United States—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. ELLIOTT (by request): A bill (H. R. 12194) for the relief of Elias S. Wingate—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. MARSH: A bill (H. R. 12195) to grant a pension to Dennis L. Burford—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WEYMOUTH: A bill (H. R. 12196) to remove the charge of desertion now standing against Cornelius O'Callaghan, alias William Blake—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. HENRY of Connecticut: A joint resolution (H. Res. 374) for relief of Lyman B. Perkins, ex-cadet engineer, United States Navy, ex-passed assistant engineer, United States Navy—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER: Memorial of Antolin E. Murillo and other citizens of Porto Rico—to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. ADAMS: Petition of Picking Naval Garrison, No. 8, of Erie, Pa., requesting amendment to section No. 20 of House bill No. 10403, known as the naval personnel bill—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. BARNEY: Petition of fourth-class postmasters of Waukesha County, Wis., for the passage of House bills Nos. 4930 and 4931—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, petitions of William M. Jones and others, J. S. Lean and others, all citizens of Waukesha, Wis., against the seating of Representative-elect B. H. Roberts, of Utah—to the Committee on Elections No. 1.

By Mr. BELFORD: Petition of citizens of Amityville, N. Y., to prohibit the sale of liquor in canteens, in immigrant stations, and in Government buildings—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. BROMWELL: Petition of the Evangelical Alliance of Cincinnati, Ohio, for the passage of the Hepburn bill prohibiting the transmission by mail or interstate commerce of pictures and descriptions of prize fights—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, resolution of the American Ceramic Society, of Cincinnati, Ohio, concerning a division of mines and mining in the United States Geological Survey—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. COWHERD: Paper to accompany House bill No. 11634, relating to the claim of Maj. Milo B. Ward—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, papers to accompany House bill relating to the claim of John F. Neill—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. ERMONTROUT: Petition of J. J. Esher and 125 others, representing 8,000 members of East Pennsylvania Conference of the Evangelical Association, against the seating of Brigham H. Roberts as a Representative from Utah—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of the Reading Wood-Pulley Company, of Reading, Pa., D. F. Printz, president, against the passage of House bill No. 11930, extending patent No. 260462, for Dodge & Phillion—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. GROUT: Protest of Rev. Henry L. Ballou and 84 citizens of Chester, Vt., against the seating of Brigham H. Roberts as a Representative from Utah—to the Committee on Elections No. 1.

By Mr. HENDERSON: Papers of John Corning Post, No. 636, of Oceanus, N. Y.; Cushing Post, No. 231, and communication of the memorial and executive committee of the Grand Army of the Republic of New York, representing 32 posts, and paper of Isaac H. Fuhr, adjutant New York State Grand Army of the Republic, urging the passage of Senate bill No. 3256, for the appointment of Union soldiers to official positions—to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. HICKS: Petitions of the Young Men's Christian Association, First Presbyterian Church, United Presbyterian Church, Woman's Relief Corps, Main Street Baptist Church, Trinity United Evangelical Church, First United Brethren Church Evangelical Association, all of Johnstown, Pa., and churches of Williamsburg, Blair County, Pa., to prohibit the sale of liquor in Government buildings, etc.—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

Also, petitions of H. H. Mallory and 193 citizens of Johnstown, C. R. Claghorn and 197 citizen of Vintondale, W. D. Ketchey and 194 citizens of Tatesville, Pa., J. C. Myers and 140 citizens of the State of Pennsylvania, in favor of the establishment of postal savings banks—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. HULL: Petition of George W. Penn and other veteran soldiers, of Carlisle, Iowa, in favor of a service-pension bill—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. KERR: Petition of the Second Congregational Church, of Elyria, Ohio, to prohibit the sale of liquor in canteens, in immigrant stations, and in Government buildings—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. LOW: Resolution of the Maritime Association of the Port of New York, favoring a bill providing for a pan-American exposition to be held at Buffalo, N. Y., in 1901—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, resolutions of the Produce Exchange of New York, relating to the freedom of private property on the sea from capture during war—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. McCLELLAN: Resolution of the Maritime Association of the Port of New York, urging the passage of the bill providing for a pan-American exposition to be held at Buffalo, N. Y., in 1901—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. MERCER: Resolution of the Business Men's Association of Washington, D. C., urging Congress to select site for the Carnegie Library—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, resolution of electrical workers of Omaha, Nebr., favoring the passage of the eight-hour bill—to the Committee on Labor.

Also, protest of citizens of Stuart, Nebr., against the seating of Representative-elect B. H. Roberts, of Utah—to the Committee on Elections No. 1.

By Mr. PERKINS: Petition of 443 citizens of Iowa, favoring the Ellis bill to prohibit the sale of liquor in canteens and immigrant stations and Government buildings—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. POWERS: Petitions of fourth-class postmasters of Rutland and Bennington counties, Vt., urging the passage of House bills Nos. 4930 and 4931, relating to the compensation of fourth-class postmasters—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. RUSSELL: Resolutions of Perkins Post, No. 47, Grand Army of the Republic, of New London, Conn., urging the passage of Senate bill No. 3256, relating to civil-service appointments—to the Committee on Reform in the Civil Service.

By Mr. SAUERHERING: Petitions of the Calvinistic Methodist churches of Randolph, Columbus, and Cambria, Wis.; Alvira Palmer and others, of Waunakee; Lena I. Palmer and others, of Verona; citizens of Burnett Junction and Mazomanie, Wis., to prohibit the sale of liquor in Government buildings, etc.—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

Also, petition of the Calvinistic Methodist churches of Columbus, Randolph, and Cambria, Wis., for the passage of the Hepburn bill prohibiting the transmission by mail or interstate commerce of pictures and descriptions of prize fights—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. SHERMAN: Protest of Rev. D. D. Monroe and other citizens of Littlefalls, N. Y., against the seating of Brigham H. Roberts as a Representative from Utah—to the Committee on Elections No. 1.

Also, petition of N. F. Graves and others, for the enactment of legislation providing that cigarettes imported in original packages on entering any State shall become subject to its laws—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. SAMUEL W. SMITH: Petitions of the Methodist Episcopal, Baptist, Congregational, and Presbyterian churches and Woman's Christian Temperance Union, all of Pontiac, Mich., favoring the Ellis bill to prohibit the sale of liquor in Government buildings—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

Also, petition of citizens of the Sixth Congressional district of Michigan, against the seating of Representative-elect B. H. Roberts, of Utah—to the Committee on Elections No. 1.

By Mr. SOUTHARD: Petition of fourth-class postmasters of Fulton County, Ohio, for the passage of House bills Nos. 4930 and 4931—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. STARK: Petition of churches of Thayer, Houston, and Utica, Nebr., praying for the passage of House bill No. 11735, providing that no polygamist shall be a Senator or Representative—to the Committee on Elections No. 1.

Also, petition of churches of Thayer, Houston, and Utica, Nebr., for the maintenance of prohibition in Alaska and the Indian Territory, and to extend the same to our new dependencies—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. STEWART of New Jersey: Petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of New Jersey, favoring the passage of the Ellis bill—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

Also, petitions of fourth-class postmasters of Bergen, Passaic, and Hudson counties, N. J., urging the passage of House bills Nos. 4930 and 4931, relating to the compensation of fourth-class postmasters—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. SULZER: Resolutions of the New York Produce Exchange, in regard to freedom of private property on the sea from capture in time of war—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, resolution of the New York Produce Exchange, in favor of the passage of a bill providing for a pan-American exposition to be held at Buffalo, N. Y., in 1901—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. WEYMOUTH: Paper to accompany House bill to correct the military record of William Blake—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. WILLIAMS of Pennsylvania: Petition of the Evangelical Alliance for the United States, against the reopening of the sectarian-school question and favoring the American common-school system among the Indians—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Also, resolutions of the Board of Trade of Chicago, Ill., urging an appropriation for the improvement of the Chicago River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, resolution of the Knights of Labor of Washington, D. C., favoring the passage of Senate bill No. 5024 and House bill No. 11312, to promote commerce and increase the foreign trade of the United States—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, resolutions of the Grocers and Importers' Exchange of Philadelphia, Pa., and the Board of Trade of Freeland, Pa., urging the passage of the Hanna-Payne shipping bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, resolutions of the Ministerial Association of Hazelton, Pa., and Protestant ministers of Wilkesbarre, Pa., and vicinity, and memorial of the American Home Missionary Society, against the seating of B. H. Roberts as a Representative from Utah—to the Committee on Elections No. 1.

By Mr. YOUNG: Remonstrance of the executive officers of American missionary societies, against the reopening of the sectarian-school question, and favoring the advancement of education among the Indians on the basis of the American common-school system—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

SENATE.

TUESDAY, February 28, 1899.

The Senate met at 11 o'clock a. m.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D.

On motion of Mr. FAULKNER, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of yesterday's proceedings was dispensed with.

WASHINGTON AND UNIVERSITY RAILROAD.

The bill (H. R. 11790) to amend the act of Congress approved July 8, 1893, entitled "An act to incorporate the Washington and University Railroad Company of the District of Columbia," was read twice by its title.

Mr. FAULKNER. I ask unanimous consent, as the bill is identical, word for word, with the Senate bill, that it may now be put upon its passage. Everyone in interest has agreed to it as a proper bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from West Virginia?

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. FAULKNER. I am instructed by the Committee on the District of Columbia to move an amendment. After the word "of," in line 11, I move to strike out the words "Connecticut avenue extended and Philadelphia street, thence westerly on Philadelphia street to its intersection with Tenallytown road; thence northwesterly along" and insert "Wisconsin avenue or the;" and in line 3 to strike out the words "to its intersection;" so as to read:

SEC. 2. That the company is authorized to construct and operate a street railway for carrying passengers along the following named route: Beginning at or near the intersection of Wisconsin avenue or the Tenallytown road with Trenton street, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. FAULKNER. I move that the Senate request a conference with the House of Representatives on the bill and amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent the Vice-President was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate; and Mr. McMILLAN, Mr. PROCTOR, and Mr. FAULKNER were appointed.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of War, transmitting, in response to a resolution of the 7th instant, a letter from Mr. Henry L. Martin, United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, stating that the report of the value of the improvement of the Brunswick Outer Bar, Georgia, being a survey of the work of C. P. Goodyear, will be forwarded without unnecessary delay; which, with the accompanying paper, was ordered to lie on the table.

He also laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from Brig. Gen. John M. Wilson, Chief of Engineers, United States Army, submitting a draft of a proposed law conferring authority on the Secretary of War to dispose of personal property that has been purchased in connection with river and harbor works, etc.; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

He also laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting, in response to a resolution of the 25th instant, schedules of claims amounting to $21,550.01, allowed by the accounting officers of the Treasury Department, etc.; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

He also laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a list of certain deficiencies in appropriations the amounts of which have been found due by the accounting officers of the Treasury, etc.; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

EIGHT-HOUR BILL.

Mr. TURLEY. I should like to give notice that when the consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill is concluded I shall ask the Senate to take up the bill (H. R. 7389) limiting the hours of daily services of laborers, workmen, and mechanics employed upon the public works of or work done for the United States or any Territory or the District of Columbia.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the joint resolution (S. R. 242) authorizing foreign exhibitors at the Commercial Exposition to be held in Philadelphia, Pa., in 1899, to bring to this country foreign laborers from their respective countries for the purpose of preparing for and making their exhibits under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 12106) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900; and

A bill (H. R. 12086) making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, for the armament thereof, for the procurement of heavy ordnance, for trial and service, and for other purposes.

The message further informed the Senate that the bill (H. R. 4838) granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth V. Litzenberg had passed from the custody of the House.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the following bills:

A bill (H. R. 2524) for the protection of birds, preservation of game, and for the prevention of its sale during certain closed seasons in the District of Columbia;

A bill (H. R. 3367) to remove the charge of desertion against Gardner Dodge; and

A bill (H. R. 5326) for the relief of Thomas Hickey.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11217) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department, and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the joint resolution (S. R. 189) to promote the relocation of certain tracks of the City and Suburban Railway Company of the District of Columbia.

The message further announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the following bills, agrees to the conferences asked for by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. BABCOCK, Mr. CURTIS of Iowa, and Mr. RICHARDSON managers at the respective conferences on the part of the House:

A bill (H. R. 11597) to extend S street, in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes; and

A bill (H. R. 11629) for the extension of Pennsylvania avenue SE. to the District line.

The message also announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8626) to punish the impersonation of weighmasters in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, asks a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. CURTIS of Iowa, Mr. JENKINS, and Mr. COWHERD managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message further announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 7271) amending an act entitled "An act to allow the return free of duty of certain articles exported from the United States for exhibition purposes," approved May 18, 1896, asks a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. PAYNE, Mr. DOLLIVER, and Mr. BAILEY managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House had disagreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 631) to confirm title to lots 13 and 14, in square 959, in Washington, D. C., agrees to the conferences asked for by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. JENKINS, Mr. SPRAGUE, and Mr. RICHARDSON managers at the conference on the part of the House.

MEMORIAL ADDRESSES ON THE LATE REPRESENTATIVE NORTHWAY.

Mr. FORAKER. Mr. President, I desire to give notice that on Friday, March 3, I shall present resolutions on the death of Hon. STEPHEN A. NORTHWAY, late a Representative from the State of Ohio.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Will the Senator fix the hour?

Mr. FORAKER. It is suggested that it is better not to fix it now.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. HANSBROUGH presented a petition of the legislature of North Dakota, praying for the enactment of legislation to promote the commerce and increase the foreign trade of the United States, and to provide auxiliary cruisers, transports, and seamen for Government use when necessary, and also to grant such subsidies for the building up of a merchant marine as will among other things secure new markets for grain grown in the United States in China, Japan, and other oriental countries; which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[Senate memorial and resolution.]

A memorial of the senate of the State of North Dakota to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, praying for an act to encourage the shipment of grain to China and Japan by granting subsidies to steamship companies.

Be it resolved by the senate, That a copy of the following memorial, signed by the president of the senate and attested by the secretary of the senate, be sent Hons. HENRY C. HANSBROUGH and WILLIAM N. ROACH, of the United States Senate, and MARTIN N. JOHNSON, of the House of Representatives, at Washington, D. C.

That said Hons. HENRY C. HANSBROUGH and WILLIAM N. ROACH, representing the State of North Dakota in the Senate of the United States, and Hon. MARTIN N. JOHNSON, representing the State of North Dakota in the House of Representatives, be, and they are hereby, respectfully requested to support in their respective Houses and urge the passage of an act of Congress "to promote the commerce and increase the foreign trade of the United States, and to provide auxiliary cruisers, transports, and seamen for Government use when necessary."

Whereas the raising of wheat in North Dakota is the principal industry of the State—the past year this crop represented approximately 10 per cent of the total crop grown in the United States, and its aggregate value was about $80,000,000; and

Whereas under existing conditions there is but one market, Liverpool, for the surplus wheat raised in this country, and the price fixed by this foreign market practically establishes the price for the entire wheat crop of the United States; and

Whereas to encourage the opening up of new markets for our surplus grain, thereby enabling our farmers to secure better prices for the same, is manifestly within the scope of the powers granted to our Representatives in Congress;

Therefore the people of the State of North Dakota, in legislative convention assembled, respectfully petition Congress to grant such subsidies for the building up of a merchant marine as will, among other things, secure for our people new markets for their grain in China, Japan, and other Oriental countries.

J. M. DEVINE, President of the Senate.

Attest:

J. O. SMITH, Secretary of the Senate.

I hereby certify that the within memorial and resolution originated in the senate of the Sixth legislative assembly of the State of North Dakota.

J. O. SMITH, Secretary of the Senate.

Mr. HANSBROUGH presented a petition of the legislature of North Dakota, praying that an appropriation be made for the purpose of making surveys to ascertain the feasibility and cost of replenishing the waters of Devils Lake, in that State, from the waters of Mouse River; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MEMORIAL AND CONCURRENT RESOLUTION.

To the honorable the Congress of the United States:

Resolved by the senate (the house of representatives concurring), Whereas the volume of water in Devils Lake, a navigable body of water in this State, about 60 miles long by 10 miles wide, has diminished annually, presumably caused by the flow from artesian wells, reducing the depth about 10 feet, thereby injuring navigation, to the detriment of the territory tributary thereto; and

Whereas this water can be largely replenished by building a dam with gates across the Mouse River (a stream flowing into this State from Canada and returning again) north of the mouth of Willow Creek, thereby in seasons of floods backing the water up Willow Creek and Dead Ox Creek—both sluggish streams without current—to a point 3 miles northeast of Long Lake, where a canal can be cut through a low ridge into Long Lake, thence southeasterly across a low marsh requiring a canal that can be dug cheaply, through to Island Lake, Grass Lake, Hurricane Lake, Bass Lake, and thence into the northwestern arm of Devils Lake, being a distance of about 90 miles through a natural water course: Therefore, be it

Resolved, That Congress is hereby requested to make the necessary appropriation for a preliminary survey and estimates of the proposed route, to ascertain the feasibility and cost of the project: And be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this memorial, properly engrossed, be sent to each of our Representatives in Congress, viz: Senators H. C. HANBROUGH and B. J. McCumber and Congressman B. F. SPALDING.

J. M. DEVINE,
President of the Senate.

Attest:
J. O. SMITH, Secretary of the Senate.

THOMAS BAKER, JR.,
Speaker of the House.

Attest:
J. W. HAMILTON, Chief Clerk.

I hereby certify that the within memorial and concurrent resolution originated in the senate of the Sixth legislative assembly of the State of North Dakota.

J. O. SMITH, Secretary of the Senate.

Mr. PLATT of New York presented a memorial of the Epworth League of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Green Island, New York, remonstrating against the seating of Congressman-elect B. H. Roberts; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented petitions of County Lodge, Independent Order of Good Templars, of Saratoga; of Union Grange, No. 244, Patrons of Husbandry, of Jamestown; of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Lakewood; the Society of Friends of Farmington; of William Groesbeck and sundry other citizens of Glennville; and of J. Howard Yarnell, of New York City, all in the State of New York, praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the sale of liquor in canteens of the Army and Navy and of Soldiers' Homes, and in immigrant stations and Government buildings; which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented petitions of the Humane Society of Elmira, of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, of Erie County, and of the Humane Society of Saratoga Springs, all in the State of New York, praying for the passage of the bill (S. 1552) for the prohibition of vivisection in the public schools of the District of Columbia; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. PERKINS presented a petition of sundry citizens of Yankee Hill, Cal., praying for the maintenance of the prohibition law in the Territory of Alaska; which was referred to the Committee on Territories.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Yankee Hill, Cal., praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the sale of liquor in canteens of the Army and Navy and of Soldiers' Homes, and in immigrant stations and Government buildings; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. FRYE presented the petition of Joseph F. Snow and sundry other citizens of Bangor, Me., praying for the passage of the bill (S. 1552) for the prohibition of vivisection in the public schools of the District of Columbia; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. TELLER presented a petition of Company D, Second Infantry, Colorado National Guard, praying that an increased appropriation be made for the support of the National Guard; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented a petition of Division No. 37, Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employees, of Denver, Colo., and a petition of Division No. 19, Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employees, of Colorado Springs, Colo., praying for the passage of the eight-hour bill; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. FORAKER presented a petition of the Humane Society of Toledo, Ohio, praying for the passage of the bill (S. 1552) for the prohibition of vivisection in the public schools of the District of Columbia; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a memorial of the Evangelical Alliance of Cincinnati, Ohio, remonstrating against any appropriation being made for the maintenance of sectarian schools; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of the Evangelical Alliance of Cincinnati, Ohio, praying for the maintenance of the prohibition law in Alaska and the Indian Territory, and to extend it to our new, half-civilized dependencies; which was referred to the Committee on Territories.

He also presented a petition of the Evangelical Alliance of Cincinnati, Ohio, praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the sale of liquor in canteens of the Army and Navy and of Soldiers' Homes, and in immigrant stations and Government buildings; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. SPOONER presented a memorial of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Platteville, Wis., remonstrating against the seating of Congressman-elect B. H. Roberts; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of the congregation of the Methodist Episcopal Church and of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Glendale, Wis., praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the transmission by mail or interstate commerce of pictures or descriptions of prize fights; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a petition of the congregation of the Methodist Episcopal Church and of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Glendale, Wis., praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit interstate gambling by telegraph, telephone, or otherwise; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented petitions of the congregations of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Madison, the Congregational Church of Mazomanie, the Methodist Episcopal Church of Marshall, the First Baptist Church of Stevens Point, the Seventh Day Baptist Church of Milton, the Methodist Church of Warsaw, the First Presbyterian Church of West Superior, the Congregational Church of Evansville, the Methodist Episcopal Church of Marshall, the Baptist Church of Beaverdam, the Methodist Episcopal Church of Brodhead, the Methodist Episcopal Church of Avon, the South Baptist Church of Milwaukee, the First Congregational Church of Beloit, the Christian Church of Monroe, the Congregational Church of Clinton, the Congregational Church of Delavan, the Pilgrim Congregational Church of West Superior, the First Baptist Church of Merrill, the First Presbyterian Church of Stevens Point, the Baptist Church of Elroy, the Methodist Episcopal Church of Greenbay, the Gram Methodist Episcopal Church of Marinette, the Methodist Episcopal Church of Elroy, the Methodist Episcopal Church of Glendale, the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Sparta, the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Madison, the Christ Presbyterian Church of Madison, the Congregational Church of Madison, the Park Avenue Church of Kenosha, and the Methodist Episcopal Church of Eagle; of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Platteville, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Glendale, the Wisconsin State Epworth League, of sundry citizens of Platteville, and of sundry citizens, all in the State of Wisconsin, praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the sale of liquor in canteens of the Army and Navy and of Soldiers' Homes, and in immigrant stations and Government buildings; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. ALLEN presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Sutton, Nebr., praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the sale of liquor in canteens of the Army and Navy and of Soldiers' Homes, and in immigrant stations and Government buildings; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of the executive council of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers, of New York City, N. Y., praying for the passage of the eight-hour bill; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. GEAR presented a petition of the Fortnightly Club, of Washington, Iowa, praying that an appropriation be made for the establishment of a department of domestic science; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. SHOUP presented a petition of the legislature of Idaho, praying for the immediate construction of the Nicaragua Canal; which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[House joint resolution No. 9. By Moody.]

A joint resolution favoring the immediate construction of the Nicaragua Canal.

Be it resolved by the legislature of the State of Idaho, Whereas the construction of the Nicaragua Canal would be of immense value to the people of the United States, as it would afford greater protection to both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts in time of war, open new lines of trade and commerce in time of peace, tend to cheapen transportation to foreign and Atlantic seaboard markets, build up new enterprises and largely tend to maintain old ones, greatly increase our population and thus enhance our wealth and multiply our resources, and establish a shorter line of oceanic communication between the United States and its interests in the Orient; and

Whereas there is now pending in the Congress of the United States a measure providing for the construction of the Nicaragua Canal by or under the auspices of the United States Government;

Resolved by the house of representatives of the State of Idaho (the senate thereof concurring), That our Senators in Congress be instructed and our member of the House of Representatives of the United States be requested to earnestly support the passage of this measure; and be it further

Resolved, That we favor the absolute ownership and control of the said Nicaragua Canal by the United States Government, if within the power of said Government to own and control the same.

This joint resolution passed the house of representatives on the 6th day of February, 1899.

D. L. EVANS,

Speaker of the House of Representatives.

This joint resolution passed the senate on the 12th day of February, 1899.

JOSEPH H. HUTCHINSON,

President of the Senate.

I hereby certify that the within joint resolution No. 9 originated in the house of representatives of the legislature of the State of Idaho during the fifth session.

JAMES A. KEAT,

Chief Clerk of the House.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

Secretary's Office, State of Idaho.

I, M. Patrie, secretary of the State of Idaho, do hereby certify that the annexed is a full, true, and complete transcript of house joint resolution No. 9, favoring the immediate construction of the Nicaragua Canal, which was filed in this office the 15th day of February, A. D. 1899, and admitted to record.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State, Done at Boise City, the capital of Idaho, this 23d day of February, A. D. 1899.

[SEAL.]

M. PATRIE, Secretary of State.

Mr. SHOUP presented a petition of the legislature of Idaho, praying for the establishment of a Soldiers' Home at Fort Sherman, in that State; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

(House joint memorial No. 6, by Reynolds.)

A joint memorial to Congress in regard to a National Soldiers' Home at Fort Sherman, Idaho, by the senate and house of representatives of the State of Idaho.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Whereas by act of Congress and the orders of the War Department the troops will, at an early date, be removed from Fort Sherman to the newly established military post at Spokane, Wash.; and

Whereas the present site of Fort Sherman, with all its buildings and improvements, will be worthless to the United States and can not be sold for any great amount of money; and

Whereas it is located at the north end of Coeur d'Alene Lake, a most beautiful body of water, upon which are many steamers, with Coeur d'Alene City near by with good railroad facilities; and

Whereas the Idaho State Soldiers' Home is already crowded to its fullest capacity, as is the case with all the various State Homes in the Northwest; and

Whereas there is not a National Soldiers' Home in the extreme North-western States;

Therefore we earnestly ask that you give this matter due consideration and establish a National Home upon the site of Fort Sherman, in order that those men who defended their country's flag in time of peril may have a pleasant, healthful place to spend their last remaining days on earth; and that a copy of this memorial be sent to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress, and they are urged to give their best influence toward the accomplishment of the matter herein set forth.

This joint memorial passed the house of representatives on the 14th day of February, 1890.

D. L. EVANS,

Speaker of the House of Representatives.

This joint memorial passed the senate on the 17th day of February, 1890.

JOSEPH H. HUTCHINSON,

President of the Senate.

I hereby certify that the within joint memorial originated in the house of representatives of the legislature of the State of Idaho during the fifth session.

JAMES A. KEAT,

Chief Clerk of the House.

Received and filed in the department of state this 18th day of February, 1890.

M. PATRIE, Secretary of State.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,

Secretary's Office, State of Idaho:

I, M. Patrie, secretary of the State of Idaho, do hereby certify that the annexed is a full, true, and complete transcript of house joint memorial No. 6, in regard to a National Soldiers' Home at Fort Sherman, Idaho, which was filed in this office the 18th day of February, A. D. 1890, and admitted to record.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State. Done at Boise City, the capital of Idaho, this 23d day of February, A. D. 1890.

[SEAL.]

M. PATRIE, Secretary of State.

Mr. SHOUP presented a petition of the legislature of Idaho, praying for the enactment of legislation to aid and encourage an American line of merchant marine; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[Senate joint memorial No. 6, by Gooding.]

Joint memorial of the Idaho legislature memorializing the Congress of the United States to aid and encourage an American line of merchant marine.

SEC. 1. Be it resolved, That the Idaho legislature memorialize the Congress of the United States to aid by appropriate and liberal laws the efforts of the American line to maintain a place in the merchant marine of the world, and by legislative action to extend still further encouragement to our merchants in their efforts to recover our lost commercial supremacy in the carrying trade of the oceans, putting an end to our present dependence upon ships of foreign nations for the carriage of the products of our own country.

SEC. 2. That both national pride and national interests demand the hundreds of millions of dollars yearly paid by our people of the United States to foreign ships for ocean freight shall be paid to our own vessels built and navigated by our own citizens and flying our own flag.

SEC. 3. That the secretary of state be, and he hereby is, required to furnish to each of our members of the Senate and Congress at Washington a certified copy of this memorial.

This joint memorial passed the senate on the 8th day of February, 1890.

JOSEPH H. HUTCHINSON,

President of the Senate.

This joint memorial passed the house of representatives on the 15th day of February, 1890.

D. L. EVANS,

Speaker of the House of Representatives.

I hereby certify that the within senate joint memorial No. 6, entitled "Joint memorial of the Idaho legislature memorializing the Congress of the United States to aid and encourage an American line of merchant marine," originated in the senate of the State of Idaho during the fifth session.

HARRY L. DAY,

Secretary of the Senate.

Received and filed in the department of state this 18th day of February, 1890.

M. PATRIE, Secretary of State.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,

Secretary's Office, State of Idaho:

I, M. Patrie, secretary of the State of Idaho, do hereby certify that the annexed is a full, true, and complete transcript of senate joint memorial No. 6, memorializing the Congress of the United States to aid and encourage an American line of merchant marine, which was filed in this office the 18th day of February, A. D. 1890, and admitted to record.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State. Done at Boise City, the capital of Idaho, this 23d day of February, A. D. 1890.

[SEAL.]

M. PATRIE, Secretary of State.

Mr. CULLOM. I present the memorial of W. C. Pennwitt, of Glencarlyn, Va., relative to the national-university proposition and suggesting the restoration to national jurisdiction of that portion of the District of Columbia (10 miles square) which lies south of the Potomac River; the founding of a city upon the territory so reacquired, to be the seat of a great university and to be known as the city of Lincoln, and the establishment within that city of a national university, to be known as the "University of Washington and Lincoln."

The memorial is a pretty lengthy one, and the author desires it to be printed as a document. I think it is worthy to be printed. I move that it be printed as a document and be referred to the Committee to Establish the University of the United States.

The motion was agreed to.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. BAKER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 4876) granting an increase of pension to Benjamin F. Bourne, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8804) granting an increase of pension to James S. Anderson, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. FRYE. I am directed by the Committee on Commerce to report a bill to promote the commerce and increase the foreign trade of the United States and to provide auxiliary cruisers, transports, and seamen for Government use when necessary. I ask that the bill be printed and that it take the place on the Calendar of No. 1602, Senate bill 5034. There have been a good many more restrictive and limiting amendments made to the bill heretofore reported, and it is reported as a new bill.

The bill (S. 5590) to promote the commerce and increase the foreign trade of the United States and to provide auxiliary cruisers, transports, and seamen for Government use when necessary was read twice by its title.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. FRYE. I ask that Senate bill 5034, reported by me on the 25th instant, be indefinitely postponed.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, it will be so ordered.

Mr. GALLINGER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1773) granting a pension to Robert Persley, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 11876) granting an increase of pension to Clarence L. Chapman, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 10328) granting a pension to Ann Collins;

A bill (H. R. 10896) granting an increase of pension to James W. Ingram;

A bill (H. R. 10862) granting an increase of pension to Hollis O. Dudley;

A bill (H. R. 2366) granting an increase of pension to Lester P. Cooper;

A bill (H. R. 4661) granting a pension to Dortha E. Kennoch;

A bill (H. R. 12104) granting an increase of pension to Maria S. Urban;

A bill (H. R. 10892) granting an increase of pension to Andrew J. Taylor;

A bill (H. R. 1724) granting an increase of pension to Sophia Gruber;

A bill (H. R. 3476) granting an increase of pension to Andrew Morse, jr.;

A bill (H. R. 2625) granting a pension to Mary Chamberlin;

A bill (H. R. 11568) granting an increase of pension to William B. Paul;

A bill (H. R. 7636) granting a pension to Martha M. De Vou; and

A bill (H. R. 12145) granting a pension to Eliza S. Redfield.

Mr. PRITCHARD, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 11767) granting a pension to Daniel G. Emert, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. HANNA, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 7098) granting an increase of pension to William R. Warden;

A bill (H. R. 8406) granting an increase of pension to Martha Adams;

A bill (H. R. 6328) granting a pension to Mary F. Cobb;

A bill (H. R. 3186) granting an increase of pension to William J. Holway;

A bill (H. R. 9359) granting an increase of pension to Charles H. Barber; and

A bill (H. R. 8895) granting a pension to Mary B. Wotring.

Mr. WELLINGTON, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 5575) to accept a site as a donation and erect thereon a custom-house and post-office building in the city of Bristol, State of Tennessee;

A bill (S. 5577) for the erection of a custom-house and post-office building at Brunswick, Ga.;

A bill (S. 5579) to provide for the construction of a public building at the city of Janesville, Wis.;

A bill (S. 5466) for the erection of a public building at the city of York, in the State of Nebraska; and

A bill (S. 5563) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Streator, in the State of Illinois.

Mr. LINDSAY, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 10241) granting a pension to Nancy Shaley; and
A bill (H. R. 8329) granting an increase of pension to John E. Gullett.

Mr. KYLE, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 11148) granting an increase of pension to Orin Long; and

A bill (H. R. 2830) granting an increase of pension to Ira Bacon.

Mr. MORGAN, from the Select Committee on the Construction of the Nicaragua Canal, reported an amendment proposing to appropriate $15,860.35 to reimburse the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua for expenses incurred in aid of the Ludlow and Walker commissions, authorized by Congress, intended to be proposed by him to the general deficiency appropriation bill; which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. VEST, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9335) granting to the Muscle Shoals Power Company right to erect and construct canal and power stations at Muscle Shoals, Alabama, reported it with amendments.

Mr. HANSBROUGH, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 4767) granting a pension to Sarah E. Stubbs, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8207) granting a pension to Abigail Wilson, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

USELESS PAPERS IN THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

Mr. CULLOM. I beg leave to submit a report from the joint select committee appointed on the part of the Senate and House of Representatives some time ago, to whom was referred the report of the Secretary of the Treasury and the report of the Acting Secretary in respect to the accumulations in the Treasury Department of old and useless papers. The report goes upon record, I think, without any action on the part of the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The report will be agreed to, if there be no objection.

ELIZA SICKLER.

Mr. MITCHELL. I am directed by the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9502) granting a pension to Eliza Sickler, to report it favorably without amendment. It is an exceptionally deserving case, and I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Eliza Sickler, of Marinette, Wis., the dependent mother of George Sickler, late a private in Company H, Thirty-ninth Wisconsin Infantry Volunteers, and to pay her a pension of $12 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HOMER D. MCGRAW.

Mr. CHILTON. I am directed by the Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4790) for the relief of Homer D. McGraw, Lee County, Ala., to report it favorably without amendment.

Mr. MORGAN. I ask that the bill may be put upon its passage. It contains an appropriation of only about $129 to reimburse the beneficiary for some stamps that were destroyed by fire.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to pay to Homer D. McGraw, of Lee County, Ala., $130.00, to reimburse him for the like sum of money which he, as the owner and operator of Distillery No. 39, situated near Opelika, Lee County, Ala., on the 4th day of April, 1896, sent to the collector for the district of Alabama, at Birmingham, Ala., to pay the tax on three packages of spirits, at that time in the bonded warehouse of Homer D.

McGraw, but before the tax-paid stamps were received by McGraw, and before the spirits were released from the warehouse, the warehouse was consumed by fire, supposed to be of incendiary origin, and the three packages of spirits for which the stamps were bought were consumed, and the stamps never canceled.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ADDITIONAL CLERK OF COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN RELATIONS.

Mr. JONES of Nevada, from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to whom was referred the resolution submitted by Mr. DAVIS January 31, 1899, reported it without amendment, and it was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Foreign Relations be authorized to continue until the end of the Fifty-sixth Congress the employment of the additional clerk authorized by the resolution of the Senate of May 9, 1898, and that said clerk be paid during such term of employment out of the contingent fund of the Senate at the rate of $1,440 per annum.

INVESTIGATION BY COMMITTEE ON PENSIONS.

Mr. JONES of Nevada, from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to whom was referred the resolution submitted by Mr. HANSBROUGH on the 21st instant, reported it without amendment; and it was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Pensions is hereby authorized and directed, by a subcommittee appointed for that purpose, to carefully examine, during the recess of Congress, all general laws on the statute book granting pensions to soldiers, their survivors and dependents, and to pursue such other inquiries in connection with the matter of pension legislation as may be deemed advisable, report to be made to the Senate, by bill or otherwise, at as early a day as practicable after the assembling of the Fifty-sixth Congress, the expense incurred to be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate.

INVESTIGATION BY FINANCE COMMITTEE.

Mr. ALLISON, from the Committee on Finance, reported the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committee on Finance be, and they are hereby, authorized and directed, by subcommittee or otherwise, to make an investigation of internal revenue, customs, currency, and coinage matters, and to report from time to time to the Senate the result thereof; and for this purpose they are authorized to sit, by subcommittee or otherwise, during the recess or sessions of the Senate, at such times and places as they may deem advisable, to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, and to employ such stenographic, clerical, and other assistance as may be necessary, the expense of such investigation to be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. TELLER introduced a bill (S. 5537) for the relief of Thomas Smith; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. STEWART introduced a bill (S. 5588) prohibiting allotments to Indians of lands outside of reservations; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. MURPHY introduced a bill (S. 5589) to authorize the Court of Claims to hear and determine the claim of the legal representatives and assigns of the firm of Carpenter & Plass against the United States of America for munitions of war and labor and materials furnished the Government and claims arising under contracts made by said firm with the Government of the United States; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. COCKRELL introduced a bill (S. 5591) for the relief of Charles P. Chouteau; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. SULLIVAN introduced a bill (S. 5592) to relieve from revenue tax deeds, mortgages, and leases; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Finance.

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. TELLER submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $538,400 for two type 16-inch Emery guns and carriages and foundations therefor and tests of the same, intended to be proposed by him to the fortification appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. MALLORY submitted an amendment authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to cause to be printed and bound 1,000 additional copies of the Official Records of the Union and Confederate Navies in the war of the rebellion, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the naval appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. MONEY submitted an amendment authorizing the appropriation made by the act of March 3, 1879, to be paid to Robert Otis as administrator of the estate of Roger A. Hiern, to be made available for payment to the administrator de bonis non of the estate, said Robert Otis having died, intended to be proposed by him to the general deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. GRAY submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $3,650 for rent of building for laboratory of the Division of Chemistry, Department of Agriculture, and $750 for rent for the building occupied by the Bureau of Animal Industry of the Department of Agriculture; which was ordered to be printed, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. GALLINGER submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $281.21 to pay George W. Weston, late postmaster of Exeter, N. H., being balance due him for moneys deposited in the National Granite State Bank, of Exeter, N. H., etc., intended to be proposed by him to the general deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. CAFFERY submitted an amendment authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to pay the sum in accordance with the decision of the Court of Claims, to Morgan's Louisiana and Texas Railroad and Steamship Company for transporting the United States mails over postal routes 30003 and 149003 during the period between July 1, 1878, and February 21, 1892, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the general deficiency bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. DANIEL submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $5,000 to pay the legal representatives of the late James Crooks and William Crooks, citizens of the United States and of Canada, the same being the value of a vessel called the Lord Nelson, illegally seized by Lieutenant Woolsey, of the United States Navy, on Lake Ontario, June 5, 1812, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the general deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $12,500, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to pay a certain judgment with interest and costs against Capt. John C. Bates and Lieut. Jonathan A. Yeckley, officers of the United States Army, defendants in an action by W. T. Belmont Clark and W. Ward Bill, partners, as plaintiffs, rendered in the district court of Dakota Territory, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the general deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

CONSTRUCTION OF THE NICARAGUA CANAL.

Mr. MORGAN submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the resolutions of the Senate heretofore adopted, authorizing the Select Committee on the Construction of the Nicaragua Canal to make investigations relating to said canal shall continue in force during the recess of the Senate until the meeting of the Fifty-sixth Congress in December, 1899.

INVESTIGATIONS BY COMMITTEE ON INDIAN AFFAIRS.

Mr. PETTIGREW submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committee on Indian Affairs be, and it hereby is, authorized to continue investigations authorized by resolutions of July 13, 1897, February 7, 1898, and January 30, 1898, during the present session of the Senate, and to continue said investigations during the recess of Congress until the beginning of the next session. And such funds as are necessary to make said investigations are hereby authorized and directed to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

CLAIMS AGAINST SPAIN.

Mr. CHILTON (by request) submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of State be directed to transmit to the Senate a list of the claims filed in the Department of State by citizens of the United States against Spain, arising out of the insurrection in the island of Cuba, not embraced in Document No. 70, Fifty-fourth Congress, second session.

POST-OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. ALLISON submitted the following report:

